The Rev. Henry W. Luce, D. D.
Presbyterian Hospital
1753 W. Congress Street
Chicago, Illinois

My dear Dr. Luce:

Mr. Lewis was out of the office when your letter came about your having to go to the Presbyterian Hospital. Miss Sillman took it up with him as you suggested, and I cleared with Dr. Scott and Mr. Warner at once, and wired you that it was our judgment that you ought immediately to proceed to take steps to recover fully from whatever pernicious trouble may have been bothering you for so long. There is absolutely no use of temporizing with a thing of this kind. There is nothing so urgent in the immediate plans of the campaign that cannot wait until you have taken all the measures necessary to restore your physical health. Do not, therefore, give yourself any further concern as to the immediate arrangements for the campaign, and devote yourself to getting well. We need you, but we need you well.

I am enclosing a carbon of a letter I have written to Dr. Stuart containing information which I know will be of interest to you. I am glad that you made the contact with Mrs. Blaine before you had to go to the hospital and hope that it may turn out that your delay in Chicago will perhaps, after all, be for the benefit of the University.

Cordially yours

Secretary
