We are looking every mail to see what is the name of your youngest grandson. What will Nancy do with him? Tell Stanley and Myra I am going to write sometime. I had hoped and definitely planned to write a dozen letters immediately after Annual Mission meeting which began last Thursday and closes next Thursday. But with this Red Cross work on my hands I do not know whether I can do it or not. God is opening many and wide doors of opportunity. Pray with us that we may know how to enter them.

May He keep and bless you all-

With Love from us all

Will

“In 1919, there occurred a great epidemic of cholera in Foochow. At first, only the coolie class was affected, but the disease speedily reached all classes and spread throughout the province. Appeals were made by medical men to the officials, but for a long time nothing was done, although the people were frantic in their idol processions and on the march night and day. Finally, the Chinese pastors, teachers, and intelligent laymen organized. They secured information on the cause, prevention, and treatment of the disease and distributed thousands of handbills giving these facts. There also arose the question of how to care for the sick. The American Red Cross (Fukien Branch) secured a large grant from America and appointed some of their members to work with the Chinese. The American Board Hospital in the city and the Magaw Memorial Hospital on Nantai were placed at the disposal of this group, large numbers of patients being admitted at both centers.

More than ten thousand deaths were reported at that time, so Foochow set herself to prevent a return of the epidemic. Dr. W.W. Peter of the Council on Health Education came to the capital city in June 1920 and under his direction there was put on a most elaborate program. Processions with educational floats, charts displayed in temples, churches and schools, lectures, stereopticon slides, and moving pictures contributed their influence. Immense crowds received the educational benefit of the campaign, and the fact that in the following summer there were only sporadic and isolated cases was, in a large measure, due to his work.”

A Great Day

This has been a great day. The sun rose in all his glory at the set moment and he has shed his welcome light and cheer and warmth all about Foochow all day.

The whole family started at once after breakfast for Au Seu, a village near the foot of Kuliang, to help in the church service. All the way we passed thru rice fields with men and plows and harrows and big clumsy water buffaloes pulling them in the mud of the rice fields. Here and there were small patches of light green. These were the beds of seed rice that have been sown a few days and had just sprouted. Then as if to add to the beauty of the landscape, groups of men and women, well dressed, and walking single file were frequently seen. These were going to some ancestral tomb on the hillside to offer paper money and clothes for the departed or to offer rice and pork as food for their deceased relatives. For this is the Chin Ming= pure brightness or Spring Festival or Tomb Festival, - one of the important feast days in China. Would the beautiful day- just the day to get the rice fields ready and just the day to go visit the ancestral grave- would it leave many empty seats in God's house?

We reached the chapel at Au Seu half an hour before time for service. First we had to just look at the nice new school house that accommodates 15 girls and 40 boys, and also furnishes living rooms for two teachers and thus make it possible for all together and sit comfortably in the little church that used to be a shelter for school as well as church.

Then we met four who wanted to join the church. The first was the school teacher- he had been a Christian at least for five or six years but just had not taken the step. Then a little man- a silver smith. He was holding his five months old baby all the time we talked with him about his faith in God. Then a boy who had studied in this school for four years and was now in the Higher Primary School at Geu Cio Dong,- son of the leading citizen of Au Seu. The preacher had asked his father if the son should unite with the church and the father said "Yes" but I am so mixed with business and public affairs that I cannot obey the rules of the church". "Well if your son unites will you promise not to ask him to perform idolatrous ceremonies for you?" "Certainly I will promise. I want him to be a Christian."

Then we turned to another boy in the same class with this student "What do you plan to do when you grow up and graduate from school?" "I plan to be a preacher of the Gospel and save men". We wondered if this was said for effect. So there were more questions. "Where is your home?" "Back in the mountains ten miles from Foochow." "Is your father alive?" "Yes. He is one of a large tribe of aborigines numbering some 200,000 that have their own dialect. In our section there are some 15000 of these aborigines." "Is your father a Christian?" "No." "Is he willing that you should become a preacher?" "Yes, he helped my elder brother who studied in this Au Seu School would be a preacher but this seemed impossible. Do you not remember talking with him about this some four or five years ago? You have seen my father and Mr. Hodous used to call on him several times a year when he went to Buong Ka." "Ah yes I recall visiting your tribe and talking with a man who seemed to know much of the truth. Was that your father?" "Yes. Now he is determined that I shall prepare for the Theological School and go back to my tribe to tell them of God."

It was a pleasant service, five united with the church, and the preacher's little boy of three years was baptized. The fifth to unite was the preacher's daughter.

After service the preacher said, "I want to talk with you a moment. Friday night while the Bible Woman was away, thieves broke into her room and took away every thing she possessed she does not have even a change of clothing. I reported the theft at once to the police. Will you go with me to urge him to his best to find the thief and recover the things stolen?" and we went.

Then we all took a Chinese dinner with the preacher and after that walked a mile or more to the village of Deuk Seu. Here a new chapel as preaching place was to be formally opened at 2:30 p.m. When we arrived the room which would hold- not seat- one hundred and fifty was packed. This chapel is a branch of the church outside the east gate. And that church was there in force. In spite of the good weather to work fields and to worship the tombs the villagers also were there in force. Right on the front seat was an old lady. She told us she had a dream a few weeks ago. Two girls stood before her. One of them held a book to her eyes. "Do you know what book this is?" "Yes that is a Bible." "Why do you not believe it and become a Christian? You were beginning to believe ten or more years ago and since then you have turned away." "Yes I know I did and now I will believe and become a Christian. Yes I am ready to be baptized any time."

Two of us, one a blind preacher, told these country folks as simply as we could who God was and that He loved them. Two little American girls sang of God's love as the people held their breath. Then one of their own members a Christian told them how happy he was that a prayer meeting place had been opened in their village and that he hoped they would all become Christians with him.

Just then there was a slight commotion and turning of head and in came another man who had been a Christian in this village for several years. On his back he was carrying his father eighty five years of age. Without asking any one he said, "My father is 85 he is soon to go to Heaven. He believes- He does not worship idols. Will you baptize him? Of course we baptized him, with one hundred of his neighbors looking on. - That act of this son was one of the most eloquent sermons I ever heard. After a prayer for the father's beautiful entrance into Heaven the service closed.

Another two miles walk and a short ricksha ride brought us home at 5:30 - a great day.

M.S. Mt. Baker.
 Lower N.Y. Harbor.
 July 25, 1919.

Dear Aunt Phebe:-

The happenings of the last few days have proceeded so fast that I now find myself on the eve of departure and only just writing you folks about it all. Wednesday the firm decided to send this ship out at all cost or let her rot in the river. They gave the Engineers and Mates the choice of going out with her carrying any sort of a crew they could supply or leaving them and there and getting paid off. After much bitter discussion we all, except the 3rd Eng. agreed to go with the ship. Last night we loaded all night long and this a.m. we pulled out into the bay. I had some pretty fine hustling to do to get my passport fixed up. I had to jump on a harbor tug and go to the ship for my Army discharge papers and then again for an affidavit they decided I must have showing my father to be an American citizen. Luckily I had one left over from the time I received my commission. When I at last went to the Globe Line Offices I found the whole engine room force of Engineers and the Captain and some of the crew waiting to go to the ship. We took the harbor authorities with us and they signed the crew on. We have a complete rigger outfit on deck, but the Engineers kicked about having nigger oilers and refused to sign on until the Captain had given his word that he would get us white men and build new quarters and mess hall for them. I signed on as 3rd Engineer and will hold that position and pay, $165 a month. It's very nice for us all to talk about treating the negro as your equal, but when it came to having them work under me in the engine room of a solitary freighter at sea, or asking any other white man to hire with them, I balked as hard as the rest.

I'm glad that I saw you all last Sunday for who knows when I will see you again. We signed articles for Liverpool and a year or until the trip was finished if before a year. The finish of the trip being when we landed anywhere N. of Cape Hatteras. So I may be gone all of a year.

I am trusting you all to God's care and keeping and trust that I will see you all again when I return.

With all my love to the whole family.
Gould.

Kuling-
July 28, 1919

Dear Ones at Home-

My two packages arrived this week. The Peking postmaster sent them to PeTaiHo in spite of the fact that he had my address here. Miss Bostwick rescued them. They were too much to pieces to remail so she sent them by Mr. Tewksbury so messenger, when he came for the conference. I have already worn the stockings (I was in desperate need) and start on the union suits today.

Since I last wrote F. and I have been on some fine walks. One day we started to reach the top of one ridge here. From there we saw a ridge beyond so climbed that. Then we knew we must be nearing a view of Poyang Lake so kept on to the third ridge. The view was well worth the climb. The Lake extends off and off so the mists hide the farther shore and make it seem about like the ocean. At our left was a precipitous cliff- called Lion's Leap. July 31- My pen ran dry and then I went off for a walk. We have had two other views of Poyang Lake; one from Nantan Pass where seven of us from Peking went for afternoon tea one afternoon. The view is more extensive there than from the pass that we viewed it from first. Yesterday we walked to Lily Valley where the YMCA have their conference homes and where the Chinese Secretaries have private homes. The added feature of the Lake is the lovely island with a conspicuous temple on it. In fact, it looks to be almost all temple.

I am trying to make a ?? preparation for my Botany Class next year. Fortunately there is a Club here and I am at last connected up with it. It meets on Thursday afternoons. Mrs. White, who is the leader, is a hustler[?] and knows the flowers about here very well. I hope to keep my inspiration for my class. The first few flowers puzzled me a lot because it is five years since I looked at a Manual but now things go easier, of course many species are not in Gray and we have three flowers which do not even belong to the families given, so we are stuck. The "Grass of Parnassius" is the most beautiful thing we have found yet. The wild pink "Hydrangia" vies with it though. There are four different lilies, a white one, a yellow one and the Tiger Lilies just like those we used to have by our front walk.

This is Conference week. Dr. Harlan P. Beach preached for us last Sunday evening and Dr. Patton speaks next Sunday morning. I have not been to the meetings heretofore but am going this morning. This afternoon we are invited to Mrs. Chapin's to meet Dr. Patton. I expect it is a meeting of the American Boarders. There is no work of theirs in this part of Yangste valley so the only representations are the few who have come from north or south. Hence we are included to swell the number.

Five years ago tomorrow we left home. How well I remember the day. I had thought to be back home ere now instead of wandering the hills of China still.

Well our family is intact I smile often – a widow, four old maids, three bachelors. Not quite enough to go around of the later! Mr. Evans is just a transient. He was in Siberia doing publicity work and is seeing China a little on his way out. He walked with us yesterday. Mr. Baker is an engineer who has the contract for the building of the school and some of the private homes. He is so modest that he keeps his eyes on his plate most of the time. Mr. Chapman is a Wesleyan Missionary, teacher in the Boone University and an Anistration[?]. He is jolly and full of good stories. He wants to take the long walk around the Emerald Pool and Incense Hills with us. As to the ladies! Miss Kelly and Miss Lyon are both members of the Christian Mission. Both are heads of schools. One is six months younger than Flora and the other six months younger. Mrs. Butchard has four children, the oldest fifteen and all very well brought up. She is a plucky little woman and determined to give her children the best of educations.

How about the subscription to the National Geographic? I have never gotten the magazines for 1919 yet. I rather hope they don't come until after I get back because they would be so much more to carry back.

We received Stephen Palmer Beard's cards on Monday night. They were delayed by having to take the trip to Peking. [Stephen Palmer Beard, son of Stanley and Myra Beard, was born June 20, 1919 and died April 9, 2007.]

One evening we called on the teachers of Gin Ling College. They are a superior lot of women. One, the Secretary, is Oberlin 1918, and know Phebe Kinney well. I'll get her name again from Miss Kelly.

Aug 2- This is almost a serial story with it's many dates. Yesterday F. and I took a long walk around the mountain opposite us. It looks like an innocent peak but proves to be a whole range and the path winds in and out. We got several fine views into the valleys and off on the plains. Today we hope to take the walk to "The Temple of the Clouds". It is a long way so we start early- 2.00 P.M. and take our tea.

We are becoming addicted to the tea habit. One can enjoy tea and supper greatly when we take a two hour tramp between them. Yesterday I found a fine fuzzy caterpillar on our walk and brought him home to Baird Butchart. He lay quietly on the branch until we met a green snake. I almost had my foot on it and gave a spring and yell. This jarred poor Mr. Caterpillar and he began to investigate his surroundings. As he was the stinging kind, he kept me busy turning my twig end for end lest he crawl onto me.

I should think Father would feel that his work got done most rapidly when he has it done by tractor. It must be a saving of hours and men both.

I hope that the new owner of the land opposite us improves the land. It certainly used to need it badly enough.

Willard wrote that the girls were going east this summer. I wonder if they are at Century Farm for part of the time.

The papers speak of a new engine which is putting the Diesel engine in the background. I wonder if Gould will start in on it when he returns from South America. He ought to have a fine trip and full of interest as well as one most useful to his profession.

We are most eager for letters about Stephen Palmer Junior. I wonder how Nancy likes her "new live doll." Good he is a boy with such an obstreperous big sister.

Flora sent for some Gray's Manuals the other day. I thought of asking you to send me Ruth's because she had hers marked but the later edition contains new families and species. Some of the China varieties are included so it is quite important to get the latest to have it most valuable. The "St. John's Wort's" which Ruth used to like so much are quite common here also others she had identified at home. There are sometimes slightly different but yet the same thing.

I must close so as to analyze some flowers which I have downstairs. The longest is more interesting than beautiful so I want to discard it before Sunday.

Much much love to all

Mary Beard.

P.S. Phebe and Ben have birthdays now and Elizabeth soon. Here are belated greetings for all.

Incense Mills- Until the last few years these mills were turned by the main stream, but the cedar trees from which the incense was made having been used up, the mills have stopped and now in ruins; they are in a very deep valley, the picturesque rocks on hills above which can be seen from many places about Kuling.

Emerald Pool- A deep pool into which water falls down a precipitous rock. The sides of the pool are almost perpendicular and there is a very pretty waterfall. There is a deep shade here of an afternoon and it is a favorite place for tea picnics.

Dear Ones at Home-

This will be my last letter from Kuling as we go down the hill on Thursday of this week. I hate to leave because it is so beautiful here and I have not taken all the walks yet. I have got in at least one each week and often two. This last week Mrs. MacMillan (teacher at Tsing Hua College near Peking) and I went to the Incense Mills for an all day trip. We went by way of the caves where is an interesting shrine, the tablet of the time of the Ming dynasty, an old Pagoda demolished during the Tai Ping Rebellion and incidentally a fine continuous view of the plains. The Mills are so in ruins that we did not recognize the brick and stone piles as such. They are on the banks of a stream which furnishes several fine swimming pools. We hustled into our bathing suits as soon as we arrived and walked home up the bed of the brook as far as we could, so kept dressed to swim up the pools. It was a hot day but we did not find it so with our frequent dips. On the way home we passed a temple near which are three trees- the biggest I have seen except around temples of the North. That is the goal of a favorite walk. The last pool in which I bathed is called Emerald Pool and the location is beautiful. Above it is a water fall about 50 feet high and it has perpendicular rocky sides of the same height so it is dark and cool as at noonday.

Another fine trip was to the Waterfalls. The walk over affords more extensive and varied views than any I have taken. From the peak we saw Poyang Lake for its whole length, the Yangste River and a broad expanse of plain and mountains and valleys galore. The Falls themselves are about 800 feet high but the water makes three leaps in the descent. The deep gorge makes it impossible to get a good near view. We had two fine swims in the pool at the top. It was wonderful to lie against a rock for safety just at the top and look out through the narrow steep sided opening. The water rushed madly through and beyond was another space with a perpendicular rocky ledge beyond.

Flora got a touch of the sun so could not go on these trips with me. 'Twas a pity for they were both glorious! She is better now. A late report says that our school is the recipient of $25000 gold. I hope it is soon to be corroborated for we could use it well and it could be most opportune just now.

Applicants for admission are still coming in. Some brought by an advertising in the paper are not very good as so far they have been Chinese.

We have had some interesting sales up here and I have made several purchases. My latest was a dress of "waste silk". It looks more like a linen or coarse loosely woven Indian Head. I had it made up at once and have already worn it twice. I'll send a sample.

A few weeks ago we had an interesting meeting on the Korean question. I enclose a copy of the report printed in the shanghai paper. We are to send them home for publicity work. The Korean who spoke was most eloquent but the other speakers were more forceful.

My Botany work I fear is ended for the summer but it has been most helpful and I anticipate next year's work to be easier because of it. I thought of Ruth while doing it and wished I could share some of the joy in the new flowers with her.

We have not done much with birds but have identified a few by a little booklet which Mrs. Butchart had.

The name of that friend of Phebe Kinney's is Adelaide Gundlach. I find she knows two or three other friends of mine too.

This Wednesday we have a lecture by Dr. Barrie on his experiences in Palestine during the later part of the war.

I wonder if you have sent my "Line a Day Book"? Never a word have I received and I closed my old one on July 31st. That and four (4) brassiers I asked for in the same letter.

We are waiting for letters telling of your summer. I wonder what Phebe K. is to do this winter?

Will write again before school opens Sept. 10. Lots of love to all Mary.

No explanation but probably one of the Kuling waterfalls.

Dear Ones at Home,

Yes it's hot! That is to us from Kuling, but not so to those who have been here right along. The thermometer was "only 85" this morning.

Well the elements very nearly kept us on the mountain longer than we intended. On Monday we had considerable wind and it was partly cloudy. Tuesday morning it was very misty and the wind howled. By noon the rain was falling in sheets but at considerable angle because of the gale. It kept up without a let up all night and until about 5.30 Wednesday. Then the wind began to shift and the worst of the storm was over. Old timers called it a typhoon and the descriptions Willard used to give fit very well.

On Tuesday afternoon we were invited to a "house warming" and we went. About forty other guests also braved the storm and we did have a good time.

Wednesday morning the coolies did not appear for our baggage. About 10.00 I donned bloomers, raincoat, bathing cap and old shoes and went for a tramp.

Incidentally I called at the office and found out that no coolies had appeared and that someone had gone out on the road down the hill to ascertain the damage done. Then I visited the scene where an embankment had fallen in, knocked in the back of a home and hurled them elsewhere. Lastly I walked the length of the stream to the bathing pond. It was almost as fine a sight as the Gorge below Niagara to see the angry waters dash over the rocks. The stream had brought down so much sediment that the pool was full of mud. Later one of the men walked across it- without going above his knees in mud and water.

I was literally "soaked to the skin" for the rain used my rubber cap as a guide to lead down my neck when the wind was too strong to use an umbrella.

Yes, we are en route home. We walked down the mountain yesterday but took the auto across the plain. The afternoon we spent at the "Rest Home" or walking around the Chinese city and soon after five got aboard our steamer. We got in at 11.00 this morning and are staying at the C.I.M. Home until our train at 7.00 tomorrow morning. The slip about the Korea question I enclose.

With much love

Mary.

Kuliang, Foochow, China
Sept. 7th 1919

Dear Mother and all and folks at Home:

This is my last Sunday on Kuliang- I plan to go down day after tomorrow morning. College is to open Thursday of this week. Ellen and the girlies will stay on here for a week or so. This is the best time of the year to get good out of Kuliang. The air is very cool and invigorating, and the day closes about 6:30 p.m. and the people are fewer. They have been leaving for two weeks and this next week will see many more go.

I am writing this on a sheet that the Bride used to count the people who accepted her invitations to the party that was "only a little social gathering", on the invitation but was really a celebration of our Silver Wedding. It occurred night before last Sept. 5th. The whole day was perfect. It thundered about 6:00 p.m. but the moon shone brightly all the time and the evening was perfect. About 91 people came. "Only four or five people who had been asked to sing or read or help otherwise knew of the reason for the occasion." But after the program and just as the Bride had announced that the entertainment part was over Mr. Munson of the Y.M.C.A. said "No the program is not finished." He introduced Ned Smith who said some nice things and threw about $70 on us. Every one seemed to have a very pleasant time. Our cottage has a large wood veranda on two sides. We took all furniture - beds and every thing out of the four large rooms, so there was ample room for all the guests, from Amoy a Mrs. Veenscoten is here. She delights all by her singing and others also helped and two read and four girlies sang a song- with a sheet held up before them. The chorus to each verse was tra-la-la –la-la. The girlyies sat down as they sang this and held up their hands in shoes above the sheet. You have likely seen it. The effect is as if the girls had stuck up their feet.

For our souvenirs Ellen had printed promisory notes. These were each signed by the individuals present and then exchanged for pieces of paper with numbers written on them. The people took this “money” to the different booths in different rooms and brought biscuit, cake, candy, drinks etc. This proved quite amusing. The affair was a big success.

Last Tuesday we all went to Kushan Monastery. - The first day I have had this summer when there was no work for me to do. The day was perfect. A strong N.W. wind blew all day. The air was perfectly clear and cool. The Smith family, Mr. Miller of our Canton mission, Dr. MacBean (Miss) Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Goertz and Edith (9 yrs) went with us. We got up at the usual time and got back home for supper at the usual time.

Friday I went to Foochow with Mr. Scott to see the building in which the University is now. They were injured by the typhoon August 25th. This proved an interesting job. The Chinese assistant to Mr. Scott had already talked with the contractors. These had said it would cost $180. to repair all the damage. The large damage was in the roof of the main building. They said this would cost $80. One side was so badly damaged that it would have to come off and be entirely relaid. I asked to go up on the roof. And Scott and I turned up about 70 ft. and I found on the worst side only a few tiles broken here and there. They had told me it would take $1000 tiles to repair the roof. I looked it over and told the contractor 1000 tiles would do it. Before we left the roof he had taken off $38 from the price and at last I gave him the job for $110. so we made $70 by going down that day.

It has been a long time since we have had any thing from the U.S. - I see by my correspondence register that the last letters arrived July 30. This is very exceptional and may be due to typhoons. They have been severe this year. It is now time to go to church – 5 p.m.

Sept. 10- at Foochow

I came down yesterday morning. College is opening today for students with conditions and for the examination of new students. To morrow all must come or be fined. All are opening two weeks ahead of any other school, - at the time we set to open last November when we made out the calendar for the year. Cholera has been so bad in the outlying districts that the other Doctors advised putting off the opening. But Dr. Kinnear said he saw no occasion for changing the date.

We are expecting Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius H. Patton, Sec’y of the Am. B’d in Boston, to reach Foochow any day. He will go at once to Shaowu, and stop to see Foochow when he gets back from Shaowu.

An Am. mail came to us on Kuliang Sunday evening. Phebe K. had letters for us, and Flora has one addressed to Foochow. I think the hand writing is mothers. I awfully want to open it but have controlled my want and sent it on to Tunghsien.

It is so hot that the perspiration just runs out of me. I have to cover up this sheet with a heavy shirt to keep from getting it all wet.

The girls are back in school now, or going. We have not heard whether Phebe K. has a job.

I must close now with lots of love and the assurance of many thoughts and prayers for you all.

Very lovingly

Will.

Ellen and the girlyies plan to get down next Monday.

Dear Ones at Home-

The first four days of school are over- and happily so. Wednesday morn brought about 25 parents and children for lunch. Two autos brought 8 more people and the evening train brought about a dozen more. When the evening train removed the surplus parents and friends we were left with 29 children to look after. At least 7 more are to come and there are 3 from whom we have not heard the second time. Then there are 5 children in the compound so we are to be 41 at the least. Last year 36 was our largest enrollment. But best of all! On Monday we had a letter from a Miss Sara Price, sister of Mr. Price of the Legation whom we have known for five years. She had come out with her brother and was desirous of getting a position and wrote to see if we needed any help in our teaching. Mr. Corbett visited her and added to our joy on Wednesday by bringing her down for a hasty view of the place. We were mutually pleased with each other and on Thursday she returned to join the faculty of the N.C.A.S. She takes the English and History which Jean Dudley had last year and which was worrying us this year. Mrs. Corbett is coming down after October 1st to help out with Music until our teacher gets here. There is only a bare possibility that Mrs. Galt has a teacher with her, if so we must wait till Mrs. Wilder has found some one.

Miss Price seems very nice. She is quiet, refined and dignified in manner and ready to help out in every way possible. If she succeeds she is ready to stay on for several years at least if not for a full term of five years.

By the way, I think you had best send me out a birth certificate altho the war is over. It would facilitate the obtaining of my passport next Spring.

To go back to school and children; eight of our pupils are returning to us after a year in America. Another is just returned but she was not with us before she went. We have two eight year olds and they are dears. They have their dolls and doll bed with them and are really little girls. We have four (4) children from Manchuria- one from Harbin and three from Mukden. The youngest of the last group has been the baby and started out to howl and shriek for "Mother" when she departed. Now he has settled down to be content and happy and is entering into things very well. He beats all but one of the younger boys in a race so they look upon him with favor in spite of his "carrying on".

Flora and I have only High School boys over here with us. So far they are only eight but at least two more are to come. Miss Parson's and Miss Price have the High School girls and upper grade girls, about fourteen. Miss Bostwick has the little girls and grade boys. One of the 8 year olds brought her Amah and she helps look after them both. We have some good voices among the new pupils so I hope our music will be better this year.

Mr. Martin who has been and is very ill with typhoid seems to be gradually improving. His temperature each day goes a bit lower and does not climb quite so high. Mrs. M goes into Peking to visit him at the hospital every afternoon. The one night she stayed up, Miss Parsons and I went over to her home to sleep. Other nights we took turns about because Mrs. M. is timid about being alone with the children. Tonight as I was calling at Mrs. Martins two Koreans came in. One is a graduate of the Peking Medical College and the other a younger man who has just escaped from Korea. The Father wishes to enter the Academy as a student in order to learn the Mandarin. He evidently understands English but he spoke but few words. The older man had copies of the report of the Korean meeting on Kuling like the one I sent you. I hope it reached you alright for it was intensely interesting.

I wonder how Stephen is? We have not heard a word since Kuling days about him. Reminders of Kuling are plenty. A commission of London Mission men visited us one day. One was a speaker at one of our Sunday services and two others had been on the mountain.

Monday A.M. This morning I have arranged alphabetically and placed on the shelf our fiction library, some 250 or 300 volumes. Also I put the articles sold from the store and added the slips. As I am to be both librarian and store-keeper I am going to ask our Household league to grant me a helper for each task. One of the girls has done volunteer service in the store and was a great help. With the library catalogued I think an assistant there will facilitate matters as well as teach the children something about how a library is catalogued. I got this last idea from Mr. Chapman this summer. He trains Chinese boys to care for his school library and had two of them at Kuling caring for the public library this summer. They were very efficient.

My classroom work this year is to be Algebra II, Latin I, II and III, Botany, Current events and a Physiology class for a while at least. On Sundays I take Mrs. Martin's High School class until she is able to return after baby Martin shall have arrived. The extras are the store, library, supervision of Household League and Athletic Association besides my turn at leading chapel, saying grace at table, acting as week-end hostess and inspecting rooms. When I think of it all I am glad of all the naps I got in this summer and of the fine pounds I put on. For recreation I have already had one good game of tennis, a walk and several ten-minute runs with our little girls. I can stand good hard work if I take time to exercise – and I do it in spite of the fact that Miss Bostwick likes to look say and mournful and say “I never get time even to take a little walk.”

Doctor Smith took Chapel last Friday and he preached yesterday. He leaves tomorrow to be gone a month so we will have to miss his weekly chapel talks for awhile.

Mrs. Howard-Smith is Superintendent of our Sunday School this year. She also takes one class. So far Flora takes the third. The girls of the High School take turns of a month looking after the kindergarten. We will have 4 regular attendants in the kindergarten and our littlest girls who do not regularly stay week-ends are to go in there.

I have my same old room but call it my Suite now. I moved my big wardrobe end toward the wall and face toward the door. Then my chiffonier is back up to it. Behind this baurade[?] I have my washstand and mirror so I feel quite private in my “dressing room.” If I want to use the “sitting room” part for a little tea I can move the bed far to the “dressing room” end and have a nice big space.

If I hurry Flora will mail this for me this morn so here is lots of love and best wishes that God has been good to you in granting health and strength.

Affectionately
Mary.

Dear Ones at Home-

Last Sunday I unwisely took my nap before I wrote letters. Perhaps you can tell why it was unwise!!

We are “in full swing” with new pupils still arriving. Last Monday the two Galt children came also a boy of 12, Terrill Adams, from Tsing Tao. His father had written and Flora had replied by telegram and letter, but we had heard nothing further. A navy officer happened to be passing through en route for Peking so he sent the boy along. We will probably hear soon. He is a nice boy and had already been approved and his reputation established through Consul Peck in Peking.

Today the three Romig boys arrive. They have just been in America on furlough. This makes 43 pupils. Hurrah for our growing numbers!

Oct. 7- The children have just left study hall and I am delaying a little to write you. I hear a steady buzz from the South. It is some kind of a machine which the Chinese soldiers are using these days. They are practicing all the new kinds of warfare. The practice fields have seasons[?] of being criss crossed with trenches; the river is closed by night by a pontoon bridge etc. Just the cause of the buzz I know not but Mrs. Howard Smith says the fields south of them are being used nightly as drill grounds and the sound comes from there.

Yesterday I went to Peking for the first time since school opened. I just shopped and came back at noon. I had just shampooed my hair and was drying it when Mrs. Love came in. We had a fine visit of nearly two hours and I nearly finished a little coverlet I was making for Mrs. Martin. Flora, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Parson and all but eight children stayed in all day and visited the Museum. Tomorrow night four of us go up to a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Stewart at the Methodist mission. We are to return by auto since it is but little more expensive than rickisha and takes less than half the time. We are to have supper with Mrs. Corbett first.

Last week I slept over with Alice Huggins four nights. Margaret Ann Smith was off on a country trip and Alice is afraid alone. It was delightfully restful and quiet. I had breakfast with her two and as she eats at 7.00 and we were only two I had about half an hour extra in the morning for work. It was a fine scheme.

We have had a series of birthdays- Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in succession. Mr. Stanley was up to help celebrate his daughters on Monday.

The older brother of the three Becker children called to day. He is en route for Shanghai and returns for another call in about two weeks. That is a most devoted family. The children are finding friends and adapting themselves well.

I am going to write for definite sailings at once. Mr. Stanley says the ships through July are already filling up. I hope to travel with Willard and Ellen.

The ships that brought the Galts and Romigs brought a nice lot of mail too. It was welcome after a three weeks wait. Phebe Kinney's position sounds interesting. She ought to make a very successful teacher. She will be near enough to Putnam to run down occasionally and to Shelton to get to you once in a while. How are Etta, Emma and Elbert? I came across a postcard of Elbert's the other day which reminded me you had not mentioned the Putnam folks recently.

What is Mr. Palmer doing now that May has had to go back to school?

We were interested in the ?? Smith wedding. It was a fine surprise to have Leolyn and the children all come on. Little Leolyn must be a big girl. I wonder if she is going to be very tall. She promised it at seven all right. Every one admires the photograph of the three girls which I have on my wall.

About a week ago I lost my bunch of keys. I feel lost without them because I can not get into any of the book cases, or cabinet drawers without troubling Flora to loan me her keys. It's a nuisance. I am afraid they are gone for ever because I fear a ricksha man picked them up. They would be of no use to him but he might hesitate to be honest enough to return them even for a reward.

We "changed tables" recently. I had only little youngsters and most obstreperous ones; now I have older ones and exceptionally well behaved ones. Meals are again a joy, not an effort to maintain a semblance of order. The exceptionally spoiled 10 year old entertained us with such stunts as filling her mouth with water and squirting it out; crumbling her bread and throwing it at her neighbors; putting her knees against the table edge and seeing how far she could push herself backward and not top over. (She was not afraid of going over because the window sill was so close.) These are only samples and like History, she never repeated herself, but always produced a new stunt.

We almost need a new building to house the bicycles. There are five in our basement, three at Miss Bostwicks and one or two at the girl's dormitory. They have learned how to turn out for pedestrians on the path. The alternative was to keep off it so they learned it quickly.

I must go to bed for the ten o'clock bell just rang at the College.

Lots of love

Mary Beard.

Oct 23rd 1919

Dear Sisters:- [Flora and Mary]

This letter of mothers has been on my desk in the envelope addressed to you too long already, so here goes for a few words.

Yesterday I took Dr. and Mrs. Patton down to Diong Loh in Mr. Grieg's private launch. They had an awful good time- so did I. We spent the day there and started at 8:30 for the steamer. I left them on board the Hai Hong for Hong Kong.

We are enjoying perfect weather these days. It has been very cool for this season.

Oct. 29- Mr. Gold and Miss Harshaw - Y.M. and Y.W. were married two weeks ago today at 6 p.m. Ned Smith tied the knot - a very pretty home wedding with only a few friends both foreign and Chinese.

Dr. Cooper is again married, - to Dr. Wm. E. Strong's stenographer. They, we hope, will be back in Foochow the last of Jan. or Feb.

Dr. Gillette is starting back the last of Dec. - to open a new work at the Arsenal- he is to take Dr. Myers place as Customs and Port Physician, open a Missionary Hospital and still be a missionary of the Board.

Mr. Beach will likely become a teacher in the University sometime within a year.

I hear the Peking University has had more stormy weather.

Gould had a very hard time crossing the Atlantic- twice the water rose about the engines to within one foot of where it would have put all power out of commission. Once they sent out the S.O.S. but the Engineer got things started before the crucial moment came and the S.O.S. was countermanded.

Miss Blanchard is back and teaching at Ponasang. Miss Wiley is back and is taking over Miss Hartwell's work.

While Dr. Patton was in Shanghai the Alumni of Foochow College tried to open the old Peet case but he said to them "It is closed." Here in Foochow some of the pastors of the other missions were urged on by some of the leaders of our mission in this matter, to seek an interview. I urged him to meet them. I judge he had rather a pleasant time, but he told them the case was closed. Two Alumni of the College intercepted him as he was going out of our house for dinner one evening. They told him the College are all going to smash "Did you know that Mr. Beard let the students have a holiday on Confucius' birthday? He is not a Christian. This is very bad." Well Dr. P. told them he had heard only good of the College. He was very unfavorably impressed by this interviewer- and I guess the two alumni left not feeling very much victors. Don't talk much about this. But I wanted you to know it. Mr. Peet has not yet replied to the letter the Board wrote him over 6 months ago urging him to go [to] N. China. And the B'd has written the mission that this action or lack of action on his part is proof to them of the insincerity of his repentance.

I think I wrote last time asking about your home going. We hear here that Mary is going next year but Flora is staying on indefinitely. How about it?

Well this is a long epistle for me. We are all well and happy and send love

Will

Dear Home Folk-

My Sunday School class is having examinations so I am going to write you since I don't have to teach. Mother's nice letter came this week. All seemed well but Gracie. Can't she be gotten away and saved? We have a student in school this year who was desperately ill three years ago, cough, hemorages and all the worst stages with high fever. Living out of doors 24 hours of the day and good food have put her where the doctors pronounce her thoroughly cured. She was just about Gracie's age as she is in her seventeenth year now. It took her two years to get back to school strength.

Last Monday the three Larson children left and were off for Shanghai and America on Tuesday. They were sorry to leave. We went in a body to see them off. Unfortunately the engine had to do some switching and the extra ten minutes made the tears flow.

Last week Thursday evening I went in to Peking with Alice Huggins to attend the Missionary Association Meeting. We all had supper together, about 200 of us, in the Gymnasium of the Y.M.C.A. We were first invited by a ?? to sit at her table, then when all were seated and the blessing asked, we got into line and got our food cafeteria style. The tables were for eight and we had a good time.

The tables were cleared by us, then the tops removed, the legs folded and put at the rear. The men arranged the chairs and we all sat down for the papers of the evening. Mr. Bentley (Anglican Church) gave the ideals of his church very concisely "Religion, worship, sacrament" and elaborated. Mr. George Davis gave the methods of his church (Methodist) by many stories of how they worked. Incidentally we got the ideals- evangelization. Dr. George Wilder told of the Congregationalists work- comprising nothing distinctive from the other churches unless it be the sanctity of the individual; Each man a unit and each church an independent unit. The discussion is to continue for several meetings and I hope to attend some or all of them. It is a part of the interchurch movement that is sweeping China so powerfully.

Yesterday Dr. and Mrs. Howard were down for the afternoon. He is one of the new Doctors out for the Rockefeller work and has been appointed trustee of the American School in Peking. He was unwilling to advise them as to the best policy without visiting the competing school first. They seemed to oppose of us and stated that the Peking people ought to "go slow on the High School" proposition but that the grade school was needed. Also the question of the Eurasian children he feels needs more consideration.

Mrs. Howard came to my Caesar class and stayed all the period. We were doing sight translation and the prose on the same.

I'm glad I have a good class and that they did fairly well.

Our Sunday School personelle of teachers is quite changed. Mrs. Howard-Smith helped us out until November. Now she has stopped. Flora is Superintendent and teacher of one class; Mrs. Love is helping in one class. I still have the High School class and will until after Christmas vacation.

We still have on Saturday teas, and sit and visit until time to go home for dinner. The ladies are going to ask our H.S. girls in groups of two to help serve. It will be good experience for the girls in the social line.

The malt candy season is on and I indulge in a walk to the candy shop once or twice every week. Eva Price likes to get out for a walk and is a good walker and good company. She is a joy because she is sensible, a good worker and a good influence over the children. She is giving in her chapel service little practical talks to the students. One was on courtesy, one on duty, one on an ideal etc. She hits her point every time. The best of it is that she wants to make good as she can stay on.

Jean was a dear but wouldn't make the children work if it meant extra work for herself to do so. Eva will. The effect on Grace is that she is bracing up. I do hope she makes good this year after her terrible slump last year.

Tomorrow I have to register at the Consulate as an American citizen. I shall inquire as to the proper time to start proceedings for my passport. Doesn't that sound like reality?

Mr. Howard-Smith gave us a pleasant evening yesterday by bringing over his lantern and showing us his slides. He has some of China, some of Australia, England, Paris and America. He has a few funny ones, and some scientific ones to show that the earth is round, very small as compared to the other planets etc.

We are already planning for Thanksgiving. We have to get guests, otherwise they might all get previous engagements. Also we have to send out orders for bustards, the wild Chinese turkey.

My plants are doing finely except for my big prize marguerite. That began to droop last Sunday. I tested for air holes, water clogging, over heating from too much fertilizer and all was O.K. Then I overturned it and found a grub eating the roots. He is yellowish white with a reddish head, no legs, and about 1/2 inch in diameter and 2 1/2 or 3 long. His life was short! I fear he had already killed the plant but vengeance was sweet.

I am glad the fur has reached Mother safely and hope it will make auto riding more comfortable. I get great enjoyment out of my fur coat here with these strong north winds when I go ricksha riding. Yes, I too occasionally get an auto ride. We hired one to bring us down once from Dr. Stuarts reception.

I am wondering if my order for brassieres reached you. Size 36 preferable net and 3 of them is what I wanted. The amah says "very much broken, no good" when I ask her to mend mine now. I agree smilingly.

I get nice interesting letters occasionally for Ruth Butchart the seven year old in our household this summer. We were good chums and are still. The Kuling School is full and turning away pupils because they do not want to open nine bungaloes[?].

Wed. P.M. There were nine of us ladies at a luncheon at Mrs. Price's on Monday in honor of Eva's birthday which was Saturday- Flora and I went in in rickshaws. It was a fine ride. Some of the people came back after Mother's Club and got caught in the rain. Flora was one and she caught a cold but she is getting the best of it.

Mrs. Martin's little daughter, Ruth Fairchild was born Monday morning about 3.30. I went in this afternoon to take a peep at her. She is a dear. Mrs. Martin is feeling very well but visitors are not allowed for a week. Trudy and Stratton are so fond of baby sister they want us to go see her every time we meet them.

Mrs. McCann has been with us since Sunday noon. She stayed to get some sewing done for the girls by our sewing woman.

I have just had word that Mrs. MacMillan will spend next week end with me. I am so glad for I enjoyed her very much down on Kuling this last summer.

I must get at my lessons for tomorrow and my test papers of yesterday.

I will enclose a draft for twenty five dollars. Exchange was only 88+ yesterday so I bought $25 gold for $23.13 silver. It is fine for sending home, but how about our boards[?] in buying silver! How about my life insurance policies? I almost forget them but one is due this month I know. Did you every pay for my Geographic Magazine? I never got them. Lots of love Mary.

Foochow, China Nov 23rd 1919

Dear Phebe Mine [daughter]:-

Your last good letter came Friday. Mama and I had been over Side [South] Side with the girlyies to Mr. and Mrs. West's. He is the Engineer for the River Conservancy Scheme- to deepen the Min from the Anchorage to Foochow for steamers to come right up to Foochow. The girlyies spent the night and yesterday there. Mama and I found the mail on the table when we got home at 11:30 p.m.

When your first letter came telling of your trials with the school children my arms ached to get hold of you and comfort you just as I used to when you were a little bit of a girl and fell down and got hurt. But then the stubborn fact came to me that all that you had written took place more than a month before I read it, and that every morning and evening I had left you in God's care, and that in all probability before the letter had reached me you had the school well regulated, and then I told God all about it again and I know He will keep you and help you.

I am enclosing an account of the riot in Foochow a week ago today. I wonder what the papers will say about it or rather have said about it. We had classes last Monday a.m. but not a class since. The heads of ten mission schools- including Catholic and Seventh Day Adventists are now organized. The reason for the strike as the students give it is to express their indignation to the Japanese for the riot a week ago.

Foochow weather has been superb for nearly two months. Last night was the coldest yet- most cold enough for a frost. 50 degrees in the dining room as I sat down for b-fast. But the sun comes out and by nine or ten o'clock in the a.m. it is nice and warm out doors.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Reumann and baby Paul arrived Friday morning from the U.S. They are living with the Christians in the city compound.

The Ciu Buo church held its 50th anniversary yesterday and today. The church has received to membership 122. = 60 took letters from the mother church at Tai Bing Ga and since then 62 have come in. During the past 20 years 800 pupils have been in this school. Many have gone to Foochow College, many are now in far away places. One boy who completed the course here in this church school and went to Foochow College one year has to stop for lack of funds. He went to Penang, and after nine years came back last August- a rich man. He has not joined the church, but he came today and joined heartily in the service.

Our Chinese Annual Meeting begins Tuesday evening. The pastor of the City Church is very ill, - probably tuberculosis. He had a hemorrhage last year- another last Spring and he has had several this past week. It looks very serious.

This should reach you just about Christmas so it takes with it, a very Merry Christmas and a Happy Happy New Year from us all. Merry and Happy to last a whole year.

I shall try to write Gould soon, and I will address it in your care. He has been jumping around so during the past year that it has been hard to locate him and I have depended on you girls to forward my letters to you, to him to read.

Times are very much out of joint here, but God is good and He controls and always does the best possible- seeing men are what they are. The war has stopped, but war is still in men's hearts all over the worlds. May God lead men to give up being selfish.

May He keep, guide, comfort and use you.

Very lovingly Your Father

Dear Mother and all the Peoples:-

This is as Dorothy used to say. I do not dare to look at my correspondence register for the space since I last wrote you must be great. But I write some one oftener than once a week so I know you hear from us that we are all right.

The world seems not to have gotten over the war, if it has stopped fighting. It is apparent here in Foochow also. Since the student strike last June we have been kept interested by the new things the students hatch up to do continually. I am enclosing an account of the latest. This was due to the riots. What the home papers have said about the riots I have no idea. The Shanghai papers have made them much worse than they really were. For a few days the streets were bothered with Japanese and Formosans who scared the students when they met them by grabbing them and asking them to what school they belonged. But now all is quiet as far as I can see. We all go and come as if nothing had taken place. And last evening I heard that the General had telegraphed to Peking that Foochow was quiet. [The Shanghai Students' Union published "The Students' Strike, An Explanation" which is in the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

We are in the midst of our Annual Meeting with the Chinese. There is not much to report on. More and more of the business is being put into the hands of the Chinese each year. This year for the first time the Chairman and the Vice Chairman are both Chinese.

A very urgent call has just come from the China Continuation Comm. at Shanghai for me to go there to meet with about 100 Chinese and missionaries from all over China to discuss the duty and opportunity of the Church in the present crisis. I shall likely be in Shanghai from Dec. 16 to 20 and if steamers do not fit, longer.

Nov. 28. We had 45 members of the mission at Thanksgiving yesterday. It took six big geese to feed them. I think we had one treat that you never had at a Thanksgiving dinner. I picked 70 ears of sweet corn. Some of them were good sized ears but some were so small that one person had two. It was a treat all right. The day was a beautiful one. We had windows and doors open and a good time all round. Two members were unable to be at dinner on account of illness and one had to stay away to take care of the sick. Mr. Belcher was just getting up for the Grippe or a hard cold. Mrs. Reumann was ill and their little boy Paul was ill so Mr. Reumann could not come. The Reumann's arrived last Friday. Mrs. Reumann is not very strong and the weather got very cold for a few days just as they arrived. It was a trying ordeal for her to be kept away from the dinner and to be the cause of keeping her husband away also.

I wonder what you did for Thanksgiving this year. You must have the house all closed and fires to keep warm by. I am writing with doors and windows open. One of the girlies is playing the piano. The Beach family are with us again this year for Annual Meeting. They have three little girls and the youngest is crying. Her father and mother are out for supper [the rest of the letter is handwritten] and she wants some one with her. Number two= Ethel has taken a great fancy to me. Her mother asked her the other day if she liked Mr. Beard. "I love Mr. Beard," she answered.

Sunday 5:45 p.m. Nov 30-

Yesterday we held the meeting of all ordained men, Chinese and foreign. This has been a very trying ordeal for the past five years, due to the fact that a part of the Chinese pastors refused to consent to the ordination of any new men to the pastorate. This made the candidates for ordination and the members of their churches feel badly and feel hard against these pastors. It has been the cause of a lot of hard thought and words and has blocked any progressive movements that any one could suggest.

Yesterday the matter of ordaining five young men came up again, and they were all turned down. One of the missionaries spoke very plainly and said that this action of the Pastor's continued year after year in this way was a great shame and it would be better to give up the Annual Meeting than to go on in this way. The Chinese pastors spoke of their wish to be at peace among themselves and there was a season of prayer. Then we adjourned for lunch. After lunch we spent nearly an hour on our knees in prayer. After that different ones spoke very frankly of things they had heard about others. One of the pastors told me several things that he had heard about me; - things that had no foundation in fact and fortunately I could prove some of them by witnesses who were present. We broke up at 5 p.m. at peace and determined to make peace with the preachers who had been so long refused ordination. Monday four of us met the five men up for ordination and had a long conference at which there were more confessions, hand shakings and wet eyes. I hope the trouble is over.

The U.S. Gunboat "Helena" is here. We met the officers and several sailors last Friday at the Consulate and have invited a dozen or so to spend the night with us in this compound next Tuesday.

Men are in chaos but God is always the same,- always wise and good. He will keep us all

Very lovingly Will.

Dear Ones at Home-

What a bumper crop of apples you must have had to have sold so many. I want to set my teeth in an apple without peeling it or washing it in antiseptic. I have just gotten off a letter to Mr. McCann asking for a sailing on or after June 20th. I'll come either route that has the earliest accommodations. We registered at the Legation last Monday. Flora has a blank form which she is to send to Judge Palmer for him to send to Washington that will be shorter than having birth certificates sent here for passports. Flora now plans to leave for home next Fall if the new head for the school comes out.

Two weeks ago tomorrow I went up to Mrs. Stifler's for a Holyoke luncheon. There were six of us. Miss Helen Calder was the guest of honor. Flora was ill with a carbuncle on her cheek so I waited to take a rickshaw up. I saw Mrs. Macmillan off on the early train and thus discovered that Miss Calder, who was down here, had missed the train. Alas It fell to me to get the guest of honor there. I couldn't get off till 10.00 o'clock and the wind was beginning to rise. It rose!! Before we got to the gate it was very strong and our men could hardly run. It took 12 minutes a mile instead of 8. It was 12.30 when we reached the gate and 12.50 when we got to the home for Miss Calder to dress. Luncheon was at 1.00 and we were just 20 minutes late. I got so cold I didn't get thoroughly warmed for hours but thanks to my good health felt no ill effects.

Yes, Baby Ruth Fairchild Martin came three weeks ago tonight and is thinning and strong. I have held her once. Mrs. Martin is very well. We all had to keep away for a full week. Today she was to eat downstairs with the family. Mr. Martin is getting along finely and is graduated from the help of a huge staff on which he used both hands to an ordinary cane.

Last Monday Flora and I took lunch with Mrs. W.B. Price who rented our cottage two years ago. She has beautiful plants and quantities of them. They are her "hobby" which she took up so as not to get lonesome out here.

We had a party on Thanksgiving night, as is the Tungchow custom. We at the school had a big dinner at noon with all the children of the compound there. We had four bustards and we carved them on the tables. There was not much left for the next day because we were over forty in number.

Dr. Arthur H. Smith spoke at the service at 5.00. All of our guests 14 in number, were here so we had a room full. It was Mrs. Sheffield's fiftieth anniversary of her arrival in China so part of our fun was devoted to celebrating that event. I was chairman of the social committee and we had made poems about varying incidents in her life for each of the 32 at table at the evening dinner. They were numbered for chronological order and we hope gave some pleasure. After dinner we had a little music and Dr. Smith read a couple of selections from some letters of a man on one of the ships between Salouta[?] and somewhere during the war. How we laughed! Then we went to Mrs. Love's home to play. We made out Jubilee Gifts for Mrs. S. to give away and we described her by adjectives beginning with the letters of her name. Then sat around in pairs and exchanged names. One odd one could call for anyone she wished. As each time names are changed, soon we were in a great muddle. Next we played "Boston".

Then Alice Huggins and I pinned names of prominent Americans on each of the backs of the company. We had extra ones and gave 20 minutes to see who could guess the rest. Then it was time to end up with a Virginia Reel, and get home so as to get into bed the same day we got undressed.

Dec. 1. Today I made out my bills from the store and took a walk into the candy shop with Mrs. Love. Besides I took a peep at Baby Ruth, watered plants and did some odd tasks.

The skating is good so the children are very busy during free time. My skates are broken so I walk and do gymnastics.

It is late- nearly 10.30- so I must get into bed lest I be sleepy when the bell rings at 6.45.

Dec. 2- Have just returned from tea at Carol Loves to meet Dr. and Mrs. VanNess of Boston. He works in the "Church of the Nations." Mrs. Lennox of the Rockefeller was with them. I had met her before the west home two years ago. The VanNess's are just touring the east and evidently like it as they [are] over staying their first date. Yesterday Flora got a sample number of a new Peking Daily Paper. It is Japanese and the new viewpoint of the Foochow fracas is interesting.

Mary L. Beard.

Our Boy Scouts are building, or making, a skating rink back of the school building. Just now the pond is clear and good but dust storms or snow spoil that ice. Our rink will be so we can flood it from our artesian well so good all the time. I have started calisthenics with the children once a week. They love it and I enjoy it thoroughly so it is a pleasant half hour.

Affectionately
Mary

In my last letter I enclosed a draft for $25.

[This letter dated Dec. 15, 1919 was written from Foochow, China by 11 year old Punk (Kathleen) to her sister Phebe. An American gun-boat came to Foochow and the missionary families housed and fed them while they were there. Letter in Jill Jackson's collection.]

Foochow China
Dec. 15, 1919

Dear Phebe

It is getting near Christmas now and we are bustling to buy presents for all that we want to give to.

Papa left for Shanghai tonight. He has a confrence up there every spring and he has one now too. Of course he is loaded with things to buy. He is every time he goes up there. I asked he to buy a present for mama and Marjorie and Marjorie asked him to buy one for Mama and me. I hope he will be here in time for Christmas.

Last week there was an American gun-boat came to Foochow. There was a reception at the American consulate for them- the sailors. Mr. Chrisain asked some of them to come and spend the night here in the city. They were distributed around the compound. We had three. They were changed at every meal so every family could get aquainted with as many of the group as possible.

Marjorie and I are making a hole suit of clothes for ourselves. We are just on the drowers now.

I wonder if you could get a birthday present for me to give to Marjorie. I want a pretty white ribbon. Marjorie wears two ribbons now so I guess you will have to get two each a yard long. I would like too for you to get three ribbon-holders, two for Marjorie and one for me. If they are too expensive I think Marjorie could get along with one, but I think two would be better for her. I am still saving my Dutch-cut for you to see and Mama says you girls and Gould will have the say when it shall grow out again.

I think you can expect a Christmas present from me sometime next year. We are dreadfully late in getting them off. Now I think we will have to wait til Christmas is over because there is so much to do. You may be expecting them about Dorothy's birthday. I will have to say goodnight now for it is getting late. With lots of love to all your sister Punk

Dear folks at home:-

It seems an age since we have heard from you, but I expect you are just as busy as we- and perhaps busier. We have just finished our seventh week of school. It has gone well, but we are all feeling somewhat fatigued. We have the largest school we've ever had and the children are just brimming over with life and spirits. It keeps us busy to see that they are properly expressed. The average age of the scholars is thirteen years, so you can know that we have several pupils 16 and 17 years of age. We have two 8 year olds and they are the sweetest ones of the whole group. To-day, the Boy Scouts are having a big time as the members of the Council are coming down from Peking to inspect the troupes and give them the badges that they have won. We have struck the period of organizations this year- Christian Endeavor, Basket-ball teams, Campfire Girls, and a Literary Society are on foot. They are the natural signs of development and we are glad to see them coming.

Dec. 3, - You see I do really take time to think about America and you folks there sometimes. The interim between the beginning of this letter, and here, has been spent in a lot of work- reports, settling some school pranks, taking care of a lot of sick girls, and sporting a carbuncle, myself. It was exactly in the center of my left cheek and it swelled until I wondered where it was going to. Fortunately it did not keep me awake nights, and the worst of it came during the week end, so that I did not have to lose classes. I looked like "Johnnie with a tooth ache."

A letter came about a week ago which made a bright spot in our work-a-day world. We were much interested in the sale of apples and wished we lived within hiking distance. You would have had our whole family of forty out there with more queer craft-like jin-rickshas, Peking carts, or Shunzas (chairs borne on the back of two mules – tandem), or some such vehicles to carry off our booty.

Mary is booking to start home as early after June 11th as she can get a boat. I hope to leave next September as soon as the new principal arrives. Circumstances need me here until there is a person to take my place. We hope Dr. Love's brother-in-law and his wife are coming. There can be a lot saved in the work Mary and I have done, if I can stay to see things into his hands. It seems to me a poor policy to let these six years of work be lost in any way, since they have been some of the hardest ones I have ever put in anywhere. The battle is not yet won though things look brighter. The status of the American school in the orient is one hard to describe, but I believe its existence is to be a greater factor in educating the Orient than people think- at present. Good schools here, will mean better families coming here for missions, business, etc.

Dec. 27. - Another letter from home tells of your sending "The Asia" to us for our Xmas present. It will be much appreciated by us both. Mary is booked to sail from Yokohama the last of June on the "Shinyo Maru", so she is beginning to feel her face turned toward home. We have an encouraging letter from Dr. Love's brother-in-law, but it is only enquiring about the circumstances and setting forth his policy. He has the right ideals, and the desires are natural ones, and the question is rather can we guarantee the proper support. We hope to hear soon from America that we have a gift of at least $25000- and we hope it may be double that amount- coming to us. If it comes and we can get this man for our principal, we are fixed- and I will be able to get home by Xmas of 1920.

We have had a very merry Christmas here and are still feeling a little logy from late hours, many feasts, and much merriment.

I spent a few days in Tientsin when I met a lot of the people there and they are very anxious for me to spend a longer time in the spring as the Tientsin people are getting more and more interested in our school. I am planning to go at the Easter vacation. I am having a new dress made by my little Japanese dressmaker there. I like her style and work the best of any one I've ever had unless with the exception of Elizabeth Wilkinson. I am sure you will find my clothes will stand the companionship of clothes worn at home.

I came back from Tientsin and spent Sunday with Mrs. Burgess and then we came back home to work as hard as ever we could to get our Xmas things off. We used all the cards you sent us and then some more. We were very much pleased with them and the cost less than half what we paid last year, and were twice as pretty.

Had a letter from Christine Blakeslee saying that she had a bad hemorrhage and she is spending several months at the same resort that her sister was in one year. She says the doctor's give her great hopes so she is feeling quite chick[?].

We are having interesting times in the Chinese schools just now. Last year the scholars all struck just before the end of school because of "patriotism" and things had to be fixed up. It evidently "went to their heads" so now at 10 P.M. of the night before exams they (the students here) informed their faculty that they had to go the next day to preach patriotism and they would write no exams. The times are not the same as last June, and the faculty said no. The result now is that there are dozens of hungry and cold patriots (?) clamoring to get back. No one is to be allowed to return until Jan. 2nd, and then only as the faculty decide. Will wrote that only his school and the Catholics had any students in them in Foochow. I think such a state of affairs is true of nearly all the big cities in China. It has its useful side, but I hope out of it will come a better government of the schools. This time the faculties feel the students are not wholly sincere- that they wish to get rid of the test of their studies that the examinations will show.

Enclosed is a typed memorandum which I wish you would find out and send to the Department of State at Washington, so that I can get my passport for going home. Get the Town clerk to give you my birth certificate and send it on to Washington with my old passport number. They will mail my passport to me and so save three or four months.

Enclosed also is a draft for $50 gold with which to defray the several expenses I have been incurring during the last several months, and to pay the $25 I wished given to the Shelton church. I will send another draft if this does not cover everything.

Yours lovingly-
Flora Beard.

October, 1919

Our school is still growing. This year we have forty-three. We have all grades, from the fifth through the high school, graduation our first class last spring. Our schedule gives me one science class each year. Last year it was Chemistry and Dr. Goldwaite was present for one of my laboratory periods. This year it is botany and I wish Dr. Hooker or someone from the department would call to see that work. I love my work and it is with mingled feelings of joy and regret that I contemplate leaving it for a season next June.

[This letter, dated January 1920, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the ones at home. She tells about their Christmas and New Years Day. N.C.A.S.
[January 1920]

Dear Ones at Home-

Flora probably wrote you all about vacation and the opening of school. The first Sunday of vacation we were with Mrs. Burgess. She has two darling boys who are most friendly so you may know I had a good frolic. So did Flora.

Christmas Day was a round of gayities. We started off with breakfast and a tree with presents at Mrs. Martin's. Then we tried to be first to shout "Merry Christmas" down the line. Then it was hustle to get ready for our guests, for we had asked to have a dinner party this year and the whole Love family were coming. We lingered long over coffee and candy so it was less than two hours between these guests and the arrival of everyone for some children's games. Stratton Martin, aged 3, was my partner for the Virginia Reel and a more serious earnest partner I never had. Supper at Mrs. Arthur Smith's ended the festivities.

New year's Day we were with Mrs. Edwards. Over fifty men called and we had a delightful day. This was in spite of the fact that Mr. Ogilvy had died the afternoon before so no Presbyterian or Union College men were calling.

Meanwhile Marion Newton, one of our girls, had developed Tubercular Meningitis and was lying unconscious at the hospital. She lived until the next Sunday morning. All of us teachers went to the funeral on Monday and all the children who were in Peking were there. Dr. Smith had the service. He spoke very beautifully and of the part that his daughter was just a little older than Marion when she was taken (17) and that he was not with her nor able to get to her. A third sad event of the discovery that the father of another girl has a malignant tumor on the brain and will live only a few months.

One joyous event was the receipt of a letter from Mrs. Brown applying for the position of music teacher. Even more joyous was last Monday when we welcomed her to our midst. She is a typical Texas girl, frank, a little blunt, open hearted and energetic.

The Sentinel telling of Bernice Black's death came this morning. She was always such a dreary person she will be missed- or a bit of sunshine.

My last copy of the Monticello "[unreadable word]" tells of the death of Miss Julian Kellogg. You will remember her as the teacher who was at Monticello for over 40 years and a cousin of Mollie Stark who made you such a long visit. She was 83 years old and had been failing noticeably for some months.

Flora and I went into town last week to start the wheels of the government to grinding out our passports. We go again tomorrow to get our pictures taken for the same papers. Many thanks for getting my birth certificate. It arrived in plenty of time. I am treasuring it along with my Liberty Bonds etc. I have the plan of the Shinyo Maru where I look at it often. If there is any special thing any of you want me to bring hurry up and write about it for I am starting in about five months (5).

We are delighted that the "Asia" is to visit us regularly this year. It will soon start making it's appearance. Once again all magazines are coming. The November numbers from New York came this last week. It was good to get a Literary Digest in real print again. Have I asked you to renew my subscription? Please do so for six months only (6 months) if you have not. I think that does not expire until February if I remember rightly.

How about my Life Insurance Policies? I forget them since the bills and receipts all go to Father. Have I sent enough gold to cover all bills? I am going to buy gold to hold for use en route home tomorrow for exchange is still down but liable to ascend after Chinese New Years.

This year I sent to American for Christmas only a few cards. I think it will be nice to give things in person when I get home. Flora gave me a Chinese gold ring with my character on it.

A Chinese

would probably smile at my attempt but it will give you an idea.

Professor Perrin of Boston University has been in Peking all this fall and winter. He was down Wednesday to tell Indian Stories to us. He is a fascinating story teller. He was forced to live for several months with some Indians in the Mount Shasta region several years ago so knew Indians who were unspoiled by civilization. He also traveled one whole summer in the Sahara desert and is coming again to tell us about that.

I had a nice Christmas note and greeting from Mrs. Lathrop this week. Only one Christmas greeting got through before Christmas. This last week brought eight or ten.

I must tell you about my house plants for they are doing so well. My big pot of heliotrope has over a dozen big spreading [unreadable word] of blooms. My [two unreadable words] is coming out nicely. Two geraniums are in full bloom. One calla has a blossom. My Chinese lily bell never did better. One bulb has six flower stalks and three others five each. My asparagus ferns are putting fourth new fronds galore. I had such a good time during vacation tending them. If you were here I'd offer you either Tungchow malt candy or Divinity Fudge. I made the fudge last evening and invited all the teachers, Mrs. Stelle and Mrs. Love in. I made it four times in vacation so feel quite experienced once more.

'Tis nearly four o'clock and church is at five. How exciting it must have been to get a radiograph from Gould. Lots of love to everyone

Mary

[This letter, dated February 7, 1920, was written from Foochow, China by Marjorie to her sister, Phebe. Marjorie tells about her father's birthday (Willard) given by the Chinese. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Foochow, China.
Feb. 7, 1920.

Dear Pheobe,

(I spelled your name wrong, though it is sometimes spelled that way.) Geraldine wrote in her last letter, "Where is Monnie's pen?" I haven't written for months, I guess, so I'll try to write a good long letter this time to make up for it.

I guess I'll tell you about papa's birthday celebration. Mr. Ding Ming Uong (you know him) came and asked mama for papa's birthday. Mama told him, on condition that they musn't spend much money. Well, evidently the committee couldn't decide which to have the celebration, Chinese or foreign, so they had to send Mr. Ding up again to ask papa which he would rather have; so it wasn't a surprise. Papa at once said he would rather have the Chinese way. Papa had to give the feast because the celebration was Chinese style. The eventful day came at last. For two or three days before we had been getting presents, candles, a tray, a dish, and scrolls galore. All the morning of that day, too, there were presents coming. Early in the afternoon groups came with firecrackers to chuag-ang papa and bring presents.

At three o'clock in the afternoon there was a meeting. Papa knew he was going to sit on the platform, but we didn't know that we were going until we got down there. We all sat on the platform and the meeting begun with a song. Then there were speeches about ten, I think; one man said in his speech this little couplet,

Ngo sa ngo,
Go sioh bo.

Ngo sa ngo, you know, means fifty five, papa's age. The second line means that he can have another child and he will live to be twice as old, I think that was the interpretation. The speeches told all about what papa had done out here in the early years and so forth.

Then mama spoke thanking them for the royal celebration they had given us. Then papa spoke, at the end thanking them, too. That ended the meeting and we all went up to the foreigners compound to have our pictures taken. Then meeting was in the college chapel.

When we got up to the compound we found the English artist, Mr. Stains or may be Stanes, I don't know which, drawing or rather painting a picture of the pagoda, which is right across the street from our compound. It was a very good picture, I thought. His wife was sitting beside him. They were surrounded at once by the college boys and faculty, preachers and others who were invited to papas birthday.

We all had our picture taken the whole big gathering at once, and then we went to get ready for the feast.

At six we went to the feast which was in the same room as the meeting had been in. There were about fifteen or sixteen tables all of which papa had to pay for.

When the feast is about one third done, the oldest son of the man whose birthday is celebrated has to go around to each table and bow and say, "Great thanks, great thanks, I have nothing to offer you to eat." And then the people get up and bow to him. Now we (K. and I) had to be the oldest son! But we didn't go around to each table but just stood up on the platform and said it. Firecrackers were set off just then, so they drowned out all we said, and we forgot what we had to say and made an awful mess of it and the worst thing of it was that the foreigners said afterwards that we "said it very nicely!" They sat nearest the platform so they could hear.

Mama had secretly invited the whole compound and one or two others in for evening to play games and have refreshments. It was a complete surprise to papa. There was a terrible ring of the door-bell and we managed it so that papa went to the door; when he opened the door the people all sang, "Happy Birthday to You", and then they walked in. We first played a game of tossing the handkerchief, don't make me tell about it, I am so tired of writing. I'm hurrying as fast as I can to get through. Then we played, "Buzz" then "Mrs. Brown doesn't like tea or T." Then Mr. Reumann made a little speech and presented papa with seventeen dollars which all the people had contributed to. Then we had ice cream, which was the Kinnears present, two freezers full, and cake, also from the K.'s, and candy made by ourselves. So the evening ended happily. I forgot to tell you that we had dinner at the Leger's house because Margaret Leger's Birthday is on Feb. 5th, too. She is two years old. This is what Kathleen wants to say:-

The garters that you sent me before are pretty near worn out and I think they will be by the time the new ones get here. I want them about eight (better nice) inches long. Thank you very much. Kathleen

I'd like some garters, too. About 9 1.2 or 10 in. long. Thank you very much. Love to you all, Marjorie.

This photo was taken about 1920 by the big rocks and banyan tree in the Foochow missionary compound. Marjorie is 2nd from the left seated on the ground and holding a baby. Kathleen is 3rd from the left on the ground and also holding a baby.

[This letter, dated February 11, 1920, was written from Tungchow, China, by Mary to the ones at home. Mary dated the letter as 1919, but Gracie did not die until December 1919. She is looking for curios to buy to take back to the U.S. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Feb 11, 1919-[should be 1920]
12.00 A.M.

Dear Ones at Home-

I am stealing time in school to write lectures because I do not seem to have any other. My class has a test so I have extra time. The last letter from home, also the papers, tell of Gracie's death. It does seem hard to see the reason why and it is hard to understand the necessity. [Grace "Gracie" Gilbert Beard, daughter of Oliver Gould Beard, Jr. and Grace Gilbert Beard. Born October 10, 1902 and died December 24, 1919 of "Pulmonary tuberculosis" according to the death record. Her sister, Olive Beard, died before her in 1915, possibly of a heart condition.]

I hope the "flu" is not going to reach your section of the country this year. It has been bad in spots. Japan has suffered extensively. There has been some about here but little of the virulent form. The danger has been from pneumonia afterward. Peking has measles, whooping cough and a few isolated cases of diphtheria among the children. So far we have escaped.

Just now our family is well and the only disorders are a few lingering coughs. Those are going.

Last week-end Flora and I spent at Tsing Hua College with Miss Bader whom we knew well at Kuling last summer. We had an auto ride from the Peking Station out there Saturday night so arrived very comfortably. That evening we looked on at an ice-carnival the boys were having. They had a lantern parade then some interesting racers. Lastly we had brot cocoa and fancy cakes and candy. On Sunday we heard Mr. Burgess speak to the YMCA boys in the morning. We had guests for dinner and tea and were out for supper with Mrs. Starr, another Kuling summer visitor. That left just time for a call on the Pirlie's[?] and a walk of half an hour between events.

The faculty and students were all wrought up on Saturday because a new president (Mr. Lok) is about to be thrust upon them and they do not like the man. Two men, one from the American Legation and one from the Foreign Office of the Chinese Government spent all day talking and could not convince either faculty or students that Mr. Lok is the man for the job.

The student movement is still strong against Japan and on Monday the boys posted a notice that they felt the day was needed for preaching so they could not attend classes. Can't you just imagine such a state of affairs in America?

We came in early Monday morning. I went to have a visit with Harriet Bontelle Lacy and her baby, aged 7 months. Then I had lunch at the Y.W.C.A. where Harriet is staying. She is en route for America and her husband is one of the delegates to the All-Section[?] Methodist Conference now going on in Peking.

I came home Monday evening but Flora stayed up for Mother's Club and came on the 6.10 Tuesday morning.

Today is the meeting of our School Board of Managers over at Mrs. Martin's. Flora is over there of course so we are running without her. We had some of the members for breakfast and will have all of them (6) for lunch.

Yesterday we started to work on the High School play. Our committee for cutting and assigning parts tried to fix the cast. The play is "As You Like It."

Elizabeth your desire for a collar is easily fitted. I already have several in my trunk. I am not sure as to the style I sent home but there are all different and I am sure you will like any one of them. If I see any others I may get an extra one or two for they are always useful.

Two of the American Board girls are coming down week ends to help our girls start a Camp fire organization. We both have been guardians and are fresh from the work. Things are starting off most enthusiastically. I am helping them earn a bead by pointing out some of the constellations to them during the few minutes between supper and study home at night.

7.00 P.M. Time came to close school then I had to wash for lunch. My afternoon on Wednesdays is full from 1.30 to 4.00 with no breathing space. As I had conducted two meetings and made a call yesterday I had not gotten out for exercise. Today I found Mrs. Price and Miss Brown ready to join me so we went to the candy-shop.

This evening study hour is early and closes early so Mr. Stanley may read us a paper on "Marco Polo." We anticipate a treat, both because of the subject and because of the speaker.

Tomorrow we are celebrating Lincoln's birthday by a half holiday. Mr. William Spencer is coming down to give us a talk appropriate to the day. He is also interested in Boy Scout work so he has asked for the privilege of watching a scout drill. Those boys have worked hard this week to make up for all they couldn't do because of lack of practice. Even skating has become unpopular.

We had direct word from Willard through Mrs. George Davis who visited in Foochow also through Mr. Burgess who attended the same conference in Shanghai. His letters are as scarce as mine. This seems to be a busy world here as well as at home.

My trip home is a little less real just now for I have all the wheels going and now only wait for my passport to get back from America and for the exact date for the sailing of the Shinyo Maru to be set and the months to pass. Meanwhile I am looking hard for every kind of curio I want to add to my collection. You may need an addition for what I have but I will trust to that. My trunk accommodates most of it now and I will have that along.

It is time for the lecture and so I will say farewell lest this get tied up too long by waiting for another session.

I hope you are all well.

Lots of love
Mary.

Foochow China
Feb. 15, 1920.

Dear Phebe;

Last Thursday evening we went to a Lincolns party at Mrs. St. Clair's. This is what the invitation said, Lincoln's birthday, eight o'clock, come right in, no need to knock. It was on a little card that could open up. On the covers was the verse I just told you, and you opened two little doors and found this, St Clair's want to celebrate, wear a historic symbol, and don't come late. I wore for a historic symbol this picture of Lincoln and his family with his two dates. I pinned it on with a little American flag that you sent. Marjorie wore a split rial [rail]. Mama wore a picture of a slave and two pictures of freed slaves. Papa did not come till late so he did not wear any. As soon as we got down there we were given cards like this. Of course the cards did not have all the same writing on them. At our table, table six there were a small pile of cards each with a little wiggle on them like this [a squiggle] or [squiggle] or any way. With those wiggles we had to draw an American flower or animal. I drew a daisy and a horse. My partner at that table was Mr. Hubbard and Marjorie's was Mr. Scott. When the judges came around they thought Marjorie's and Mr. Scott's were the best so they had a punch in their cards and went along to the next table no. 7. The next time ours was the best so we went along and got a punch in our cards. At table 7 we came in with Marjorie and Mr. Scott again. At that table we played jack straws. When the bell rang it was a tie so M. and M.S. went along to the next table no. 8. Another couple came along and beat us so we did not go along that time. There they stoped that game and I did not get to table 8 at all. Even if I did not go I went and saw what they were doing. They saw who could make the best dolls out of tooth picks and make their dresses out of colored paper.

Then we took the line of song on the back of the card. There were three songs. Colombia the Gem of the Ocean, and two other national songs that I can not remember. Anyway each song got together and we played charades. The first one was Gal-vest-on. Mrs. Rueman put on her husband's vest. The next one was Belona. You know Belona sassage. Mr. Rueman tied a handkerchief below his knee. The next one was Watchful waiting. Mrs. Scott sat in a chair with a rolling pin and drowsed and Mr. Scott came sneaking around she woke up and ran after him. That was ours or rather I was on that side. Another one was diplo-mat. The hole side came in with hats on and bowed low three times.

After that we had refreshments. Caro popcorn and marshmallows. (I don't know whether you can read that or not.) Then we went home.

I would be very glad to hear from you from your very loving sister, Kathleen. Over

P.S. Papa and Mr. Christian came in before we played charades. Papa had his face blacked and his hands chained together as a slave and Mr. Christian was Lincoln with an ax and wood and L freed P. or the slave. K.C.B.

Foochow, China
Feb. 15, 1920

Dear Oliver, Grace and Annie:-

The last mail brought us word that on the eve of Christ's birthday Heaven was enriched by Gracie's translation to become one of its citizens. We had heard that she had not been well for some weeks but not quite prepared for the news that she had gone. I shall never forget trying to help care for her when she was a wee baby while we were home on our first furlough. And each time that we came home she was always so full of good cheer and always brought sunshine wherever she went.

It is not a disturbing thought to me- that the ties that hold us so fast to this place we call earth, are gradually being transferred to the place we call Heaven- since we came to China. Grandfather and Grandmother, Uncle Charlie, Aunt Hannah, Elsie, Dorothy, Aunt Louise, James, Ruth, Olive and Gracie of our immediate family have gone on to wait for us. It always makes Heaven seem nearer to me. Every day we meet you all at God's Mercy Seat= our family altar and oftener in private talks with the Father. The news of these sad events of course reaches us only after the keenness of your sorrow has passed, but I always like to look back and know that on that very day I had talked with God about you all and had asked Him to give you the things needful for you on that very day.

There were never so many things pressing to be done here as at the present time and there were never such opportunities offered for Christian work. I will enclose a few items that I have put down showing the results of special work in a few churches.

There are so many Union Institutions just getting started or needing special attention that my time is much eaten up in these Committee meetings. Opium is coming in to Fukien again and in a very bad way- hard to fight. The officials put out proclamations to the effect that the people must be patriotic- not buy opium from outside but plant it themselves to stop outside opium from coming in. At present "out side" means Japan. The Japanese are bringing in- smuggling vast quantities of the drug. It is sold openly all thru the country districts and in Foochow the shops sell other things in front while in a back room trusted men are allowed to smoke. All these shops are under Japanese protection. The police cannot raid them until they have notified the Japanese Consul. He has ways of getting the shop ready for inspection before he grants his permission. In the country where the Chinese official is specially avaricious he commands the farmers to plant, taxing them $7.00 per Chinese acre= 1/6 of a foreign acre. If they refuse to plant his soldiers arrest or torture or sometimes kill. To get money the soldiers also tax and license gambling tables $2.00 per day. In fact they go in for any way at getting money- foul or fair- mostly foul. Here in Foochow the police receive $40000 a year from prostitutes. The church that I plan to preach in this a.m. at 10:30 used to be in a good business center. Now, in front, in back, and on both sides are houses of prostitution. Well this is the other. I am spending half a day a week in trying to do something to stop the opium traffic. A year ago I was one of seven or eight to write the Governor about prostitution, but the $40000 was too strong for us. I must be off for church now.

Sunday Evening:-

To day I have preached in a church in the suburbs, eaten dinner a la Chinese with seven Chinese, attended a church committee meeting, called on Sam Leger who is sick, taken care of a hen and 5 chicks, seven hens and 2 geese, taken a squint at my garden from which we are getting beets, cauliflower, lettuce, Chinese cabbage, foreign cabbage, kale, kohlrabi, turnip, mustard, swiss chard, spinach. How's that for an old farmer? and the strawberries are in blossom. I shall plant corn before long.

A week ago last Thursday was my birthday and we have been in Foochow for twenty five years. The Chinese are great on celebrating and they wanted to celebrate so we let them. Much of the day previous and all of Thursday up to 3 p.m. was occupied in receiving calls and acknowledging presents- altho I told them I wished they would not bring gifts.

I will not try to be exhausted but among other things are a pair of geese, a rooster, two doz. eggs, a lot [of] cakes and steamed biscuits- vermicelli of several kinds, four huge flower (paper) pieces 5 ft. high and 4 wide, 13 pairs of paper scrolls, one large red silk banner, 7 or 8 framed silk mottoes, a few pairs of vases. The program at the meeting was gotten up entirely by them. Ellen, the girlies and I were placed on the platform in front of the four flower pieces and behind eight large red candles all burning= one for each of the family. There were speeches on the work done during the 25 years- poems read etc. Then a photo taken- I'll send one if it comes out well and in the evening 130 sat down to the feast- I forget to mention gifts of packages of fire crackers that would have taken our breath away when we were boys- packages 1 foot long and many large red candles - 2" in diameter and a foot long. Well I think the people all had a genuine good time and I hope it will help in bringing God's kingdom here.

We are all well. The girlies grow and develop- what shall Ellen and I do without them during our next term?

May God- the God of comfort- be your strong hold. We are booked to sail from Shanghai July 3 on the Empress of Russia via Vancouver.

With much love Will.

[Willard includes a typewritten paper on the following:]

New Methods of Evangelism which are old.

The Foochow City and Suburbs stations of the American Board Mission have used the following new methods of doing Christian work during the past year.

1. We sent eleven students, mostly from the upper classes of Foochow College into six different villages, mostly near the City for evangelistic work. Each of these was given $10. This money all came thru private subscriptions by missionaries and it was considered to be enough for the bare expenses of each student for the two Summer months while he was in work. These boys all had pleasant experiences and reported from two to five or six people each who had interested in the Gospel. One village asked for the work to be continued and are putting up much of the money needed. In other places the students worked in connection with another new form of work as follows;

2. Two young men were asked at the beginning of the year to become evangelists with the whole big plan to the North and East of the City with upwards of 60 villages with 100,000 people in them. It was definitely decided not to start any chapel and school. The work was purely personal evangelism. It is hardly necessary to state that this was not at first a pleasant task for two boys on whose diplomas the ink was only just drying. But they were surprised at the reception they met. As inevitable the names of certain villages soon began to appear frequently on the reports and soon one village asked for regular Sunday Services, fitting up a room and finding seats then another village did the same thing. At the end of the year, just now, these two young men have on their books the names of 58 who have become learners, three have just united with churches. The mission indefinitely planning to open regular work in four villages.

3. Growing out of the general favorable attitude toward Christianity and out of the China for Christ Movement and out of the new spirit that is manifest in almost all places, an evangelistic Committee was appointed by the Annual Meeting which is already functioning. Each church is planning a series of special Services from three to five days according to the conditions. A week is taken in each for organization and preparation. These services are held in the afternoon and evening and at the meeting people are asked to give names and addresses if they are willing to be enrolled as learners. At the first series of meetings held Jan. 11-13, 96 names were enrolled in one church. The church which holds 300 if packed was full at each meeting. At a Bible class social about one half of them were present. Jan. 24th, Special Efforts are made to keep in touch with the learned and keep them learning.

Mr. Beard has stayed in Fuchow seven years since his last trip to USA. His achievement has been well known in this community and admired by all the people he has met. Foochow, China.
Feb. 20th 1920

Dear Folks at Home:-

To day is the first day of the Chinese New Year. It has been a cold rainy day- much to the disappointment of the Chinese for this is the great holiday of the whole year. On this day about the only things they do is to gamble.

To do any work is a sign that they will be obliged to work hard all the year. To use such a word as "death" will have the effect of casting gloom over the family for the whole day and will surely bring bad luck.

We are having an old fashioned rainy season. For two weeks now it has rained almost incessantly. One day was beautiful- the last one, my birthday.

The Chinese wanted to celebrate so we told them they could. They asked whether it should be Chinese or foreign style we told them Chinese. I think they all had a royal good time- so did we- and we learned some things we did not know before.

First. All the planning and the work was done by the Chinese in their own way- they did however consult me on many points- in each of which I assented to their suggestions.

Second. All the day Feb. 4 and on Feb. 5 up to 3 p.m. callers were frequent and everyone brought a present altho I had specially requested that they should not do this.

Third. The range of gifts will interest you. A pair of geese, a rooster, 2 doz. eggs, several pounds of vermicelli, 3 lbs. of peanuts (shelled unroasted), 2 pyramids 2 ft. high of sponge cakes and steamed biscuits, 4 large floral (paper with bamboo frames) pieces in each was an image of a man on horseback or a goat or deer made of thread vermicelli. These were handsome. - 7 pairs of red candles, about 2" in diameter and 15 in. long. We are planning to take home some of these. Eight of them were burning during the exercises- one for each member of the family- present and absent. 14 pairs of paper scrolls- 1 large red silk banner, 5X8 feet- 9 mottoes on silk in frames- 1 lacquer tray- 2 pairs of vases- I do not know how many packages of firecrackers there were 4 large packages left which we plan to take home and of course many were set off that day. I am not sure that I have mentioned all but enough I think to show you the range.

Fourth- The program- At 3 p.m. a delegate came to ask us to go down to the College Chapel. All the gifts- except the live stock were displayed attractively. An audience of about 130 were waiting for us. We four were asked to sit on the platform with the four paper flower pieces behind us and the 8 large candles before us all burning. The program consisted of singing, Scripture, prayer and historical addresses- a poem which had for its topic both our 25 years of work and 55 years of life. Then both Ellen and I were asked to reply, - which means say thank you.

Fifth- The photo was taken. I will try to send one home- will bring one anyway.

Sixth- Immediately after the photo came the real part of the celebration- the climax to the whole= the feast= 130 guests sat down in one room to this sumptuous repast which cost about .45 a plate- more strictly, .45 a pair of chop sticks. A celebration of this kind must be gotten up in the name of a son or sons. So Gould gave this birthday. But Gould was not present to tell the people, "Greatly thank you, we have greatly troubled you, we have nothing for you to eat." Duai sia sia. Duan ki daeng mo noh siah. So Marjorie and Kathleen did this for them, and they completely brought down the house.

Seventh- I paid for the celebration which was part of the "Chinese Style".

The only expense connected with the whole thing was the feast. The expense was $60. But it was not as bad as seems at first sight. I knew all about it before I accepted the "inundation". And one important consideration was this. - We have not been able to entertain the Chinese as we have wanted to in our home and this gave us the opportunity to do it all at once and in a way that was in perfect keeping with their ways of doing and in a way that gave them all a perfectly natural good time- so it was acceptable and profitable all round.

This week begins the Chinese week of prayer which we are calling in China "The Week of Evangelism". Yesterday special Union services were held in three churches in Foochow. To day the same and tomorrow the same. I am one of three men asked to speak on each of the three days.

Our last Christmas boxes came this week. Two packages- one from Phebe K. of some cranberry sauce- one from Gould of three travelling cases. Your gifts came some time ago. The hickory nuts are delicious- we are enjoying a few a day- and so are our friends. The girls are keeping the mirrors for future use. We thank you all for them and more for the thought that inspired the gifts- It is Saturday night and 10 o'clock so good night.

Sunday night= Have I written you that we are now booked to sail on the Empress of Russia July 3rd, - altho we are trying to get transferred to the Honolulu route,- with however little hope of success. Mary will likely get off first.

We are approaching the time for opening College again with everything uncertain. We may not have a student and we may be surfeited. The student world in China is a very uncertain thing just now.

May Our Father keep us graciously to meet in another six months. - Ellen says that we will live in Shelton.
Yours Will

Feb 23, 1920

Dear Ones at Home-

We have gone back to winter and have just had the heaviest snow fall of the season. That is a very heavy one for North China- at least 4 inches. It tried to snow every day but the dry air and temperature about 32 degrees evaporated the snow so every night found the ground bare. Yesterday the air was thick at times, but today is clear and cold.

Eva Price and I went for a walk in the fiercest part just for the fun of the homelike feeling of soft snow on our faces. She has been lonesome lately. I think my going home, or rather having a home to go to, makes her feel anew her lack of one.

A week ago Sunday Mrs. Martin had the church service and read us one of the stories from Van Dyke's "The Blue Flower". The children as well as we adults loved it.

This Sunday Dr. Galt preached on "The Heavens belong to God but the earth has been given unto men. He always gives a good scholarly talk. This was especially good for though it was scholarly yet it was within the grasp of even our youngest child. He and Mrs. Galt were over for breakfast with us this morning. It seemed quite like old times to have them down here.

This being the week after Chinese New Year's Day we have no early morning train. We get fooled and wait around for mail after breakfast nearly every day. It is hard on Dr. Love for he can not go up the night before and the noon train gives a very short stay for getting conference meetings. The big all China Medical Conference is on in Peking this week and of course he wants to go.

Peking is having Conferences so thick they overlap. The All Eastern Methodist Conference closed Feb. 17 and the Medical opened Feb. 21. The Educational Conference is Feb. 26 and 27 and the Medical does not close till Feb. 28.

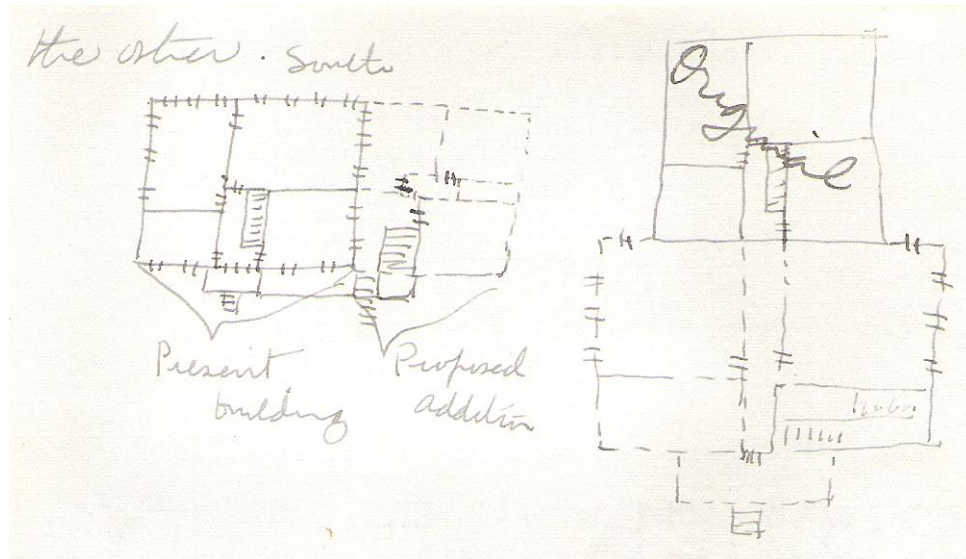

It is impossible to get a room in Peking except at the Hotels and even they are fuller than usual.

On the night of Chinese New Years- Friday- the Camp Fire girls and I got supper for one family. We made a vegetable soup just thick and had enough so there were about four bowls apiece. For desert Miss Price made the "Afterthought" in Phebes Framingham Cook Book. The girls made salad dressing and served cabbage and lettuce salad too. It was such fun that we want to repeat it.

On Saturday Mrs. Arthur Smith served our compound tea. There were several guests and we had a gay time.

I was hostess this week end and on Saturday night we played "Tungchow Train" a game we have adapted from "Stage Coach". Then we made ?? from George Washington. Last night I read a story of Ellis Parker Butler "Keeping up Grandma's Morale" that came out in the Red Cross Magazine last year; then another "One Hundred Years too Soon" in the December Scribner's. It is a time story of Kua Li the favorite wife of Kwan Hsu, the last Emperor and is very well told. Several of the children have been in the Palace where the story takes place and I have been to the tombs of both the Emperor and the wife and had pictures of them all.

Flora is eating, sleeping, talking, thinking and all the rest of the "ings" new school building. We have to have more room and the plan is to enlarge this building in some way. There are two plans and one day one appeals and the next the other.

I think I forgot to acknowledge the Line a Day Book which came two weeks ago.

Another of my side issues has been using the minutes before study hall to help the Camp Fire girls learn some constellations. The boys got jealous and have joined the fun. The ten or fifteen minutes are enough to peek at several constellations but not enough to get too cold.

This last week I tried a stunt I have long wanted to try. I had four guests in for tea in my own room. My new big tea pot holds enough for that many and my room is big enough to accommodate that number. I hope to try it again soon.

I'm planning for a dinner party for Flora's birthday this week. I've thought of home a lot lately with all the birthdays- Mothers, fathers, James, Willard, Edith, Geraldine, Wells. Just think of the cakes if you were only pupils in our school. We had a cake yesterday, another today and a third Wednesday.

In four months I'll be en route I hope. Flora plans to see me off in Japan and make a short stay there. I hope the building won't interfere.

I'm going to start home in my old suit and hat bought here. If it is too bad, I'll get Leolyn to help me get fitted out in San Francisco before starting East. So anyway, I'll be all up to date when I reach Shelton.

Lots of love

Mary.

March 1, 1920

Dear Ones at home-

I am following Elizabeth's excellent example and writing two letters in close succession. We don't object at this end and I hope you don't either.

The National Geographics from 1919 came about two weeks ago and I was very glad to welcome them. I shall be glad if you will have it continued for 1920. I have had my volumes all bound and they make a fine array on my bookshelf. I find them useful too in class work.

The Asia never has arrived yet. I wonder if some other Miss Beard is getting that too. Yesterday and today brought large foreign mails. Yesterday most of the material was letters but today many papers came, so I think we have gotten our share of this last ship load.

I can not yet see Wells as a big tall boy but how well I remember Stanley and his growth during Willard's first term in China. You probably can work the same play on us with Wells.

You are right Elizabeth about definiteness of plans. I only know that I sail in the Shinyu Maru from Yokohama the last of June. Now I am hoping to go over by way of Korea. I should like to see the country that way. I hope to have a few days in Japan but can not tell for sure. Flora and Eva Price and a friend all plan to go over and if we go together it makes several to consult.

Mar. 3- I am enclosing a letter from Will that came yesterday. What an interesting birthday he did have! He was nice to let the Chinese do it their way. I think I wrote you of the foreign(?) wedding here last June. It was a queer mixture of customs. Some of them are better where the Chinese custom is followed except for the idol worship part. There the Christian ritual is put in; or better yet is to be real foreign.

Last week I spent Thursdays at Mrs. Martin's. Mr. M. was in Peking for the Education Conference. And Mrs. M. does not like staying alone with the children. It was fine sleeping out on the porch with little Gertrude for my "hot water bottle". In the early morning, Stratton always came running out for a few minutes of cuddling. Little Ruth was a dear and I planned to be around whenever I could about 5.00 or 5.30 for that is the time she may be picked up. Also I sometimes had a chance to hold her at the hour of the late evening feeding.

We had a Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell down on Saturday to "look us over" as a place for their daughter next year. They sent their application yesterday, so I guess we suited. Flora had Dr. Betow down for the week-end and how those two women did visit.

They stopped for a few hours sleep and that was about all. The Saturday tea was at the school last week and Miss Bostwicks' little room was full to overflowing. Fortunately the guests were about evenly divided in numbers as to those leaving on the 5.17 train and those coming that kept us from too great a crowd.

Yesterday I went to Carol Love's for afternoon coffee. It was my first visit in over two weeks and the first time I had been in the house since the Chandlers arrived.

The Chandlers got here last week Tuesday. They looked very tired but are now all O.K. They had all had the flu in Tientsin, so stayed three weeks instead of three days as per schedule. Mr. C. is going to take Flora's Sunday School work so now we are all free.

I almost forgot Flora's birthday. I wanted to give her a dinner but two of my guests would be in Peking Wednesday so I put it Tuesday. I had Dr. Smith, (Mrs. S. declined), Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Love and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler. Dr. Love went that afternoon to Peking to attend the Medical Conference that started Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard-Smith had a little daughter born Tuesday but she never breathed at all. The care[or case?] held Doctor Love here for three days of conference. Mrs. Howard-Smith is getting along finely and has from the start.

Last week was the "Week of Evangelism" of which Willard spoke. Margaret Smith and Mrs. Arthur Smith were out every day with bands of Chinese men. Mr. and Mrs. Stelle are down in the country and return Saturday after a two week's absence.

Do I owe Father anything? It is quite a while since I have sent a draft home. I have a gold deposit of $150 here now. Exchange was good so I got it to be ready for June.

Mrs. Frame started last Thursday for Japan. She is to work for money for the Woman's College also for teachers. They are affiliated with the Union College of Peking now and adopted by Wellesley so are no longer orphans or strangers in the educational world.

It is evening study hall and I must get to my Virgil and Algebra for tomorrow.

Lots of love

Mary.

Foochow, China
March 7th 1920

Dear Folks at Home:-

These are interesting times in China- with the north and south still at war, with the military party in power and the country in reality under military rule, with the military officials "economizing" in every way and getting all the money they can lay hands on and keeping all they can get, with national officials and provincial officials borrowing all they can get and mortgaging anything that they can find (it is rumored that our General Li has mortgaged public lands in Foochow to Japan for money). The government school teachers were paid 50% of their salaries last year, soldiers are even worse off:- with officials compelling farmers to plant opium even at the point of the bayonet and when resisted killing people,- men, women and children by the hundred- with the student body, apparently the only body that cares enough about these conditions to do anything to right the wrongs-and these students all thru the land striking and seriously considering refusing to return to school- with these conditions prevailing all over the country you do not need to be told that China is an interesting place.

But the foregoing conditions are not all that make life here interesting. There is an interesting religion- in the Christian religion which far surpasses any thing I ever saw. In 14 different places the Am. B'd mission has held special services, or it would be more exact to say done special work for the main work has been in many places visiting in the homes, and talking with individuals. About 800 new names have been added to the list of learners and many backsliders have been reclaimed. In three instances the whole family has enrolled as learners and cleaned out all idols.

To day I went to administer communion at Cui Buu. Three men joined the church. One was an old classical school teacher. He has attended church for 4 years. Another was the eldest son of a Colporteur.- All the family but the mother are now church members. She refuses to become a Christian. Only prayer will save her. The third was a 21 year old young man from a well to do family who has been a learner for more than a year.

After communion we all took dinner together and listened to the reports of the different officers for the past year and then elected the new offices.

After this service I went over to the "Honorable Virtue" church at the invitation of a learner who wanted to put away all his idols. The chief idol= The King of Monkeys= was placed in his little house, which was about 1 ft. wide, 16 in. high and 8 in. deep, on the table and we held a service-sang a hymn about God's protesting love and care, a prayer by preacher Ma and then the missionary was asked to speak.

The audience consisted of the preacher, his wife, the Bible woman, two Christian girls, five church members, the man of the house, who was to put away his idols, his two wives and three sons, about 9-14 years old and a young woman and an old man who are living in the same house and who are most ardent and superstitious idol worshippers. The subject of the talk was God's fatherly care of us, with of course references to the influence which the King of Monkeys had been supposed to have on the family.

This man has been a learner for four or five years- why has he not confessed Christ before? He has two wives and knows he cannot unite with the church. This last year he has been in Formosa in business. While there both his wives were taken ill at home in Foochow. They had the priests come with incense and gongs and incantations and they got well. But they spent a lot of money, and the man knew it was both profitless and wrong. This experience convinced him that the idols must be put away. He has himself taught his wives until they both agreed to get rid of the idols.

After closing prayer he himself took the King of Monkeys that had "protected" his home for years out of his little house, wrapped him in the yellow cloth that had been his background all these years, with the little bags that had been used for incense and asked me to take him away. Then I asked what God that big one over in the corner was. "Oh! that belongs to the owner of the rice shop out in front." He took it up at once and carried it out to its owner and asked him to keep it. Then he dashed out of the back door and came in with a long ladder and put it up against the partition and was about to ascend as preacher Ma said, "Don't you are too heavy, you will break the ladder. Let this boy go up." Up went a 14 year old boy and brought down a charm. This is a piece of coarse cotton cloth 18"X10", yellowish with a character in thick red ink something like this.

The owner took this charm out of its frame and asked me to take it away with me. This was all of idolatry that he possessed. I asked his wives if they were afraid to see the household goods go. They replied with a smile "No". These gods are now adorning(?) our parlor table.

This past week I have attended on invitation two meetings of students- one with returned students and the commissioner of Education and one with the returned students= Foochow students who have graduated from Colleges in the U.S. or England= to see if some way could be found to get the students back into school- Last Dec. 1 the General closed and sealed their meeting place and to express their feelings of dissent they left school- and altho the government schools should have opened in January, not a boy returned. Yesterday was our opening day. 90 came to the Higher Primary and 14 to the Middle School. The H.S. should have had 180. The Middle sch. 250. But in the meeting yesterday the Student Council decided to send notice to all students to return tomorrow so I have hopes we can have school.

We are all well- those hickory nuts have been a very great treat. Kathleen has just said, "In less than four months we shall start for home."

May God prosper our plans and bring us to see each other about next Aug. 1.

Very lovingly

Will.

[March 8, 1920]

-Notice-

Don't faint- I am writing.

Hello Dot. "You poor wrinkled gray haired nineteen year old, Old Maid" When I look at your picture before me with those eyes bulging with those "come hithers" you need not seek sympathy from me now. If however (which will not be possible) when you have reached twenty nine and have not become that trim matron which I know you will be, then I'll extend to you my sympathy if needed.

Never you mind if fate should so decree. You know when I build that next house that will be big enough for all my nieces and nephews to come and take care of their bachelor uncle.

From your letter you seem to be enjoying college life to the full. Do you know I am somewhat anxious. I have always understood that college was where one educated your brain and that was what I thought you were doing, but I see you are also educating your feet as well., never mind. I suppose that is part of modern education.

Well we just had one good time when Phebe and Jeanette came for the weekend.

Jeanette seem to be a regular girl, a good sport and I rather liked her. She reminded me much of a former friend of mine. Little did she know what memories she was bringing to mind as she caught me once or twice feasting my eyes on her as she sat in my big chair.

I shoveled out the whole length of the yard so I could get out Billy Dodge and believe me it was some job with the snows four to five feet deep. We went to church and took a little ride to Pomfret Monday.

Billy is having quite a rest this winter, but he behaves perfectly whenever I take him out. I am thinking of getting a new speedometer. They have one that when you reach 30 miles an hour a white flag appears. At 40 a red one appears and at 50 a grafaphone begins to play. I am going to be an angel and live where angels travel. Do you think that will hold the Speedies; it will me.

We enjoyed Phebe and Donald's stay with us Xmas. Of course Donald has told you what a time he had getting here,-the next time you write Donald. Start in this way Hello "you good looking boy" and see what he says to it. It came about like this. Mr. Merrill our minister came down to us the first Sunday they were here and said right before us all, "I wondered who that good looking boy was with you and I jollied him about it all the time he was here in fact Donald is developing into a good looking boy. One day he tried on my hat which was hanging on the tree (a new soft one not dirty) and he looked very good in it. I saw that he liked it and then just for him I got my new overcoat and let him try it on and to my surprise that fitted him perfectly. I told him he could wear them while he was here if he wished which he did, and he did look swell. I was quite proud of him they say that clothes do not make the man but they help in looks at least. I bought him a hat just like mine before he left of course you will not tell him I told you this. He is very sensitive. By the way- I am going to Springfield, Mass Mar 24 and 25 to coalminers convention and am thinking of going to see Donald over night. It's not very far from S-

Phebe left us a bunch of letters when she was here to read and we learned much from them.

I see how very short of clothes you are etc etc etc!!! Lets see nightie, skirt, waist, petticoat, stockings shoes, dress, corsets, - - - etc etc- have I got them all. I guess so. And of course Jerry can use a little extra chintz so I am enclosing my ck for $25, which you can divide between you for what ever you want, clothes or entertainment or general expenses, but listen if you buy corsets for example, don't buy 16.50 ones as a lady recently told me she did. I asked her what was the idea, as I had seen the ad - for $1.25. She said she did not wear that kind and I said shoes $18. Dress and shirt 150. Hat, $25, and I said where does the man get off that marries you, and I advised her not to tell the next prospect (for she is looking) that she wore 16.50 corsets.

Aunt E and I are going to the auto show in Boston next week - wish you were both here to go. Some party we would have. Now don't you think that I have out done myself. I do. I believe I owe Jerry one or two letters but this will make up for all of yours.

Hope you are both well and we shall want to hear from you often.

Where are you to be next summer, it will be here before we know it. We hope you will see Putnam before vacation ends.

With love to you both

Mar 8/20

Sincerely

Uncle E.C.K.

March 28th 1920

Dear Phebe:-

It is 9 p.m. so this will be a very short letter- not at all like the good long ones you write me and the others here. Your last was specially interesting telling about the superstition of your room mate. Superstition is not by any means confined to China and the non-Christian countries. There is a lot of it in our own dear land and among the nicest people there- and perhaps thee and me may have a bit ourselves.

I wish you could hear your little sisters pray every night "Help Phebe in her class." Every night since we heard of your difficulties with those youngsters both girlies have asked the Father to help you in trying to help them.

Today has been a beautiful clear spring like day. Mama and I walked out to An Seu- the last large village on the plain as you go from S. Side to the foot of Kuliang. Only 20 pupils have as yet begun school, but the little church was so crowded with men and women that the last two men who came in could not find seats till we had crowded the little folks up. All the churches are full every Sunday.

Good night- I'll add more and get this off in the next mail.

May 31. Wed. evening- We are having beautiful Spring weather- just right. Some of the people are putting on summer clothes. College is in full swing again. We were all afraid lest there would be very few students this term. We have been registering about 400= 160 in the Higher Primary or 170 and 220-230 in the Middle School this year we have 175 in each,- due to the student's strike of last term, and we feel very fortunate.

Ray Gardner has been ill for most a month and it will be two weeks before he will be able to do anything, as he has about 22 periods a week in College it is rather hard.-

A lot of people are going home- Belchers- Hubbards have already gone, - and we'll be going in a little over two months- where will we find a place to stop? - No word from Oberlin and they say Shelton is full- We'll have to build a house boat and float in a river or pond.

How do you like the enclosed from Whittier's "The Eternal Goodness".

With lots of love

Father

Willard L. Beard

"And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar.
No harm can come from him to me
On ocean or on shore.

I know not where his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air,
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care."

[This letter, dated March 31, 1920, was written from the Western Hills of China by Mary to the folks at home. She is there for vacation and tells about the area and things that they have seen and done. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

[Probably the Western Hills]
March 31 [1920]

Dear Folks at Home-

Wish you were here to see the view. I am sitting on the bottom step of our cottage. Several other cottages dot the hillsides of various sizes, three large tombs and some ordinary cemeteries while the land is divided into all sorts of irregular shapes by roads, fences and dry creek beds. Beyond are low hills, one with a temple crowning it, a river and then more hills. As I sit here alone it is so quiet that I hear the dull rumble of the camel bells as the trains of camels pass on the roads far out on the plains. The longest train I have seen was about 40 in number. Mostly they are from ten to twenty in number.

I am in a quandary now. As I sit here above the plain I see the two small boys of the party deliberately doing the thing I told them they might not do. I fear they will come in with huge appetites and get sent to bed with only bread and water to satisfy it unless they cease.

One very new tomb quite near us has been undergoing marvelous changes. One day we went off and left the plane barren. When we came back the front court was set with rows of pine trees. Every day more trees appear and now the whole hillside back of the place is marked out with little ?? for more trees. The family have a home foreign style (on the outside) just next the tomb and are planting trees in front of that too.

There are nine of us out here, three teachers and six children. Eva Price was sick before coming out and thinks mostly of her stomach and how it "acts". I say "yes" or "no" and change the subject because the details are tiresome. Grace Parsons puts the youngsters up to all sorts of tricks and jumbles for them every time they don't get just what they want at the very instant they want it. I forgot myself today and told her she had got to stop some of her nonsense. I guess I feel out of sorts and am weary of a vacation full of so much responsibility. But how I do enjoy it when everything goes smoothly!!

There is a funeral in one of the near villages. The drums beat off and on and the mourners blow the deep toned long horns. Just now they set off strings of firecrackers. I am waiting for them to start off with the catafalque.

We have had company here all the time. Dr. and Mrs. Lennox and children have the cottage just below us and two girls were out in another cottage for the week-end. Mrs. Lennox presented us with a bottle of fresh milk and some fudge last evening. We had malt-candy and cookies with which to return the favor. The girls gave us enough celery for a soup and four eggs just for the sake of not having to carry them back.

As you will judge, it is vacation. The last two weeks of school were very full ones. I went in to Peking time for the Holyoke-Smith play rehearsals and plans. Then on March 19 when we teachers were giving our annual entertainment for the children I went to bed and missed it all. There was a rehearsal the next day and the following Monday and I could not attend rehearsals so I had to give up my part. I did not even go to the play for I changed my plans and came to the Hills the day after school closed.

We have visited four temples, two ??, the Hunting Park and taken a stroll over the hilltops. The temple Tien Tai Shan to which we went yesterday has an interesting history. In 1661 the Emperor lost his wife and wounded so sincerely her loss that he was published as dead. Instead he retreated to this temple and became Abbot. To corroborate the story is the fact that when the next Emperor visited Tien Tai Shan the Abbot did not bow low as a priest should. Also, when the Abbot died in 1670 the Emperor sent robes of yellow (Imperial) and other gifts used only for royalty. The Memory of the priest sits in a throne with a gorgeous yellow satin robe on. Every year he gets a new one and all the old ones are kept in locked chests. The hangings in the room are all of Imperial yellow satin also.

We stopped at Shir Cheng Shan on the way back. The hill was made into a fortress by one of the eunuchs in 1520 or thereabouts. He planned to tunnel the mountains and turn the river into Peking to flood the city. Then he was to seize the throne and be Emperor. The fortress was to defend the entrance to the tunnel. His plot was discovered in time to prevent the digging of the tunnel. On the peak of the hill is a Mohammedan temple, small but with a glorious outlook.

Good news. I made myself as conspicuous as I could when I saw the boys start off. Evidently they saw me so took a ride around and came home. At least they had not been gone long enough to go to the river as I had forbidden them to do.

I have squandered 10 good dollars on a book that has almost proved it's worth on this trip. It is "Peking" by Juliet Bredon. She has devoted two whole chapters to these hills and a little foreknowledge makes the trip so much more worth while.

Everything is smooth and fine so forget my grumbling earlier in this letter. You ought to see our bloomer brigade. But bloomers are the thing for mountain climbing and donkey riding. I will mail this in the city tomorrow enroute home. We leave on a 9.30 train so must ?? and off by 8.30. Lots of love Mary Beard

North China American School
 Tunghsien, Peking, China Apr. 18, 1920.

Dear Folks at home:-

This is a glorious morning- birds singing, lilacs in bloom, and trees at the bewitching stage of leaving out. It is Sunday, and everything going on that a Sunday morning suggests. Our spring-time is so short, it merges into summer's heat so soon that we hold on to these temperate days just as long as we can.

School is proceeding fast. There are so many things to be finished up in the next two months that there is not much time to apace and the days go fast. We are graduating three young men this year all of whom go on to college next fall!

Monday evening:- It has been so hot all day that we are relieved to have the cool of the evening. I have been to Peking which is getting to be my usual Monday's stunt. In some way errands multiply as we grow. This time it was to get my picture taken for this year's N.C.A.S. Annual.

Events are very interesting for our school just now. We have a gift of $15000 from the Mrs. Russell Sage Fund, but it consists of securities which have to be sold and are not yet available. In the meantime our numbers are increasing and we receive three or four inquiries each week for next year so that without doubt we shall need to prepare for at least 509 pupils next fall. We hear that the Y.M.C.A. (of which Mr. Petters of Peking a member) has voted to a majority for their children to come to Tunghsien. No one outside of Peking wishes to send their children to Peking to school. The American Business Men's Association (of which he was a member) has dwindled to nothing. Last winter it gave Mr. P. a public calling down in the paper. The American Chamber of Commerce has voted not to give the $22000 to build his school and have answered that they do not understand upon what authority he has imposed upon them the responsibility for such a sum. He had parceled out $100000, so that the Methodists, the Presbyterians, and the Business Men of Peking should each give $22000 and the Rockefeller's $33000. We know that the Presbyterians have no notion of giving that money. Now that the Chamber of Commerce has turned him down and his own people have out voted for him, it looks rather dubious for his school. Another fact against his success is that the man who is principal says the little high school that he has had this year has been the bane of the school. For the five children in it, he has had to give up all supervision of the grade classes. It looks as though the bubble would give its last gasp soon. It has been a big bluff from the beginning and now it looks as though the Methodists might be asking to come back, as I am told the Bishop is "on to" the man who sprang the coup d'état on the Methodists church board last year. Besides the New York M.E. Board has never given its sanctions to the deed anyway. We are doing the "And the barber kept on shaving" act, and hope this would better be kept "in the family" for a while, as matters are not yet clinched here. We have our plans for a big addition in the hands of the architect now so that as soon as the money comes, we shall be ready to build. The addition is to be twice the size of our present building. Just what we are to do with our big family next year is the problem that is facing us now, but we hope we see a way through.

The N.C.A.S Board of Managers has granted Mary a year's furlough, with her salary continuing while at home. She sails the last of June from Yokohama, and I hope, now, to go that far with her. I do not yet know whether I can get away. We had hoped that the new principal would be here this coming fall, but he declined our offer, and so I stay on. Besides, I am rather tempted to stay and see things through. Things are mighty interesting.

A few weeks ago we had Dr. John Dewey and his family spend the day with us. Last Saturday we had a perfect deluge of company in the compound so that we had over seventy to our tea. The occasion was a musicale given by a woman in Peking who has a fine voice. Mrs. Josselyn (nee Miss Dudley) happened along and added her violin to the occasion. It was the best musicale outside talent that we ever have had. This Saturday we are expecting a lot more of company, then I think we shall have a lull until May 15th when hundreds of Peking people come out here to hold the May meeting of the Peking Mother's Club. We have two recitals for our piano pupils, a play, and graduation and another play to plan for so that we shall be busy until Mary goes. We began packing for her to-day. I am sending home a few things by her.

I am hoping that Mary can persuade Edith to come back with her to stay awhile here and then go home with me around by the way of Europe. It would be a fine trip for her and would keep Mary and me company on our journeys. If ever I can get caught up in my work, I am going to with Edith, but you might mention the subject to her and let her begin to think about it. Mary will have pictures and curios to show some of the beauties of the land.

To-morrow we are going to call on Acting Minister Dr. C.D Tenney and his wife at the Legation. They are giving an 'at home' in honor of Mr. Larmont who is travelling here in the interests of American industries as they can help China. He is interested in missions and the missionaries are especially invited to-morrow. Mary and I have been planning to call any way but shall not let this take the place of the call we wish to make. Last year when Mrs. Rider (Mr. Tenney's sister) and her daughter were here, we saw much more of the Tenneys.

We have had a delightful visit with Mr. and Mrs. Josselyn (nee Miss Dudley) and now they leave very soon for Chungking away up the Yangste river, where they have another year to stay before they are shifted. She is hoping their next station may be nearer to Peking.

Yours with love-

Flora Beard.

P.S. Enclosed is a price of my new crepe dress. F.B.

N.C.A.S.

May 9, 1920

Dear Mother and Everybody,

Mother gets a special greeting hence I am writing on Mother's Day. We celebrated by all wearing red roses at breakfast. But the best was the good sermon we had this afternoon. Mr. Schwartz talked on decision. His reading was the story of Elijah and the Priests of Baal. He gave the three great needs of character as courage, concentration and conversation and Christ as the only safe guide.

To go back a few weeks. Two weeks ago Saturday I left at noon to go out to Tsing Hua for the Chemistry Society meeting. I was to be one of a house full of ladies at Mrs. Pierles. Three of us materialized. Mr. Peirle and the men slept at Mr. Jones' but ate with us. We had a grand Chinese feast at 6.30 then Captain Castenedrio[?], Italian, gave a paper on balloon gas. He used to be a professor of Chemistry but joined the Aviation Corp. when Italy entered war and was in the balloon service all four years. He is secretary of the Legation in Peking now.

On Sunday we all went for a long walk through the old Summer Palace and had the servant meet us with a picnic lunch at the gate of one of the Prince's palaces. Alas the Prince who now owns the place had sent word he was coming out that day. Everything was swept and garnished but not for us. We tried a second with the same result and ended by sitting by the roadside with a word of Chinese to watch the process. The brunch was extra good and our appetites keen so we had fun in spite of the obstacles. Monday morning I heard the first part of a lecture by Miss Welch. She was in Europe during 1916-1917 as correspondent; in Paris, Venice, and other towns near the Austrian front. She was thrilling and had herself an audience reduced to tears. I liked Captain Castenedrio better, stirring but not emotional.

Last week- and I gadded worse yet. On Thursday I was eating some sweet chocolate and one of my teeth cracked clear up through to the root. Dr. Love pulled out the loosened piece and I at once called a Dentist to get it filled to be safe till I get home. On Friday I took the evening train to Peking, had my tooth filled, went to Mrs. Corbett's for supper and the night. The Choral Club was rendering "Elijah" that evening so of course I went. It was one of the best productions I have heard. Mr. Congdon is always good and a new soprano, Mrs. Little, was most excellent. Mrs. Dunlap was good too, altho her voice is too small for a big ball.

I had planned to go to Tientsin Saturday afternoon anyway at noon so cut the morning too and left on the 8.35. In Tientsin I spend Saturday night with the McCann's as they are nearest Madame Yanagi, the dress maker. On Sunday Mr. Lieper called and took us to church then I went out to Hsi Kou with him after church. I took a short nap after luncheon then got a rickshaw and went to see Marion Evans and have tea. She has three darling little girls, the baby only 10 mos. Mr. and Mrs. Leiper came for me in their auto. I helped Mrs. L. put the babies to bed then we went over to Mr. and Mrs. Stanley's for dinner.

Monday morning I just sat around and talked with Mrs. Lieper till time to start down town about 10.30. I had to get some Georgette crepe and take it to the dress maker. I lunched at the Grime's and took the 2.35 train for Peking. Flora met me at the station and we started at once for home in rickshaws. She had some sandwiches which we ate and then had hot soup on our arrival about 9.30.

On Tuesday we were invited to go to Peking for 8.00 P.M. dinner at the Legation. It was full noon but we were too tired for the long ride by man power so the three of us hired an auto at 7.00 to bring us home.

Lessons, rehearsals, a little tennis and studying filled the time till Friday noon. We closed at 11.45 because we were all invited to join a party and attend President Hsu's reception. There have been several changes in the Palace and one whole series of palaces not open the last two years were free for us to visit this year. We also were taken across the lake in the picturesque barges instead of having to walk way round. Again we came home by auto, but seven to a machine at the same price.

Yesterday was our holiday because of the visit the day before. I packed all day long except when I stopped to wash my hair and again late to go to tea at Mrs. Arthur Smith's.

If you have not paid my Geographic subscription, please do so. It is going to have some very fine articles which I want. I'll let it come here and have Flora save them for me. I have a whole shelf of bound volumes.

Dr. Smith has been showing me snap shots of the big snow fall in Northampton, Mass, and shuddering over the cold I'll have to endure next winter. He does not scare me at all.

Next time I write I'll be able to give dates of sailing and plans for leaving here. My box to be freighted to Kobe is packed and I shall get it off this week. It seems as though there were little but newspaper in it when I think of the number there; but there are a few things besides judging from my list of contents.

A letter from Stanley and Myra enclosed snapshots of Nancy and Stephen. They are dears.

I am using spare time and other on reading the "As You Like It" cast. My fame is spreading. I was offered a part in the Mother's Club play and asked to read the College Club play. Perhaps I'd better change my occupation(!).

Lots of love to everybody. We are well but up to our ears in work. My exercise is playing tennis in a ladder tournament.

Mary.

Missionary Home
 Shanghai, China
 May 9th 1920

Dear Mother:-

To day has been observed here as Mother's Day. I attended the American Song Service this afternoon and greatly enjoyed it. There is an audience of perhaps 300 at these services which were started for Americans some three or four years ago. They are as yet held in a rented hall and are of an informal nature, - much singing by the audience always an anthem by a small choir or a duet or solo and scripture and prayer with a short talk. They are held at 5 p.m. and do not interfere with any of the regular church services. This Mother's Day meeting was conducted much like a prayer meeting. The leader told us he wanted anyone who would rise and tell the incident in his mother's life which had most impressed him or the characteristics of his mother which most impressed him. There were at times three on their feet at once and it was most impressive. One man said his mother never punished her children. The next man said that if that was the ideal and if punishment was unnecessary his mother had wasted much time.

I left Foochow April 28th and the steamer left Pagoda April 29, arriving in Shanghai May 1 at 4:30 a.m. I took a fellow passenger to the Dr. Lacy's house and then went at once to the Missionary Home. The people were at breakfast. As I entered the dining room the first person I saw was Mr. Hodous. We were also room mates and it has been good to be with him again.

The China Continuation Committee met May 3rd at 9:30 a.m. and was in session morning and afternoon daily closing at 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 7th. I was appointed chairman of the Business Committee and had enough to do to keep me from idleness, - only one protracted evening meeting - 8:30 to 11:30. Mr. Hodous attended all the sessions. He wanted me to go with him up the Yangtse to KiuKiang and from there to Nangshang thence overland on foot to Shaowu and down the river to Foochow. But this is at least a two weeks trip and I did not feel as if it would be right to take the time. The trip is very interesting and lets you see a lot of China. As it is I am caught in Shanghai for at least a week. A Japanese steamer left yesterday for Foochow. But in the present student situation I deemed it very unwise to go by a Japanese steamer. So I must wait till this week Friday or Sat. before I can get a boat. I have not heard a word from Foochow since I left and do not know whether the students are in school or not.

I have tried hard to get our route changed to go by way of Honolulu but there is no use talking with the S. Ship Companies. I asked an agent if he had anything the last of May or first of June- "Do you mean next year?" he said. The earliest it is possible to book is next Nov. Yesterday morning I went down to see the Empress of Russia off- or rather to see the passengers on the tender. We are booked for her next trip July 3rd. The dates as advertised are Shanghai July 3; Yokohama July 10. Vancouver July 19. Our plan now is to come East at once and see all the people, and leave Conn. in time to put the children in school, - This plan we will follow, provided there is a place for us to live in in Oberlin. This will give us about one month in Conn.

The Empress of Russia is one of the big, fast boats, 16850 tons goes 20 knots an hour- makes Vancouver from Yokohama in 9 days, carries 296 first class, 84 second class, 92 third class and 690 steerage, 1162 passengers in all. In 1916 when I came home it took 16 days from Yokohama to Vancouver on the steamer that I took.

Tues. May 11. The paper this morning says that my steamer leaves this week Friday evening for Foochow.

Shanghai is planning a big American School. The Committee has purchased over 30 acres of land and plan to erect 6 buildings- 1 Main School building- 2 dormitories- 2 buildings for staff and a Gymnasium. They hope to be using the buildings in Sept. 1921. Then there is a plan to build around this a model American settlement. In the minds of the Committee they will need to plan for 500 American children by the end of 5 years. There are now about 175 in the school.

The girlies are feeling the thrills of going home and being at home. Marjorie said the other day, "Oh how exciting it will be to set in the R.R. station and hear the train come in and see the passengers rushing about and rush ourselves for our train and rush for our seats." From the reports brought back by all who have recently been home and from our letters from home, we shall have to plan very closely in order to live within our income. This with the labor situation and the race troubles and the general unrest of man everywhere- and the fact that I have crossed the ocean seven times keeps me from having the same excited feeling that I had at other times. Then it may be just possible that after a person passes 50 years he does not get as excited over such things, as he did at 20 or 30 years of age. It is very interesting tho to see the enthusiasm of others- younger.

I wish Mary and we could travel home together but in the present congested state of the steamers there is no use of talking. Then she can start two weeks earlier than we can.

God has been very good to us all. He has kept us from calamity when the world has been thru the greatest cataclysm of history. We have all kept on in our chosen pursuits with success. We shall not see the faces of Ruth and Olive and Gracie but they are very near us and their memories are very sweet and help us to be better people. God has graciously preserved you and father and we can look forward to seeing you in a few weeks now.

I think of you as planting corn just about now. I wish I was there to help. I am sorry I shall be too late for haying- perhaps I can mow the road sides.

With Love to all Will

[May 21, 1920]

Dear Ones at Home-

Elizabeth's letter telling of the blizzard early in March came yesterday. Flora had one from Hattie by the same mail.

May 21

The above shows that I had a good intention once but never carried it out. (We were reminded in a talk recently that a certain place is "paved with good intentions" so I'll try not to add too much to the strength of that floor.)

Just last Monday Flora and I engaged passage to leave here June 20 for Japan. She stays there to see Willard and take a vacation seeing things. I sail to 29th on the Shinyo Maru. Our plan for going by rail through Korea, fell through because it is more expensive and Flora and I had not the money. I'm not paying my passage but I guess the Board will be glad to save on me.

A recent letter from Stanley and Myra brought darling pictures of Stephen and Nancy.

Would you tell Abbie that I shall have to bring Edith's coat unmade because it is impossible to get a tailor now. My tailor has several things of mine and was supposed to bring them last Thursday (the 13th) but has not appeared yet. People in Peking say many of the tailor shops are running all night as well as all day. Chong Sing refused to take extra work from new patrons last time he was down. I'll try again but doubt having success. Everyone wants to get sewing done before going away for the summer. The tailor is making over several things for me.

One of my dresses came from Madame Tanagi and it is a beauty. I hope the other comes soon for I do want to see it, altho I probably will not wear it here except to show it off.

This morning I gave the school monogram to the members of the girl's basket ball team because they won two match games with the Chinese girls of the college in Peking.

We are working hard every afternoon on the "As You Like It" for the last day of school. We have a fine out-of-door stage where we have to add only a log seat or two to fix it up.

Last week three of our pupils left rather suddenly. The father is in India and sent the older son to bring the whole family down there. He has thought every month that he would come home the next, but has given up hope.

We are getting a little taste of heat. Twice it has blown up and clouded over and given every indication of a coming storm. Both times it cleared and for a day was cool and clear as though it had stormed. The crops are getting sadly in need of rain.

Last Saturday the Mother's Club came down. We all (about 200) had picnic lunch together down by the artesian well. The members of the Club in Tungchow furnished the lunch for the children and supper for the adults. Such a joke happened. Drinks were being passed freely to everyone. We at the school had ice cream and there were four or five others who did. One guest saw us (about 40) visiting the freezer and so thought it a public affair like the drink jar. She offered her own plate and asked for cream[?]. Fortunately I knew her and so told the boy "yes". Fortunately also she knows no Chinese so did not understand what I said. Later she discovered her mistake and was most contrite. I told her I sanctioned her having it or the boy would have refused.

The Club gave a little 20 minute play and then we served tea over in the Academy Library. There was a long time to stand around and talk afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant drove down in their car and arrived just as people were starting for the train. We induced them to stay for supper by using lettuce as a bribe. It was interesting to hear all about Delnoce and her work at school. They brought back a young cousin, nephew of Mrs. Grant, with them. He is an only child as Delnoce is, so I told Mrs. Grant she and her sister have just changed children.

May 22.

Mrs. Bader and her sister whom Flora and I visited last Fall at Tsing Hua, came Saturday evening to spend Sunday. We had quite a gay supper Saturday night. On Sunday we showed off our beautiful compound in spite of occasional sprinkles. Service was at 3.30 because Dr. Ingram had to get back to Peking that night. A cup of tea after service made it time to start for the train. The Tsing Hua boys had been on strike for two weeks but had announced that they would go back to work on Monday. As both guests had classes at 8.00 it was necessary to make a brief visit.

Strawberries are ripe and we have them once a day now. Lettuce, radishes and beet greens are other tastes of spring.

Trudy Martin has chicken pox. We are hoping it does not get at us and have every reason to hope for no child had been here for 48 hours before she showed a spot.

I'll save any other ?? till the middle of summer so there will be something left to talk about. Lots of love

Mary

Songs sung during supper at Miss Mary L. Beard's Birthday Party, May 29, 1920
[From the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S.

O beautiful for spacious lawn, For shady moat and wall,
For purple violets in the spring, For sodding lilacs tall;
N.C.A.S.! N.C.A.S. ! The fairest spot we know,
In grace and beauty over dressed, In grace and beauty grow.

O beautiful for stately flad, with folds of morning light,
'Neath China's sun as beautiful, As in the Homeland bright.
N.C.A.S ! N.C.A.S.! God's blessing rest on thee,
And on thy children every one, From sea to shining sea. — Miss Eva R. Price

Miss Mary

(Tune- Co ca che hunk, che hunk, che laily.)
When we first came on this campus, Every bouncing lad and lass,
Just how green we were we knew not,
Till we entered Miss Mary's class.

-Chorus-

Co ca che hunk, che hunk, che laily, Co ca che hunk, che hunk, che lay,
Co ca che hunk, che hunk, che laily, Till we learned Miss Mary's way.

Not the wisest do the bluffing, Not the learned look most wise.
Little proplets, all your scheming , To pull the wool o'er Miss Mary's eyes.

Chorus (When you learn Miss Mary's way.)

But whene'er you're really working, Sure you have just dandy times,
Learning wonders now in Science, Latin and old Shakespeare's lines.

Chorus (When you learn Miss Mary's way.)

When you come again to Tung Chou, Mistess Mary O'er the sea,
You will find us all awaiting, Just as tickled as we can be.

Chorus (Since we've learned Miss Mary's way.)

(Tune – Mary's Little Lamb.)

Mary had a little school, little school, little school, Mary had a little school, N.C.A. S. its name.
Every day it worked and played, worked and played, worked and played,
Every day it worked and played, till widely grew its fame.
What makes the school love Mary so, Mary so, Mary so,
What makes the school love Mary so, the eager pupils cry.
Why, Mary loves the school, you know, school, you know, school, you know,
Why, Mary loves the school, you know, the teachers all reply.
But Mary soon will cross the sea, cross the sea, cross the sea,
But Mary soon will cross the sea, what will the school do then?
'Twill work and play most faithfully, faithfully, faithfully,
'Twill work and play most faithfully, till Mary comes again.

(Tune – Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight.)

Don't you hear them say she's going away? Miss Mary Beard is going home to U.S.A.
We hope that she'll come back and teach for many a day, She'll find a welcome in N.-C.-A.-S.

(Tune – Aloha)

Farewell, farewell, Miss Mary dear, We fear that you're not very sad to leave us,
We hope next year, you'll come back here, And be glad to see us again.

(Tune - ?)

They say that Miss Mary she ain't got no style! Style all the while, style all the while.
They say that Miss Mary she aint' got no style! She's style all the while, all the while.

(Tune- Merrily We Roll Along.)

Good night, Mary, Good night Mary, Good night Mary, You're going to leave us soon.
Peacefully please sail along, Sail along, sail along,
Peacefully please sail along, And then come back again.

[This letter, dated June 5, 1920, was written from Berlin, Connecticut by Phebe Kinney Beard to her Grandma. Phebe is teaching in Berlin and tells about her busy week. School will be ending soon. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Berlin, Conn.
June 5, 1920.

Dear Grandma,

When we left you in Derby, we got almost a new buss and went right into New Haven. We tried to call on Mr. and Mrs. Markham, but found that they had broken up housekeeping. Eva is in New York with Eunice Kinnear, I suppose. You knew didn't you, that Eunice expects to become a mother in July, and has been critically ill with pneumonia this winter. Finney is boarding at one of the dormitories, so the landlady informed us. So we didn't see either of them.

This week has been very busy. On Tuesday night I attended a good, but tediously long piano recital by the pupils of one of the teachers in New Britain. Three two-piano duets were the most entertaining features on the program. Then again last night in spite of all the downpour Helen Cowles, the daughter of the Mrs. Cowles who is Mrs. Graff's friend, gave a vocal recital. She is soon to be married and just before the last encore Mr. Beebe her accompanist played a measure of the wedding march. Then she sang "If Nobody Ever Marries Me"! It took very well.

On Thursday and Friday evenings the school took our time first for a pleasant Parent Teacher's Association Meeting where June Briggs[?] furnished some entertainment impromptu, and then the school operetta again. It didn't go so well this time as at first, but we realized enough to make about $122 from the two performances. Miss Lyons plans to make up the cost of the piano by taxing each child ten cents.

Bowling took our time on Wednesday night. We played the men against the girls and we came as near as eleven points behind them in one series. We think that is pretty good for the first year against experienced players.

The problem that faces me here in Berlin for next year is where I am to live. The Honisses want me, the Smiths have asked me to come back to help them keep their home together- if some one is here with them the two ladies will feel more comfortable in staying here- and Miss Lyons wants me to keep house with her. All are good places, and yet there is some difficulty in making a choice at once wise and pleasant to myself and all concerned.

The flowers came thru very well. All this week I have enjoyed the lady slippers and lily of the valley. I haven't got used to the size of those lady slippers yet. They don't have them in these parts at all in the quantities that you have them. We certainly thank you all for taking us to the woods and helping us get them and packing them so beautifully for us.

And I thank you ever and ever so much for letting me bring Jeannette down. It troubled me very much to think that we didn't meet Aunt Elizabeth, after keeping her waiting so long. I'll meet my appointment next time even if it is late!

We were so glad to see Uncle Stanley's family. Jeannette loves children, and I've shown her my pictures of Nancy and Stephen, and the children themselves are so much dearer that I was glad she could see them. They are wonderful children; we girls have often spoken about how well they were cared for and how advantageously their care showed in them.

With two sets of people to care for I'm afraid you had your hands full, you and Aunt Phebe and Aunt Elizabeth. I just hope you didn't get too tired. We certainly appreciated going down to the parade on Monday. I hope Nancy and Stephen can come up to see the circus parade this month. We were very glad to see all of you people; and I do hope that our coming didn't cause any change in your original plans. I should have been more thoughtful than to have brought so many people into your care at once, especially just after house cleaning.

Mrs. Smith is having a granddaughter visiting her now from Ohio, just from her first year of teaching, too. She is a very interesting girl. There is also a very mysterious but fascinating lady here evidently from New York. She seems to know about everything from Eastside Settlements to Montreal and the latest stage or theatrical successes. She is a very interesting conversationalist.

Reports are going in weekly now, and everyone is so tired they are just waiting for school to end. Only two weeks more! Mr. Showalter gave us such a nice talk at the last teacher's meeting. He would make a fine chaplain.

I hope Grandpa will find some one to help him thru the spring and summer. We asked him if he didn't want us as farmerettes and he seemed to have no objections! We have heard from Vermont so summer school is assured. A good letter from Marjorie and Father came the other day. It really sounds as if they were starting!!! Aunt Mary starts about two weeks now, doesn't she!

Thank you again muchly for our pleasant visit.

Very, very lovingly, Phebe K.

I think I must have sent Gould's letter to Geraldine for I haven't it here. You shall see it as soon as I get it.

Dearest Sister Dot:-

I'm repenting from my hard feelings for not having received any mail for five months. Just the last thing before pulling out of Bahia Blanca I got a letter written by Aunt Phebe on Mar. 22nd and it has been lying in the American Consulate since April 23rd because she didn't put the name of the ship on it and they had no idea whom the Gould Beard might be or when he would show up for his letter. That is absolutely the only letter I have received from home since leaving Gulfport Miss. I got some, if I remember correctly from various girls (not my relatives) while in Habana, but even they deserted me. When we arrived in Bahia Blanca there was a stack of mail for us, but I was the only man aboard that did not get something. As I am about the biggest writer, it struck everyone as a huge joke. I don't really know what I have done to make you all stop writing. If you keep up your silence you can expect the same from me until some day I arrive unexpectedly home.

We had a pretty good trip down. The weather was good, with the exception of one hard blow that kept us nearly in the same spot for two days. We hit plenty of steamers when we struck Penambuca, and were constantly in sight of them until we got past Rio de Janeiro, when they thinned out. After passing Buenos Aires we saw none at all until we were in the channel going to Bahia Blanca.

Bahia Blanca and terrain are as level as a nigger's hoe cake. Only one mountain peak peeps about the horizon toward the North West. The main city sits three miles inland and has three small ports to do her commercial business. First in line as we went up came the Military Port. It is a small group of dry docks and machine shops, with a few houses, marine barracks, a railroad station etc, around there. Next in line is Ingenieria White where we lay. It is the largest of the three and it is quite a little town. There are four docks; two are open and two are covered with huge grain elevators. Port Galvan is the third in line and is mostly grain elevators. A distance of three miles separates each of the three ports. When we arrived, there were 54 ships in port. Most of them were English. Two French ships, two Japs, four American, two Argentine, one Brazilian, and on Spaniard and a Norwegian ship made up the rest. Of the English ships in Port over three quarters were German ships. Two of the Americans including ourselves were wooden. The Frenchman was a sailing vessel. I never saw the like of the English officers. Every man who held any office or ship board of an Englishman was toggged out from head to foot in gold braid uniforms. The Japs about did them one better though. The American and Norwegians always wore civilian clothes except the shipping board ship and most of her officers followed the American custom of wearing civilian clothes ashore. Shortly before one left, the Belgian training ship for merchant marine officers came in and they took the cake for Uniform Willies. They even included white kid gloves in their shore rig. Nevertheless, even if I am haranguing them for wearing such flashy togs, the brighter the uniform, the more attention was paid you and the better liked you were among the Argentineans. We Americans did not stand much show when a gold braid was in sight of the girls; and if it had not been that we were all better paid and richer than the gold braids we might have been left out of it all together.

Argentina is just as cosmopolitan a country as the U.S. In fact all the east coast of So. Am. is the same. Germans, English, Spanish, Russians, Italians, Greeks, Portuguese and all the countries of Europe are represented and also Asia. Germans and Italians and Spanish predominate in Argentina. The middle aged and older men are very fond of the Kaiser Bill mustache, but the younger generation are mostly clean shaven as are men in the States. The people are very candid and hospitable once you are properly introduced to them, but if a stranger, you are outside a brick wall to them. The houses on the outside do not look houselike but on the inside no pains are spared to make the house beautiful. The houses are built much on the same general plan as I have represented in the sketch. A is (a) little receiving room, (b) is the parlor, (c and d) are bedrooms, (e) is the dining room, and (f) the kitchen. (B) is the characteristic places of every house. It is a garden piazza or open, usually with a tile floor but always beautifully filled with ferns, flowers, palms, and small trees. It is the most used place in summer and is not deserted in winter, for even as far South at Bahia Blanca there is only frost occasionally.

I found the stores in Bahia Blanca every bit as good as any New York store. Americans and English goods predominated although before the war German goods were in the majority. I saw fancy clocks on the Spanish style that I wanted to buy until I saw "made in U.S.A." on them. I asked for perfume, the best they had, and among others they handed me Colgate perfume. I finally left Bahia Blanca with only two men's belts of braided leather as souvenirs. Furs are cheap down here and very good furs too, but as the country is not as cold, the animals are not as thickly furred as up north, and I decided if I wanted to get you girls furs I would get them in the States.

The skirt is short, quite a bit shorter than the style in the States when I left. One of the best things about this dress is the neatness with which they always dress their feet. With the short skirt, their feet are conspicuous and they take particular pains with them. Powder and Paint are not prominent on their faces, but you rarely ever see a bad complexion. Their carriage is most graceful, not at all like the slip shod flop of some of the North American girls. Whenever you see a respectable girl in company you see her ma as her shaperone, and that unhappy individual doesn't even allow the sprightly seniorita to even sit on the other side of the dance hall from her. The young people here, men and girls, are the most graceful dancers I have ever seen. None of this bop, flop, and pump handle works, it is all gliding and whirling. If you really want to know how to dance come down here and learn it correctly. Well, how is that for an essay on "First Impressions of the Argentina Girl".

We unloaded our lumber in a week and a half and lay idle for two and a half weeks until our cargo of wheat was ready. It only took them a week to load her and if we had poured it in hulls instead of putting it in sacks we would have been finished in half the time.

I got to like Bahia Blanca pretty well before we left. You people up north think that Argentina is a wild and savage country, but I found the people just as cultured and civilized as any in the best part of Boston. The girls especially were stunningly beautiful. I very seldom saw one who was not very neatly dressed. Their clothes fit them well, their skirts hung gracefully, and they wear nothing that does not become them. They haven't got that habit of slapping on the clothes regardless of their comeliness, just because they are the style, that our girls in America have. The material is plain and usually the color is soft and mild. Some dress all in black, gray and dark maroon red and different shades of blue are popular.

While the chief was in Buenos Aires on his last trip down here he met an Italian girl. As soon as we arrived, he beat it to Buenos Aires by train and married her. She is living aboard now. She met friends in Bahia Blanca and I being a young man had to be introduced to the girls of course! They couldn't speak any English and I couldn't speak any Spanish so we sat around at first much like idiots who can only express themselves by motion and contortions of the face. But that did not last long. When we went to their house to visit they asked me to dance, and I had to decline, but they wouldn't stand for that and so there was nothing to do but get up and make a fool of myself learning to dance and jelly of the girls toes who was trying to teach me. I ran one of them up against the wall a couple of times. Another I ran into her ma who was sitting on the side of the room and we both deposited ourselves at her feet, much to the amusement of the company. I don't think I did so badly however for they all seemed ready to take their turn and even came round for it if I tried to seat myself during the music. I attempted one step, two step, waltz, tango and fox trot. Tango and fox trot are the best. Dinner came along and the wine was served. They all drink or sip at it down here and it is a regular thing at lunch and dinner. They don't know how to drink water. They use water to wash clothes, but for drinking use wine. It took quite a bit of obstinate refusal, with a pleasant demeanor so as not to hurt their feelings, before they would consent to my drinking water. However, when the little champagne glasses were passed at the end of the meal I drank mine after the chief's wife had explained to me that it would be an insult not to take it. I refused the cigarettes also and I guess for a time I was considered as a curiosity worthy of traveling alone. Nevertheless they always were inviting the chief's wife and myself to the house, so I guess they don't take offense if I do live up to my convictions. How would you like it if I should bring home a little Spanish girl for your sister in law?!!

Several of the skippers got of a hunting party one Sunday and the Chief and myself were invited along. The party was composed of an English skipper, a Norwegian skipper, our skipper who is Scotch, the stewards who unloaded and loaded on ship and his two daughters who went just for the ride, the Chief and wife, and last and least among them "meself". We packed into two cars, a Buick and a Hudson, and went 65 miles out onto the plains along dirt roads at the rate of 40 miles an hour. We got to our destination about 11:30 and started in at once. We took lunch at whatever time we could spare when we came in with some, at least that was the way the chief and myself worked it. Belgian hare, big, fat and furry, and partridges were plentiful. The day was cool and sunny and ideal for hunting. When we finished our hunting and took count we found that the Americans kind of cleaned up on the others. The English skipper had one hare and one partridge. The steward had three partridge. The Norwegian skippers and our skipper got drunk and that was all. The chief had four hare and two partridge. And I have five hare and seven partridge. I was feeling much ashamed of my marksmanship, for I missed two out of every three shots and that is getting rather bad, especially for a Yank.

There isn't much more to write. I might be able to fill four more pages, but you must be tired by now. We are bound for Rio de Janeiro with wheat. Will probably load lumber back to River Plato and from there -----! I'm sorry we won't be back in time to see the China detachment return. Give my love to all the sisters and everybody. Remember love to all my friends.

From an interview with Kathleen Beard Elmer by Jana L. Jackson in 2000:
In the summer of 1920, Willard, Ellen, Marjorie and Kathleen took the "Empress of Russia" from Shanghai to Seattle. It was a big steamer that held thousands of people and was luxurious and overcrowded. At night, Kathleen was fascinated watching the adults dance. She remembers that the style of dress then was elastic at the skirt. When the women stepped back while dancing, their skirt would slide up to their knees. Kathleen was about 12 then and met her 1st beau on that ship, William Gand. She was a daughter of a missionary and he was the son of a wine merchant. In a conversation with her at the age of 95, she said that they played shuffleboard and chased each other around the boat. Kathleen's mother, Ellen, did not allow dancing with boys until they were 18.

Dear Grandma,

Just about a week ago I left the Farm for Burlington. The visit to the Farm was very very happy, and it was good to see all the people again before leaving for summer school. I was very glad that I changed my mind and came to Shelton instead of to Middletown. Geraldine and I didn't get quite caught up, but we had a good talk anyway.

Last Monday as we traveled up from Springfield we wondered how Nancy was enjoying her first Circus parade; and in the evening we thought of the others of the party at the circus. If the weather was the same with you as with us, it was a beautiful day, though rather hot.

The country is lovely. As we came north, the hills closed in around us, fir trees were more and more common and rocks cropped out of the hills everywhere. The streams were full of little smooth stones; and their gullies were often very deep. I never saw a whole field of devil's paint brush till that day, and then I saw many of them.

Burlington is a beautiful city, but not so large, as we are accustomed to think of large cities. It seemed to take forever to reach here, stopping every fifteen minutes at some stations. Of course, so long a ride was a bit tiresome, but we were an hour or two late.

For two nights we had a lovely room in Converse Hall which we had to leave in order that I might get a piano to practice on. The music department is evidently undeveloped here, though the teachers are good.

On the first night we all went to a musical contest where six piano students and fourteen prospective vocal students performed for the prizes or five lessons. They were really very good, and the concert had more interest than most.

The courses and professors seem good. I have a Mr. Bliss, from Montclair, N.J. in Principles of Education; Pres. Hill of Missouri Normal in Secondary Education, a fine man; and Mr. Myrid[?] in French conversation, a stiff course; and Mr. Agle, a Southerner, in Latin. All courses are interesting and alive as far as I can see. Mr. Messenger, the director is as cordial and energetic as he can be.

On Thursday night we had a reception and dance for a get-acquainted evening, and on Friday A.M. we had a community sing. Yesterday about three hundred of us went to Ausable Chasm. I wish you all could have gone with us. The boat ride over, the short train ride, the stairs and stairs and stairs were fun. But the rock in all its formations, the water, the trees and grass were marvelous. We walked down and back, having lunch first, and went into all the caves, and other places there were. Niagara surpasses this in water volume and grandeur, but for natural beauty of the river gorge and variety this is way ahead.

Today we have just rested. At meals we have the happy company of three delightful Chinese students, and a girl from Wisconsin. Work is not very heavy, and everyone is friendly. Weather is really warm, but the air is cleaned and dry. We've had a good deal of rain since we arrived. My address is at the head of this letter. Please let me know if there is any new word from the China people. I hope Aunt Phebe settled the mishap we had on our way to the car last week. I'm sorry it happened and I hope no trouble came from it. Give my love to all, Jeannette sends love, too. Phebe K. Beard.

Silver Bay, N.Y.
 July 13, 1920.
 Box 23.

Dear Folks,-

Silver Bay agrees with me alright but I can't help getting a little homesick for the farm once in a while. This is the first summer I haven't been there for a long time. I'm going to see you if I possibly can before the summer's over, tho! I think if the folks go there to start for Oberlin, I'd like to start from there with them if they don't go too early.

The first conference we had here was the college Y.W. It was a large conf. And the first two or three days we each waited on three tables for three sittings a meal. We can't understand how we ever did it. Soon they got more tables, and some of the college girls offered to wait for their board and room, so we each had two tables and two sittings. The conf. lasted ten days and the very day that one left, the college Y.M. came in, so we had no rest between. Some of the waitresses had to good a time at that conf. and were spoken to after the boys left. That was the easiest and best conf. to wait on so far. The boys were not fussy at all, and they were so informal at the table. They cleared off the table, and helped in every way possible except when they wanted seconds, and I never trotted so much in my life as I did after seconds for those ravenous boys.

Between that conference and the one that is on now, we "emps" (employees) had four days off. Those four days were filled with picnics, trips and fun of all kinds. We had a crazy base-ball game between the boys and the girls. The boys dressed in girls clothes and played left handed. Such a crazy game!! The president of the Silver Bay Ass. was the umpire and he was as crazy and kiddish as the other boys. He's the best sport. If any fun is going on he's right in with the young people, if proceedings are sane and allowable.

The second day, 15 of the emps took a trip to Black Mountain, the highest peak on the lake front. We had a long launch ride across the lake, then we started to climb. Not all who went climbed to the top. About ten stayed at the foot. There was a good trail all the way up, but in some places it was good and steep. I made it in 1 hr. and 15 min. resting four or five times. Ish made it in about 1 hr. and 5 min. I was the fourteenth one up. One of the boys tried to break a record made two years ago. A Canadian made the climb in 42 min. This boy ran all the way up, not resting once and made it in 48 min. When we reached the top, we got the most wonderful view. We went up into the watch tower and looked through the glasses. It was a perfect day. The photographers brought his camera up and took a dandy picture of the group of about sixty of us. It took us a little less than an hour to come down and the chefs had a good dinner all ready for us at the foot. Then came a wonderful moonlight launch ride home.

The next day four auto loads of us went to Ausable Chasm. We had a ride of over 100 mi. before we got there. The chasm was beautiful, and at the end of the trip we shot some rapids. I sat on the outside of the bench in the boat and when we shot into the foaming rapids I was dowsed from head to foot. Then came the 100 mi. home again. Oh, it was great fun.

Each waitress has one day off every conference. Last conf. Ish, and one of our roommates and I got off together and found three boys, and went across the lake to Spruce mountain. That isn't quite as high as Black, but it is much worse climbing, because it has no trail whatsoever. We scaled rocky cliffs and had to go on all fours some of the time. I just love mountain climbing.

Next Friday Ish and I have our next day off. We have a party of six and are going up to a little lake way up in the mountains somewhere. They call it Jake's Pond. That's about the only trip I haven't made around here now. I have one mountain right back of us to climb yet. That is Sunrise. I began with the smallest- Inspiration and climbed it at 9:00 P.M. with no light and no moon. Quite thrilling!

Last Sun. night Dr. Paton preached at church. I didn't even know he was here. I spoke to him after the service and he was quite surprised to see me here.

Phebe wrote that she and Jeannette were coming here soon. I'm so glad that they can come because I did so want some of my folks to see this place.

Every Sun. afternoon we have an Emp's meeting down in the hall in the boat house. They are the peppiest meetings I've ever been to. All of the young people- boys as well as girls- are interested and take part very readily. The hall is full every Sun.

Every morning we hold morning watch for 15 min. before breakfast, and it is wonderful to see how the people turn out to those meetings. We hold it in the corner of the orchard on the stone wall, and everything is so lovely early in the morning when the sun has just risen. I lead last Thursday morning.

Another thing I love about this place is the way the young people get together and sing hymns- as on the launch ride home from Black Mountain we sang everything imaginable then somebody started a hymn, and everybody joined in and we sang hymns all the rest of the way. It seems as tho we sing songs most of the time here. It's lots of fun. When all the waitresses are shelling seven or eight barrels of peas, or stringing as many beans, we sing all the time. We have a large number of pretty Silver Bay Songs.

It's time to "crawl in" now so this bears lots of love to you all, from Dot.

Berkeley

Dear Ones at Home,

My letter written on the steamer has assured you of my safe arrival at Berkeley. On Saturday we went into San Francisco and I got my ticket and shipped my baggage. I leave here July 21st, Wednesday on the Pacific Limited and arrive at Chicago Saturday at 4.00 P.M. and have engaged a berth on the Pennsylvania Line train leaving at 5.30. That gets me to New York, Sunday evening at 5.28. (5.28 P.M.) I shall write the schedule to Stanley and hope he meets me and takes me home for the night. I'll be home Monday to interrupt the washing, I hope.

I sent my trunks on on Saturday when I bought my tickets. They sold my ticket clear to Derby and my trunks are checked clear through. I'll bring the checks and the trunks will be ready to go home at once. I fear you could not get the trunks earlier even if I enclosed them.

On Sunday we went for a fine long drive and had a picnic lunch. It is so good to be in real America and be able to talk to anyone I see in my native tongue.

Today we all went to Golden Gate Park for the day. The children went on the swings, slides, donkeys, merry-go-rounds and goat carts to their heart's content. We went to the Art Gallery and Museum and watched the children. It was a fine day.

I have to wash a dress for train wear tomorrow and a few pieces of underwear so as to keep presentable en route. I don't know if we go anywhere or no.

Fortunately I fell into the hands of a kind custom's officer who did not maul my things nor charge much duty. I parted with $14.10 only. I am so eager to unpack and show you my things!

Here's till Monday next. It is lovely to visit here and I am not sorry to spend the time here, only sorry to delay my arrival Home.

Lots of love

Mary.

Monday P.M. Everybody sends best love. They say they are having the time of their lives. So am I.

[Probably late summer 1920]

Dear Papa and Mama

Everything has gone splendidly so far. The girls had a good time at Birmingham [Connecticut] on Tues. Marjorie did not have to come home at 2:10 as she expected, because there was a car at 4:25- so they all came on that.

We have forwarded several letters- two from Flatbush, one from Phebe, one from China –And one came from Mont. Ward's, which I am holding here. Have you got them all?

The beans are holding out like the widow's curse of oil. And everything else seems to be plentiful.

The order for our International Law books has been answered saying that the firm has no more. So I should very much like to have you try to get one there or in Cleveland. Any one of three will do- but the first one is preferable-

1- International Law – Wilson and Tucker

2- “ “ - Woolsey

3- “ “ - Lawrence

And Dorothy would like you to get a copy of Young's Astronomy if you can.

Kathleen wants me to tell you about “her experience”. When out at Birmingham, they all went in wading, and she – not satisfied with wetting her feet – sat down right in the middle of the stream. When she got home – she was wet thru to the skin so that every stitch had to be changed.

She's none the more for it tho,- perhaps a little cleaner. They built a fire and fried pancakes for the main part of their lunch.

Tonight Dot is out at the arboretum at a P.T. picnic, so I asked Gertrude and Eloise Layman in to lunch.

We've managed quite nicely so far, but we'll be terribly glad to have you back again.

Love from all of us,

Geraldine

*[This letter, dated about September 1920, was written from Tungchou, China by Flora to the folks at home. [About September 1920]

Dear folks at home:-

My last letter, I fear, ended rather like a chapter in a serial story for I did not know how it was to go on. I am sure that you have seen by the papers that nothing has happened. However, that is hardly the truth. We are just now finding out how narrow was our escape. Last week the man who owned the shop where Dr. Smith had Mary's plaques made came to deliver my June order. He said he escaped the looting because his shop was next to the only shop that had taken precautions, by hiring 30 men, whom he had had guarding his place for a month. Every one had been guying[?] this big shop for paying out all the money for nothing. The night of the looting the 30 men were on hand. When the first band of looters came, met the remonstrance, fired, and received a volley back, they said "Oh, they were just going out the North Gate", and left. This happened several times and the store is the only one in that section which escaped. The pottery man said that the looters intended coming our way in another hour, but were never able to carry out their plans. The battle that I mentioned never took place either. They rounded up the looters, and took most of them away. Our marine guard went home after staying eight days. I think it was Monday, Aug. 30th they left. On Thursday the Chinese began to pile into the compound again, with the rumor that the troops which were to leave at midnight were going to loot us at 10 P.M., and then leave by train. We did not place much value upon the rumor, but it became so persistent that at 6 P.M. we telephoned for the marines to return. Before 8 o'clock Mr. Spiker was here with 11 men, and we put them into the beds we had arranged in Wistaria cottage. Since the riot was to take place so early, the auto truck stayed until after midnight, but nothing happened. On their way into the city there was some delay in getting the gate open and then a shot was fired just as they started on. Mr. Spiker explained to them (the Chinese soldiers) where he was going, and they were allowed to proceed. About a half hour before our marines arrived a train came from Peking, and we heard some fine bugling, better than anything Tunghsien has been acquainted with. It was the arrival of 600 cavalry. It seems that these troops had refused to be removed at noon time, until they had carried out their plans to finish up the looting of the city. They knew they were to go at midnight. They had not planned for a big guard of cavalry to be here to superintend their departure, so they finally had to leave with out carrying out their pet scheme. Our refugees stayed a few days more but they all left and ever since it has been quiet. We all feel that the worst is over for this season. One of the marines said the Chinese would not do any more fighting now until next summer as they never did fight except that the weather was warm enough to keep them warm at night. I hope we have had our last for this time. The marines left on Sat. Sept. 4th, and we were to open school on the 8th! The compound had a meeting and appointed Dr. Smith and me to call at the Legation to plan for help if there were further disturbances here, since we were to have so many children here. I thought people would not want to send their children but Mary Vegey is the only one who has stayed at home, and more than half expect that finances have been half the reason. All but the Jenkins were here on the day of the opening. They were detained because Mrs. Jenkins had been ill and so could not get the children ready on time. They came yesterday and seem like good people to have here. We have 42 pupils here and five more possibilities. That will be our utmost limit.

Well!! Mary is missing some of the school fun. In the Peking school the k'dgr has nine pupils, four of whom cannot speak or understand English. Mr. Gleystien is converted to Tunghsien. His daughter Margaret has 7 Eurasians for classmates. Mrs. Young has returned and Anita's only classmate is an Eurasian!! She wants Anita and James here!!- The Methodists are actually going to take up the school matter in their Annual meeting next week!! Dr. Honkins has remarked that the affair with us has not been treated fairly. We now have two Methodists in our school and the Gibbs want to put three more here, so we hear. Mrs. Corbett says, there is a great deal of dissatisfaction expressed about the kind of nationality that is coming into the Peking school. Really events are happening much faster than I had thought possible. In the meantime the Presbyterians have promised to double their appropriation, word has come that Boston will consider the same for the Amer. Bd., the deputation is now here for the Church of the Brethren to settle their plans, and we are jammed with the finest bunch yet. School has opened most quietly and every one is trying to cooperate- even Miss Bostwick and Mr. Lund, tho I have to be the buffer. Miss Bayles arrived with the first bunch of children and is doing her part with generosity and professional ability. She is perfectly able to and capable of taking care of No. 1, but that in a way is a relief. So far we have no music teacher, which is a great misfortune as we have more than ever asking for music. We simply have got to have some one if we have to pay double the price. The Presbyterians have elected Mrs. Corbett and Dr. Wylie to represent them in our Bd. of Managers, and Dr. Scott and Mr. Romig from Shantung. I do not know who our fourth member from the Amer. Bd. is. We feel as though the bottom had fallen out with Mr. Corbett off the board, though Mrs. C. of course will have him for conferences.

We have 23 boys and 19 girls on roll now, and we are just in that chaotic state that comes before dawn clears up the darkness. I hope to have everything cleared up before another Sunday. Having to entertain the marines so much, and having the Chinese so upset put back our plans a full week. The carpenter, plumber, and painter will be around for a week or two yet and we need some more new furniture to make every one comfortable. Mr. Lund keeps Wistaria Cottage so immaculate that one most slips up with its cleanness, and the boys act as though they liked it. Of course it is too early yet to say much about it.

Our new pupils have come into such classes that the 6th grade is our youngest, which means a lot less work. I wish you could see our fine Belgian girl, who makes me think of Geraldine when she was small. Our baby is an aristocratic little Russian 9 years of age last June. I have been sitting opposite Glenn Dildine who is the image of James at his age. He is an adorable boy. Enid Waller is back and seems supremely happy. Lawrence Grimes is much improved in health, manners, and in every way. Again, I say, we have a wonderful group to live with this year.

Lovingly-

Flora Beard.

She and two others registered in town so that they can vote in the election that year and in the letter she expresses her thoughts on the registration process. She expresses a little homesickness to be with the family. Letter is in Jill Jackson's collection.]

Berlin, Conn.

Sept. 19, 1920.

Dear Kathleen,

Yesterday I mailed you a card just to let you know that I was here and things were going well, and now I'll write a real letter. Lately Papa and I have got into the habit of writing at post offices-so I wrote your card at our office. We had Betty Showalter, the baby you saw at Mr. Showalter's, with us; and Mrs. Smith had a tremendous amount of mail. Jeannette takes care of it and forwards all first class mail.

I wish you could all have been with us when we took our citizen's oath. Mrs. Horiss[?], Jeannette and I were the one hundred second, third and fourth women to register and "be made". When we had visited for a few minutes with the ladies of the committee, we were put into the town clerk's office where three men sat at a table on which were papers and books. Two or three other persons were about doing odd jobs. I went first to the Three! They made sure of my name and put my age down after it on their list. For some unknown reason I started to tell them that my age was 23 instead of 25! Then, where was I born? and how long had I lived in Berlin? The fact that I had lived here only ten months as a teacher came near losing me that franchise; but a nice old man said that my residence was here officially and I was to be here this year so that wouldn't prevent my voting. And what do you suppose came next? With Grammar School, High School and College Diploma, I was asked to show them that I could read! Well, they didn't know about those diplomas, and they asked me to read only a few words as a matter of form- for they knew I was teaching here- but it struck me funny. I knew I'd have to do it. Next I had to state my party affiliation. Because I didn't really know what I did believe politically I joined the most popular side this year, so I'm a republican with an R. before my name of the town list of voters. [Passed by Congress June 4, 1919, and ratified on August 18, 1920, the 19th amendment guarantees all American women the right to vote. Phebe registers to vote one month later.]

Before we gave any information we had to raise our right hands and promise- swear was the word used by Mr. Woodruff the clerk- that we'd tell the truth. After we three had finished all our quiz, he again swore us in by asking if we would promise to do and work for the best gov't of Berlin, Connecticut, and the US, so far as we knew it, and abide by its' laws. We with raised right hands so swore.

For such an important procedure, and far-reaching privilege the manner of administering the oath, and the time taken was insignificant, and didn't make one feel any responsibility or importance at all. For all the foreign citizens coming into power there ought to be something done to make them feel the importance of this step- and for the Americans there should be some sort of impressing of the need for them to vote intelligently and rightly. Where a nation is concerned, an individual in place should feel the same call and pressure of duty as a soldier in war. I'm sorry Mama and Papa can't vote this year.

Now you'll wonder about school. When I reached here Monday- Labor Day- I found that the H.S. wouldn't begin till Thursday, tho grammar school opened Wednesday. That gave me a chance to help them straighten out the books for the different grades and to visit a class in New Britain H.S. My books didn't come till school began, so I had nothing planned.

Thursday A.M. Mr. Showalter took the H.S. class in charge for the hour, till the registering was all done. There is quite a bit of feeling against the school- people would rather send their children to New Britain- so he did all he could to cheer them up, and praise the Berlin H.S. up.

The sessions on Thursday and Friday were rather broken, since it was a new thing, and because some children from East Berlin had to leave before the last period to get their train home. This week Lady S., as we speak of Miss Scollow the principal, mixed up the schedule badly for the good of the French class. Now we are on a new schedule arranged by Mr. Showalter and things are back at normal again.

I like the H. S. teaching much better than grammar school. Four periods a week, tho, I have the seventh grade in special work- physiology drawing, science, etc.

We take our dinners each day, and Aunt Cora does put up the nicest variety of sandwiches, and surprises such as candy, pickles, dates, etc. When it is pleasant we eat on the front lawn, or just around the corner, on the side of the building. One day we went down to Ruth Slaght's and ate with her.

All this week I have thot of you people as unpacking your trunks and boxes; of doing dishes after supper together, of having family prayers, etc. Kathleen goes to school later than Marjorie in the morning, and both go at the same time at noon. You are both digging at arithmetic and Marjorie is in the H.S. How does she like it? I am glad you have got acquainted so quickly, Kathleen.

Just now you are probably doing your Sunday dinner dishes as we were doing a while ago. Can you guess where I'd like to be now? You heard Mr. Van der Pyle this A.M. and next Sunday you will hear the choir. I hope Dot will join this year and yet her schedule is pretty heavy.

I was so glad to get Papa's letter and yours. Do write again just as soon as you can and tell me all about school and college opening, the houses and the people. We had a wedding about a week ago in the church, and next Sat. we are to have a community Barbecue with 12-15 sheep roasted whole! It sounds rather barbarous, doesn't it? I must stop now to write to Gould. I'll write oftener and tell Monnie it's her turn to write. I haven't heard about the girls' Putnam visit.

I'm well, and growing fat. I hope you are all well. Very very, lovingly, Phebe.

[Added to margin]

Tell Geraldine and Dot to give my "Secret Garden" to Marjorie if they have it in their book box. Thank you.

Jeannette sends love. P.K.B.

Ask Papa for his measurements for a sweater and what color he wants it and write me soon.

Dear Phebe [daughter]-

In your last letter you mentioned your undecided mind on the way in which you would vote next Tuesday. During the past week I have heard four men talk on the political situation, two Republicans, one Democrat and one Socialist= he was advertised as a Protestant. The two Republicans simply had nothing to say. Vote the Republican ticket. The Republicans party has saved the country in every crisis. The Democrats have had an eight year swing- have run the country into the ground. We'll save her if we are given the offices. The Democrats are for the League of Nations- largely because the Republicans are against it I should think. I think that if I were given the vote this year I should vote either for Cox because he is for the League or I should vote a protest ticket-either Socialist or Republican. Cox is not a good example of a clean man to set before the American youth either in morals or in his attitude toward the prohibition movement. One man said he should vote for him and pray God to forgive him. Another said he should vote for him and then ask God to make him straight. I was told last night that 200 men in Oberlin were following Pres. King in voting for Cox.

The most lamentable factor in this whole campaign as I hear it and read it is the absence of any talk by either of the old parties on any of the real live issues of the day H.C.L. - Housing Conditions= Coal shortage- Profiteering- Labor and Capital- immigration- International Relations (except as they are touched as in remarks on the League) freedom of speech and of the press.

Well I did not set out to tell you how to vote but to let you know that I am thinking about you as you make up your mind in this bag of political apathy,- for the people can find nothing to get enthusiastic over.

I sent a card a few days ago saying Mama and I hope to see you sometime during the next 20 days.

Lovingly your
Father

Dear Phebe [daughter]-

This is my third letter since supper. Geraldine has gone to the Library. Dot has studied and wants to Ko Kaung. Monnie is still struggling with a theme or some literature assignment. Kathleen has helped Mama “do the dishes”- has kept up an incessant talking all the evening which crossed paths with Dorothy’s study of Economics, and Mama has done dishes and helped Monnie with her writing. We are now about to have prayers- after which I’ll try to finish this.

Has Jeanette sent that Young’s Astronomy to Dorothy?

When you come to Oberlin will you bring with you your Life Insurance Policy with all receipts and other papers that you have that pertain to it. I want to get these Insurance Policies straightened out and I want to get to understand them. Just last week I got a snare in my own 1914 dividend straightened out after working on it since August.

The chicken from Shelton came Tuesday evening while we were all at the Detroit Symphony. Dot fussed that night and reached home first. She had the box open when we all arrived and there he was- the rooster and there were the apples- which- but rooster and [apples] are no more. It was a delicious Thanksgiving that we sat down to. Mama remarked- and I had thought of it several times- “I can understand now how the Chinese take so much pleasure in getting up their feasts.” Well Mama and the girls certainly did enjoy preparing that dinner. We finished the last of the dinner yesterday.

I bought of a farmer ten bushels of apples- Baldwins, Greenings and two other kinds yesterday $1.25 per bushel- they are very large.

I wonder will you get here in time for the Holiday Concert- The "Elijah" I think this year.

From Putnam I got home Thursday at 1:01 p.m. - and found 4" of snow on the ground. The girls had a fire in the furnace and a warm house. Mama came Friday 8:59 p.m. Perhaps the girls were not glad to see us!!!

Sunday afternoon last I went over to Berea and spoke in the evening at the Cong'l Church and spent the night with a Mr. and Mrs. Matthews- had a very pleasant time. We are getting ready to send letters and candy to Houston, Texas to meet Gould. I have written for his Houston address. God is very kind to us. Monnie slipped on the stairs last night, but the sprained ankle is better so she walked up town this p.m. Lovingly Father

In your last letter you say you have decided to go back with Mama and me, and asked to whom to write. I should write direct to Boston offering myself. Write to

Miss Helen B. Calder

Boston, Mass.

If you have not had correspondence with her tell her briefly your history and your reasons for offering yourself to the W.B.M.= Woman's Board of Missions. The chief result of this first letter which you write will be to put you into definite relations with the Board as a candidate for the work in Foochow or wherever you ask to be sent. Then they will ask for your statement of belief- your physical exams and for the name of several men and women to whom they can write for testimonials

Dean Bosworth told us on Thanksgiving Day – with husky voice from deep emotion- that his personal cause for Thanksgiving was that his son had decided to be a minister. My joy is as deep that you are going as a missionary. Very lovingly Father

Dear Mary:-

It is ages since I have written to you or the home folks. Fortunately for me you have been better correspondents.

The year started off with a bang- in fact several bangs- and in one way or another it has kept up all the fall until I feel banged to a jelly. I am still at it, just the same, even if I am somewhat weary. Well, that week of no workmen, has been chasing me until now. We could not get time for curtains in our house, and we have lived so tightly that it has been continual jostle and nudging of elbows and feet all the time. I have had to adjust and re-adjust, and am still at it. I have bought chairs, dressers, washstands, wardrobes, etc. etc., and still there is not comfort. We have had every available place full, and Miss Price had to move over to Miss Huggins to sleep, because there was no time, when our new teacher Miss Cummings came.

Miss Bayles came and is gone. She proved a perfect vixen and has gone without paying her bills. I will not honor her to the extent of a lengthy explanation. She had a $1200 diamond ring which got lost mysteriously. She wanted all our servants to be put to torture. In the effort to find it Chang Nai Nai [or Wang Nai Nai?] took it so much to heart that she ate the heads of two boxes of matches and it took Dr. Love all day to save her life. She is all right again. Very mysteriously and psychologically it turned up the morning the children left for home. I do not know whether we shall ever know how it went or returned. We are well rid of her, and now we are finding out about her 'doings' in Tokyo.

We had another teacher come just after Thanksgiving and I do hope she will stay for years to come. She is a cousin of Mrs. Elmer Galt's. Perhaps you remember Mrs. Galt's saying she had a cousin whom she wished would come out here. She is the one. She likes us so far, but has only said it will be "quite a wrench" if she decides not to stay. Now, the Board of Managers want you to secure your friend Miss Thompson (is it?) at once if you can. I am sure she will fit in well. Did you even get a letter from Mrs. Hunter's friend Miss S.R. Percival 314 Randolph St., Champaign, Ill. for teaching music? If you haven't, won't you please write her at once? Mrs. Hunter has written. If you can get her won't you ask Mrs. Wilder and Mr. Stanley to help you in getting some once for the music. We have a Russian- Mr. Gartz, who is taking our music, but he teaches only piano.

Well, our cooking went from bad to worse though Mrs. Stelle, Miss Bostwick, and I spent over three hours one morning trying to help Tien Ehn to see the errors of his way and to do things better. Suddenly came the opportunity of getting Mrs. Gordon (Mr. S. Moore Gordon's mother) and Mr. Gordon's famous cook. In two hours we dismissed Tien Ehn, and his cousin Yi Ming and installed new cooks in the kitchen, so that there was not a jog in the eating arrangements. Miss Price moved to Miss Huggin's and Miss Bostwick came over here. I have four little girls in your room and Miss B. has the other room. She has made a perfect home of it. This arrangement economizes her and my time greatly as I now sign all checks and have to know about all business transactions. I believe she is really happier in this place than she was for things had gotten so bad that complaints were coming in from every place. The condition in which we found the kitchen and vegetable room made me wonder how we had escaped something dreadful in sickness. I threw away a peck of bad food, moldy muffins, rotten vegetables, old cooked dishes, etc. We found little dabs of flour, and other little quantities of food set behind things showing how our things had literally walked off. We have had delectable food and never a heavy muffin or waffle since our new regime. Mrs. Gordon devotes her whole time to keeping the house clean, and everything about the dining-rooms and kitchen. Even the towels are white and Eu Chin is being instructed how to care for his silver. Miss B. still has the washing and No. 34 under her care.

We have had our experience with Mr. Lund, too. He wanted to have the boys left entirely to his care, so I kept my hands off entirely. One Sunday evening two of the boys were missing- Douglas Jenkins (the Harbin Consul's son) and Parker Grimes. The scamps ran away to Peking, intending to go on home. They were going to stay all night in the Chien Men Station and take the morning train. They got hungry and a bit lonesome, so they went around to Mr. Peck's house in the Legation and they were kept all night. They were two disappointed boys the next morning when I went to get them. I found out then that Mr. Lund was whipping the boys for every little miss deed. He did it by having the boys put their head between his knees and he spanked them. Soon I got letters for all boy's parents and for a time it was not very pleasant for Mr. Lund. I had many talks with him and will still have to have more. For a while it seemed as though we should have to let him go but after explaining that he was asking unnecessary humiliation of the boys I think things are patched up enough to get through the year. I do not wish to try it longer. He has not proved himself disciplined enough to be intrusted with children, although he has on occasions shown himself to be a man versatile. He and Miss B. make the fun fly of each other; but at present they get fewer chances than formerly.

So far we have had 48 pupils enrolled but several are not returning after Christmas. Evy Shields goes home to America, the two Grimes are to attend school in Tientsin (a new American school), a new girl is too homesick (a spoiled child) and Jack Stuart is having his teeth straightened which needs to be done daily. He will stay long enough to finish the 1st semester, and then attend Peking school until June, when his Father expects to send him to America. He is driven to do this in order to get him away from his mother. (This is not to be mentioned). We have Dixie Freeman, the daughter of the new Community Church pastor in Shanghai. She is here because she is such a popular girl wherever she goes that she can never get down to lessons. We are hoped to be apart from the world far enough that no young men will ever find her. So far only one has. He is one of the new students in the Legation who came out on the same boat with her. She bore herself very dignifiedly, and he had to make the advances. His horse slipped its bridle and kept him four hours trying to catch it. This gave an added opportunity for glimpses of Dixie. She is a nice girl and I hope we may help her to find out how to study. The other day came an application for Baron Fittingoff to enter our school. He is the sixteen year old son of his father who died a few weeks ago at the Hsia Kai Lou. They had fled to Urga, where his father had large possessions- gold mines, etc. They are at present living at the Wagon Lits. They are coming out to see me day after to-morrow. I am fearful for his "Baron" in this democratic place, but he is a very attractive young boy, quite the opposite of Vladimir. He has a round good natured face, and was dressed in very careful taste.

We have two Rockefeller students and Mrs. Young has entered Anita and James for next fall. She wants Anita to come now. The Methodists have unanimously voted not to support a boarding or high school in Peking, and the sentiment is steadily growing against these two all around. This, and other signs, show that our present quarters are going to be entirely inadequate next Fall. I wish it were possible to hurry up the gift from the Russell Sage fund, for with exchange as at present it would build our new dormitory and leave a fair sum for endowment. Both Dr. Maxwell and Dr. Baxter have said that the Rockefeller's will help us out if we ask for it. We are not yet well enough informed as to their possible policy in giving, to ask for their money. Can you do anything to hurry up the New York people? Just at present they (the N.Y. people) seem to think the Peking and Tunghsien schools should agree to unite in work, that the high school should be here and the grades in Peking. This probably means another several years before we get much financial help. I have decided that the next building needed is a dormitory to be built out back of the tennis courts and by the big swing built on an angle thus though we need also the addition to the school in order to provide us with a chapel and extra recitation room, and manual training space. I have just today finished making the central attic room in No. 34 light an warm enough for the boys to work in. I have had all the walls white washed, and the openings closed so that the stairway door can be left open on the days the room is to be used, and the heat can go up there. So far the boys have not done much either in the way of Scout or M?? training, but I hope their hatchet is buried deep enough so that they can now get to work, and do something.

I have received two books and a pamphlet from you, all of which I have enjoyed though not finished. I am keeping the books to be used by the Mother's Club if necessary, but I think we shall need our open date for finishing our curriculum work. We have had a very interesting and I think profitable discussion taking two full meetings. Now I want to have the work go back to the committees for the finishing touches and then let us hear the results in the April meeting. I shall wait until you return when I want to make out our curriculum in detail. I think from what I got out of our own team's discussion that we shall be most interested in the 6-6 plan. Won't you find out what you can about Junior high school work?

As soon as Miss Bostwick gets her books finished up to date, I hope to have her finish cataloguing the library. Mrs. Ditmer of Tsinghua has promised to come over to help me some time. I am writing to her soon about it. I don't know whether I can manage affairs so that Mrs. Ditmer's ideas may be the predominating ones, or not, as Miss B. thinks she knows so much about it, but I hope it can be worked.

Little Marion Dudley arrived at the home of the Josselyn's last week, I think about Dec. 17th. Every one is very happy about it. The Hunters expect to be likewise happy some time next May, and the Wickes in April, so you see our population is increasing. Dr. and Mrs. A.H. Smith have given $6,000 to build themselves a bungalow somewhere in our compound during this coming year. Mr. Martin breaks ground in the spring for his new building. I wish I could say as much for the N.C.A.S.!

Will you please be on the out look for filing records for school reports- pupil averages. I want to get ours begun before June, if I can. That is something that Miss Bostwick can do, if I begin the work; and then I can finish in the summer time.

I am asking for the Annual meeting to be held as early in February as possible this year, and if it can be arranged, I want it held before the Xmas vacation hereafter. Feb. is too late to get anything done in that year. If you can secure your friend won't you cable Corbett, Peking, one- meaning you have Miss Thompson. If you can get Miss Percival cable Corbett, Peking, second. If you can get both cable, Corbett, Peking, two, and I will understand. Miss Price thinks she cannot stay with us longer anyway, and especially since exchange is making matters worse for her as she wishes to be near or with her sister. She has already applied for work in the Tokyo school, and I shall be glad to recommend her. I fear, she will never stand the life with her sister's lively boys added to her school work. She has found life too full of noise and responsibilities here, when I have made every adjustment possible to save her strain. She has been almost unbearably nervous for the past two months. She was in bed for nearly a week, and if Miss Bayles had not resigned, I do not think Miss Price could have kept her balance at all. In fact every one was just on the ragged edge. We are just now getting back to something nearer sanity.

Every one in North China is doing his utmost for the famine sufferers. Such awful tales come to us and the people who go to their rescue come back full of more tales. The Chinese themselves are doing their part. Miss Huggins girls are making babies' garments, and we are giving all our old clothes or new cloth to help them out. They are very enthusiastic about it. All the schools and colleges in and about Peking had tag day "Dec. 18th" and raised several thousand dollars. It was a 'dust storm' day so the amount was less than they expected. The Xmas exercises at Lu Ho Academy was a 'pay' affair this year and I believe they netted over a hundred dollars- all for the famine relief fund. The American Red Cross sent out $250,000 to be used, so every available person has been released to go to distribute it. The people will have to be fed until the first harvest some time in June. Whole families are dying of hunger. Mr. Corbett is in Shuntu fu district, Dr. Galt near Shih Chia Chwang, Mr. Hunter two days in from Paotingfu. Dr. Tucker has a lot of men working for him, and Shansi is just as badly afflicted. It is the worst thing for many, many years.

I received the underwear and gloves some time ago and have gotten the gloves nearly worn out. I need some more. Won't you tell Miss Brewster that I have received four books from her this fall and several papers, and I shall write her personally about them when I can get the time? I sent no Christmas gifts home this year, for I had no time to get them. I did send by Mr. Hodous a parcel of photos to the folks at home, and hope, that they reached their destination O.K. I do not care much for the likeness, but they may be better than nothing.

We have dammed up the moat so that we have our own private skating pond this year. It gets used a lot more for being so much nearer. Just how successful it is going to be is not yet proved, as the current is swift enough to wear the ice out in some places. There is quite a lot of water going over the dam all the time, though the moat was perfectly dry until the dam was finished. The pond dried up entirely, and Mr. Martin had all the edges dug out, and then turned the water in from the canal. It took a week to fill it, and our fall was so late that I thought it would be evaporated before it would freeze. It is since the children left that it was pronounced safe for skating. The moat froze sooner. I have not yet put on high shoes, tho I think I shall if it gets much colder. Last week I put on my flannel petticoat, not because I felt the need of it but because it was so far past the time to put it on that I just did it. We had no killing frost until after Nov. 1st and then it caught us, badly.

Just because this letter is too long now, I am going to stop. Please let the home folks read this too. I have to make a New Year's resolution to write more often. Lovingly – Flora

[Following note added at the top of the letter:]

Dear Will,

I tho't you would enjoy this. I may need the word regarding new teachers etc. later. Lots of love Mary

Dearest Little Sister Monny;-

I think I have written to nearly every one in the family except you and Punky Doodle [Kathleen]. Punk's turn will be next. I got all your letters that came to me in one envelope and they all made life more cheerfull for me. Phebe wrote me a long letter and I got it yesterday. She sent me a handkerchief in it, and as if to respond to the present I caught a delightful cold last night and have need of many handkerchieves. However, the best letter writer in our family is our father; his letters almost total all the rest in numbers.

Last night I looked up Dr. Harrison and found that he was out of town or rather not in this pastorate now and the pulpit was occupied by Dr. Willisford. The Willisford's are very fine people and Dr. and Mrs. Willisford and their dignified daughter (age about 11) and myself spent two very interesting and enjoyable hours together. Sunday I am going to church for the first time this year and I am going to eat dinner with them, and they have invited me to come to their young peoples supper next Wed. Their oldest daughter graduated from Pamona College in Harold Gardners class. Dr. and Mrs. Willisford are well acquainted with Dr. and Mrs. Whitney (now living in Cal.) and Dr. Ide of Mt. Vernon. So you see, we found several points in common on which to form a very warm acquaintance.

Now for a few matters of business with Pappa. When I reached here I expected to have a car load of mail. When that did not arrive the Captain added a note in one of his telegrams to the Company about our mail. Having received no satisfaction and the Marine Superintendent having arrived the officers of the ship took it up with him and he telegraphed especially for it. Reports were then received that the mail was on its way but we have seen nothing of it so yesterday I wrote a rather cutting letter to the general mgr. If I am in danger of loosing my War Risk Insurance I will bring suit against the Globe Line if I think it advisable.

This last week I purchased eight shares of stock of $125.10 each in the Southern Motors Manufacturing Association Ltd. and received an Associate Trusteeship in the same concern for five years. I paid $500 down and will pay the rest within six months. I think I will draw back some of the money I sent Aunt Elizabeth and Jay the whole as soon as possible so as to draw interest or dividends on the whole. The Southern Motors is the largest Mfg. concern of pleasure cars, trucks and tractors in the southern states and its products are good and the company has more orders than it can fill at present. I think it is the best investment of its kind I have seen this year. I surveyed all their plants weeks before last. The president of the Southern Motors, Mr. Blevins is president of four large banks in the city of Houston. I think I have made a good investment. I wonder how much money I have in the Shelton Bank. If it is much I might not think of going to college until I get more saved up. I have, though, been thinking seriously of going to Ann Arbor Mich, if they will accept my entrance credits to Oberlin. I would have to take a half year preparation in math- algebra, geometry, and trig.-before I could take up with any engineering course in any good university.

At last these fresh rumors and statements about the future of the Mt. Baker have rested firmly on a cargo of rice for Porto Rico. Then a cargo of sugar back. It would be a four months trip in the way that Mt. Baker would travel it and with the Mt. Baker's dispatch in port, I am almost decided not to go with her, although I may be out of a job for some time if I leave her now.

Dot's letter came day before yesterday telling of the arrival of the smallest of the truck [trunk?], have you received the rest yet? Monny, I believe you were a great reader were'nt you. Well, have you ever read "Coffy Ricks, or the Taming of Mat Peaseley". I finished it a few days ago. It is a good story about shipping business of the West Coast. Rather more pleasant and amusing than the real thing but on the whole a very good book.

I'm going to buy a new suit of clothes tomorrow. It will be the third since leaving the Army and the first in a year and a half. My last suit I got in Liverpool. Had it made to order, and it is still in good condition, only I want a change once in a while and then the suit is not one I can go out to evening entertainment with.

Well, here's a good by and kiss all around to every body in the dear family.

With love to all,

Your own brother,
Gould.

Dear Kathleen;-

This will have to do as a valentine to you and the whole family because I am unable to get off early enough to buy some before the stores close. We have had great doings since I wrote you last and I had better write them in diary form so as to get everything straight. I can't remember correctly before last Wednesday so I will begin Thurs. We (I mean my pal the 2nd mate, Mr. du Gardine) stayed at home or rather on board Wed. evening. Thursday we visited Dr. Willisford the present pastor of the Con'gl. Church here. Friday we attended a memo and boy's banquet at the Church. Saturday we entertained the Willisford family and the Woodward family aboard in the afternoon but stayed aboard for the evening. Sunday morning I went to church alone. I went to Miss Woodward's home for dinner. About three o'clock I went to Dr. Willisford's. At 5:00 P.M. Mr. du Gardine met us at their house and we went over to the church for the evening service. After the service there was a light supper for the young people then the young peoples service. This is the first one they have had and I had been asked to lead it and choose any topic I wanted to. I spoke on "Social Standards and Relations between the Youth of Opposite Sex in Our Country and in Foreign Lands I Have Recently Visited". We had a good meeting with about fifteen present. The discussion between those present fell into the matrimonial phase of it as I had feared and had guarded against. I wanted to present and discuss purely the Social phase of the subject. After the meeting I called up Miss Brisbane as had been previously arranged between Miss Harrison and myself. Miss Harrison and Miss Brisbane drove to Dr. Willisford's and got us and we spent the rest of the evening at Miss Brisbane's home. Both the Misses Harrisons were there and another girl and fellows from Rice Institute. Ms. Brisbane is a very hospitable and entertaining host and with the young people we had a fine time.

Monday evening we went to town and to a show alone. We mailed invitations for a banquet aboard the Mt. Baker. Tuesday we met Miss Harrison and Miss Brisbane and went to a Mexican dance which Miss Harrison chaperoned regularly every week. Miss Brisbane brought along her sketchbook with intention of sketching any striking pose she saw but when we got there she decided not to. The whole dance was carried off very nicely. If all dances were run as that one was I would see nothing wrong about it.

Wed. we had Mrs. Harrison, Miss Helen Harrison, Miss Elizabeth Harrison, Miss Woodward, Mr. Allen Woodward and Miss Brisbane on board for dinner. We trimmed the saloon with flags and the Chief's wife gave us a dinner on the Spanish style. We had a rousing good time. Thursday we were going to visit a Mr. Pearson but found the whole family out, so went to the Majestic Theatre.

That brings our doings down to date and our evenings are all spent along this line here in Houston, so you see we are well acquainted already.

Nobody knows what the old tub is going to do yet. There are wild rumors about everything and all parts of cargoes for ports in every part of So. Am. and the Caribbean sea but none of them have become stable as yet. As the time draws on my chances for another trip in the old tub diminish. I told the Marine Superintendent that I would by no means go on a trip that would take me away for Easter vacation. About the only trip that she could take now is to Tampico and parts with general cargo. That is if I went with her. We are working hard to repair cargo winchs and donkey boiler so that we will be ready for anything that comes along. We could set the main engines ready in two days more but are working on the others at present. The donkey boiler is an awful job, but after three weeks work on it with seven men we hope to finish it tomorrow.

I have just received Geraldine's letter telling me when Easter vacation comes. I will be home then at all costs. If I can stay on board until this old tub goes it will help me out financially quite a bit. I have invested and deposited in the bonds so much money that it doesn't leave me but a scant sum with my wages to pay my army insurance and my Union dues and other necessary expenses and keep a reserve for my going home when that comes.

Maybe you folks at home do not realize what "coming home" means to me. It means that my whole life will probably be changed. The work I have done, the profession I am very nearly becoming an expert in, the experience gained will all be laid aside and I will have to begin again anew somewhere. Probably I will go back to college somewhere and whether I will make good there now after nearly three and a half years away from it, I don't know. I begin to realize now the truth of that old saying "it is hard to get into any profession and harder to get out of it".

I had better stop writing this letter now for if I should write all my thoughts wanderings tonight you would have a very long epistle indeed.

When I come home I may possibly bring my pal Arthur du Gardine with me for a few days visit. He may leave with me and will be going to Philadelphia or New York. I would very much like to have him live in a real American home. He is very enthusiastic about America except the home life and that's because he hasn't seen it as it goes on every day.

Tell Geraldine that I had not at all intended to sell Mr. Landis my suit. I did not have any more use for it and gave it to him. Could I properly tell Jessie to use the money for her own needs and if I did would Geraldine in further explanation. I will do nothing about it I assume until Geraldine writes me so that all will be understood.

Give my love to all the family. Give mother and father a goodbye hug and kiss for me.

With best wishes for you my little sister,

Your loving brother,

Gould.

[April 2, 1921]

Dear Mary;-

A few days ago I started off a 6 page note to you in company with some of the letters which we are sending out for help over our present financial strain. I shall send you one more bunch. I wish you could get Dr. Danton to send out some. I want to write to them and think I can send them some direct. I feel confident that we shall have no trouble in raising our money but I hope it shall get more than we need, so that we can do some things that we need money for.

The Ch. of the Brethren are asking to come in with us. This gives us $2000 mex. for our school plant. We must have an isolation ward, and so we are planning to make Miss Bostwick's former suite into that. It will lend itself very well to it. We shall put on a sleeping porch from the front steps around to the bay window which will accommodate 28 or 30 boys- upstairs and down. We expect to have Mr. Lund here and hope you are to secure Mr. Romig. At any rate we must have a music teacher. Mrs. Martin and I talked over her bringing out some music with her, and I suggested that she spend about $50 in music to be sold to the children next fall. I am enclosing a copy of our musicale this year so she can see about the grade of work our children can do. If she could make some arrangements with some music house for future purchasing, it would be fine. I do hope you can get Miss McKinney's friend. If you can't I wish you would write to Miss Isabel Bonell, care of Dr. Burnett, East Orange, and ask if she would consider coming or if she knew of any one who would come. Mrs. Packard knew her in Vassar, and her mother was one of my best friends in S. Orange. Would Miss Costikyan know of any one? By the way, would Mrs. Frame know of any one to whom we could send out appeals?

A lot of papers have just come telling of the frightful accident on the Shelton trolley, and of the bank trouble. I am rather anxious to know if Stanley is going to lose a lot. I hope not.

Did I tell you that we are hoping to have a trained nurse next year in connection with the hospital? Miss Connolly is the one we are asking for. She will have full charge of the clinic of our school, and so save Dr. Love's daily oversight of the children. I hope she will live with us, but I don't know whether Miss Huggins will agree to that. Mr. and Mrs. Wolf will probably be living in our compound next year as Mr. Martin is to begin his building. Next year has promises of much constructive work- both in material and educational lines here in our compound.

I am anxious to hear from you about teachers, and hope you have secured your friend, already. Will you please cable by May 15th so that we can have the data for our new prospectus?

Will write more in a few days. The boys and Mr. Lund returned from their 8 days hike in good condition.

Lovingly-

F. Beard.

NORTH CHINA AMERICAN SCHOOL,
TUNGHSIEN, PEKING, CHINA.

Apr. 3, 1921- 3rd letter.

Dear Mary:-

Your letter to Miss Huggins has answered my query about what you are studying. I make out the last two as Mental Adjustments and Advisors of Women and Girls. The others we understand. "Curricula" will be of a lot of help to us as we have a committee to place ours in black and white. The committees of the Mother's Club did a lot of good thinking and discussion which has resulted in crystallizing some of the wishes of the people and finding out our needs. The people here want us to run on the 6-6 plan, which means that we are nothing but a high school with the 6th grade preparatory. I have been looking over some of the Junior high school books, and are much interested in their different point of view, and I think we can easily readjust our work so as to fit the Jr. H.S. idea if every one wishes it. Our committee is Mrs. Corbett, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Galt, and myself. We shall co-opt you upon your arrival. I want to do some work on it this summer so as to be ready for your criticisms when you get here. We have set September 7th for our opening of school next fall. Have you engaged your passage yet?

I am enclosing the propaganda that Dr. Howard is sending out. Our board has decided that the N.C.A.S. must stay here. The Peking arrangements, so far, do not include any dormitory arrangements and we decided since we had to build them anyway, that it is better to build here. The P. people so far, have not been able to buy land anywhere except back of Mr. Porter's house. When the University moves out this place would be away off to one side. Did you know that the University had actually purchased land just in the left hand corner of where the road divides, one part going to the Summer Palace and one on to Tsinghua? Dr. Stuart goes home this June to see about money and other plans.

Well, the future is somewhat more hopeful for us, as the Ch. of the Brethren have definitely asked to come in with us. Dr. Barton of Boston is to visit us next fall, and will find out some facts first hand which should help. The Boston Bd. has raised the age limit for children returning to 15 yrs so that is a real recognition of our being of some good.

The propaganda for the P. school and ours will cause some agitation and it must result in clearing the air for us. It is a long game and I believe our lack of haste will prove the best in the end. We want a good grammar school in Peking, and perhaps they do need the night school. By the way, did Sam Dean tell you that his father is to be the new principle of the P. school?

I wish you could do some school visiting in the private schools about New York and Conn. I would like to have you visit Kent Place in Summit (where Delnoce was) the big boys' school, and girls' school in Morristown, N. Jersey, some of the schools in Conn., such as the ones in Norwalk, near New Haven, and Waterbury- perhaps near enough to auto out to. A study of their management would be a help I am sure. You may find others more accessible than these, which would be better.

I am enclosing a list of purchases which I would like to have you bring out with you, if they don't take up too much room. If they do just mail them. Lovingly- F.B.

North China American School

Tunghsien, Peking, China, Apr. 24, 1921.

Dear folks at home:-

This year started out with a riot, and we've kept the fuss up in one way or another all the year. Just now it is Gobi dust, measles, mumps, conjunctivitis, new babies, getting up a play, and a pageant, and trying to get our every day work done. Last week we had the worst Gobi dust storm ever heard of. It has been blowing all the morning, and for hours before the cloud arrived it would be seen off to the north and west. We lighted our lamps at 3.15 P.M. in order to see to study. Most of the time we could not see the houses across the campus. We got over to supper all right, but before the meal was over the servants were covered with dust. The rooms were so full that we were in a cloud. I did not even then realize how bad it was, for when I started back to school with a servant, our lantern went out and we could see no light, and we got lost. Several of the children wandered over to the village before they found out where they were. They all got safely to the school and started to study, though by this time the lamps were so choked by the dust, that they gave little light, and the room was in a cloud. At 8.30 P.M. Mr. Lund came over with a rope and we sent the children home. One of the big boys took the lead, the girls held on to the rope, and Mr. Lund brought up the rear, so they got home O.K. The out-door sleepers had to move in and sleep on the floor. All of us had to sleep with windows closed. My bed had a half inch of dust all over it. The dust was coming in so fast that I did not try to get rid of it, but crept in between the sheets and tried to sleep. I tied my head up but you never would have known I had taken any precautions the next morning. You could not see the design on my rugs. The dust was whipped on to the window panes just as snow is whipped sometimes. The next afternoon the storm cleared and the children cleaned the high school room the second time, and we had study hall. That was all that we studied that day. I took two Standard Oil tins of yellow dirt out of my room, and I have no idea how much was taken out of our whole building. Mrs. Howard-Smith took 40 such tins off of each of her verandas. Our out of door plants were all whipped to pieces so that we are having very scrubby lilac blooms this spring. It is very dry. We have not had any rain since Easter morning. That date seems to have been a dry St. Swithin's Day to the Chinese, for they say the snow of that morning meant forty days of wind and dust. So far the record has been kept. It is so dry that it seems as though we would all be crisped soon if it does not rain. Here it is the 24th of April and our strawberries have only just started to grow. The rose bushes are just leaving out and to-day the peonies have showed that they are something more than mere stems. I doubt if we have strawberries, or peas, or lettuce before the children go home the 9th of June. We have about an inch of the yellow dust all over the compound, so that we look quite like a desert. The violets are struggling up through it, and the alfalfa seems not to care.

Peking has been full of every disease you can mention. There have been several deaths from that horrible diphtheritic-scarlet fever, from small pox, typhus, and many, many people have had the minor diseases of measles, mumps, etc. We caught the German measles and had over a dozen cases of them. We had three cases of whooping cough, and now there are seven children sick with the real measles, and two with mumps. Four of them are in school here. Mrs. Dildine came in response to a telegram, and we have a Chinese trained nurse. All the patients have had a good case of measles but so far Mary Dildine is the only one who has had any complication. She is very uncomfortable with bronchial pneumonia. She is not yet out of danger, but she seems to be gaining. If we continue to take Peking children, we shall have to make some rules for our protection from diseases they bring to us. We have already in view more children than are leaving, so we are bound to be a full school next year. We have six pupils for a fifth grade, but the Bd. of Managers voted to have our lowest grade the 6th, so we shall have to say "no".

We have sent out letters to collect five or six thousand dollars to help us over this year's financial crisis and we already have one thousand dollars in. Mary will be interested to know that the College Club of Peking gave us $300 Mex. It seems they voted to give the Peking school that sum, and Miss Paine, Mrs. Hall, and Dr. Miner had some words to say about limiting their gifts to a single institution, so they treated us to the gift, also. The "Church of the Brethren" have voted to come in with us, and that means, we will have money enough to put a sleeping porch on to Wistaria Cottage this summer. I am planning to get back here by the middle of August to superintend it, if necessary. I want to go to Korea for a few weeks if I can get away during July, for my efficiency will be much enhanced if I can get away from every thing for awhile. This has been a riotous year, and if Dr. Love and Mrs. Martin had not sacrificed themselves we would have had to close the school. I hope out of it will come some constructive additions and decisions as to what is necessary. We are to have another meeting of the Bd. of Man. In June when I hope we will get other important measures started.

I am much disappointed that Mary is not to be here for the opening of school, but I suppose it can't be helped. It just means that some of the work will have to be done twice. Probably it won't make as much difference as it now seems it would. I do hope she gets Mr. Romig and the music teacher anyway. I hope Mr. Romig can get an early sailing. It won't matter so much if the music teacher is a little late, so long as she is here by Oct. 1st. We have had a Russian this year, and I have not been especially attracted to him or his interpretation of music. He had done well by his pupils though. I must close. Dr. and Mrs. Fenn are spending the week-end with us. He is to preach this afternoon. Lovingly- Flora Beard.

Dear Father:

I got here O.K. yesterday morning. Met Frank Zuber at the station and went down to the ship yards with him. I am working in the Newport Ship Yards. They are building seven small concrete vessels and one large 5,000 ton concrete tanks. The job is not quite what I thought it would be, but as I have my freedom to do my work about as I please, as long as I follow specifications, I can't kick. The men are genial and easy going like all southerners. Thursday while in Washington I made two tours with the Gray Line. The first in the morning through the White House, Bureau of Printing and Engraving, the Smithsonian Institute Museum, the library, and the Capitol. In the afternoon I took a tour out to Arlington and saw the National Cemetery. In the evening I walked up through the capitol park and grounds and around the capitol building then up to the library where I stayed for an hour enjoying the beautiful building. By my special request I gained admittance with another chap to the Library stacks. The head librarian took us around and showed us their whole system of book ordering and delivery by special belt conveyers and automatic dumpers.

I took my train of 9:30 for Wilmington. The Atl. Coast Line is a good fast line and very easy to ride.

I have a room fare for $18 a month. It is not too large, very well furnished, and the land lady and husband are young people just up from Atlanta, Ga. They are very nice people although I have not had much to do with them yet.

Hoping this will reach you at Mr. Goddard's

Your son,
Gould

[Berlin, CT]
[May 8, 1921]

My own dear mother,

It is a lovely day for Mother's Day here. The sun has been bright and warm, the air balmy, and the little birds have been singing their merriest. The atmosphere is so perfect that we have all been in the highest spirits- a grump simply couldn't exist today!

This morning I wore a little yellow rosebud to church for you. I was disappointed that there was no special notice, beyond a few words about it, in the service today. Our Putnam meetings were so beautiful. What did they do in Oberlin?

Papa is now in New York State somewhere. I hope the children are all with you. Wouldn't I like to be with you all today; or have you here and take you out for a quiet walk thru our lovely fields and lanes?

Doris has just been smothering her mother with kisses and hugs- her usual pastime during Sunday dinner dishes.

So often during these two years in Berlin I've thought of the ideals that you have stood for and taught me. Sometimes it has seemed hard to stick, but they always come back and always with greater feasibility and power on their side. I've thought of it many times during the weeks since Christmas and Easter. You have given us children something no one can take away. I have always taken much satisfaction in remembering when we were together as a family in Putnam, and in Foochow. Just the thought and memory of it have given me strength to go on being myself in spite of many things that have gone wrong. And you have the message that Matthew Arnold gave in a time that wasn't so rushed as this, when people were more careful to do good work, -the message of perfection. And he said that those who held to this goal of perfection would be the minority and always would be.

On this subject Mr. Fiske and I were talking this afternoon, and we agreed that if one felt that he had anything to do in this world he would have to go forward and do it regardless of opposition from others. Heat is inevitable, and we must work on in spite of it. It has come home to me very forcibly this last week in many ways.

I hope, then, that this Mother's Day will give you a new strength of convictions and a new faith, to help you to go on living the life that has given us our inner strength and the example for it. May it give you, too, a renewed realization of how much we all love you, and want you with us in all our activities. May God continue ever to be your strong Councilor and Friend, the strength and inspiration of your life!

From my letters home you know that I have been accepted as a missionary, and have even got applications for my minister's railroad reduction ticket. Miss Calder and Miss Lawson have both sent me many very nice letters; and I am planning to be at the Training Conference from June 7-17 in Boston. Sometimes, when I think of all the needs, and of my general preparation it does seem as if this were a hasty step. I seem so unprepared, and so incapable of doing anything worthy of being supported by the Board. But I suppose we have to take the opportunities as they come to us, and do our best. I still have all my preparation to make. My list of purchases, my reading, and many other things.

I keep wondering and wondering whether you will go back or not with us. What have you decided about it? And is Papa going to take the Presidency of the College again or not? Evidently the California trip is off. You will of course, come East, then in June. How glad we shall be to see you again!

Yesterday Jeanette and I got our wedding dress material. It is a pink organdie, of the finest quality, and is very pretty. It is to be made in a graceful style, too. I wish you could be here for the wedding. At Ruth's wedding, I am to play the wedding march and have the music end of it thro the evening. Today I tried my hand at my new violin. It is very loud, but a sweet toned instrument. Not very well adapted to a small house. I am not sure that I shall do anything with that.

Now I wonder what you have that I would give as wedding gifts to Ruth and Betty? I'd like some nice Chinese center pieces or table cloths. Have you any of the Madiera or eyelet work in large pieces? Or do you have some of the print runner sets for luncheon tables? I shall leave it to your fine discretion what to send; for I want it the nicest thing I can get. Please let me know the price, because I should have to get one anyway. Linen, if possible.

You haven't sent the address of that woman's club report on something that you planned to send me.

Next Sunday is Jeannette's birthday. I think she would appreciate a little note from you; for your birthday notes are so lovely. She is the kind who would deeply appreciate your letters. I am giving her a good many things, so unless you really want to, a gift will be unnecessary- from the quantity point of view.

I got a new hat for $5.95- a really good one, straw, dark blue, in a novel shape, that they all think is becoming. My suit skirt can be fixed up, too, to look much better, and the silk is on hand!

On the 21st we go to Mt. Holyoke to the May Day celebration and the Jubilee anniversary of Miss Wooly the President. On the 29th Papa is here. Then I go to Boston. We wanted to go to New York this week end, but we were both too tired. That trip will have to come this summer.

I am going to send you a bundle with two things in it soon. I hope you will like them. They were very reasonable, so you mustn't let it worry you.

This week Jeanette sent 3 large suit case boxes of violets and other flowers to Ruth Cowles in New York for a nurses' party they were having there. I hope they reached her safely.

I must stop now. I hope you are all well, and taking enough rest and care of yourselves. I hope you can come to Berlin for a day before we close school. Plan for it. Give my love to all the children, and ask each of them to kiss my Mother once for me!

My very dearest love to you, mother dear!

Your

Phebe

Dear Father;-

I called this evening at the general delivery window and I got your letter. I certainly shared your feelings in parting. I feel now that I know you and that you know me a great deal better than we ever knew each other before. Before I came home I had the feeling by your letters that you did not clearly see what I was aiming at but I know that you now know that all this is a stepping stone that I have shown as a means to an end. Although not many men do it my way, I feel sure that if I stick to it I will come out where I have aimed for and possibly better.

Mrs. Lawrence and I had a fine little chat while going up to Cleveland, and she told me she was glad to see that Ethel and I were good friends.

In regard to Mother's staying I have seen the thing taking shape for the last month. Especially Geraldine would remark "if mamma stays". I had said nothing to anyone about it until I spoke to you that morning. There is no doubt but what the girls and mother will decide on the best course to take.

I don't know whether every letter to you addressed to Mr. Goddard's house will reach you or not. The nature of the work is not what I expected but entirely different and in some ways a surprise. It is installing direct connected; not electric drive engines. The ships are concrete and I am watching the various processes of construction with great interest. I am supposed to take care of odds and ends in the installing that the regular installing engineer doesn't have time to look after. Just now I am making of all the high pressure air fittings that will be put into the next boat. #1 is completed and I was supposed to follow or copy the lines as laid out in it, but I saw where I could save the company some 50 ft. of H.P. copper tubing on each boat, also some tons of fittings and I showed the boss about it and got his O.K. to put them in the way I wanted to.

Frank Zuber will not be here over two weeks more. His work was only to fit the generators onto the small generator set because they had to ship the engines before they got the generators from the electrical people.

I suppose I will not get any more mail now until those letters that I wrote to Oberlin and Shelton are answered which will be Saturday at the earliest.

I will address your next letter to the farm.

Hoping that you and your companion are enjoying the tour. Remember me to him and give my regards to all my friends that you meet.

Dear Ellen and Girlies;

Yesterday I reached Boston. Mr. Ding got here the day before we spent Monday night with Dwight. He was alone. Mrs. G. has not yet come from Ann Arbor. Mr. Ding spent all day Tuesday with Dwight, and Wed. a.m. went to see the Babson Statistical Bureau at Wellesley Hills and then Dwight took him into Cambridge where he found a friend from Foochow. But when I got here at 10:45 a.m. I found him at the outer door of the Cong'l House waiting anxiously for me and ready to start back for Oberlin. I took him to the Y.M.C.A. here where he still is. Last night I spent with the Belchers and plan to stay with the Donaldsons tonight. This morning two little pouty[?] nightgowned people rushed into my room and got rustled and had a good frolic. Both Francis and Lucille are looking very well- as are all the Belchers.

Tomorrow I go to Providence to spend the Sun. and I plan to take Ding along. He speaks very acceptably.

I do not hear anything from Oberlin. I talked with Mr. Willard yesterday about the possibility of your canceling your parting. He said if I let him know by the middle of June it would be all right. The Belchers have heard that the Bliss girls at Auburndale are not happy. They are not doing well in their study. Mrs. Bliss is coming home with Edward and they are glad on account of the girls in Auburndale. I am convinced that it is by all means wise for you to stay with the girlies.

This will necessitate some changes pretty soon in our plans. I hope you and the girls will talk them over soon.

Phebe's Candidate Conference is the 7-17 of June. I have written that I would be [in] Berlin May 22. I wonder if my reply to Lake Geneva has reached you and been forwarded to me.

Lovingly

Will and Father.

BOSTON

May 14 – 1921

Dear Ellen,-

I am sending you a check for $25.00 for household expenses. I hope the money I left is still holding out.

Last night I spent with the Donaldsons. They are now living in a flat at Nahant, Mass. on the coast. They plan to go back in the late fall, and will then have four children to take back!!! Susan is gaining steadily but surely. She is a deal shorter and lighter than Frederick who is a sturdy boy.

I am enclosing a letter from Gould which you will all enjoy.

It looks as if a Miss Armstrong who has taught at Mt. Herman for some five or more years was to be secured for Foochow College.

I will have another talk with Phebe before deciding about Jeanette Hines. The people here seem to be favorable to her going. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard have asked for an extension of their furlough and plan to sail in Dec.

Lovingly

Will

403 Dock St.,
Wilmington, N.C.
May 18, 1921.

Dear Father:-

This evening when I came home from the yards I found this letter waiting me from Ass. Dean Butts of the U. of Mich. He must be from Missouri! I can show him all right, its been my business for the past four years to show people that I could do things and I haven't had a set back in the line of a failure since I joined the army.

This letter has set me to thinking. I have just been recommended by the Winton Eng. Wks. and the New Port Ship Building Co. for the position of Chief of one of these little River Vessels at $225 a month. I consider that that job would be only a stepping stone to something better in a year or so. The salary is more than the average man is getting after working at his trade for ten years or more. Only one of the bosses here from the Gen'l Mgr. to the lowest foreman has ever been to college and that man is a civil engineer employed to make alignments on the forms for costing the concrete ship. The question naturally arises whether it is worth the money and effort and time to take four years out for theoretical study.

On the other hand I have set myself for a long time on completing a theoretical course in engineering at some institution. This is the only great object that I have come up against that I have not realized its accomplishment, and there is a challenge to tackle it again. Mr. Butts increases that about ten fold when he says he must be shown that I am worthy to be allowed to study at Ann Arbor.

These are my personal feelings on the subject. There is no use trying to convince Mr. Butts that I can run the Chief job on the R.V. #2 and study Algebra, Geometry, and German at the same time. If I take that job I will not be in a place to get a tutor. If I intend to enter the U. of Michigan at all it must be next fall, and if next fall I will have to give up this position and go to Summer School there. It will mean a great deal of extra expense besides the loss of the two hundred dollars I hoped to clear if I only stayed on this job without getting the Chief's position. If I start this thing I want to finish it and I want to know that I will have money enough to finish it.

I will await my reply to Mr. Butts until I hear from you. I am ready to go either way at the present time. Four years of education is a pretty costly thing for a man who can rise above the crowd without it. I will await your answer and then decide once and for all. If I decide to go I will have to quit here June 25th come north and see you all and get out to Ann Arbor by July 3rd or 4th.

Remember me to everyone at the farm and to all my friends.

Lovingly, your son,

Gould.

June 19, 1921

Dear Father:-

I got your last letter yesterday and read it with a lot of pleasure. I guess Mr. Ding had the time of his life on that trip.

My plans are as follows-Leave Wilmington at 7:00 P.M. June 25th. Arrive New York about 2 P.M. June 26th. Either stay over night in N.Y. with Frank Zuber or go straight to Bridgeport. Aunt Mollie and Uncle Raymond will be up on Lake George N.Y.. Go to the Farm about the 28th. Go to Putnam the 30th and stay until Saturday or Sunday. Then go to Silver Bay and then to Oberlin and try to get to Ann Arbor for the 5th of July. I don't know how things will work out so I am not planning very definite dates. These are the essential places that I want to visit. I would like to see Aunt Mollie and Uncle Raymond if possible.

The people there are sorry that I am going because they will have to get another man down from the factory to do my work. I have tried to break in two men to do it, but they don't seem to catch on to it as they should or as any man with intelligence and mechanical knack should. However I don't feel the least bit badly for them because I have paid my fares both ways and have't received much for my services here.

You said you would be going out to Shelton July 4th. Then we will be about passing each other on the way because I intend getting to Oberlin about the 2nd or 3rd if there will be any body there. I will pack up all my goods and chattels and take them on with me to Michigan because I intend to make a go of it and be there until I finish.

I'm awfully glad that Aunt Phebe and Cousin Zina are actually going to get out to Oberlin. I was almost afraid none of the Beards from Shelton would ever see that place. I think it will please Harold immensely to have one of his family visit the place where he put in 5 years of study.

Remember me to all the dear ones.

With love to the whole family
Gould

Mother, darling,

It is late, late; but we have to make time these days if communication continues! Geraldine graduates tomorrow morning at 10:30, and tonight Father near died with the class. So did all the "descendants" I suppose, and the wife! How I would like to be there!

This may be Geraldine's graduation photo from Oberlin- 1921

Tomorrow night I suppose Geraldine and Dot go to Silver Bay. And Aunt Phebe is there with you, and the girlies are thru school!

Aunt Phebe's visit here was so lovely! I have long hoped she could visit Berlin while I was teaching here, and at last it has come true. We wished she had not changed her plans and had stayed over night.

These two weeks have been terribly busy. School reports, two nights out to supper, a trip to Hartford; and a supper tonight for our two brides have kept things humming. This afternoon the graduating class of the Junior High had Class Day. Tomorrow is graduation, and tomorrow evening there is a reception for me in the church. Becoming a member of the Board is fraught with far more publicity than I had even dreamed; and all the substance I ever had has suddenly dwindled to such a tiny speck, I wonder how I ever had the nerve to volunteer. But I'm trying to live up to a reputation I really never suspected!

Mr. Fiske has been very nice about arranging my commission service for next Sunday. I am still hoping that Father can come to offer my dedicatory prayer. I do wish you could be here, too! Francis Cobey, one of my boys is going to sing for me, and either Dr. Strong or Mr. Clark is to give the commission. Aunt Mary thinks some of them can come from the Farm, and perhaps Aunt Emma and Uncle Elbert can come from Putnam. Do let me hear soon as to Father. And how about you going to China? I do want to hear!

I must stop now.

Much love to you all,

Phebe K.

Our dresses for the weddings are lovely! My silk is stunning. Where are my wedding gifts? If you haven't got them, use the money to come here next Sun. at 5 P.M. for my service! Don't get them now. I got some others for a shower that I can use. We aren't going to have the shower.

Tues. night.

Brief History.

Phebe Kinney Beard was born in Foochow, China.

She spent her early years there, coming to this country for her education in 1910. She received her High School education in Putnam, Conn., her mother's home, and from there went to Oberlin, graduating in 1919. In Oberlin she was very active in the Student Volunteer Band.

The past two years have been spent in Berlin teaching. In position as teacher and friend she has won her way into the hearts of all the Berlin people.

It has been her long cherished hope to return to China, and now as she answers the call and returns to the land of her birth and desire, to become a teacher, in the girl's school at Ponasang, Foochow, she takes with her the sincere loyalty and best wishes of her many friends here.

Poem probably dated June 1921.

The following handwritten poem regarding her upcoming trip to China was found in Phebe's scrapbook:

O Phebe dear, what can I write
To cheer you on your way,
As you go sailing on the sea
On your voyage to Cathay?

You know dear that we love you true
You know for you we pray
You know we all shall think of you
When teaching in Cathay.

I'd like to send some wondrous charms
Some magic word to say
To help you over places hard
And trials in Cathay.

But that, dear love, I cannot do.
But from this summer's day
I'll draw a lesson for your use
When you have reached Cathay.

This morning's sun rose bright and warm

But soon the skies grew grey;
The thunder rolled, the rain fell fast
Does it do so in Cathay?

All day the clouds have hid the sky
The sunshine could not stay.
I fear your sky may clouded be
Some days in far Cathay.

But patience dear - the hours went by
And just at close of day
The storm clouds lifted - so they will
I'm sure in far Cathay.

The sun shone out-right gloriously
The clouds all slunk away.
Keep up your courage- so 'twill be
When teaching in Cathay.

NORTH CHINA AMERICAN SCHOOL,
TUNGHSIEN, PEKING, CHINA.

Dear folks at home:-

I arrived here on July 1st and am returning to Tunghsien Aug. 1st to do a lot of repairing needed on our buildings. We had some money left over this year and since we have not enough to do the building we need, we are going to fix every thing over as fresh as we can. I did a lot before I came up, but have the boys dormitory all to do. Then, too, the Sowters are coming over to Peking for August and I have invited them to make their home with me while they sight see. I am not going with them every day, and some of the time they will stay in Peking. School finally closed with a fine spirit, though we were nearly done to a finish. I managed to faint away the Sunday before the close but spent the day in bed and got through the rest of the time by being careful. I am feeling O.K. again now. Am taking life very easily here. Am at the Gould Cottage and my room is clear at the east end of the long house, where I can be as quiet as I choose. It is like walking the deck of the steamer to go to my meals the distance is so great, and I have the water in sight and sound all the way, but I am enjoying it very much. Miss Kelly (the lame[?] lady whom Mary and I knew at Kuling) is here. She has been doing famine relief work in Paotingfu and so is spending her summer here with Miss Breck. Every one is just at the first stage of resting up so the house is quite quiet, but it is fast filling up. I am fortunate to have one of the two single rooms, so I will have the quiet of single blessedness the whole month.

I am enclosing a subscription blank for Mary's Geographic which she wants paid. If she has left before this reaches you will you please pay it and let her know by letter?

Last spring, I had an opportunity to send my watch home by Dr. G. Wilder to Will in Oberlin. He, I hope, has taken it to Shelton for repairs. I hope Mary will bring it back with her. The new watch piece you sent me I like very much, but it is costing me both my watches at present. The watch is a poor one and three times now I have had my watches fall to the ground, and they do not care for such gymnastics. At present I am wearing Miss Huggin's wrist watch. She happens to have two. I must say I don't care for wrist watches- at lease with leather straps.

Mother's letter came last night, but I have mislaid it somewhere. Found it. After re-reading it I find there is not much to answer in it. We have not been able to fill our needed teaching staff to the needed number which means, I shall not be able to leave for home before next summer, unless some one can be found during the year. We shall be only Mary, Miss Bostwick and myself of the old staff, so probably it is a good thing, for the school for me to stay, tho I am pretty tired, and do need to come home. Then too, Mary and Miss Fenn do not arrive until after school opens, which means they will have to submit to our plans for work. I do not know now how the work is to be done, but it will get done in some way I suppose. We shall have two people on our force this year that will make some things hard because they will do certain things and no more, but I do hope our new people will be adaptable. I had such a year last year that it seems as if I could not go through another. Our new Bd. of Managers is fine. They have finances planned so that when our money gets here for our new dormitory, we shall be fixed. I'll send you one of our bulletins when they come from the printers. Lovingly- Flora Beard

Dear Ellen, Marjorie and Kathleen,-

All has gone well and as planned since I left you last Thursday morning. I got out to the R.R. just in time to take the train as it came along. The heat was not oppressive and I reached N. Tonawanda about 2:30 p.m. daylight saving, and found Etta, Willis, Myron, Fulton, and the twins all well. We men folks went to see a base ball game about 7 p.m. A slight shower made the temperature fall 7 degrees, and the night was a fine one to sleep,- too fine for me for it was 6:30 the next morning when Etta knocked on my door, and I had just 35 min. to dress, shave, eat and get the car. I made it. This Friday morning was quite comfortable- but about 4 p.m. - after noon I never knew it hotter. I reached Tarrytown at 6:09 and walked onto the ferry just as it started. Stanley's family appeared soon after I reached Nyack, with Mrs. Fairchild. She had been spending a few days with them and was going to meet Bessie Haveland and go with the Haveland family up to Mr. Palmers Saturday.

On Saturday a.m. I played with the children until about 11 o'clock. Stanley came back from the Labrotory then and the family and I started with a lunch for Mt. Vernon. We ate lunch while on the ferry and reached Mt.

Vernon Uncle Raymond's about 1:30. We just made a short call and I took a 2:19 train for Bridgeport and there I got a 5:20 car for Shelton. Mary was speaking in Orange today and mother and Phebe and Elizabeth had gone to New Haven taking Mary and leaving her in Orange, and picking me up on the way home.

Today we have been to church and Mary has come home. It has been very hot and very wet for over two weeks. Father cannot get his hay. The little [he] has put in the barn was in very poor condition.

A card from Gould to Mary tells us that he went from Cleveland to Detroit on a boat that was so crowded he could not get a berth. If he writes I hope you will send it on to me.

Next Sunday I speak in Shelton. I have heard nothing from Phebe. But her passport has come here so we think she is planning to come here soon. This I believe is all the news.

The weather is very bad for having [haying?]. I picked up some Red ? apples last night that were red, and tomorrow we will go huckleberrying.

Lovingly

Will and father

Dear Marjorie:-

I got your nice letter last week and should have answered long ago. Yes I have received everything you sent. The keys and the two books got here O.K.

I have not received many letters since I got here, I have written six or seven every week to friends and relatives, but for some reason they never reply. I'm going to write Dot and Geraldine tonight and see if I can get any word from them. Have you got Father's plans for going West yet? How are you doing with your ward? Is he giving you any trouble now or does he take things patiently like a good boy? I suppose you and Punk are having lots of fun taking early morning hikes and bike rides etc. You have the tennis court all to yourself now, don't you?

Tell Mother that I have been over to see Mrs. Ohlinger again and hear all her woes and stories of hard times. I don't see how a person lives who has such a woebegone outlook on life. Constance is a very modest young lady, very retiring, and not at all beautiful physically. I can't quite see what she hopes to do professionally in the line of vocal music unless she keeps up better appearances and a little more social demeanor.

I am doing little more than study these days. I am getting along in the lessons pretty well, but I have to bone down to work until twelve every night to get it. Staying out four years is not productive of study at all.

The one exception I do have in my days routine is a swim twice a week. There is a river here and a municipal bathing house. It gives me a bit of recreation for the week to spend a couple of hours down there twice in the week.

Everything is drying up around here. There is even talk of prayer meeting for rain. The roads are awfully dusty and the crops are all covered with dust along the road side. I guess the farmers will need a good deal of rain to repair damages and I guess the Government will have a good bit to do in tiding the farmers over until next fall financially.

I went today to look at a room for next fall. I have taken one that will cost $3.00 a week. That is 25 cents better than I am paying for this one. Most rooms are about $4, $5 and $6 a week and I count myself lucky. I could have had a room for $2.50 but it was very poorly ventilated and very poorly furnished.

By the way Marjorie, there is one little thing more you could send me. I left that little clothes brush there somewhere. I used it last when I went to dust my trousers while I was pressing them. Could you send me that if you can find it?

Remember me to all the friends and give my love to all the family.

Lovingly your brother,

Gould.

Dear Mother:-

Just a note to tell you all that everything is going as well as can be with me under the circumstances of final exams. I had Algebra this afternoon and think I came out O.K. but am not quite sure. Spanish and Trigonometry come tomorrow so here's where I hit them hard for the last nights study this term.

I will not be down this vacation as I have a position for my board and prospects of enough odd jobs to keep me partially occupied and in pocket money. I'm as sorry as you are about it, but what must be, must be and we have to meet it. I'll manage to get down for Christmas any way and perhaps for Thanksgiving.

Arthur wants to be remembered to you all. He is still on the Mongolia sailing between Hamberg and New York. He doesn't like Europe so well as he used to and not as well as America.

I got a letter from Jannetta from Berlin and one from Phebe on the train mailed at Geneseo, Ill. Father also enclosed a note.

I suppose you are getting ready to move into some special part of the house now. If you really need any help at it just tell me and I will come down any way, it won't make such an awful difference, and I would like much better to some home.

With love to the whole family,
Gould.

[Actually Pueblo, CO]
July 15, 1921
[Actual date was 8/25/1921]

Dear Mother,

This is neither Putnam nor July. It is Geraldine's birthday [August 25] and we are at Pueblo, Colorado. And thereby hangs a tale. But I'll tell that in its order.

In my last letter I left our travels just before reaching Geneseo. Cousin Carl [Carl Chamberlin, a relative from Ellen's side of the family] met us in his horse auto, and we had a fine ride in. Cousin Addie [Addie Paul, from Ellen's side of the family. Addie and Carl are cousins to each other and also to Ellen. Addie is 55 years old in 1921 and Carl is 46.] didn't just know how to take me; but after I had buttoned myself into an apron and peeled the peaches for supper she thought I was at least not harmful. I had her room and I have an unpleasant suspicion that she didn't undress all the time we were there. She reposed on the couch in the sitting room. Our diet was largely vegetable, Tilden salad and some meat. Cousin Carl seem to be fairly well, and eats well. We said all we could to make cousin Addie comfortable and happy. She came in twice to talk, and on the last night stayed quite late. I assured her that you and the Putnam people were always ready to come at a moments call. What would be best for both would be another trip away, separately if possible.

Sunday P.M. we two and Cousin Carl drove in to town and heard a fine lecture from their Chautauqua platform. Geneseo has the only independent chautauqua near them- not connected with a circuit. Mr. Rathborne was the speaker- one of the sons of one of Lincoln's near friends. He gave us the choice of hearing the story of Lincoln's last days as seen by his father or an address on "America's Opportunities". We chose the latter and were not sorry. It dealt with all the important problems foreign and domestic in an idealistic and patriotic way.

On Monday we rode in, shopped and I was vaccinated. Tuesday we took the train. But on Monday I nearly finished my coat and the belt I did Tues. A.M. It wasn't a very big job and I did it as well as I could. I shall always remember that visit from the melons we had there. The finest Honeydew melons you ever saw. We are taking seeds back with us, so you will have some. Cousin Addie to get one eaten cut it before supper and we ate it then. A rice pudding I hardly tasted in three successive meals because we had so much other stuff. We were glad we stopped, for it must have done her much good. Her trouble is anxiety over Cousin Carl's possible death. She isn't entirely over her change of life and that troubles her.

When we took the train on Tues. our party of five were all together. Miss Fenn Aunt Mary's new teacher is a new graduate of Vassar, a smart decided little body, very attractive yet not pretty. Miss Wannamaker you saw, then we three. We took lunch enough so we haven't had only two meals on a diner. Miss Wannamaker and I bunked together the first night. At about 12 yesterday, Wednesday, we stopped in the midst of the limitless fields of Kansas. A freight had been wrecked there and we waited an hour for it to be cleared away. When we reached Colorado Springs we found that the heavy rains they have been having around here had washed out the bed of the road so that no trains could run. That meant all night there. So we got a hotel and secured rooms, then took auto and started for the Garden of the Gods. You went there on your way out 27 years ago. The air was so clear we couldn't measure distance at all. One of the stones we saw looked so we could easily touch its top. When Father stood by it, he couldn't reach the top. The entrance gates, two huge jagged rocks very thin from front the back, one a brick red as are many rocks there. All thru the garden the rocks were washed so as to form the shapes of animals. There was a lion in a white deposit on one cliff, the seal and bear on another, kissing camels, the toads and mushrooms, the sleeping Indian, and many others. In one place there was a pueblo-like house built into a cliff called the Hidden Inn. Another curio shop contained a petrified Indian, very like the prehistoric men. He was wonderfully clear and outlined.

At the end of that park we debated as to rising at 2 A.M. for an auto ride to Pike's Peak and a sunrise for $6 apiece, or going on the Manitou Mt. and the Cave of the Winds for $8 the party. We took the latter, and saw first a large curio shop where they had a well preserved Indian Mummy. In the basement we drank from a natural soda spring. I didn't care for it any more than for soda water like which it is.

From there we went on up a one way very narrow gorge with rock formations in strata like Ausable Chasm and caves and holes. You can go by burros if you wish, and they had a lot of the dear little animals for hire. After the Williams gorge we climbed a steep zig-zag road to the top. A shower caught us halfway up.

The Cave of the Winds is a large natural cave like Mammoth Cave, Ky. Underground water has washed it out and there are the ribbon formations, stalactites, from the ceiling, stalagmites from the bottom, and crystals like star fish or chestnut burrs and frost. Three levels were there and they had the cave lighted to bring out the reds, greys, blues, greens etc. in the walk. Crystalline deposits in places had been rubbed so smooth by tourists they looked like marble. Some parts were still forming. Others were fixed. It is wonderful what water and chemicals can do. No water was in the cave but what was slowly dropping, the name Cave of the Winds came from the fact that at one time the wind blew a gale thru the cave thru a hole thru which two little boys discovered the cave. It is now stopped up. One room in the bridal chamber where several couples have been married on the novelty of it. One other place all unmarried women have left hairpins of all types-guaranteed marriage in a year. That is the old maid's kitchen. We walked $\frac{3}{4}$ a mile thru the cave. Huge!

Coming down, we turned at least ten hairpin curves, with the road running in parallel zig zag down the hill.

After a fine sleep the sun rise this A.M. woke us at 5 with a wonderful pink, color all over the huge jagged range in which Pike's Peak stands. We can always see this in the city.

There were lots of Indians, negroes, and mixed people there. It was the last day of a ranch Wild West meet and cowboys and guests were everywhere.

The air is lovely. Now we are resting in a park near Pueblo which is not an attractive city, for our train. We tried to go by another to get the scenery and see Salt Lake City. But there were no berths, so we got off here. Miss Armstrong was on and we saw her a few minutes. All the rest are sleeping, so I guess I will. Wish you were along! Health and happiness to all. Very lovingly, Phebe.

[Chautauqua- "The name 'Chautauqua' represented first a lake and a town in western New York State; then, an institution with religious and educational meetings there; then, the extension of cultural influences to a large number of people who spent vacations at Chautauqua, taking courses of study and listening to addresses and musical recitals, and then continued their study throughout the year in their own communities by correspondence and reading circles. Local 'Chautauquas' have successfully emulated the original on a lesser scale in a number of other places. More recently [1927] 'Chautauqua' has become the institutional name of many circuits of tent meetings throughout the country which bring to each town speakers and plays and musicians and magicians for programs of a week or less. Of that period each day's program is different, with the first day's 'talent' moving on to illuminate or entertain the first-day audience of the next town on the circuit, while the second day's performers come on from the preceding town to take their places." This has made it seem a carnival, but "Nevertheless the programs of the better circuits have been a real boon to the serious-minded members of Chautauqua communities who would other wise have had access to no such advantages."

Dear Ellen, Marjorie and Kathleen:-

We are sort of "inching along" toward San Francisco. Everything went as planned at Geneseo. I think Phebe and I did both Carl and Addie good by stopping off with them for three days. Carl has gained nine pounds since last February. I suppose that says a good deal about his condition. Phebe and I and Carl did most of the dish washing and Carl prepared most of his own meals, and a good deal of the meals for the rest of us. He met us at the depot and took us into the Chautauqua Sunday afternoon and into town Monday afternoon and to the train Tuesday afternoon where we found Mary, Miss Wannamaker and Miss Fenn.

Last evening-or rather yesterday afternoon we reached Colorado Springs at a little after three. A freight car jumped the track as we came up to it about 11:00 a.m. We waited an hour for them to clear the track. When we tried to get our places on the train that left or was scheduled to leave at 6:38, we found that a wash out had taken place the day before near Grand Junction. The same train we were on had tried to cross the day before and had fallen thru a bridge. The engineer and a passenger were killed and 50+ were injured. Our train was "annulled" at Colorado Springs. So we had to go to a Hotel for the night. We were told one might go on at 11:58 a.m. today. We got on the train but found it overflowing and had to get off here. We will wait till 8:10 this evening to go on on the same train we left last evening. This will make us just one day late into San Francisco.

Yesterday afternoon we took in the "Garden of the Gods". Mama will remember seeing this twenty seven years ago, and the "Cave of the Winds". This is a cave 7000 ft. above sea level, and with curious formations of stalactites and stalagmites- the whole cave is lit with electricity. The drive up the winding steep road and down the spiral roadway- ten sharp curves was most interesting. I am afraid Mama would not have enjoyed it all. The Garden of the Gods has changed only in that people go to see it in autos instead of carriages as we did 27 years ago.

We got to bed early last night and had a long night of good rest. Our rooms looked out at Pike's Peak. The taxi driver wanted to take us up to Pikes Peak starting at 2 a.m. today and getting back at 7:30 but we did not go.

Pueblo is a large city of 43000+ but nothing of interest here. Phebe and I are writing while the other three are resting on the ground in the Park. The weather warms us at noon and in the afternoon but is cool at night. Cloud bursts are frequent all about here this year. At Pueblo the flood a few weeks ago did much damage. Coming in on the train we saw several small houses lying on their sides or on their roofs and one big steam boiler turned over. A family with a blind man and two women and two little children sat in their tent near the railroad, - they had lost all.

Dr. Barnard had not sent in his bill for the last work he did me. I hope he will not think I skipped off. I told him I would settle it when Phebe and I had finished. She paid for her work. Will you ask him how much mine was and pay it?

They are putting in a macadam road [small stones bound with tar or asphalt] from Geneseo to Davenport- right by Addies house so they will not worry about mud hereafter. The road is now closed and we had to go west up to the corner and follow around two sides of their farm to get to town. It was so wet that they could not work on the road while we were there.

Here's love to Kathleen and love to Marjorie and love to Mama

Denver and Rio Grande Rail Road
Near Grand Junction, Colo.
August 26, 1921

Mrs. Cyrus Dretcher
Prospect St.
Shelton
Conn.

My dear Mrs. Dretcher:-

While at my father's in July my sister Elizabeth gave me $25.00 from the Kings Daughters for the Christian work on Sang Gaing at Foochow. I was there for the Christmas exercises one year ago last Christmas= 1919, and just before I left Foochow= the last of June 1920 I was there. I could not help contrasting the school as I saw it then with what it was ten and more years ago. Then there were thirty or forty boys-possible one or two girls but I think none,- the teacher was like most of the mission day school teachers of those days,- a Christian of the old Chinese type of teacher who taught the Chinese Classics, the Chinese Bible and the Sunday School lesson.

A few years ago- about 1914 I put a graduate of Foochow College in charge, and in 1919 the school and the work had so grown that I sent over another graduate of Foochow College to help the first one. The two are working together well. In 1919 the first teacher was married. So there are now three Christian workers there. The people number about 75, with ten or more girls. Boys from other places in the country have asked to come and there were four boarders in 1920.

The pupils still study the Chinese Classics, but in addition they are doing sums in Arithmetic with chalk on a blackboard and are studying Geography and learning to sing,- and as one of the teachers knows a little English he is teaching the pupils a little. They study the Bible and the Sunday School lesson,- but not entirely by memorizing as former. They think for themselves.

Educationally the biggest contrast in this school of today with the one of ten and fifteen years ago is this. Then most of the pupils come for one or two or perhaps three years and left. Now each year finds three or four graduating from the four years course and some of them going on to higher schools= High Schools or Junior High Schools for further study. To those who have been instrumental in raising the standard for these schools. This desire on the part of the pupils to stay and graduate is very encouraging. It spells success. A graduate never forgets his Alma Mater, and is fitted to do something- even if he does not go on to a higher school.

Even more gratifying is the fact that some of the older pupils are learning Christians and uniting with the church. They have an Endeavor Society and the boys of 12 and 13 years conduct their own meetings.

When you began giving to this work your money was sufficient to meet the needs. But as the school grew and as the standard was raised it required much more money. For the past four years I have put into Sang Gaing from $100. to $112. mex. For the past four years I have put into Sang Gaing from $100 to $112 mex.= silver. Ordinarily that means from $50 to $56 gold. Until 1920 a man in Kansas City, Mo. has sent me enough to keep the work going with your gift. The past year he has not sent as much. But the work and the workers have so commended themselves to the mission that it is sure to go on.

As the quality of the workers become better the pupils also gave more, so that the pupils themselves are giving a little more than half the salaries of the two teachers- one of them married. I think you all know that this is the only Christian work carried on for the people on this small island in the Min river near Foochow. And I am sure you will pray often for the teachers and for the boys and girls.

Grand Junction, Colorado is a very important place just now. Two days ago there was a cloud burst a little east of here. The west bound train on the Denver and Rio Grande R.R.- the train that corresponds to the one we are on, only one day earlier went thru a bridge that the flood had weakened. The engineer and one passenger were killed and 52 passengers were injured- not seriously. All these passengers are here at Grand Junction,- four more trains from the East are held up here,- and these are long trains- one of 14 cars, so you see there is a crowd here. We passed the wreck this morning over the temporary bridge. Because of the wreck we had to stay one night in Colorado Springs.

Last night other heavy rains fell and other bridges have been weakened, so we are still here- but the promise to start us out to night.

With thanks to the Kings Daughters for their gift and interest in the work on Sang Gaing.

I am Very Sincerely and Cordially Yours
Willard L. Beard

P.S. Lest any one showed fear for our safety- Mary, my sister and Phebe my daughter are with me- I will just add that this wreck has made the railroad men extra careful.

Dear folks at Home,-

Here we are at 4 p.m. all safely at Leolyn's. We saw danger all right, but God has brought us safely all the way with us inconvenience- except the thought of delay. We have been quite comfortable- in fact the breaking of the journey has kept us from feeling tired of travel. At Ogden we went to the movies. The longest single stretch we have had was from Ogden- San Francisco- Sat night 11:45- Monday morning 8:10.

We got breakfast this morning- went to the Board office, found a whole lot of others come in at the same time= hired a taxi and I took 8 girls to the Chinese Consulate then to the Japanese Consul then to the Income Revenue office then to the S.S. office. It took us just two hours and cost us $6.00 or 66 2/3 cents each, and no hopping trolleys and doging across streets.

I have 12 R.I Red chicks somewhere here for me to take to China. Crate and all 60 lbs.

There are 24 A. B'd Missionaries sailing on the "Golden State." A luncheon is arranged for us at the 1st Church here. 173 are or were to sit down- more may be added. I understand Dr. Kelsey has sent a wireless to Honolulu that we are coming.

Leolyn is a fine young lady- a month older than Marjorie.- I did not know her- and Gwendolin and Elaine are fine healthy girls and the twins are contented healthy and happy- a fine family.

Our steamer is to sail Wed. at 2 p.m. We are in fine condition- not tired at all from the trip across the continent.

My brief case is a joy forever. Thank you Father for the gift you sent by Mary.

Very lovingly to all from us three

Will

Dear Ellen-

This is a last word before leaving the home land again. God has been very good to us all the way across the continent, and has brought us here in safety, has given us friends all along the way, and yesterday 17-18 outgoing missionaries of the Am. B'd with 7 or 8 children were bunked by people of the First Congregational Church here. It was a very interesting and pleasant time. The pastors from several churches in near cities were also here- Dr. VanHorn was here.

I saw my chickens yesterday. They were 12 fine looking birds.

We have lunch on board today at 1 p.m. and are to sail at 2:00 p.m.

May god be very real and dear to you and may you have his guidance in everything. May his place be yours.

I love you

Will.

Here love to Marjorie and Kathleen and to Gould when he comes home and to Geraldine and Dorothy when they come

Father

Dear Ellen;

As the last letter- the one containing the Passenger List- told you we left the dock at San Francisco at 2 pm Wed. Aug 8! but merely steamed out into the Bay and anchored with engine trouble! I hope the Passenger List got off with the Pilot boat all right Friday morning. We started at 5:57 a.m. Friday morning and went 99 miles up to noon and 412 from yesterday noon until today noon. The sea is, and has been very calm. Phebe and I have taken refreshments whenever they have been offered and I believe Phebe has called for something in the morning before getting up. Mary [Willard's sister Mary is also going back to China] has not been so fortunate, but she is up now and was at lunch all right.

The Stanley family and I occupy two rooms with a bath between. Mr. or rather Dr. Stanley and Mrs. Stanley and Billie are in one room and John, Alfred and I in the other. The rooms are fine large ones with two beds and a couch in each- no berths. Then there is a table, two wardrobes, two dressers and a washbowl in each room. This makes it very convenient.

We are very comfortably situated. The food is as good as on any steamer I ever traveled on and the service is good. The companions are good. Stanleys, Hugh Hubbard's family- and three Eltrichs, Rev. Mr. Nichols of St. John's Shanghai, Mr. Taylor whom we met in Oberlin, Y.M.C.A. Harvey and his family: are old acquaintances. Miss Fenn has for her room mate (in the room you and I were to have had) Miss Eltrich, Miss Huggins is also here = of our N.C. [probably North China] mission. There are 18 of our Board on board and 22 of the Christian Mission, several Presbyterians and some Baptists-some 30 more in all. Charlie Storrs and family are here also.

Tuesday Sept 6. I have learned since writing the above that there are 180 passengers of whom 120 are missionaries.

Your package was given me the day after we started by Mrs. Storrs. Thank you for the remembrance and for all the sentiment it brings. I shall carry it all the time, - as I do the locket you sent me when I was out alone before. Will you tell Geraldine that I found a 1922 diary in Colorado Springs- just what I wanted so I bought it. She will not need to get me one this year. The collars and the pen cap came all right. I am writing with that pen now.

We thought of Geraldine and Dorothy yesterday and spoke of how busy they were packing and getting ready to leave Silver Bay. I hope the summer brought to Dot as much pleasure and strength as did the summer of 1920 and that Geraldine got as much out of it as Dorothy did, and now they will have a few days with Aunt Etta and then a few days at home with you and the girlies and then College work begins. Here's wishing both of them a happy term and a successful term.

Dr. Kinnear is just about leaving and the Partridges are your neighbors now. I wonder if Monnie's job will continue during school time.

This is an oil burning ship. Gould could be Chief Engineer on her. They tell us that our delay was due to inefficiency of those in charge- Government owned and graft and lack of discipline.

Phebe is a good mixer- people like her. I'm proud to be her father. You would be proud to be her mother on board.

We are getting South where it is warmer but there is a fresh breeze and the electric fans in all parts of the ship make it comfortable. The bathing pool was put up this morning. But I have enjoyed the salt water bath each morning with the fresh water cool spray to wash the salt off. Phebe and Mary do not have the tub in their bathroom.

My next will be sent from Yokohama I suppose.

Kiss Marjorie and Kathleen for Papa

Lovingly

Will

Please give the enclosed testimonial to Mr. Lau. Tell both the boys I forgot how to spell their Mandarin names.

Third Day out. Sept. 4, 1921.

Dear Ones at Home,

I suppose you want to know what kind of sailors we all are. Contrary to expectations Willard has been on deck all the time. Apparently without a qualm. Phebe and Miss Fenn have been on deck but not quite so happy. Miss Wanamaker made some hasty retreats from the dining room but took no pity on the poor hungry fishes. So you see it was up to me to look after them. The first day I gave up to that, see to the fishes. If only the steamer had the habit of frequent stops as our train had, it would have suited me finely. Even half an hour of quiet would have been sufficient.

This has been a beautiful day. We had service this morning at 11. Mr. Nichols, and Episcopal missionary, and Mr. (no Dr.) Stanley had the service. The only drawback was that we missed morning soup and crackers by attending.

We have 180 first class passengers, or, as someone put it 60 passengers and 120 missionaries. How is that for a chartered ship? A Mr. Tappen who went out on the Mongolia with us in 1914 is on board with his bride. The Stanley family, The Hubbard family, the Storrs, several young ladies, either new or returning, and our party were a very good nucleus for friends.

Willard interrupted here to take me to tea. He, Phebe, and I made up the group today. Mr. and Mrs. Storrs joined us with their two children. We have been walking the deck since. Would not you like to have to get exercise by deck sports or walking the deck? Here one longs for some real work. Yes, fixing vegetables for canning would be most welcome as a change.

Fourth Day. Last evening we had a very successful song service if one may judge from attendance. Mr. Hamilton of the Christian mission played for us, and one of the new men of the same mission acted as leader. Again the room was full and the singing was good. Willard sat in the chair and asked for desired hymns.

Today all the officers are out in white. They look very fine and cool. Our rugs are relegated to the use of cushions and coats are left below. Flying fishes are frequently reported. The sea is like glass so everyone is up. Only a very few continue to look wan and white.

Phebe and Cleora Wannamaker have washed their hair and are on the upper deck to finish the drying. They used the electick fan to start the process. I am going to be extravagant and have mine done at the barber shop after lunch. It is so very dirty I despaired of doing it myself.

Two cousins of Miss Bostwick are on board. Also there are two ladies who knew Miss Parsons and her people, at Ohio Wesleyan.

Gould wrote a steamer letter for each one of us. He is not going to Oberlin between terms as he has a job. Ellen was hoping he would as it was lonesome with Will and Phebe gone. I suppose the girls from Silver Bay would soon be there to help out.

On my way across the continent I gathered baggage. At Oberlin a Chinese asked me to take a folding camera to a friend. At San Francisco, Mr. Bostwick added two small packages and a book. I have read the book, "Sister Sue" already. Willard is so deep in "Main Street" that I have been unable to drag him away for any game this morning.

We have as fellow passengers the new ambassador to Japan, Mr. Warren. He is accompanied by his wife and three sons. His secretary, a tutor for the boys, and a governess for the youngest complete the party. He sits and reads books on the Orient most of the time. At table they all join in the conversation, even the eight or nine year old.

There are several Coronas on board and one small machine not a corona. It folds but not in the same way. So far I have used mine in my stateroom. It might disturb my neighbors on deck.

We get an extra meal on this ship. At ten o'clock apples and oranges are brought around. I call it the best meal of the day. Such oranges I have not seen since California days, big and yellow.

Phebe will continue while I go for a shampoo.

This is the first time in a long while that I have used a typewriter. For the last three days letters have grown slowly. Now that we are so near Honolulu we are getting them ready to mail there.

Two of us girls washed our hair before lunch and after drying it before the electric fan in our cabins finished the process on the upper deck in the sun. Just now we are seeing a good many flying fishes. At first I thot they were birds for they do look like swallows.

Today in honor of the approach to warmer regions all the officers came out in white duck suits. They do look very neat and cool.

For some reason I am forgetting my capitals. This has been fun to use the machine and now I think I'll use the pen on some other letters. Aunt Mary will continue when she returns with clean hair!

Continued- My hair feels fine after its washing, but I will probably wash it myself next time because it is too expensive to have it done. Just think, $1.50 for a simple shampoo. Never mind, she got her moneys worth of dirt I am sure. I fairly feel light headed.

The Edith Wherry who wrote the book Miss Brewster gave me, is the daughter of old Dr. Wherry of the Presbyterian mission of Peking. Miss Fenn knew her. It is the book which Mrs. Ritchie loaned to me first. Miss Brewster told me on that last call that she had not let Mrs. R. give it, because she felt her unable to do so. Miss B. evidently paid her for it.

Thanks for sending the bathing cap. I thought to need it for our private shower but do not. It is the style with six sprays, but the two top ones do not work so our heads are not in any danger.

My poison responded to my drastic treatment and died. Only small places which are skinning give evidence of its former presence.

When we went for our steamer reservations several people found no such numbers as their tickets showed. The 11 days had been used to take out nearly half the staterooms. There were many very small inside rooms and the passengers complained so of the lack of air that it was thought best to remodel before another trip. I can feel with them because the hairdressing room is one of the old inside rooms and I surely would hate to sleep in one of them all the way across. Most of those who were thus deprived of space have dandy big rooms on the upper deck. At the office, two girls were asked if they would pay $160 extra to be moved up. They said, "No", but they got the room just the same. Willard is up there too.

I am going on deck now and correct this. You will see evidence of much change.

Lots of love to you all

Mary.

Dear Phebe-

Mary and Phebe K. have announced that each has written you and I may put in a letter also. Of course they have told you of our very pleasant, tho brief visit at Leolyns. I was greatly and very pleasantly surprised at the great change in her whom we used to call "little Leolyn". She is taller than Phebe and heavier. She is a very well behaved, loving, lovable girl and very efficient in housekeeping. I visited with her Monday afternoon- a week ago tonight while she fixed potatoes- both white and sweet, and put them into the oven to bake. She washed and dried dishes= changed dishes between courses etc. etc. quietly and efficiently. I am proud of her.

It was the first time I really came to know Mr. Morgan and I like him. Gwendolyn and Elaine are sweet loving, lovable, little girls and the twins model babies. - The bell for dinner has rung and I suppose I had better go.

Tuesday afternoon= I was much interested in seeing the Unitarian Theol School. We learned that the Faculty consisted of two Professors- Mr. Morgan and one other man. There are two class rooms- each as large as our bath room at Century Farm- maybe a trifle larger. They are however building a new Library and have ground on which to erect other buildings. They are well located right near the big University- with its 10000 students.

I might spin out pages describing our fellow passengers. But I'll spare you. There [are] 180 of us, 120 "Church people"- mostly missionaries. Being an unattached male I am tucked in with two boys of Dr. Chas. A. Stanley of N. China= I'm not finding any fault tho. We have real rooms with wardrobes, dressers, wash stands, beds- not berths- and a fully equipped private bath room for each two rooms. The clock is turned back over half an hour each night so our rest time is long. The sky has been clear and peaceful and the sea the same ever since we started. This makes the cook work.

My 12 R.I. Reds are thriving on rice, cabbage, onions and left over bread. They have for companions a little puppy and a great large grey hound.

We think of you all often and much. You certainly have interest in China. Very lovingly to you all
Will.

I miss the good times I had this spring and summer while shaving[?] in the kitchen as the maid was getting breakfast.

Tuesday Sept. 6. 2:30 p.m. 1921

Dear Elizabeth-

That was an exceptionally good letter that met me in San Francisco from you as I got on the "Golden State" last were Wed. for some of its philosophy I shall preserve it with a very few that I have saved during the past years.

We had our troubles crossing the continent and getting out of San Francisco harbor but all has gone perfectly since, as far as we know. We are making a little better than 17 miles an hour. The sea is calm. The ship steady. The company congenial, the food plentiful and good and our appetites periodically recurrent. In the evening the sky sparkles with stars. The sea sparkles with phosphorescence and the four days old moon promises lovely nights.

It is hard to realize at times that we are on the water. Sitting in a long easy steamer chair, half reclining looking at moving pictures is very different from our = Ellen's and my experience 27 years ago when we first crossed. Travel on this little lake has undergone tremendous changes.

We should be in Honolulu early tomorrow a.m. It was whispered that Dr. Kelsey, Am B'd Sec'y in S.L. had sent a wireless ahead to the people in Honolulu telling them that 18 Am. B'd missionaries with 8 children were on the "Golden State". So we may have a time of it there. You know Honolulu is owned by the children and grandchildren of Am. B'd missionaries.

It's great to have a daughter and a sister along, - much more like real life than going all alone as I did 9 years ago. The other two members of our party, Miss Wannamaker and Miss Fenn, and we have added another= Miss Lanktree, going to Foochow for Ing Tai= are lively ones- Miss Lanktree is getting initiated. We wrote you, I think, that our Pullman conductor declared to a friend that was looking us up that he had no missionaries on his car- "no one that looked like a missionary." I guess we are keeping up the reputation.

How those few weeks in July on the farm stand out in my mind. The hours on the mowing machine- the hay wagon and then the spin in the overland at the close of the day- and the quiet talks in the sitting room or elsewhere and specially the family reunions on the front porch Sunday afternoons. What a lot of good times God has allowed us to have !! Very lovingly Will

One day from (before)
Honolulu.

Dearest Mother,

You certainly come next, in my line, for I intended to write you yesterday in congratulations of your twenty-seventh wedding anniversary. Mrs. John B. Suietto has a letter just finished from me. And as there is only today left to write letters, we are all at work hard.

Father has probably told you more or less about our trip so far. We feared you might see the news of the washouts and worry about their being baneful to us. It only meant that we had the beautiful trip to the Garden of the Gods, and the Cave of the Winds; were delayed for two days in reading San Francisco, had an eight-hour wait in the park a few minutes by trolley from the station in Pueblo, and waited from six to eight hours at Woodside for a track to be laid. At Pueblo we saw the wreck of the train that first crossed the washout- the baggage, mail, date card either on end or side and ?? cushions scattered all about. The engine had run itself far into the ground, nearly half buried in the sand at the roadside. Then at Woodside we saw, the ends of the ties of the old track were just barely visible above the muddy water of the stream around which we crawled on a new track that was being watched even as we crossed it by the men who had built it. At Ogden we girls took Father to a movie, where there was a wild west show; and a funny and some fine current events pictures. I was very sorry not to be able to go into the Tabernacle and hear the organ.

The process of getting our passports was really an experience. At the board offices we found nearly all the outgoing missionaries and Mr. Hinman and Miss Blanchard. Then ten of us filed into an auto and went to the Japanese and Chinese Consulates for visas to the offices of the Internal Revenue office and the steamship agents for tickets. We found three agencies the Pacific Mail offices, Bennett's Travel Bureau which sold me mine, Cook's Agency that dealt in tickets. It took us almost two hours of waiting and working to get our rooms and tickets.

Aunt Leolyn has a very beautiful house and family. The twins are darling babies, the little boy as regular and perfect as can be, dark like his father. Pauline is as pink and white and fat as you could ask for a perfect baby, but she isn't quite so regular. Gwendolyn and Elaine took me all around the house, showed me everything, and told me all about their playhouse and the tiny taub in their back yard, and fed me blackberries. Leolyn thought they would tire me out, but I enjoyed it.

On Tuesday the new missionaries had a grand luncheon given them, and some spoke afterwards. It was a very pleasant occasion, and I thoroughly enjoyed it. At my right was Mrs. Nash the wife of the Dean of the Theological school in Berkeley and a self-satisfied woman- Dr. Nash is wonderfully consecrated, and he gave us the farewell from the church. One of his expressions in the fine address he gave was that we were "going out into the face of God"- such a beautiful, solemnizing expression, and one that is to be my watchword henceforth! When we finally had set sail, a little tug drew us about the harbor until dinner time. We waited and watched for the Golden Gate, till finally, we started from the middle of the harbor and, blowing our whistle joyously, sailed straight on the Gate. [She is only referring here to the entrance to the Pacific Ocean. The bridge spanning this "Golden Gate" was not built until the 1930's.] But it wasn't long before we slowly came back to the starting point, there to lie all that night, the next day and the following night. As a result we have been able to cool our engines, and go on increasing speed till now it is 17.3 K. an hour for yesterday.

For some reason I was not seasick. I took no medicine, and did nothing but eat when I was served and stay on deck. I've slept wonderfully, and eaten voluminously and am looking much better than I did when I left home.

We have met two ships every day but today since leaving on Sept 2. On the 3rd we met the "Wolverine State" and passed within three boat lengths. We gave flag signals and dipped our stern flags mutually on passing. Yesterday the "Buckeye State" passed just as close, and at night we saw another ship all alight. This morning the smoke of a ship was visible to the south east.

Two movies have graced our trip, neither of them high class, but "funny" as Miss Armstrong says tolerantly. The unique feature about them is that every once in a while, always just before the consummation of an exciting incident the film severs, and then is light followed by darkness for a season till the patch is made.

Last night we watched the Phosphorescence at the prow of the ship. I never saw it before come in great light flecked circles or wreathes or crescents. Sometimes these would be little bomb-explosions of light, and as the ship turned the water over in spray it could be all luminous with their light. Stars in the water and stars in the sky.

We have seen whales and flying fish. Our sunsets and cloud effects have been wonderful. I do nothing all day but eat, sleep, talk, walk, and play games when we can get them which is twice so far.

Before I forget I want to thank you just ever so much for all those things I left behind. The waist came in very handy already, for I have worn my green dress constantly for three days. It is very beautifully mended, and I am very glad of the iron rust remover. Thanks ever so much for the package.

As Father has probably told you the Ambassador to Japan and family and retinue are on board. They are an ideal family, and the little boys interest me greatly. They all went swimming in the pool today.

Tomorrow we land at Honolulu. I wonder what we'll do. Perhaps the Board has things arranged. For there was a wireless promised them from Dr. Kelsey.

There are other very nice and interesting people, especially a Mr. and Miss Gillies, an American N.Y. coffee merchant and his sister. He looks like a frog. Also like Washington Irving and is very nice. She is a stately lady, dressed in costume, coat, stockings, dress, hat all same color. She has cold blue eyes, but is very nice.

Give my love to the girls and Geraldine and Dot. More later.

Very much love,
Phebe.

Sept. 16, 1921

Dear Mother:-

Have been kept busy every minute of my stay here this vacation.

About two weeks ago my partner, Joachim Seilzer, and myself decided to take a chance and try to make more money than the usual 40 cents an hour paid for all college-men help about town. We lit upon the plan of pooling our little reserves and buying a couple of trucks and cart the baggage of the incoming students. This we did. Whereupon the Ann Arbor Taxi Company signed an agreement with the Railroad for the exclusive rights of soliciting for baggage on the station platform and on trains. We are meeting this by sending out 1000 circular letters to students asking them to give us the trade. We have got our names plastered up all over campus and our cards all around in the boarding and rooming houses so we don't look to be set back much. Anyhow I am getting good business experience as I am the one doing the engineering of this stunt. We intend to make it an all year affair. With about 11,000 students coming in and going out we ought to make it pay well.

I suppose Dot and Jerry will be pulling along home pretty quick now. I wish I could get home, but with this business I will be tied up until Xmas vacation.

Have you heard anything from Father or Phebe since they left for Frisco? Who have you got for house mates? When does Oberlin open session?

With love to all the family.

Your loving son,
Gould

[September 1921]

Dear folks at home:-

These are days full of promise but when I have to sit with folded hands in the midst of fifty of the finest children the world can produce it gets my nerves. The opening of school has been a farce as far as a faculty is concerned. Miss King is the only one on hand. I am not expected to do much teaching this year as there is so much to be supervised that it will take pretty nearly the entire time of the principal to make all things run efficiently and smoothly. We are expecting a Miss Harper from the Philippines but for some reason or other she has not arrived. Mary has never written a thing about what Miss Fenn is to teach, so I can't plan a thing for the work of the school and it is almost unbearable to have all the children here and nothing for them to do. I am getting organizations started as far as possible, and the children have been adorable. I am afraid of homesickness and mischief creeping in during these days of enforced idleness, so it takes all my time to plan for the moment and then I have the real work to plan for at the time we should be all settled in the year's work. I have been back at work ever since Aug. 1st. During August I had our servants put up a bushel and a half of tomatoes every other day, besides 250 lbs. of apples, a lot of grapes, and besides had all our furniture done over, floors oiled, and walls decorated. We have had to squeeze in ten more pupils by fixing a room in the attic and spilling over into Miss Huggin's house.

During August I had three friends from Japan with me and we went sight seeing two days out of every three. The weather was unusually cool so that we had a most enjoyable time. I would spend that third day with my workmen so that we did accomplish a remarkable amount of work. I just wish you could see the rows and rows of cans filled with all sorts of concoctions that are based on apples, tomatoes, grapes, and peaches.

We are to have fifty six pupils this term and two more are to enter in the middle of the year. We have eliminated some pupils who have not been helpful to the school and this present group is one that should do a great deal towards the realization of our ideals for the school. When (and if) we ever get a faculty, we should accomplish happy results in character and work. I realize I should be going home and hope I can get away soon. I don't want to leave until a few more things are settled, but think they will be during this year. Things seem to point toward our new building being a reality, and that Peking is coming to her senses about that school. It is an interesting fact that three members of that board are keeping their own children home this year because there was so much illness last year, and we already have two families from the Rockefeller in our school with the promise of another in the middle of the year.

Infantile paralysis [polio] is quite prevalent among the Chinese and there have been four cases among the foreigners, one child (in the Rockefeller compound) one young lady among the Salvation Army people, and two mothers in the American Board. Three of these cases took place at Peitaiho. It just means that I shall do my utmost to keep these children's resistance up to the highest mark. It will do no good to worry. Thanks be, we have a marvel of a matron in the dining-room with a cook in the kitchen to match, so I hope we can keep the children well. In my mind that is the most important part of our school life, for all else is based on what kind of health the children have. Crops are wonderful all through this part of China, and fruit plentiful and of good quality, so we should have the right things to eat. Our doctor's examinations tell us what we must look out for and our regulations in eating, exercise, and sleep help much to keep folks fit.

This year we have a faculty of seven full time teachers and three part time teachers. We have eighteen servants on our pay roll, so you see there are quite a few people to be managed- about eighty in all, counting the children. We have boarding, the garden, the school, teaching, commuting (week-ends), sight seeing, special speakers, and other things that have to be attended to which takes time and planning to get them done.

To day I am telegraphing to Mary to have the word in Shanghai ready when she arrives- we hope on Monday and we hope she may reach Peking on Wednesday night. I shall meet her with an auto and come right out to Tunghsien. The American Legation has secured a "pass" for me so that we can get the city gates opened to come out at night.

It has been some time since I have written, for the days have been so full and things have been so topsy-turvy until now. Mary will be your "steady" correspondent, and perhaps I may improve.

Mother's letter written on Aug. 16th reached me this morning.

Lovingly yours-

Flora Beard.

At Tokyo we went by auto all over the city, to the big university where we saw about 5000 people viewing a ball game between Univ. of Washington and Japan. Mr. Abe was there. We ended by one of the Jap. meals which we worked ourselves as I told you of doing a year ago. We were off the boat four or 3 AM till 10:00 PM. Tired!! Yesterday was rainy and rough. A good day to be still. With love Mary 6:30 AM Mon

My Dear Ones at Home,

I'll begin with today and progress backwards. To begin Phebe and I slept until the breakfast bell. Luckily there is no stigma attached to being late for meals. After breakfast I typed some songs which some of us were to sing tonight. At 10.00 a party of us went down into the engine rooms. We visited the dynamos which generate electricity to light us; the turbine engines; the boiler rooms; the refrigerator plant; the machine shop; the shaft which turns the propeller; and the engineers rooms. In the first boiler room the temperature was between 138 and 140 degrees Fahrenheit. In the second it was nearly 160. A few of the party went up one flight of stairs in the first room and the thermometer read 180. As each room had grown a little warmer we were, in a way, prepared for the intense heat. Our propeller is 16.6 feet across and sends us forward 17 feet with each rotation. The guide said the high ratio meant high efficiency. All the men in the engine rooms were Americans, or at least had taken out their first papers.

The Turkish bath necessitated a bath and clean up before luncheon. After luncheon we had a rehearsal of our songs. We were not through when a call came for Phebe and me to play shuffle-board. It was a tournament game so the call was not to be ignored. We played and won IE [mistype for 83] to 47 in the nine innings. That makes us champions for this trip.

A practice game and tea took all the time till it was necessary to dress for dinner. There was a musical farce written by a fellow passenger to be presented this evening. That means a rush for seats because there are never enough for all.

The hits were on the delay at San Francisco, and the large number of missionaries on board. A Mrs. McCullum did some clever acting and the best singing. Mr. Nichols as the Captain was also good. The joke is that both are of the missionary band. In the second act, the pirate called for some entertainment and brought on a soloist, the rag doll which won first prize at the fancy dress ball, a solo on a "Peruvian Goolash", and a silly song by a group of us. The strange instrument is ordinarily known as a bicycle pump. By keeping good time and going up or down with his notes Mr. Hubbard makes his tunes recognizable. But it is a scream, with the funny little shrieks and squeaks.

Yesterday noon we got all excited because word came that we were to meet the "Empire State" at noon. We watched and waited but no ship. She passed so far south we could not see her. She sent us a wireless that she had met a typhoon just out of Yokahama which had seriously delayed her. We got the edge of it yesterday afternoon and today.

Friday morning. It got so late that I decided to leave this in the machine and go to bed last night. Wednesday was a full day too. Phebe and I played off the first of our shuffle board matches and of course won or we would not have played the next day. The end of the typhoon made some of us like the quiet of our deck chairs. Phebe and several others spend an hour or more out on the prow where the waves dashed high. They were wet when they came in but their spirits were not at all damped.

Tuesday was the day of the baby show and childrens entertainment. There are fourteen babies on board. Mrs. Warren had had a large frame made at the carpenter shop and the parents posed the babies as they pleased. Two were in fancy crepe paper costumes and the others in some of their own clothes, or their birthday ones supplemented by a crepe sash for a cupie or only a pair of stork panties.

The childrens entertainment was the dramatization of some Mother Goose rhymes. They were very cunning.

Since we left Honolulu, Phebe and I with four others have been sleeping out on the top deck. We have great fun getting up there. There is only one staircase leading from the "A" deck to the promenade deck, unless we pass through the end of the steerage deck. The latter is full of sleeping men so we prefer to brave our fellow passengers. One night we met someone at every turn. Mr. Gillies, a very proper bachelor well chaperoned by a guardian sister, was the first. He wished us good luck. On the next landing sat a group of several men and women. They asked if we were having dress parade for the fancy dress ball the next night. As we went through the dining room we remarked that it almost seemed as though it were raining outside. When we reached the roof we were no longer in doubt. The canvas was only a sieve which partially limited the downpour on the deck. We of course gathered up our things and returned the way we had come. We met the same people and announced that "this was the real thing." Soaked! O no! Drowned, rather!

The afternoon of the childrens play the sea was like glass. That is said to be a weather breeder and I guess it was. It is a little rough now but I have my sea legs back and have just had two good games of shuffleboard.

I like Miss Fenn very much. She wears well, is full of life and a good sport. She has been on one of the committees and I get the best of reports as to her ability to produce ideas as well as to carry them out. As a small boy [said?] last night, she was fine.

There is a lady from Mills college on board. I met her only yesterday. She gets off at Yokahama, but will visit Peking later. She is out in the interest of the college. I hope she calls at the N.C.A.S. There are several others who are specially interested in missions, some with money and some who have access to it.

My pet baby on board is Henry Storrs. He is a little younger than Stephen. He talks but little but loves to try any word one suggests and has a most adorable smile. One poor babe has had a terrible time. His mother wants a good time so she got a little girl from the steerage to tend the child. He rebelled and wept so the mother had the girl bring him around to our deck. We had the wails all one day, then I could not stand it and took the baby. He was most grateful and cuddled and smiled adorably.

I hope for a letter from Flora at Yokahama and am going to send her one. Were it not for the baggage I should get off there and go overland. As we can not get a rebate on our ticket and the cost of travel is high I do not feel like putting the school to the extra expense.

We have eaten two of my boxes of candy only, so I may have some left to take to my destination.

One night on deck we had a wonderful rainbow by moonlight. It lasted a long time. The sunrises were worth the necessary early rising; as the boys had to have the deck to wash at six so they will be dry when we get out after eight.

We are to reach the next post office tomorrow. Probably we will be in port two days. Then two days in the inland sea, two days at Kobe, two en route for Shanghai and off for Peking as fast as we can.

Hope you are all well. We are.

With much love Mary

My dear Boy:-

Do you remember passing over these waters eleven years ago and watching the fishermen in their little sail boat, trying to catch fish and at the same time trying to keep out of the way of our leviathan of a ship? If so you know where we are now. And do you remember how you disgusted mama by saying that you were going to be a fisherman just like those men when you grew up? Well you have got a little beyond fishermen already, and you are still going.

As we were at lunch today we came very near having a serious accident. We were in the narrow channel just west of Moji. A small Japanese ship tried to pass us. The current was swift. A little farther on was a barge with some cars on her. The Japanese skip, to avoid sinking the barge, struck her nose into us and scraped our starboard side for nearly 100 feet, denting one of our plates in about 6 in., and cracking the panels in 121 state room. My room is 117. /117/119/121/ But as it was way above water line, the damage was not serious. It was close enough tho. One lady rushed up stairs after her baby and fainted on the landing. A man got on two life preservers.

Friday Sept 23

We reached Shanghai yesterday a.m. and got to the Missionary Home by noon day and baggage and chickens – all alive.

Aunt Mary was off for Nanking last night. Others of the Peking party left this morning. We will be together tonight and go on to Peking together. We docked about 6:30 yesterday morning. One family got off and caught the 9:30 am train for Peking. How's that for hustling?

Phebe is living over her days in China. It is interesting to her father to watch her. She even got up last night and chased rats. She is one fine girl.

May you have all success in your work this term

Very lovingly,
Father

[This typewritten letter, dated September 20, 1921, was written from a ship by Mary to the ones at home. They arrived in Yokohama, Japan and did some touring there and also in Tokyo and Kobe. They visited Mr. Abe Tso while in Tokyo. While approaching Kobe aboard ship they were hit by a Japanese steamer and sustained damage. Willard had to tend to one of his sick chickens while in Kobe. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Last day out, Sept. 20, 1921.

Dear Ones at home.

We had a wonderful day at Yokohama. Mr. Gresset, who with his family was on the steamer with me last year met the steamer. I went up to his home just for a short call and then met the rest of the party at the Sakurakgo station to go to Kamakura. We could not find an auto so we walked up to the Diabutzu. It was very interesting to stroll through the streets at leisure and gaze our fill at the shops. We were so hungry that we hunted up an eating place there in spite of the scarcity of language on our part. The menu was both in English and Japanese. One interesting item was "pouding", another, "chicken rice". There were several other omissions of that sort. We had some very good chicken and Spanish rice with tea to drink.

From there we took the train to Tokyo. There were just ten of us so we filled two motor cars. We drove all over the city. At the university we saw Mr. Abe. We had to call him out from a ball game between the Wachida boys and a team from Washington University. The Japs were ahead one point when we were there. We could look over the fence and see the crowd. One part of the city was having a celebration for its special shrine and the streets were decorated with lanterns and flags. At frequent intervals were small open theaters. The actors were dressed in long flowing robes and had wigs with hair to their knees and long bangs. Such faces! One man had a nose several inches long, another a beaked nose. All wore some grotesque mask. They were sparring with huge swords or merely going through strange gyrations. Occasionally we saw groups of children carrying small shrines, each striving to get the better place to hold on. There was one parade of grown men all in elaborate costumes, and one group of men carrying what looked like a coffin shrouded with a white cloth. That night we went to a Japanese restaurant and got a “kunabe”. That is the dinner one cooks for ones self. We had meat cut in very thin slices and one green vegetable besides the rice. It was good and we had huge appetites to add flavor. We got back to the boat at 10.00 P.M. and we were tired.

We had the roughest sea yet enroute to Kobe. It was very comfortable to sit still in our chairs. On the other hand there was much to see as we were passing islands continually. One looked at the scenery but did not read or write much.

At Kobe we walked about and spent money. Phebe got a tea set. The rest of us got lesser things but all spent considerable Yen. I got a silk waist for only 6 Yen. As a dollar changed for one Yen and two Sen that was cheap. I also got a cotton kimona for three Yen and a half. It is blue with chrysanthemums embroidered on it. We were so enamoured with the native food that we had another dinner. That time it was even better. They gave us more vegetables; onions a green food typical of the orient, something that looks like scallops, sliced mushrooms and the thin cut meat. We could not exchange a word, so nodded “yes” to every suggestion the little maid made. As a result we had two tall bottles of Lager Beer brought out. There is a new style in the feasts now. We were each given a raw egg, and supposed to dip the hot food in that before putting it on the rice. We did that properly, then put the extra egg in the pan and scramble it. The maids were a little amused but most courteous.

We went up to Kobe College to call. There are two Holyoke girls there and an Oberlin girl whom Phebe knew. We were fortunate in finding Miss DeForest there too.

Yesterday we came through the Inland Sea. It was beautiful. We got so near some of the islands it is a marvel we do not hit. At Kobe we took on a Japanese pilot to guide us through. At Moji, the end on the Inland Sea, we stopped without anchoring. Some of us had gone down to luncheon. Suddenly there was a bump and a rasping, grating sound. Of course we jumped from our chairs. A Japanese steamer had tried to pass too close and had hit us and scraped the whole length of our side. One woman fainted and one man donned two life preservers. We finished our lunch and got on deck as quickly as we could. The Straights were too narrow at that point to stop. Both ships steamed to a more roomy point then stopped. A launch came out to take the pilot off and the 1st Officer got into the launch and took a ride around to the wounded side. He shouted to the captain on the bridge that the scrape was too high to be dangerous but extended two thirds the length of the ship. In cabin 121 the side is so stove in that the woodwork is injured. We can see the scratch by leaning over the side so we knew even before the Officer made report that it was way above water line.

Miss Wannamaker has been taking the children from three to six for kindergarten every morning since the first two days out. The parents showed their appreciation by giving her a ten dollar bill the morning we were at Kobe. Another passenger gave her a tea set. I tell her I am going to learn a trade so I can earn my passage next time.

How the children have loved it! Another girl tried to help with the older ones but there was not the need and she was useful only to umpire a few deck sports.

We lost the Japanese Ambassador at Yokohama. The Secretary proved he was really human before they got off. He had held himself very much aloof from the dancing, card playing and gay times. The last day a bunch of us started a Virginia Reel on the deck. Our music was the clapping of our hands and we were having a regular frolic. We had an odd number and he happened along. Without any ado he offered himself to fill out. How he did whirl us!

I think I wrote we were sleeping out on deck. We kept it up until we reached Japan. There is no awning on the upper deck now, so we have to stay down. The first night it was terribly hot but last night it was not bad.

In Kobe harbor one of the chickens got sick so Willard had to spend a long time doctoring it. He thinks it got put too near the steam exhaust. Last night we had hard work telling which it was so it must be all right. The coolies struck for higher pay in the midst of unloading at Kobe and it took two hours to get them back to work. Hence we left at eleven instead of nine. A bunch of us stood on the top deck and watched the unloading then the putting together of the hatches, and tying down of the cranes. Afterward Miss Gillies invited us down to her room to eat candied fruits. Her brother opened up the tea set they were giving Miss Wannamaker so all the party could see it. We were in bed by two AM. How is that for a party of staid missionaries? Miss G. and her brother are on a trip to visit India especially. The delay cuts Peking out of their trip this time.

Phebe and I got ivory shoe horns with carved handles for prizes because we won out in shuffle board. Hers has a dragon and mine a phoenix.

There will be a party of sixteen of us to go up to Peking together. We can not tell when we start until we get there, but it will be either Thursday or Friday morning.

Miss Fenn is getting quite excited for it means home to her. She had a letter from her mother at Honolulu and again at Yokohama. I expected one at the latter place from Flora but did not get it. Miss Huggins had one from Alice who was at Tungchow with Flora, and going over to sleep with her nights. I expect Flora was there to oversee repairs. I wrote to Tunghsien from Yokohama hoping the letter would arrive before we do. From Shanghai I shall telegraph the date and hour of our arrival.

The Chinese have a new scheme where by we have to make out a declaration slip. We are all wondering if it means we have any duty to pay. I am taking a tea set to a lady in Shansi. It was purchased by one of the Kobe College teachers to be sent by the first messenger. I hope to get it through but can not be sure. If the new rule means duty on packages for others it will put a stop to the free and easy way of getting someone to carry packages around so much.

Did I write that I finally succeeded in getting a game of Rook at Oberlin? I have not yet opened it. We were so many that we could use up the extra time in talk or sleeping. On the steamer I played "500" one night. The trouble is that games mean going in side as the breeze is so strong out side. I really prefer more activity on shipboard. The deck tennis is real exercise, and requires a bath and redressing each time.

Yesterday afternoon Phebe and I did a large share of our packing so we are not so rushed as those who left it all till the last minute. My trunk was so broken when it got here that I am taking my Corona out to lighten it. Now that we are getting to the land of coolies I am not so desirous to keeping a limited amount of handbaggage. I have declared six pieces so you know I have added some. The packages for others are responsible.

We have made a record trip for speed in spite of the fact that three of the four blowers to supply oxygen to the engines broke. For two days we made 17.5 or 17.9 knots an hour. Our greatest run was 428 miles in a little over 23 hours. At Yokohama we got new blowers so have speeded up again. For a little we were making only 16.2 knots.

We have had such a fine trip and such a good time that we are all going to be sorry to have it end. Then too there are the friends one makes and wonders if they will ever see again.

With lots of love

Mary.

[Added in Willard's handwriting:]

Dear folks at Century farm:

Mary says I may add a few words. She has doubtless told you all about the journey- continued clear skies- smooth sea-pleasant and congenial companions- polite Captain and officers and crew- good food well served and good service, a very pleasant day in Tokio- saw Mr. Abe Tso (my classmate in Hartford) at a base ball game with 10,000 spectators- another good day in Kobe- got bumped by a Japanese steamer in Moji- due to be in Shanghai tomorrow morning.

The bell for lunch is ringing, so here's good bye and love to all-

Will

Nearing Shanghai
Sept. 21, 1921

Dear Gould,

During this last week the girls have started their college work, and you have been preparing to do the same in the next week. I hope that this year will grow easier for you as the weeks go by, and that you may find the work practical.

Your steamer letter was very interesting. Your ambition relative to Father and Mother is very fine and I'm glad there is someone in the family who can do it. Daniel wrote me a letter on the same paper as one to Father and one to Aunt Mary, a very kind one and an invitation to write him, which I shall not fail to do. He was an inspiration to me in my sixth grade year of teaching!

As Father has told you we have had a wonderful voyage. It has really been too smooth for excitement, but I have not had the heart to wish for rougher weather when just a swell had put some of the ladies miserable to bed. Three times we went bathing in their dinky little tank that slopped over at every roll and replenished the sea and swamped the steerage deck. One afternoon five of us played puss in the corner, and such duckings as we gave each other!

On the last night out came the Captain's dinner at which the Captain was conspicuously about since we reached Yokahama at 9 P.M. Like the other two big dinners we had, we were given balloons to blow up and bonbons. The saloon was decorated with flags and lanterns and all renewed their youth with the playthings. The Ambassador's table and the dignified people all around the Stanley's included, blew up their balloons just to break them and we all played ball with them. Explosions were quite in order and frequent!

The night before this some of the passengers gave a musical comedy written by two of the men on board, and it was very good. I have the airs to some of the choruses. We as a group had to sing a song when a pirate had taken the ship and ordered an entertainment. We sang this:

Some folks jump up and down all night,
And d-a-n-c-e,
And then they go to church to show
This brand new h-a-t.
They hide their fare beneath the clouds
Of p-a-i-n-t,
And then they laugh at us
Because we're s-a-v-e-d.
Allelulia.
G-l-o-r-y to know I'm f-r-double-e,
I'm h-a-p-p-y- to know I'm f-r-double-e,
Once I was b-o-u-n-d- in the chains of s-i-n,
But v-i-c-t-o-r-y to know there's peace within!

Isn't that rich? Miss Wannamaker taught us that!

At Yokahama we did a little buying, but went to the Daibutsu, at Kamakura. After getting souvenirs and cards we got chocolate made in Japan! Little did I ever dream of doing that! For dinner we went to a foreign looking restaurant behind a bamboo fence where the woman spoke no English. With the help of charades and the men, and catching words that we used with motioning we got a very good dinner of rice and chicken served with chopsticks. Some of us rode to the station in rickshas and some walked.

From there we went to Tokyo. Three of us were thirsty so in great thotfulness I piloted them up to the dining room above the waiting room of the station and we ordered drinks. We waited and waited, and finally got something thin with ice but no ice cream in it for soda. When we had it about half gone some cakes came on, and then some one called us to go for an auto ride around the city. So we swallowed the rest whole and asked for our bill. The Jap that came said "Krank you very much" as he scattered off to get it. You can't imagine our chagrin to find that it cost us 1.00 for the drink and $.50 for cakes!

We had a fine ride thru many of the streets of Tokyo, the horn honking all the way. We always turned to the left as in Canada.

It happened to be a festival day in a part of the city and the streets were decorated with gay paper lanterns and sprays of pink and white flowers. We passed troops of boys carrying paper temples with a gilded bird surmounting them, and men carrying cataphalts. On several of the street corners there were temporary stage with plays going on just such as we saw in China. The costumes were gay, the music was of drum and pipe and the action pantomime.

At Wasida University we had to go out to the ball field to find Prof. Iso a classmate of Father's. There was a big game on between Washington University at Seattle and Wasida, and the ten-thousand spectators were cheering in good American style. The score was ninth inning 1-0 at the time, and I have an idea Wasida won. Then we rode thru Hibaya Park, a lovely spot broad and well laid out, and passed a moat around one of the forts. After a call at a Y.M. and a Y.W. we went to a restaurant where we took off our shoes and had a "gunabi". The pretty maid brought in brass frying pans and lighted the gas plate in our low tables. Then after pouring in some sie in she put in meat in thin strips, onions and bean curd. After it was done, we dipped it into our raw egg and ate. The rice was awfully good. Three of the girls had never used chop sticks and they did very well.

We walked around in the stores for a time and they took what seemed a long ride back to Yokohama. From the train we took rickshas to the boat and it was a lovely ride, all of us together there, riding thru the dark silent streets in the moonlight with our silent coolies trotting ahead.

From there we came to Kobe over the roughest area so far. We had a long day there shopping and a gunabi dinner. I got a traset and a cut velvet picture, but the rest of the things couldn't find.

We went into the engine room one day and saw all the 56 burners that make the ship go. Only ten blowers were working so it was hot there, 140 degrees in the aft room 160 degrees in the fore. I went up onto a ladder where it was 180 degrees and I nearly burned up. We have a 16.5 ft. ?? screw, and we go about 17.5 knots an hour.

Tomorrow we dock at Shanghai. We hate to break up the party, but so it must be. We have about 10 people going to Foochow and we hope to get a boat out soon. Somehow I can't get it into my head that I'm almost there. I'm half thrilled over it, and then when I think of all that is expected of me I wonder! There will be many changes I know, but it won't be long before I shall be thrilled with seeing the old city again.

I wish you might have been with us. You would have enjoyed the trip so much and I thot of you when we went up onto the prow in the gale and stood wet in the spray of the dancing waves.

We have many interesting people on board, and they have been very nice to us missionaries.

As we went thru the straits at Moji Yesterday at the end of the Inland Sea a Jap. boat scraped against us and gouged our side a bit. I took several pictures which I hope will come out well.

All good wishes to you for this year. We'll both be working at a more or less new job, and we're both going to succeed!

Much love from

Phebe.

Sept. 27, 1921
Tunghsien, Chihli, China

Dear Ones at Home,

Today is the first day of school for us newcomers. We reached Peking Saturday night at eleven thirty. Flora, Mr. Fenn, Mrs. Fenn, Henry Fenn and Miss Bertha Reed were on the platform to meet us. The Fenns of course took charge of Martha. Miss Reed took Cleora. Flora and I went to Mrs. Josselyn's for the night. Every one was in bed so we crept in as silently as we could. It was too exciting to go to sleep at once and we talked for a long time. Breakfast was not till nine the next morning so we slept late.

I had missed a reception on Saturday afternoon (a Holyoke luncheon) and the joy of meeting the members of the educational commission. President Woolley is one of the members here. Flora went and had made an appointment for me to see Miss Woolley on Sunday morning at nine thirty so I did not linger long at breakfast.

Friday P.M.

This has been a busy week as you might guess. School had been going ten days when we arrived. Mrs. Martin had my Latin classes well started, perhaps better than I could have done. Miss King had the science class on its way. All I had to do was to review and find out they were all right. But! The poor girls in this house had had no bath schedule and some of them no bath. The high school pupils were happily perusing the subjects they desired, regardless of a scheme for their whole course. Only today have I gotten them straightened out. Flora had purposely left them for me as I had always done that when here.

Today I had to attend meetings of the Household league and of the T.A.A.A. Those A's mean Tunghsien American Athletic Association. The children made some very good changes in the athletic work the last year.

Last evening I had supper with Mrs. Martin. It was their night for waffles and ice cream. Trudy and Stratt were allowed to sit up in honor of my being there. Tonight both Flora and I are to have supper with the Hunters. Mrs. H. has the domestic science for the girls, and we will probably talk business.

We have four new young teachers. Miss King is a southerner with a delightful accent. Her young brother is one of the first year pupils. Miss Harper is a little older and has some experience. She helps in the high school work. Miss Young is the music teacher and is here only four days a week. We have 58 children in session and two more on the way. Nearly forty of these are in the high school.

To go back and finish the journey. We found Shanghai very full. Willard took the Foochow party to the Missionary Home. Mr. Stanley and the party for the north went to the Burlington hotel. That is very far out so we spend most of our time going out and back. I did go to see the American school. Rather than spend the night there seeing nothing, Cleora, Martha and I took the night train to Nanking and had the day there. We took a carriage for the day. In that, we went to Ginling College first, and received an invitation to return from lunch. The buildings are Chinese style with the courts and many scattered buildings. Two of the buildings are two storied the others only one. We attended chapel which was very formal with all the faculty on the platform. From there we drove to the south gate to see a Chinese school at the head of which is Miss Kellogg whom we met at Kuling. She was away so we saw nought. After lunch we visited the examination halls. The only ones now left in China are there. One groans to think of spending days on those tiny spaces. Over one thousand still stand and several rows have been pulled down. Evidently the other buildings are to be used for some kind of exhibit; for show cases were being built. Next we were off to find a shop to purchase some cookies and chocolate and then to another school. We were lucky and found Miss McCullum home so went all over the grounds.

At the college we added two to our party. The parents of one of the teachers was there and they were waiting for some one to travel with to the north. They are the most dependent people I ever saw, with no idea of what to do. It was like chaperoning two babes in the woods.

At Peking, we were met as I have told. When we got on the train for Tungchow we found Dr. Barton, and Mrs. and Dr. Young with their small boy. Dr. Barton was to give us a talk that afternoon at service. He told of the work of the commission to the Far East with which he was connected. It was very vivid. Also Flora and he talked American School at length. He had attended a meeting of the Rockefeller School committee and was posted on their attitude so wished to glean facts about us.

Alice Huggins was having a house party last week and I came in for supper the last night. Many had gone home so I did not meet the new people. It was nice to see old friends.

Sunday A.M. Mrs. Stelle returned last night and her welcome was worth returning for. The Wickes also arrived from PeiTaiHo. The older child has been ill with dysentery.

Last Sunday all the children were at the front gate to greet us. I may say to greet me. They sang the school song as we came through the gate and waved the school banner. Then I met the new teachers individually and the children collectively. Mrs. Martin and Trudy and Stratt, Mrs. Love with Junior and Betty were there too. Before night I had seen everyone on the compound including baby Ruth Martin. It was very thrilling to be the object of so much attention. Dr. Barton said laughingly that he felt honored to have a share in the royal welcome. The children were sorry it was Sunday because they could not give the school yell and shout. Luckily Miss Fenn stayed with her family in Peking till Monday noon so the yells only had to wait over a day. Mrs. Fenn came with her so she too had someone to share the ovation. We teachers went onto the platform while the children climbed on the walls to wave as the train came in then hastened to from lines at the gate to sing and yell. It is pretty to see the fence and wall draped with girls and boys and it gives a thrill to feel it is for oneself.

Yesterday Flora was in Peking and Dr. Love brought over to see the school Dr. Armitage of the Rockefeller. Also Dr. Smiley and his father Sir Walter Smiley to see the school. Dr. A. said he always had to answer the question of school facilities when he asked for recruits. The English school is very expensive for those children there even with the Rockefeller salaries. He spoke very enthusiastically of our plant.

Flora is greatly pleased with the eversharp pencil especially. It went into immediate use. She had had an "orphan" one that was broken so it needed careful usage. The slippers were also most gladly received as I knew they would be as hers wore out before I left for home. The names she needed too. Her sheets she says are getting low so the extra one will see her through. Now she says she will not leave before next June. She is not teaching at all but trying to get the records, the laundry, the plans for the new building, etc. up to date so as to leave everything ready for her successor to take up.

I have found surprisingly few changes. A tree gone, a new swing and extra flower bed, two new babies, one new single man for the Chinese academy, a new automobile road from the front gate (which few use as they prefer the old one), are the most conspicuous. The dining room is very full with five tables in one room and three in the other. That is not room enough when all are here so we have one in the hall too. Mrs. Gordon has charge of the kitchen and dining rooms only and keeps them right up to the scratch. We do not use them for any purpose but eating. Afternoon tea is a regular institution, but we have to be out of the diningroom by 4.45 to let the boys start setting the tables. Such care pleases me greatly but I note that it frets both Flora and Miss Bostwick. It means no sorting of laundry in the diningroom where the big tables are so handy to spread out the piles for each pupil. But there are no flies and a minimum of dust. Maybe Mrs. G. and Mr. Lund will get on my nerves later but not yet. I do hope my philosophy and psychology will stand me in good stead. I do not want to fret others nor let others fret me.

Yesterday we had word that President Woolley is to be in Peking until Oct. 10, so I wrote at once to see if the longer stay would enable her to visit Tunghsien. I understand part of her reason for staying longer is to see more of the place. We think we are worth at least a half day. Some of the educational commission were down this week but did not deign to look at the NCAS. Alice said she was glad for most people spend the major part of their time with us. As I think of it, she is right.

This morning I took up one of my oldtime pleasant tasks. I gathered the monthly roses and other flowers and arranged bouquets for church. The gardener has some fine asters, cosmos, snapdragons, snow-on-the-mountain and other things so I had a choice. The cosmos are very slow and only a few are yet out. We are to have some fine plants for the winter and this new man is already taking them up to get them started and used to the pots before they must go in the house.

I found everything O.K., even a bottle of toothpaste half used was on my washstand as though I had left the day before. Tomorrow I hope to get my pictures hung and then I will be settled.

Flora wonders why I did not get a typewriter with the elite type. Had I thought of it a month or so earlier I might have but I am thoroughly satisfied with this, so who cares! The school has a Corona so has Miss Bostwick. I suppose the idea is that I might have been distinctive with a different type.

It seems like a long time since a word from home but I know that a letter before this would have had little news as it would have followed my departure so closely. From every stop I sent a card at least and hope they got through all right. We had a letter from Willard yesterday. He and Phebe were still in Shanghai waiting for a boat.

I have just washed the last of boat and train dust off. Work had to come first, exercise next so a shampoo waited till Sunday morn. The tennis courts are in fine shape and all the new teachers play so I anticipate some good games. Alice Huggins and Mrs. Hunter also play.

Two days before we got here a thief got into the store room and took a new box of butter and one of crisco. The crisco tins had been soiled so had been washed and all labels removed. Evidently the thief realized their worthlessness for he left them a little way down the back road. F. and Mrs. G. have been on the warpath to seek the butter. On Friday Mrs. Ingram was down. She remarked on her joy in finding some two pound tins of butter in Peking early in the week. F. went up to the store at once and bought some of the cans. On searching she found more in a second place. As ordinarily these stores do not keep the two pound cans and can not tell a straight story of how they came to depart from their custom we are very certain it is our butter we are buying. If only we can find the man! As one of the servants left very suddenly on very slight pretext and a man of doubtful reputation was around the place the night of the theft we are inclined to think those two the guilty parties. The police of both Peking and Tunghsien are on the job.

My National Geographic Magazines are coming all right. I hope the Literary Digests start soon. Miss King is to have it till Nov. 1. If mine is here by that time it will be fine. Hurrah! I do not have the Current Events any longer. The History teacher takes it, as is proper.

Flora says she has already sent a draft home for $27.19. That was to pay for the Peckham Little bill. I realize I never gave you an account of money spent for her so enclose one. I had just $50.00 from father for Flora and gave him the Liberty bond for $50.00 that she sent home by me.

I have discovered another new thing. The compound had invested in some pigs. The piggery is over under the city wall well out of the way with its smells and noise. Also the Jefferson Academy has a herd of goats which graze over the campus. We have a rare white barked pine which had grown small in the year of my absence. Today I discovered three of the goats eating as fast as they could off the lower branches.

Mother you will not get your thanks from Flora just yet for I have saved the envelope till Christmas. If exchange were good I should relent but it is only about 1.78 or 180 so we can hope for better times. The envelope is safe in my trunk.

I took two of the new teachers to the top of the Academy tower this afternoon. It was too misty to see far. The pagoda was just visible and the far wall of the city not at all.

[Handwritten:]

I hope all is well with you at home. I'd like to run home for the week-end. Yes, even if it meant a speech to prepare too. And I'd like a peek at Stanley and his family, Ben and Oliver too.

With much love,

Mary.

Missionary Home
Shanghai, China

Sept 30- 1921

Dear Mother:-

This morning I mailed a parcel post package in Phebe M's name containing a pongee table cloth. Its for the family and it's a cheap thing. Put it on and use it- so you will not have to wash and iron the set between breakfast and dinner any more. I could not find just what I wanted but I thought this would answer. I shall mail to Phebe another table cloth or something that will go on a table of grass linen- white. This I should like given to Helen Peck. I am enclosing here $3.00 in stamps which I hope will cover whatever duty there may be on both cloths. We had a few dollars of American silver left and as it is very cheap here if we try to exchange it for Mexican dollars. I have bought U.S. stamps with it and will send them home. In this way we lose nothing on exchange.

Later I shall send to you one dozen grass linen white napkins. I plan to take these to Foochow and have a B embroidered in the corner of each and send them one or two at a time. I am sending the table cloth to Helen because Fred sent me no bill for the glasses and I can get partly even with him in this way.

Last evening I put Phebe, Miss Armstrong, Miss Langtree [Lanktree] and Miss Blanchard on the steamer for Foochow. They had a very pleasant party. The Meth. Bishop his wife and two young couples and an osteopath Dr. = Miss Johnson= more than a dozen in all. I hope the weather continues as fine as it has been for the past week here. It was tough to give up the pleasure of going into Foochow with Phebe= back to her birthplace = but there are to be important committee meetings here next week to prepare for the big all China Mission Conference to be held in Shanghai next May. They have not succeeded in getting anyone to come up from Foochow and one week more of delay for we will soon be forgotten. I can help the interest in the next year's conference in Foochow by staying and perhaps be of use in the committee meetings.

Mary wrote a postal just before she got to Peking. She left Shanghai the evening of the day we arrived.

Last evening I heard Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr. speak before a select crowd of about 800- mostly Chinese. The address was good- markedly Christian,- altruistic- missionary-simple- and based on the Golden Rule in business and in all the relations of life. His clean face and bright eye and simple manner gave weight to his message. After his address he stepped from the platform and shook hands with and chatted with all who came forward. I shook hands with him and chatted a brief time with him.

Wednesday evening Phebe and I took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Raven. Mrs. Raven was Elsie Sites- a little girl in Foochow- daughter of a Meth. missionary when we went to Foochow 27 years ago. Mr. Raven is head of the Raven Trust Co. here and of the American-Oriental Banking Corporation. This is the Bank with which I do business= my Shanghai business. They came after us and took us back to the Missionary Home in his auto. We were one evening at dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Marin[?] of whom you have heard us speak and at tea with Mr. and Mrs. McLachlin. So we were not lonely. Yes and one evening at supper with Dr. and Mrs. Huntley. They were in Oberlin last year. I am not sure whether Phebe met them when she was there.

At I Chang 600 miles up the Yangste there is very heavy fighting. The Szechuenese are fighting the Peking government. There were 6 or 7 people on the Golden State who planned to go into Szechuen. They are held here and face the probability of spending the winter here- owing to the closing of all traffic on the Yangste above I Chang. Steamers go all the way from Shanghai to Chung King in Szechuen in about 12 days.

You are picking winter apple now and husking corn. I must wait another ten days at least before I hear from you or the dear ones in Oberlin.

My best love to all
Will.

Tungchow, Chihli, China.
October 8, 1921.

Dear Ones at Home,

Two weeks ago at this hour I was just leaving Tientsin. Yet it already seems as though I had been here always. Such is the result of landing in the midst of work. Not having any beginning, how can it be otherwise than that it always was?

I have given two tests. In Latin 1 the class did its two teachers proud. In 15 there is one failure and that lad is not yet awake in anything. The science papers are yet to be looked over.

This week brought two home letters, one from mother on Sunday the 2nd, and written the 7th of September. Is not that good time? Phebe's came yesterday, the 7th although it was written the 3rd of September. I was reading it without looking at the date and found the reference to Mrs. Buchner's visit to be, not as past, as Mother spoke of it. Such is the trick of the mails. A letter takes the first steamer out. If it is northern route it can beat one on the southern route by many days.

I am so sorry to hear of Uncle Dan's accident and hope the next letter gives more favorable reports. A bruise plus a blister must be most painful.

Miss Gordon was not on my steamer. I know the mother and sister who have been in Peking for two years at least. Flora says another sister arrived recently, so we think that is surely the friend of Florences. I shall surely see them soon and will make sure. The Englishman whose name Mr. Lynch gave Stanley was not on either. Probably he got an earlier sailing when our boat was postponed. We lost several passengers who got to the coast and were able to get quick passage.

The Dantons were out today. They were feeling regretful that I had not been with them. Their boat was ten days late because of trouble with her crew. The mutinous crew had scared many passengers so there were many empty cabins instead of the crowd first booked.

Last week I went to Peking and paid 20 cents for four small apples. It was painful after the beauties we had at home and Mothers letter telling that they were not yet all gone.

Yesterday Miss Ingram gave me some nasturtium slips. She has a pot of beauties. There were none in our garden nor the neighbors for me to beg. I told you of my splendid luck with them in the house in the past. I am so glad Mother that you have such variety of colors in your dahlias.

Does the ad for a man mean that the one you had when I left was another misfit? He couldn't be any funnier than the one who wanted to make us count our mercies and talked all the time. The help question has not been an easy one here. One man broke the dishes so fast we could not afford to keep him, another decided to leave without being sent. Just now we have a full quota and they are doing well. Mrs. Gordon is very nice with the men and tries to help them to make good.

I warrant Aunt May had a circus with those children. Nancy I note is still loyal to her notions about her baby brother. How I would like to hear "Tevan" [Stephen] in his further efforts to talk. I thought of them on the steamer when we had so many fine balloons and mostly grown ups to play with them. Just think, three at once for four times.

My invitation to President Woolley to visit me could not be accepted because she is too busy. I had hoped she could come when she had to stay over. Next Saturday I go to Peking to the opening luncheon of the college club. Probably Miss Fenn goes with me. I was a member before I went home and a furlough does not sever membership.

Last evening I was over to the Love's for a birthday diner for Dr. Love. We had roast goat meat and it was delicious. Mr. Hunter has started a herd of goats as a business proposition for the compound, also some pigs. We will probably have roast pig for Thanksgiving dinner and roast it in the big school oven.

"Do not use but one side of the paper", says the booklet, I am going to try doing it and see how it works.

Elizabeth, the jelly drops are just being eaten. They are delicious. We had so much to eat on the steamer that I deliberately saved some of my candy for days of less bounty. Now I am glad I did. Flora had a box from the parents of two of the girls and the one from Miss Brewster so I waited for those to be gone and thus prolong the goodies.

I must stop because the girls are in bed and this noise may be disturbing them.

Sunday morning. This has been a busy morning. I had to go over to the school to get such pieces of laundry as did not come to me. Then I hurried back to take the bath for which the water was ordered at 9.30. Then I manicured my nails, cleaned two pair of white shoes, and polished a pair of black and a pair of brown shoes. It is eleven o'clock and I am ready for the days tasks.

Last night the second year high school pupils gave a little play which one of their number wrote. It was clever and the children did it with vim and enthusiasm. Next weekend I am on duty and the old students are to entertain the new. Probably we will have a picnic supper and games afterward. There is a fine picnic spot, with large open space for sports in the compound.

Did I write that the week I arrived all the children were here. There were several cases of scarlet fever in Peking and the parents telephoned down and asked to have the children stay. The school in Peking was closed on account of the fever. Dr. Barton thought the event one great argument in favor of the country for the foreign school. As a result we gained one small boy for the sixth grade. Before I went home the Rockefeller Foundation offered $40,000 to the Peking school if they would raise $60,000 before next July. So far they have only $20,000 and have scoured the country pretty well. Now the Rockefeller people are beginning to send to us, as they are feeling with the missionary that the better air, bigger play ground, quiet life, etc. is, for the older children of sufficient advantage to pay for having to send them away to school. We have five of their children this year, all who are old enough for us to accept them. I judge that they have an excellent Principal this year. He is an elderly man, father of a Mr. Dean who has been out for three years teaching in one of the government school and after a year at home has just returned.

Last Wednesday six of us teachers went to Peking on the last train to attend a reception given by Minister Schurmann for all Americans. Five of the members of the compound also went up so we had a jolly time coming back. We met at Jean Dudley Joselyn's house instead of trying to get together at the legation. A new ruling at the legation gate did not allow the rickshaws to go inside the compound. It made it much more quiet and peaceful within, and I wonder it was not done before.

The Sentinels telling of the new bank, with Mr. Palmer at the head were very interesting. Myra and Stanley are coming out much better than we feared with 90 cents on the dollar. I rejoice for them and the others too. I note that there are many depositors not yet found.

Flora was asking about Mrs. Wilkinson who was so badly burned. The papers said nothing so I judge her condition remains unchanged.

I had from Tientsin papers telling of the shipment of my box from Boston on September 3rd so I can hope for it to arrive in about 6 weeks. I'll be glad to welcome my things.

If Berman or any of the stores which are handy have a sale of woolen dresses at any time please get me one, size 42 or 44, preferable the latter. I ought to have gotten one before leaving as I shall need it before the winter is over. Except for that, I find my needs pretty well met.

I am finding this machine very useful. I have typed my questions for tests, using carbon paper so I made six copies at once. Store bills are more impressive typed than written off by hand. Incidentally they get into less space.

I began "Creative Chemistry" yesterday and I wonder that I delayed so long. It is fascinating. Professor Slosson uses some most original comparisons. Apparently he retains all he reads and he used familiar quotations freely, the Bible, Shakespeare, Tennyson, modern statesmen, daily papers, contemporary writers, etc. Yet with all there is nothing irreverent nor distasteful in the usage. The style reminds me a little of Dr. Arthur Smith.

Exchange is still low. Last Monday I got only 1.60 silver for a gold dollar. It was up to 1.80 in the middle of the week. I hope it is there tomorrow. I go to Mrs. Edwards to lunch and to give the order for Edythe's luncheon set, probably. If I am sufficiently pleased I may order the one Leolyn wants also. Leolyn has given me a commission to get a rug too, but not to hurry as they do not want the bill too soon.

Tomorrow is Lun Fo Ssl day and I am going up. I may fill part of Miss Brewster's order. Nearly all of us are planning to go. If the foreigners are too numerous prices will soar and I may not be able to get things as cheaply as I like.

Yesterday I had a scare. Seeing Mrs. Stelle wear her amber beads made me think of mine and I could not find them. I looked every where I could think of and no beads appeared. I was wishing I had left them home where they would have been safe at least. In the night I woke with a start with the thought that I had put them in the case with my white fur coat so they could not roll out and get lost. Sure enough I found them there when I looked after breakfast.

This noon my pictures which I took en route came from the photographers. Out of 18 films, 17 are good. The ones I took of Myra and Stanley and the children are excellent.

By the way. Of the films I left home with Stanley, there are a few I would like prints from.

The two Phebes - - Myself, Phebe K, Ellen.

The three group pictures - - - Leolyn.

I know Leolyn would appreciate the three which show all who were present on that day.

I am going to take a nap. The house is delightfully quiet and suggestive of rest.

Lots of love to all. I hope to hear that Father is better after taking a rest.

Mary

Monday A.M. I just thought of something funny. Alfred Corbett wrote his mother that Miss Mary Beard was back and that she blended into the life of the school just as well as ever. I wonder if I am a perfume or a blend of tobacco. It is in connection with those that the word is generally used.

Foochow China

Oct. 18, 1921

Dear folks at Home-

At last I am in Foochow and it is good to get back. As I spoke in response to a welcome given us last Wednesday morning I felt as if I had perhaps been to Shanghai for a couple of weeks instead of to America for 15 months. You see when I came back after our first furlough I had been away two years and came back for Y.M.C.A. work- entirely a new work. After the second furlough I came back after three years in the U.S. to the College Presidency- a new work. Now I return after 15 months and slip into the same grooves that I left so short a time ago. Much the same people are here in much the same places. I began teaching Wed. morning at 8:15- arrived Monday about dark and Friday I took over the Presidency. The mission voted that I should be President and Mr. Neff acting in my place while I was away.

Dr. James L. Barton and Mrs. Barton reached Shanghai a week before I left and they came down to Foochow with me. It was of course very pleasant to be in their company so much. They left this morning for Canton.

Some disease struck my chicks and 8 are dead- I hope the ravage is over. I should like to keep enough to raise some here. I had sold 4 = 3 hens and 1 rooster and had a check for $50.00 silver in my pocket. I have had to return it.

Work piles up already 18 periods of teaching a week. I have made one address before in Chinese before the Y.M.C.A. and I preached in the city church here this a.m. Next Friday I address the Anti Cobweb Society on Conditions in the U.S. in English. But I do not have 50 or 75 compositions to correct this term which is much relief.

Phebe is commanding the admiration and respect of all. You would be proud if you could hear what people say of her. It was very clear to both her and me that it would not be best for us to ever ask to live together. The young ladies at Ponasang need her much more than I do. She appears very happy. It is interesting to see how she slips into everything as naturally as if she had not been away from Foochow for almost 12 years. The language comes back very naturally to her. She "takes" to the Chinese and the Chinese to her.

Yesterday morning we attended the funeral of Alice Lay- born in Foochow a very few years before Phebe. She returned about 3 years ago to work in the kindergarten. The language came back to her as it does to Phebe and she was getting to be a very helpful young woman in many places. A week ago she was taken ill. Last Thursday she became much worse. The doctors operated and found appendicitis and peritonitis. She passed away Friday. Last evening a telegram from Shanghai told us that Miss Grace Coppock, National General Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. for China had died of pneumonia. No young woman and possible no young man had become so useful to the Christian work in China as had Miss Coppock. She combined business sagacity, a sweet spirit, and the ability to work with others to a very remarkable degree. We shall deeply miss both these young women.

Apples are mostly gathered- how I wish we had some.

Love to all

Will.

N.C.A.S., Tunghsien, China. Oct. 23, 1921.

Dear Ones at Home,

I have been the gay lady these days. I have dined at Alice's, at Mrs. Love's, at the Howard-Smiths, at the Arthur Smiths and twice at the Martin Home since my return. Tonight I start of the return invitations and am having Alice in for supper. Margaret is off in the country so I take this time to save Alice having one meal all alone.

Last Monday I chaperoned the children on a picnic to the Pei Hai and to Coal Hill. It was a cool day so the discomfort from thirst was not as bad as usual. We had five hours at the Pei Hai so took our time on the long walk around the lake. We were most fortunate in getting a good guide who knew the place, was interested in showing and willing to take us everywhere. I think Mother has a snapshot of the Porcelain screen with the nine dragons on it. That is one of the things we saw. There is an artificial mountain of wood protected by a fancy roof, too. The very winding path that leads to the top ends under a dome through which one sees a gilded dragon. There is an artificial hill made from the dirt dug to make the lake. On the back are underground passages from the Dagoba (a kind of Mohamedan tomb) to the foot of the hill. The children had great sport playing "Hide and go Seek" in those tunnels. In front and leading to the Dagoba is a series of temples reached by long flights of steps. Under the lower flight and the landing above are more tunnels, a network of them. That was a second scene for "Hide and go seek". I sat on the coats, cameras and lunch boxes while they played. The old goddess with the thousand arms, thousand legs and thousand heads burned in 1918. She was about 50 feet high. There is a small goddess there with about twenty of the appendages. One enclosure was for the raising of silk worms and the preparation of the silk. A few Mulbury trees are still standing. In a building near are two looms, one large and one small. Big hand machines, strong enough to last through the ages, even if hard used. A King (bed) of teakwood was in another room. The decorations were carved phoenix so we knew it was the bed of a royal woman.

This week we are to have a meeting of the Pasttime club. There are 12 who do not belong so it will be initiation night. I am chairman of the entertainment committee with Dr. Love and Mrs. Howard-Smith to help. We have the program all made. The individuals will get off easier than Flora and I did because there are so many. One stunt each will take all the time. We are taking in two of the children in the compound, one a graduate of last year and one a senior now. It is a trial but we do it to give them a years experience socially before they have to go home.

I am putting on this letter one of the new stamps. It is a limited issue and this may be the only one I can get to send. The central head is that of the president of China, at his left is the Minister of Coin and on the right the Premier. The stamps are to be issued for three weeks only. It was some days before I succeeded in getting them for my school store. Now I give out one set only to each child, hence one set only to myself. Three are four denominations, the one, three six and ten. I'll put the other three on a later letter.

Our Founders Day Oct 12 was a successful one. Dr. Shurmann gave a fine talk and showed a great interest in the school. His wife and two daughters came down with him. There were no guests from Peking and that was a little disappointing as we generally have a few.

The opening meeting of the Peking Womens College Club was last week Saturday. Miss Fenn and I went up to the luncheon and entertainment afterward. It was an opportunity to meet many old friends. Now I have seen nearly everyone as well as meet many of the new comers.

Yesterday was Mrs. Arthur Smith's birthday. Mrs. Stelle had the weekly tea in her honor. She is 74 I think. Both she and Dr. Smith seem very well considering how ill they were last winter.

We have started the architect on plans for the new building. Word seems quite authentic that it is a question of months only before we get the money from the Russel-Sage Foundation for the building. Dr. Barton takes home word that we are a permanent institution for sure. Mrs. Schell said that was what the committee were waiting for.

Mr. Stanley surprised us by arriving this noon. He was in Peking on business so took this free time to run down to see his son. His wife was here a week ago. They are slowly unpacking and each trip bring a package of books to sell or give to the school.

Last Sunday the Hunters had Bobby baptized. Dr. Goodrich, the oldest member of the American Board Mission baptized him. It was impressive to have the tiny babe just starting lifes journey and old man of 85 nearing the end, together. Dr. Goodrich had failed much and seems very old. His body and mind are both weak, and his voice quavers as he speaks. The Hunters lived with the Goodriches when at language school so invited him to christen the baby.

We have had some cold weather but no bad killing frost yet. The tomatoes and eggplant are gone but the flowers are safe. The cauliflower, cabbages, celery are still in the ground. Last week came the winter supply of potatoes, 7,000 cabbies. (A cabbie equals 1 1/3 pound) Part of that goes to the others in the compound as it is cheaper to all order at once and have everything come in one name. We have two huge root cellars to store those and the garden produce later. A big cold frame shelters lettuce sufficient to keep us all winter. Some plants are three inches high and some less than one. Yet we are using that out of doors.

I am working on my little scheme for a student participation government. This week the girls organize for dormitory care. At the Household League meeting on Thursday I hope to prepare for the dissolving of that organization and the formation of the new. The students so far seem enthusiastic in the plan.

Poor Miss Bostwick has been having a siege of boils and they still continue to come. Dr. has now begun to use serum and hopes for results.

I hope you all keep well and that the winter is a comfortable one. I shall take joy in thinking of my year at home. I only wish it had been longer and I could have been right with you more. I do and did begrudge the days spent away but I feel every day the value of the work I did. The degree in itself is not so valuable, but the helpful knowledge and suggestions are priceless. I know the greater knowledge of human nature will stand me in good stead when I have to take up the reins of control. The faculty are only human and each has his or her peculiarities, so do I. Whether I shall be able to deal wisely with all remains to be seen.

Lots of love

Mary.

I enclose some snapshots you may want for the home album.

Dear Mother:-

Received your long letter. Yes, it was good to see your own writing on paper. You folks in Oberlin have outdone yourselves in writing lately. Today I got the suit case O.K. Will not need the sweater at all as I have another like it with me. I was glad of the coats because it has been getting awfully cold up here of late. The region about here is aglow with autumn color and as we have hills here we can see it better than you in Oberlin can on your flat plains.

Oberlin seems to be making the most of her luck in beating Ohio State. Up here they don't think much of it, because that week the whole State team had been shifted around and the head coach was trying out more men in preparation for harder games. The defeat that Michigan took was not deserved. Michigan outplayed O.S.U. most of the game. The first touchdown was made on a fluke and was luck for State. Michigan had her five best men out of the game as casualties from the Mich Agricultural game. Three of them will be laid up for the rest of the season.

For the past two weeks I have been working 3 hrs in the afternoon as asst. cook in a boarding house, but as that arraignment is too confining, I am changing to a dish washer job in a restaurant where I can wash during meals and have most of my afternoon off to study in.

I have taken in very few activities outside my regular work so far. I hav'nt had time for them. My Sunday mornings have been occupied with my work, namely, preparing the Sunday dinner and I hav'nt been able to get to church yet. My room serves as a good place to study and sleep in; beyond that I hardly see it for the whole day. My trucking business has completely stopped and I am selling both trucks one of them is almost sold now.

Geraldine writes that Oberlin had quite a surprise in its first Artist Recital. I should have liked to have been there then to hear the comment then to see the act.

Wishing everyone the best of good cheer and with love to all.

Your loving son,

Gould.

My Only Son;-

It's back in Foochow I am and struggling hard to get a letter to some of my own dear ones back in the home land at least once a week. It seems as if more letters were called for each time I come out. When I returned alone in 1912 and in 1916 with Mama and the girls I could send one letter to Putnam or to Oberlin and it went to the whole family. Now you are separate. But it's a pleasure to write. I wish I could do more of it.

You are much in my thoughts for several reasons. I know how hard it is for you to buckle down again to study. I went thru the same experience after four years of hard work on the farm. And the first term of three months was one big fight to see whether Ceasear's Gaellin wars in Latin would come out on top or whether I should master them. Every morning when I put on my necktie clasp I am reminded of you and the same is true every time I put in the necktie pin you left me for the damiosine one. Your photograph talks to me from my mantle. And of course every morning and evening and at other times I talk with God about you. This is the next best to talking with your own self.

It was a great privilege to be so much with you in March and April and to see a little of you in July and again in August. I can feel much closer to you. Someway all thru the summer of 1920 you seemed a long way off- almost a myth. It's all different now.

On Monday Oct. 10 I reached Foochow just at dark. Wednesday at 8 a.m. I was in the class room- with a schedule of 18 $\frac{3}{4}$ hr. periods a week. It is good to find that I am wanted. The teaching is only a small part of the work that takes my time. Preaching every Sunday and once or twice during the week- committee meetings etc. Just getting back there are many things I must do that are sort of extra. - I must go to bed now to prepare for tomorrow = Sunday. I can't express the joy it is to have Phebe here.

Sunday evening - This has been a day full of pleasure. This morning I had my regular normal class of a dozen boys who teach a Sunday School class in the afternoon. After this I went at once to a church over near the river- a church that has been going down hill for ten years under the heavy burden of a pastor who gave more attention to law suits and the money he made out of them than he did to his parish. The old man left a year ago - 72 years old - and went home to the country and a young man took the church. It is a different place entirely. A fine congregation, good order, with some twenty young men in to service. They were observing Children's Day which one preacher said Mama was instrumental in starting along with Mother's Day. I spoke for 10 min. Then to Ponasang for dinner with Phebe a nap on her bed. Then to Vesper Service on South Side at Tai Main at which I preached. Then home to Ponasang with Phebe for supper, a little chat with her and a walk into my own room here. All the other ladies were away today so Phebe and I had the compound to ourselves.

We had one letter from Mama at San Francisco and I have had a letter from Shelton- otherwise neither Phebe or I have heard a word from any one in the U.S. of our family.

A big Educational Commission from the U.S. has been going all over China investigating schools. They are due here this week- tomorrow or next day. Barton and his daughter of Chicago- Russell-Butterfield Mass. Agriculture are some of the names I recall.

Did I write you about my dozen Rhode Island Reds that I brought out? Three are still with me. About a week after I got them to Foochow something struck them and they died like rats. These three are a cock and two hens. I hope they will stick till I can get some chicks. I had four sold thru d'Almeida for $50. and the check in my pocket. I returned the check.

Foochow College has the largest enrollment in its history 437, a good spirit among the students and good work being done by both teachers and students. We are to have a full week of athletics for all schools in Foochow next month. The Military General is giving it.

We are watching the news for all items re the Pacific Conference at Washington Nov. 11. I hope something will be done there to indicate the method of disarmament and to lay some foundation for world peace.

May God give you all the best things and teach you how to use them to help men and glorify him
Lovingly Father.

Dear Dorothy;-

It must be your turn to get the letter this week. There is none to answer from any of you yet. All goes on very nicely here. I am teaching eighteen periods a week and doing a lot of other things. Circumstances have given Phebe and me the privilege of seeing much of one another altho we do not keep house. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair with whom I am staying were away at Diong Loh. Phebe came in Sat. evening and stayed till Monday morning. Sunday we walked out to Cieng Bang- Mama and the girlies will remember where it is. It was a beautiful day- just as lovely as the day mama, the girlies and I went out two or three years ago. We came back by the North gate and stopped to see Dr. and Mrs. Taylor. Dr. Taylor is laid up with a lame leg, and Mrs. Taylor still has erysypyles [erysipelas?] or neuritis or something of that sort. But they were both looking as well as I expected to see them. They are rather shut in and were glad to see us. The Medical College is closing up. But Dr. Taylor has the satisfaction of looking on some twenty four graduates all doing good work and most of them in mission work.

During the week I am able to get my usual number of Chinese meals – three or four. Phebe and I had a fine dinner at Cieng Bang last Sunday. I had one with pastors, preachers, teachers, etc at Quarterly meeting Tuesday and another at a funeral Friday.

Today I taught a normal S.S. class of teachers and boys at 9, walked to Ciu long Die for service and found them observing Children's Day. The preacher told them that Mama started this together with Mother's Day. Then I walked back to Ponasang and lunched with Phebe. All the other ladies were away so we had it all to ourselves. After a nap and a little reading we went to Tai Main to Vesper Services. I preached. Then home with Phebe to supper and then a walk in to my home here.

Ask Mama to tell Mr. Lau that I have sent his suit case home by Dr. and Mrs. Barton. They will take it to Boston and send it to Mama. They leave Hong Kong today I think. So Mr. Lau may look for his suit case about Dec. 15 or a little before.

How Marjorie and Kathleen would enjoy Betty St. Clair. She is just toddling about and a wee mite. The other day she got into my room and found my ink bottle and she made good use of her pinkeys as her whole face- two hands- dress, the floor, the paint and the wall testified. She was not in the least phased. She looked as much to say, I did it. What are you going to do about it? Billie Leger is all right- lies on his back in the carriage as does the Reumann baby. These three families are all that have babies or children in the compound.

Miss Armstrong and Dr. Dyer are in our old home. I have the study still. They are using our dining room furniture and some of our chairs. I had rather they would be in use there than lying up in the Hospital attic.

Three of my chickens are still alive. Some disease struck them a week after they got here and they died like rats. Mr. d'Almeida had given me a check of $50 for four. I returned the check. One rooster and two hens are still here. I hope they will pull thru so I can get some chicks.

May God bless and keep and guide you all and give you each the best things and then help you to use them to help men and glorify him.

October 30, 1921.

Dear Gould,

That was a meager little note I sent from the steamer, for the nice one you sent me. One of my other letters told of an acquaintance who has taken a position in Ann Harbor [Ann Arbor]. Dr. Preston Slosson, who has been on the editorial staff of the Outlook, has engaged to teach in the University of Michigan this year. You would enjoy meeting him. He is very much of a scholar and student. It was with his Aunt Sadie, Mrs. Spaulding, that I lived in New York part of last year. She was a dear to me and I did enjoy meeting Dr. Preston and his parents too. The parents are not in New York now, as Dr. Edwin Slosson has a government position in Washington, D.C.

I do hope that every day is showing you the right of going back to studying, and that the summer helped to make the readjustment easier. I was sorry not to see more of you. We will have to make up by writing a letter once in a while. I want to know what you are studying and what famous men you are privileged to work under. The man does make a difference! When I think of that seriously, I marvel that I have the courage to teach.

We have 60 pupils in session, the greatest number by about eight. If we had the room to take more we could nearly if not quite reach the hundred mark. This year we have nothing below the 6th grade and had to refuse 8 applicants for the 5th. The first year High School class has 15 in it. The other H.S. classes together are 18. Hence you see the upper grades have the largest numbers.

I am in the dormitory with the older girls. There are 16 girls, three teachers and the Matron sleeping here. The four 3rd and 4th year girls are next door. Our neighbors, the unmarried ladies, have rented to us three rooms and the girls and two teachers have those. The girls all sleep out on the porch so use one room only. In this house we have six girls in one room so they will have to sleep out all winter as the room would not hold the beds even.

Our last word is that we may go ahead and plan our new building. That will be the girls dormitory. For the present the boys have fair accommodations in Wisteria Cottage. There are 25 living there but no more than four boys to a room.

Our trip out was a most enjoyable one, because we had such good company. One of the greatest of the joys was being with your father and Phebe. Some days we had little chance to see each other but we had the feeling that the others were around. The five of us that started from Chicago together had a table together on the steamer with one girl added. We felt acquainted before we got here.

The ladies of the compound had helped out, so classes were all running smoothly when Miss Fenn and I got here. That meant plunge into the midst of work before we even took time to unpack. I felt as though I were running a race the first week and was always a little behind everyone. We were ten days late.

This last week we had a Pastime Club meeting and took in ten new members. I was chairman of the initiation committee so of course had a good time. The people had not a single meeting last year. This year I imagine we will be more gay as we have four young teachers and the Academy one young unattached man. We made a new ruling by which we take in children living here when Seniors, so had one student to initiate. It is to give them a chance to see what the society of their elders is when not restrained by being teacher, parent or other in authority.

Dr. Sailer of Teachers College was down here this week and we teachers had a good talk with him one night. Dr. Schurman, the new American Minister to China, gave us our Founders Day address. His wife and two daughters came down with him.

Already the dam is nearly ready for our skating pond as soon as it gets cold enough. Two weeks ago we thought that day not far off but it has warmed up somewhat. Still we have our furnace fires all going. The gardens are not all gone, but the more tender vegetables were nipped the first frost, on October the tenth.

I have been writing home every two weeks as of yore and today is not the day. If you are writing to Shelton and would send this it may have some things in it that Aunt Flora and I have not written home.

At last I am getting to where I can write on this machine nearly if not quite as rapidly as by hand. Surely I write more legibly.

Yours with much love

Aunt Mary.

P.S. Note the stamp on this letter. It is a very limited issue.

Dear Home Folks,

Last week I wrote to Gould and suggested that he send on the letter to you so perhaps you got a letter from him and me. A week ago Saturday we had a farewell tea for Joyce Howard-Smith. She was leaving on Monday for Australia. She was one of our last years graduates and though a quiet girl very popular with everyone. The Campfire girls, a few others and the grown ups of the compound wrote her letters so she had at least one for each of the 35 days which she will have alone after her father leaves her at Kobe. The things filled two small bags and included letters books candy gifts, and all kinds of things. She was starting as I did in 1920 without knowing anyone on her steamer. I hope she has better luck. I had a few very good friends but the rest of the passengers either I could not converse with because of differences of language or did not care to.

Our first reports came out on Wednesday last. There [were] some tears and a few smiles. We get these out early to give plenty of time for redemption if such is needed. It is a good time to talk over difficulties and suggest methods of improvement. Two Mothers have been here to visit this last week. Several helpful suggestions have come from the talks with them.

On Friday I went to Peking to a Holyoke dinner at Helen Russel's. We had a most interesting meal. I can not call it a feast as I feel like as we were assured it was home food not a feast. We started with tinned clams, the kind with fluted shells. We had little Chinese forks to pick them up with and dip them in the ginger sauce which stood by our plate. Third was rice with shrimps cooked with water chestnuts, eggplant, and a sauce like Worcestershire. Next was Chrysanthemum soup. It was made on the table. The stock was poured into the Chinese Chaffing dish and bits of hard cooked flour pastry, rice flakes, chopped parsley and the petals of white Chrysanthemum added. It was delicious. Lastly we had fruit, apples, pears, persimmons, grapes, and then tea with Chinese candy and sweetened dates. This differed from other meals I have had in having so little meat and such a variety of vegetables. Always had I heard that the Chinese are not a meat eating people, yet always did meat predominate the meal. Dr. Kin explained it by giving this as a typical meal when there are no guests. Of course it is the food of the higher class, not the poor people.

We had a most interesting meeting after dinner. The girls have been sending home things to sell for the Holyoke Endowment fund and had just had letters telling the results. They sell for considerable profit. After deducting the cost at this end and the duties at that end, the buyer gets 40% and the seller 60% of the profit. It is considered more trouble and bookkeeping to sell than to buy. Some of the girls have gotten the buying to a science.

Flora and Mrs. Gordon went to the Western Hills on Saturday and expected to stay till tomorrow, Tuesday. I am so glad Flora had this chance to visit the hills as she has never been out there and some of the most interesting temples are out there. It has been a beautiful week end here. That may not signify anything as a few weeks ago a party got soaked out there and we had not had a drop of rain here.

On Saturday afternoon Cleora Wannamaker came down unexpectedly and was my guest for the night. I had considered inviting her and had put it off till I should be more at liberty as I was taking Flora's weekend duties for her and having charge of giving out supplies for Mrs. Gordon. Since it was a surprise visit I could do all the other things and not feel neglectful whereas I could not if I had planned the visit.

Dr. Smith spoke at service yesterday, on the book of Jude. He suggested a comparison of that book with the 2nd chapter of 2nd Peter. There is a great difference of opinion as to which copied from the other. The great use of triplets was one thing he spoke of in Jude's writing.

There is a strong wind blowing today so I hope the people at the [word left out] will not try to come in. Mrs. Gordon's son is living out there and it is he they are visiting.

I tried to get some of Miss Brewster's things at Lun Fo Ssl a few weeks ago but prices were soaring so I made no purchases. I will try again when there are not so many extra foreigners in town.

Is Miss Brewster sending the Saturday Evening Post, or who is it? It is postmarked either Shelton or Derby so comes from some kind friend there. I would like to send thanks to the person for I do appreciate it I assure you. Three copies have come so far. My Literary Digest has not started yet but Miss King's has not ceased either so we are not inconvenienced. Today the first copy of the Teachers College Bulletin arrived, so I know that is all right too. All the extra numbers of the National Geographic are here too. If the school does not decide to take the School Review I shall do so as it is the best magazine on the Project Method that I am eager to get to reading.

I purchased yarn in Peking for a knitted scarf such as was so stylish last year. My dresses with the loose sleeves are a nuisance with sweaters as these sleeves will not go in easily. A scarf belted in will give the warmth across my back where I need it as my desk is back to the window.

The people are soon off to the noon train so I will pick up my things go over to my room get a stamp and envelope and let this start on its journey.

With love to each and all.

Mary.

Dear folks at Home:-

Christmas is in the mind of all here. Christmas letters must be ready to mail this week. I have been sending a part of my Christmas gifts to you at the farm. Before this reaches you, you should have received three "Weekly Reviews". In each should have been a napkin. I will continue to send till twelve have gone. Will you please forward this "Weekly" to Ellen at Oberlin. I am enclosing in this a linen handkerchief for father. O no. I want his surname put in one corner so I must wait till another mail.

I cannot tell how I enjoy Phebe's being here. We are not keeping house together but we see each other almost every day. She has spent two or three nights at Mrs. St. Clair's where I live this week, and I have been at her home in Ponasang for several meals. It is interesting to see how we cross and recross each others paths. Yesterday Mrs. Leger said she had asked Bishop Hind to dinner today. He was to preach at our church here this morning. Mrs. Leger wanted me to come to dinner also. I accepted. Phebe was at my place at Mrs. St. Clairs. But I had a good visit with her. She is receiving the respect and confidence of everyone and I hear many good things said of her. The language comes back to her in a very gratifying way.

For more than a week now an Educational Commission of five has been in Foochow. They are a part of a larger number who for over two months have been investigating education in both government and mission schools in Japan and China. Dean Russell head of Education in Iowa State University was one of those who was with us. They have been very helpful.

This is the season for athletic sports in Foochow as well as in the U.S. Our boys are getting defeated right along. But it is good for them. Last year they won in Volley Ball and some of them confessed that it was the big head that caused their defeat this year. Yesterday in the cross country runs they got not a point. They came out first in 1920 and in 1919.

Next Friday the big provincial athletic meet start and Nov. 18, 19, 21, 22, 23 all of our schools are to be present and participate.- This is the first time anything so large has been attempted. The expenses are to be borne by the Military Governor General.

Last Tuesday the Annual Meeting of the Chinese Congregational Church began. The spirit in this meeting has given many of us great concern for six or seven years. This year thus far the spirit is good, and I trust it may continue so to the end.

Two good letters came from Geraldine this last week. She writes that Oberlin beat Ohio State University in football. Of course I am greatly pleased that the Bankhardt family are in the house with Ellen. It will so lighten the expenses of rent etc. and then she will not have to care for the furnace. The coal bill will be no more for two families than for one.

You are having frosts and perhaps frozen ground- I remember how cold it was a year ago Nov. 14. We are having most delightful weather,- just cool enough so one can wear full thin union suits and an ordinary suit of clothes. We have had little fire two or three times for fun.

The Pacific Conference in Washington which opened yesterday is much in the minds of the Chinese Christians and of us as well. We pray much that God may bring out of this Conference something that will help the world to live in peace and the nations to be mutually helpful.

May God give you all, the best things Lovingly Will.

Dear Kathleen:-

I got your fine letter and intended to answer it before now. Also I have mother's and Geraldine's and Dot's yet unanswered. So I will have to kill four birds with one stone and answer all of them at once.

For the University in general this has been a lively week. There are so many lectures, concerts, club meetings, dances, etc going on that I have cut them all out in an endeavor to get ready for mid semester tests.

Yesterday Morning the Frosh and Sophs had their fall scraps every evening this week either one or the other class has held a pep meeting to rouse spirit for the contests. At 8 a.m. Saturday the Sophs gathered in hands in various parts of the city and marched to the library where our meeting place was. On the way we caught any unlucky Frosh who was on his way to his meeting joint, and we painted him red all over. All the Sophs painted their faces red and the Frosh were painted green. They outnumbered us about two to one but we were better organized.

The scrap consisted in capturing three flags at the tops of three 20 foot poles. The Frosh had to guard the poles and if they held each flag for ten minutes they won. They massed themselves around the pole and locked arms. The Sophs formed two wedges in Phalanx formation and drove into them something as the sketch shows.

As we charged them I could see them get white under their green paint and their eyes bulged out, but they held until we hit them. The impact and the grind following sounded like mashing potatoes and meat going through a grinder. We went about 20 feet into their mass. Then they went straight up in the middle from the pressure. The center must have risen a foot and a half. We reached the pole, which had bent over almost 45 degrees from the pressure, and locked arms about it then the fellows in the rear hoisted some light men up onto the mass and they stomped or crawled over our heads to the pole. We took each pole in less than four minutes. The Frosh were so scared that they did not fight hard and only a couple of men got badly hurt.

Yesterday afternoon Michigan wound up her foot ball season by walking away from Minnesota to the tune of 38-0. I doubt if there is a conference eleven that could have beaten our team yesterday. We have lost only one game and tied one and save for the first two games we have played the biggest teams of the West. The stadium was not filled to capacity, only about 38,000 being present. At the Ohio State game we had 41,000 spectators.

I'll have to thank you all for those fine socks you sent me. I completely forgot until Tuesday that I had a birthday last Sunday.

Mother wrote me the week before about it, but I forgot it in the rush of events. I can't quite become reconciled to the fact that I am 25. I feel more like a college lad. Perhaps that is because I am doing just what I was back in 1916 and '17, washing dishes for an education. Well, I hope in some future year to finish college, but it looks a long way off.

Grandma sent me a box of apples with my bath robe that the girls gave me in Oberlin. I had forgotten that I had it. It will be just the thing now.

It's only about three weeks now until I will be home for Xmas. When does Oberlin vacation commence?

Thanks again for the birthday gift.

With love to all,

Brother and son Gould.

Dear folks at Home:-

Two weeks ago I wrote you enclosing in the letter a napkin. I will put another in this letter. This one makes six in all, if my count is correct.

This past two weeks have been broken into badly by our Chinese Annual Meeting and by the Provincial Athletic Meet. This was held in Foochow and quite near our homes. There were contestants and participants from all parts of the province- both from government and from mission schools- over 700 entries. Last Monday was the big day. I was one of five "judges at the finish." It was my job in all the running events to spot the second man in and give his number to the head judge. Monday last we were on the ground at noon and on our feet constantly till 5:30. I was not the only one whose knees ached. Tuesday the work was not as hard. Last evening a feast was given by the Military Governor to the heads of the Athletic Meet. I was already engaged to spend the night last night with Mr. and Mrs. Newell- at Sie Buo- on South Side about four miles from here,- so I sent my regrets.

This may be where the track meet was held. We know the missionary compound is across from the white pagoda. Foochow's white pagoda can be seen to the left. Willard said the meet was held "quite near our homes."

Our Annual Meeting of the Congregational Church of Foochow closed a week ago Wednesday. It was the best meeting we have had since 1914. There was a good spirit and a desire to be mutually helpful. Since 1913 we have not ordained a pastor. A clique of Chinese pastors got together and so managed that no one could get ordinations. The matter sort of settled itself this year. The ring leader of these pastors has become more and more dictatorial each year. The result is that he has been put out of all offices in the Cong'l Church here and is left on only one committee- that a Union Committee of little real power. The meeting voted to ordain six men.

Phebe and I took Thanksgiving dinner with Miss Armstrong. Dr. Dyer and Miss Atwood. Miss Armstrong came out with us and is to teach in Foochow College. She is now studying the language. Dr. Dyer is a Doctor of the W.B. and going home on her first furlough next year. Miss Atwood is a nurse just arrived. They are keeping house in our old house that we left a year ago last June. It was a very pleasant occasion and a good dinner. The turkey was fish but the pie was real pumpkin. In the evening Phebe and I went to the Consulate for the Reception given by the American Association and from there to the Y.M.C.A. building to the Thanksgiving dinner given under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

Friday a Dr. Stifler was with Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair and myself for lunch. They brought 15 pounds of millet from the girls in the north. We simply put it in a double boiler and cook it as you do oatmeal, and eat it in the same way. I do not know why we do not use it in America. I tried to get some in Oberlin last year. I found a few pounds that had been saved for seed. The price was 13 cents a pound.

We think much, speak often and pray much about the Pacific Conference. The Chinese are very much interested in it and they hope for much from it. Others of them are pessimistic. It looks to me as if there would not be very much done,- but as if something would be done to make it possible for the nations to reduce the terrible burden that all nations feel increasingly each year of keeping up our building new battle ships and in other ways preparing for war. May God have his own way with the men now in Washington discussing the problems so vital to the world's well being.

The 10 o'clock bell has rung so good night. I hope you all had a Merry Christmas and I hope this will be in time for my Happy New Year- pass it on to Oliver, Ben and Stanley and all the members of their families. May our Father be very gracious to you all

Nov. 28, 1921.

Dear Home Folks,

The Christmas cards came this week. They are beauties, and we do thank you for all your trouble. We have opened them to take a peep and that is all. For sending to America I bought some out here. Mr. Fenn, brother of Martha, has started a printing shop and makes Christmas cards. His patterns are all copies of cards from the states and they are very good. They are also very cheap. I'll send you one to see.

Our Thanksgiving day was a busy one. I did not have a minute to think of the good time of last year. Mrs. Martin had a bad cold so we of the decorating committee had to help set the tables for the dinner as well as to decorate them afterward and make out the seating list. Setting tables mean borrowing tables, chairs, linen, silver, dishes, glassware, etc. as well as arranging it after it arrives. There were only 32 of us because several sent last minute regrets and Mrs. Gordon and Mr. Lund stayed away without even sending regrets. The fun afterward was great. The committee had practiced up for an Ultra-Bolshevic Band and had a program all duplicated for us. We started with a band selection then Folly 1, then band selection, etc. The band had a drum, a horn, several combs, and clappers and cymbals which occasionally were heard. It was most entertaining. We were divided into four groups and each had to present a ten minute play. We had Eliza crossing the river on the ice. The ice was Mr. Howard-Smith wrapped in a sheet. Another was that old pantomime of the girl receiving a succession of callers and making them into a table, chair, hat rack. A third was the story of Aeneas in three scenes. I was Dido. The fourth was Pyramus and Thisby. We ended with the Virginia Reel as usual. But one of the men guests played and as we whirled the partners down the line he played faster and faster till we could hardly stop. It kept things lively.

At school we had a duck dinner at noon. Flora and I carved the six ducks before we sat down so as to have pieces of more uniform size. Also we wanted to have them carved American style not Chinese. The Chinese hack birds to pieces regardless of joints. There were 49 of us at that dinner. Our boys went to Peking in the morning to play the boys of the Peking American School in Basket Ball and beat 27 to 7. They would have kept their opponents from scoring at all but they put their second team in for the second half. "It was too easy to be fun," They say. They wanted to send the second team only as the boys up there are smaller but we requested to send their best. Today our girls go up to play the Yenging college girls. I fear they will not meet with such easy success as several of the best girls are not playing, for health or scholastic reasons. Our rule is that a team must be made up of students whose rank is 85 or the colors may not be awarded for success.

I have had my muff made over and the worn parts removed. Not yet have I had my wool dresses out, but if it gets much colder I shall have to. It has been cold enough to freeze ice three inches thick. Our skating pond started to freeze with all the leaves in the ice and the boys have had a great time getting the bad ice out. It all had to be broken up and pushed through a narrow opening about two feet wide. They worked hard every minute of their play time for three nights. As they got it out it would freeze a little more at night because they could not finish.

I have my scarf over half done. It is 101 stitches wide so does not go as fast as I would like. The wool is English make and a mixture which goes well with that sport skirt I bought at Howard and Barber's with Phebe. Phebe that knife gets good usage these days. The little scissors got the hardest use on the train, when I cut out paper dolls with them, for a small neighbor who was making life unhappy for us all.

We are having a good local dust storm this afternoon, after a glorious morning. Already my window sills desk and other furniture are dull lead color.

I have a most interesting book to read. It is Easy Lessons in Einstein by Edwin Slosson, the nephew of Mrs. Spaulding who has gone to Washington for government work.

I had a nice letter from Miss Brewster this last week. The book she spoke of sending to Flora arrived some days before and Flora has it most read. "Wang the 9th" is a book I have heard of much but not yet have I had the chance to read it. I am asking Mrs. Stelle to read my "Wanderer on a Thousand Hills." She is a native born and better able to judge of its merits. It has received very severe criticisms, she says. One would expect that as it pictures such a dark side of life here.

A week or so ago I had a chance to send a package to Foochow by personal messenger so F. and I sent 15 catties of millet for him to grind for cereal. That in pounds would be about 20. As a "cumshaw" I sent Dr. Stifler some of the malt candy. I do wish I could get some of that candy to you. But it is like molasses candy in that it gets soft if warmed.

Two weeks ago I sent some Chinese postcards to Mr. Horesce with a Christmas greeting to show him I did not forget my promise made the day we tried the Dodge. My gift for Joel and Grace has not yet arrived but I sent a card for Christmas.

I wonder if the request for a repeating of the Pageant came again. Phebes tale of the vall [call?] of the Sherks and Sylvia's stay made me think of it. Please give my regards to the Sherks when you get a chance. Has he no job yet?

Today I received my address list of Holyoke alumnae with a request to send a dollar to the secretary for pay. Please send on ($1.00) to Miss Florence Clement, Alumnae Secretary, Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass. for Address List, 1921, sent to me.

I shall send shortly a box of little bags. If you want any they are 50 cents. If you sell them elsewhere they are $1.00. If you have to pay duty as seems to be the custom now, please deduct the duty before crediting me with the value. If the duty is too high make the prices 60 cents and $1.25, for I am not making much. I shall put on the price in silver here. Every thing has gone up in the year I was absent. Not yet have I found the things Miss Brewster wanted but I will try in vacation when there is time to linger. Today was Lun Fo Ssl day but I was too lazy to go up as there were duties here for me to do. Mrs. Lowry is back so I think I can surely get the large cloth like the small doily.

I have agreed to play tennis at 4.30. It has been many a day since I have been out on the courts. My Round Robin came yesterday and today the starter of a hurry up Robin of the Holyoke girls of China. We are to send our pictures so we will feel better acquainted.

Here is the best of love for each and all of you.

Mary B.

December 4, 1921.

Dear Home Folks,

I must write today because my box of books came Friday and I know you will be glad with me that everything came through safely. The mud plaques are sound after their trip to America and back. I shall have them framed at once. Evidently the box was opened at customs for the top was all loose. Father remembers how well it was nailed and I am sure will say with me that it could not have gotten off without aid. At once I ordered my bigger bookcase as already I had a row of books in the closet on the shelf.

The Literary Digests have begun to come. The first number was October 22. November 5 is already here. It is almost in time to fill in after Miss King's subscription. I never did get the Independent from Dr. Preston Slosson. He has left their staff so now I fear I will not. 'Tis sad as one does not subscribe for two papers which fill so near the same need. I am sending tomorrow some tea to Miss Brewster. Prices have gone up a bit. To get the same grade of tea I paid more. I think I charged 85 cents a box for the other. This will have to be 10 more or 95 cents.

I will try to get the little bags off also. Once more we may send packages by sample post. That does not mean a days work to mail anything. I was waiting till I had everything ready because when it was a question of going to the customs it meant an hour to do it and one could save time only by accumulating errands and going seldom.

The Japanese Post Office still would send sample post so were getting a large amount of the trade. Either that or the movement to do away with the foreign Post Offices have caused this return to old accommodations. They are desirous of being extra helpful now and volunteer the suggestion that sample post is again allowed. In fact they were eager for Mr. Martin to send his package that way the other day.

Phebe, I wonder if you still keep up your morning exercises? I mean to but with only half an hour to dress, I get left occasionally if I take an extra few minutes in bed. I must average about five mornings a week. Often when I get left in the morning I take them at night, unless a game of tennis or basket ball has made me feel no need of so doing.

This week Martha Fenn had a birthday and we had quite a celebration. Her mother and father had sent down a cake so we had that for afternoon tea, together with candy, and fruit from the same source. In the evening some of us made divinity fudge, cocoa and cheese crackers over in Miss Young's room. We were very circumspect and were home soon after ten. Today one of my girls has a birthday and her mother sent her a cake. All the girls in this house and I have just been eating a cake which her mother sent. There was candy, nuts and fruit to go with it so I am thinking of cutting tea at four.

Dec. 6. I went down stairs to go over to the school for some stamps on Sunday and found a caller. Mr. Anguston, the Salvation Army man who has been in the city, was here to bid up goodbye. He is transferred and we get a young woman again. He stayed for tea and talked a lot. Then it was a hustle to get to church.

On Saturday last, Flora had to dismiss the coolie who has been with us since the school started. He wanted more money but could not see why he needed to be more efficient to get it. I think he thought the school so dependent on him that we could not let him go. He got a surprise. Mrs. Stelle had had to dismiss two servants because they could not agree, in spite of the fact that both were good men. We took one of those on and he was installed that very night. Choe He was one baffled man. He has always been of the variety of who Dr. Smith says, 'One is torn between the conflicting desires, either to raise their wages or dismiss them.' We had raised the man's pay from $6.00 to $7.50 per month. That may seem small, but a cook gets only $9.50 or 10.00.

Yesterday I was in Peking all day. It is the first day I have done that. Flora and I went to some interesting stores outside the city. I have several chains. I will send some to you. If you can sell them. I'll send price lists when I get them off. If beads are as stylish as last year these ought to be easily gotten rid of. I have the beads Miss Brewster specially ordered too. We went to a Chinese restaurant for lunch. We had rice, fried chicken giblets, egg soup, omelet, and another dish made up of bits of meat, onion, celery and a green vegetable I have never seen at home. After eating we were given towels wrung out in boiling water to wipe our hands on.

I have not made up my mind what to do with Mrs. Nettleton's $3.00 yet. Flora had it spent before I even read the letter, in her mind. I may put it with some other and help out the library. We have a woman coming in vacation to catalogue the library, or rather finish up the job begun several years ago. Flora goes to Tientsin the day after school closes for dressmaking. The only trips I have in mind are a possible week end at the Hills and New Years Day at Mrs. Fenn's if the decision is to receive on Monday.

I sent on Monday two packages of tea to Miss Brewster, one for Mr. Sanford and one for herself. I did have to go to customs after all. There I was guilty of taking my turn out of turn. There were a number of Chinese servants ahead of me, but I went in at once in spite of that fact. It is strange, but they stood back as though they expected me to go ahead. Do you wonder we are spoiled when we come home? That we expect deference and favors? It is a bad habit we form.

This morning I made use of some of my last year's notes in chapel. I shall use them right along now, the ones of Dr. Fosdick's lectures. Some day I must take a compound prayer meeting for some of the people are saying it is not fair to keep any new ideas for the children only. I do not agree but - - -.

Elizabeth, could you send me the prescription for your tooth powder? I forgot to bring any and the little powder left here is getting low. If I could get yours I would like it for I prefer it to any other. I would try getting a full prescription filled and am sure I could add it to my store supplies with profit unless the druggist charges too much to fill it. I have tooth brushes, soap and shoe strings beside school materials already. We will have to enlarge as we grow because it grows increasingly harder to look over each child's supplies. I failed to mention hand lotion which Dr. Love makes.

The ice is safe and the children are having glorious times on our school pond. The boys did some good work in clearing the sticks and leaves off.

It is nearly time for my 2.15 class and I have to look over part of my lesson so I will stop. If I leave this to write more, no telling when it will get off. It has been here three days you see already.

I hope this finds everyone well. It may be in time for a Happy New Year but a little late probably. One letter lately written on the 3rd of November I received on the 26th, and answered on the 28th. How is that for speed? One week more of school and then vacation.

Mothers letter tells of the warm fall. Our killing frosts held off well too. I have not put on any warmer clothes except tight kneed union suits yet. Most of the children have though.

May God bless you all.

With lots of love

Mary Beard.

Dear Monny;-

I guess it is about time I scribbled the family a line and I guess it is fully your turn to get the letter.

That Thanksgiving and birthday box was a wonder. I had two feeds off of it and saved a piece of cake to munch on before going to bed every night. If I had such goodies very much I shure [sure] would get sick. The box made Thanksgiving seem more real. The rest of the day I did my regular work at the restaurant and studied. This is the first Thanksgiving I have eaten home cooking since the Army. I may be 25 years old, but I hardly feel it.

I just wrote out a mid semester test in Chemical Engineering I. I think I did pretty well on it. I ought to have because I studied hard enough for it, began reviewing a whole week before.

I'm coming home either Saturday the 16th or Sunday the 17th. This will be my first Xmas since 1917 with any of the family. When does vacation begin in Oberlin?

We had a good snow last night. When I went to bed at 2 a.m. it was snowing hard and continued snowing until nearly noon. I would like to see one of those regular old blizzards again. We'd have fun in the snowdrift Xmas time then.

I must get to studying again for a test in math and one in Spanish.

Sorry I could'nt write more.

With love to all
Gould.

Dear Aunt Mary and Aunt Flora,

Aunt Mary's letter with the handkerchief and Thanksgiving greetings reached us some time ago and we were glad to hear how you were doing. With as live a group as you have, a student council would be a grand success I should think. It must be fun starting it. I am enclosing a fine letter from Aunt Elizabeth that Father sent to me some days ago. She would make an interesting essayist on the philosophy of life, don't you think? I am also sending your pictures. Some are good, especially those of the steamer. The one of the group at Helper[?] is delightfully characteristic of each, I think. Isn't the one of you and Martha Tow on the deck fun? I'm glad I tried it! My teacher has come so I'll finish this later.

Dr. Russell is the son, I believe, of the one at Columbia. He gave us a very humorous address on the scientific method in spelling and experimented on us much to the chagrin of most of us! My Geographics have begun to come and are a joy.

Father has probably told you that Dr. Dyer, Misses Armstrong and Atwood had us to Thanksgiving dinner at noon that day. It seemed good to sit down with a small group and feel like a family. We did not any of us go to the baseball game in the afternoon, but heard it was good. The Consul's reception was really enjoyable- we used to dislike receptions at college so much. Then came the big Red Cross dinner at the Y.M.C.A. with four huge U.S. flags as decoration and patriotic songs between courses. For entertainment the committee gave us an uncensored film that drew a big audience and didn't disappoint anyone.

This is four days later. The week has been delightfully full of a variety of things. On Monday and Wednesday evening Miss Carter and I saw the last two divisions of a serial film at the Y.M.C.A. entitled "Vanishing Trails". Tho there was not much plot the horses and riding and the Western scenery was beautiful. The Chinese audiences were large, and several missionaries were very regular attendants.

On Wednesday four new pastors were ordained. Father was at the feast and all the ceremonies in the A.M. and I was much interested in the ordination in the P.M., the first I have ever seen. Already I have official duties in a Chinese organization as foreign secretary to the Union C.E. Society- - a mere figure-head. Their first meeting came this week. In between times Eunice Kinnear Boger and I have practiced violin duets for the Christmas Concert of the Anti-Cobweb Society, which came off last night. A choir sang carols, there were vocal and violin and piano solos, and a reading of one of Stevenson's Christmas letters to a friend in Canton having very fitting thots and sentiments. Eunice Boger is going to be a great addition to the community with her violin, and the Methodists have a new lady who is a fine pianist. The program was of fine quality all thru, not at all like the general idea of missionary entertainments. It was held in the house that was the French consulate when you were here, Aunt Flora, and later Mrs. Vintzner the fine pianist lived there.

Foochow students are going to make demonstration of protest against the way things are going in Washington this afternoon, I hear. Ever since the Pacific Conference began, the theme of our school chapel-talks, of sermons, and of prayers everywhere has been this conference. I fear China has expected too great things of it. Professor Munroe of Columbia who was here for three days in Nov., said China had not progressed at all since his last visit some years ago. He tried to show them that China's elements needed a binder before she would find herself as a nation. Things look rather sad for her don't they?

Last Sunday week Father and I spent at Diongloh. Father took a ten mile walk and horseback ride with Mr. Topping and Miss Nutting and I climbed a high hill back of their house. Coming down we were overtaken by the dark while scrambling down the stream bed and had the excitement of finding our path with the knowledge that tigers were not unknown in those parts. But I can recommend Diongloh for scenery and hiking possibility.

About the middle of Nov., Foochow had an epoch-making provincial track meet of ten days. She carried off first and third prizes against Amoy, but the mission schools have got some work to do to get and keep the athletic leadership as against the government schools, that took highest place this time. The most important day in the girl's world was the girls' exhibition and meet in the P.M. of one day. Dr. Grey of Shanghai who was umpire for the meet, said that no girls could have done better than the three hundred under our Wenshan physical instructor did - - - tho none of our girls were in the group. He also said that that was about the first time that girls have appeared in public in athletics in all China.

Our Christmas boxes for the girls here at school have come and it has been a happy surprise to Eunice to find the things so appropriate. Christmas is only a week off and celebrations in the churches begin tomorrow. The weather is so balmy still that I can't make the season real. You will be having a vacation soon. I hope you will find it restful. Merry Christmas to both!

In my language study I am starting to read Mark in character. The feeling for it is only just beginning to make itself felt, but it is fun. This last week the festival for helping the spirits of the dead over the Chinese River Stix have furnished much material for conversation with the teachers. One night some of us went into the city and saw a few of the shops arranged as booths and decorated with the richest heavy gold embroideries I ever saw. The crowds were large but on the whole very quiet.

My latest diversion is a bowl of four gold fish. They are pretty and I like to watch their mild antics.

Our mission Christmas party comes next Sat. night in the city. Being a lone lady with no family unit for the celebration of the day is a new feeling, and I can sympathize with Father in his four years here alone now. But we shall have so much to see about for the girls and the church doings that we sha'nt miss ours I guess.

We are both well and manage to see a good deal of each other at parties and meetings. I am now going in to unpack another box of family things with him.

This brings all good wishes for your health and the success of the school. We shall be very glad to see the photos when they come - we are waiting eagerly for them. If you want any more of mine I have the films and you can get them - - - the duplicate prints - - any time.

Very much love to you both,

Phebe K. Beard.

Lucy Lanktree left me her typewriter, and electric iron, so I am making the most of my opportunities! I still need practice!

This may be the ordination of four pastors that Phebe refers to in the previous letter. Willard stands in the back middle with Phebe K. Beard sitting in front of him. Willard writes on the back: First Class of Pastors trained in the Theological Seminary, Foochow, China. This was prior to the Union Theological Seminary. Giu Ging Nieng, Ung Huai lu, Bi Ek Di, Ma Liong Ing.

Dear Home Folk,

If I make mistakes, please lay them to the dark, for I am writing in poor light where I can see my keys but not my paper. The furnace in this house is out, because there was a part broken and there must be a new casting made. Two grate fires each with a register for the room above keep us fairly comfortably warm. We hope for the new parts by Friday.

Last week-end I spent in town with Cleora Wannamaker. It was the afternoon for College club but I could not get away so went up by the evening train. Cleora and I went to the movies at the Peking Union Medical College (commonly called the P.U.M.C.) It was an especially good film that night, Dorothy Gish in "Battling Jane". We chuckled all the way through. On Sunday morning we went to the P.U.M.C. again. This time for church, in the same auditorium. The British Legation rector spoke and gave his usual excellent, polished sermon. Mrs. Dunlap sang and was never in better voice. The day was fine and we two walked home in fine spirits. That afternoon we went to Miss Craig's for tea. That was at the P.U.M.C. too but at the nurses home. Then we were off to the Peking Hotel for the orchestra music. That would have been perfect if the audience had not contaminated the atmosphere with so much cigarette smoke. There were no flaws on the music. The Death Dance by Sibelius and Il Trovatore were my favorites on the program. That evening at the house we had some more music treat. Miss Lum and Dr. Farnum gave us some duets on the piano. Both are excellent musicians.

On Monday morning I received a note from Flora asking me to cease playing and chaperone some children who had to have their eyes tested. One boy was to have tests to determine whether an operation on his eyes were needed. I was at the hospital from 11.00 A.M. till time for the train. I did get in one piece of fun. I went to Language School for the first class.

Another week-end trip!! The men who were down for Thanksgiving wanted us (7) to come up two weeks ago for some fun at their expense. Unfortunately only two of us were free that week. We sent regrets and a suggestion that our vacation would be a good time for us to be away in large numbers, and the 17th was free if they wished to have us then. We went up at noon. It was Lun Fo Ssl day so we were lucky. I went and spent all my spare cash and some that I fear was not spare. I got a vase like that one I always called the Mohamedan one, shaped like this. [sketch] I also replaced the brass kettle which Grace took. My new one is not quite as large and is decorated. Nevertheless I got it cheaper. Some way the men wanted to sell and were ready to make prices reasonable. As we said, the Rockefeller crowd had inflated prices the last time I was there. Now Chinese New Years is not many moons away. The choicest purchase was a candle stick. At the bottom is a turtle (do not say it aloud, remember). Resting on that is a long legged stork. In his bill is a stalk of water lily, I guess, and for a flower is the holder for the candle. I have wanted one or two of those but have never seen one there before. It comes apart in three pieces so is handy to carry about.

We went to the Dean ['s] house for dinner. Mr. Sam Dean out here when we first arrived in 1914 and was one of the Peking folk I saw in New York last winter. His Younger brother and his father are now here. His father is principal of the much talked of Peking School. With them there are three other men, Mr. Glickoff who is Sam's assistant Dr. Bailey (I also saw him in N.Y. last winter) and Mr. Eshalmann. Mr. Crosby, Britisher, Bob Shaw from here (Tungchows only single man) and Carrington Goodrich were the men. There were Alice Huggins, Alice Harper, Frances King, Genevieve Young and myself from here. Martha Fenn was ill so could not come. Mable Craig a P.U.M.C. nurse was the only other girl. We judged that the chaperones were "Daddy Dean" and Dr. Bailey as they are both widowers.

Written in album: "Carrington Goodrich"

"Mable Craig and Bob Shaw"

Dec. 21. The folks came in for supper the other night and I went over with Flora and we addressed all those cards which you sent out. Those for the south had to be off to arrive on time.

To go on with the house party! We had a six course dinner so when we were through it was too late for the P.U.M.C. movies. But the men had promised movies so took us to the Pavilion where the opening is at 9.15 instead of 8.15 as at the other place. We missed the preliminary pictures but were in time for the serial film, "The Heart of a Child". It was good but showed a picture of high society life with which I am not familiar. I wondered with one of the other girls if people ever did act that way off the screen. We parted with the agreement to meet the next morning at 9.15 for a walk around the wall. Alice Huggins and I were together at Mrs. Cross's and thought we were late when we left the house at 9.30 but we were the first girls to arrive. It was 10.30 before we were off. The men had sent the lunch ahead by their boys to the Pin An Men (one of the city gates). We were glad to get to it, I tell you. It was so late that we took a cross city route home instead of finishing the wall. One of the men knew an interesting Temple near that gate so we visited that. It was the place where there are tablets to all the emperors back to mythical times. The huge size decorated and the columns which support it are tremendous. Along the back are alcoves with the tablets to the emperors. Anyone can worship there and the messages are supposed to get sorted somewhere and reach the right ancestor. One old hunchbacked attendant is in charge. If Mr. Dean sends me a print of myself which he took as I was sitting on one of the old turtles I will send you one.

We got back from the walk just in time to get the afternoon train for home. As Flora had left for Tientsin with the children and we had not a single plan made for Christmas, I was eager to get here so we could get busy early Monday morning. Mrs. Love had the regular service and read a charming story by Van Dyke.

Now for the school history. We had quite a siege of colds the last three weeks. One of the boys had a return of the cold after a two weeks of being up and came nearer to pneumonia than we liked. He came down so late that he is still here. Being a boy we sent him to the hospital and he was there till yesterday. Since two people, one a trained nurse, are going to his home on Friday for Christmas, they are to take him.

I have been making candy galore. We girls who were at the mens parties are sending them a huge box of candy for Christmas. It fell to the lot of two of us to do the work. Besides that Flora and I plan to give candy to some of the men in the compound. Today Margaret Smith and I made three batches of fudge and one of peanut brittle for soldiers. Different ladies in the compound furnished the materials. The Y.M.C.A. ladies send around every year and solicit candy for these Marines. Tungchow is feeling grateful to them for the protection they gave when the looting was done. Some of the ladies are making their own, so you can picture a number of boxes of good size going up from here.

The Academy boys are having an entertainment on Saturday evening and today we Foreigners began to practice for a double quartette. We ten teachers who are to be here are giving the Christmas supper here. We are making it a Christmas Eve supper since the real day is a Sunday. All the above entertainments is on that evening and is scheduled to open at 6.00 we are supping at 5.00.

With much love to each of you and a birthday greeting for Mother.

Mary.

Dr. Farnum, mentioned above, is from New Haven. She has long been interested in missions. She asked at once if I were one of the Shelton Beards. It seems that once she was out at Shelton to speak at a Mission meeting at Ruth's invitation. I think from what she said it was for the girls mission class she once had. Do you remember her?

We had Millet bread and milk for supper last night. It was so much like the corn bread at home that it made me homesick. The school gets only six quarts of milk for our big family. We do not dare to cut the amount during vacation for we did it once and the dairyman took on an extra customer. When we wanted the milk again we could not have it. Hence the luxury of bread and milk. What would happen if you, Father, did such a thing?

Dear Grandma:-

We received your nice letter with the check, and the family want me to thank you all for it. They will write individually soon.

I drove down here in a Ford Touring car. I exchanged my truck for a touring car and considerable money and hope to sell the car down here. Anyway I am giving the folks here a few rides while I have the car.

It has turned cold here also, not as cold as you speak of, but enough so to make fine skating and to make people glad of their warm houses.

Dot and Geraldine finished school yesterday and Kathleen and Monny will tomorrow so we will all be home for a week together anyway. We are very glad to hear that Grandfather is getting better, and hope he will be able to enjoy Xmas day in good health.

While driving down from Ann Arbor I had only one stretch of bad road.

Here's wishing you all a Merry Xmas and a happy New Year from the Oberlinites,

With love to all

Gould.

[The following is written in Ellen's handwriting:]

Dear Father,

Gould is letting me fill the space he left on his letter, to say a very sincere thank you, for the very generous gift you sent in that check which is very timely and greatly appreciated; only I feel it is more than we deserve. The parcel marked, "Not to be opened till Christmas", and indicated as coming from you people at Century Farm, Phebe and Elizabeth if I remember correctly, and addressed to me, arrived safely about a week ago. One very genuine thanks for that too, as a preliminary and more after Christmas; when visualization has made a more intelligent impression possible. Yours with the season's heartiest greetings to all, - Ellen.

Dear Home Folks,

This is last Sunday's letter. I'll progress backwards and tell the news. Today is the first day of the new term. We start with six absent. One has had flu and is not yet strong. A second is having a relapse of flu. A third had a slight attack of Diphtheria. A fourth is coming in to get placed before the second semester and was not fully ready. Another went a long way and either is awaiting a boat or trying to get through snow on the mountains. With him comes a new girl. Whether we are two more short depends on whether the girl who was so ill last term gets well to come later or not and whether the girl who had small-pox gets well soon. The latter was a pupil in the Shanghai school and was transferring here because we are more accessible. Yesterday we had additions to the family both at noon and at night. I was in town for the afternoon to get nine trunks which belonged to the fourteen children who came on the late auto. They arrived at 1.00 A.M., three loads of them. The buildings have all been scrubbed and polished.

We are having a new bookcase built into my school-room. It is to be big enough so the books will not have to lie on their sides to get them all in. Flora has accessed over a thousand books already and expects to have about five hundred more. If all were up to date instead of so old they are castoffs it would be fine. I do not object to castoffs except in Dictionaries and Encyclopedias and such reference works. Miss Ullum, of the Dunkard Mission is helping catalogue.

We teachers all went up to the Fenn's for New Years day. We were nine to receive so were glad of the spaces between callers. Mrs. Steinbeck who lives next door and received with us was a pupil of Phebe's at Framingham. She has two boys about seven and nine. They are new people for the Presbyterian Mission. She said she was back last commencement for reunion and the girls were wondering where Miss Beard was but were not able to find out. You will appear on the records of her class once more, Phebe. But think how far the word will have traveled! She was Miss Dickson(?) before married. Not sure.

We teachers were swell and returned by auto Monday evening. Two of us had expected to stay all night and the others were to come on the afternoon train so we compromised and took an auto. It was cold but five in a Ford closed car fills it so full there is no room for cold. We had the front full of bags so the second man had to ride on the running board. It would not be a typical Chinese machine if that were not so. Real high officials have from two to four outriders on the running board. Luckily the roads here are such that they are fairly good or impossible for autos. Also there are no hills and only a few inclines so slight that they have to be surveyed to identify them.

Last week Monday was College club and I went up and stayed with Cleora Wannamaker. I had invited her to go with me but she was ill. Instead I took Mrs. Sheffield. The entertainment was the reading of the lines of "Enter Madam" one of the successes on the New York stage last winter. I had not seen it and was glad to hear it. There was no attempt to act.

I returned Tuesday noon and went up again on Wednesday to attend a wedding. It was a horrid windy day but the wedding was a pretty one, all pink and white. On Thursday I again took the train. This time for a Holyoke tea. We met with some Chinese English speaking women to talk over some of the potent questions of the day. It is an effort to get the real Chinese point of view of national and international questions. If we are always as frank as that time we will all benefit from the discussions. We took as a started for discussion the article in the Nov. Atlantic on "What Delays Disarmament?" It bears largely on the Chinese question as the key note to the difficulties. As to the results of the talk, I am like the girl in my class; I do not know enough to talk yet.

I think I wrote about our week-end in Peking as guests of the men. We girls sent them a huge box of candy for Christmas. One of them wrote that he did not know such candy could be made! How is that when one other girl and I made it all? I had a regular candy spree. Margaret Ann Smith and I got our hands in on that for the men so offered to make for the soldiers if the people here would furnish the material. The result was four messes of fudge, of four cups each and one of peanut brittle. Then F. and I were to give candy to all the men in the compound and that meant considerable as there are seven. I had thought to have some for the compound supper which we teachers were giving but my courage failed as it meant make it all alone. The only new kind I tried was caramels. Mrs. Martin had the responsibility of those but I helped with the elbow greece.

We decorated the dining rooms for the supper and had candles and flowers on the table. The Stelles had the Gilbert Ried family down for the holidays so they came too. He is the man who was so pro-German that he was given free transportation to the Philipines during the war. I fear their reception in Peking is not very cordial. She is a dear but he is a boar. I used my new candle stick of which I wrote and burned one of the bayberry candles. In was the honered centerpiece. No-one at the table had ever seen one except F. and Miss Bostwick.

The Academy boys always give an entertainment the night before Christmas so we did not linger long at our supper. Eight of us had been practicing to sing some songs as part of the program. We made a hit as it always pleases the boys for us to take part in their fun. They gave a play, several gymnastic stunts, a pantomime, two series of Chinese songs and I know not what else as we were an hour late in arriving. Their big idea is to give one their moneys worth.

On Christmas morning Flora and I and the three members of the King family were guests at the Martins. We had sent all packages over the night before and the two boys had fixed the tree and hidden the gifts. It took a long time to find them all and get them opened. Mother I put your gift given last August among those I sent over and was careful that Flora not I found it. She was surprised! I got four pretty handkerchiefs, a string of beads, a vase, a bureau scarf, a tape measure, two books, a fern, a box of candy, a dress pattern (from F.), a box of writing paper (from Hattie Beard), and many cards. I left out two of the best, a bunch of pictures from Phebe K. and one from Cleora W. on the trip out. I sent snaps to them too.

At last the $15,000 from the Russel Sage Foundation is assured. We got the word on Christmas day. The architect has gone to work anew on the plans and we hope to start digging by March at the latest.

I am sending a letter from Phebe K. which is full of bits of news you will like to read.

The girls are going to bed and it is my rule (now that I have neighbors with only a door between) not to use my machine after lights out. I insist on their being quiet. By what right do I disturb them?

Best wishes and a Happy Birthday to Mother on the 30th. I wonder if the tea cloth will grace the table on that day or the new one of which I have heard.

I have part of my curtains up. They are made of the ?? you gave me mother and are very pretty.

Lots of love to all,

Mary.

I do not know Mrs. Steinbeck's maiden name, Phebe, nor does Martha. It may be Dickson or Alden as those are her boys names.

January 16, 1922

Dear Home Folks,

Yesterday a grand surprise arrived, the new dress. It is a bit too large so will have to be refitted on the shoulder, but is just what I am needing. My old brown dress has been doing duty for everything. I like the style too, the long lines the military braid the buttons and every thing. Many thanks for all the trouble of getting it and sending.

On Saturday there was another surprise, a letter from Mother enclosed with Miss Bassett's. I was glad to hear that Father is better. What a joy the new toilet will be. I wonder that we, or you had not had it before. I can picture it on the house all right. But where do you have your bed now, Mother? The door must be back of where it used to stand.

Flora is better now. In the beginning of vacation she had a return of the dizziness she had that summer we were at Kuling [not Kuliang]. It lasted all vacation but she would not give up as she had her heart set on working on the library. When school opened it was no better so she has been taking a partial rest cure by going to bed early and getting up too late for breakfast. She came over about 8.15 for hers. She is now better, but not all right. Today she goes in to Peking to the LunFu Ssl as it is the last day we can get there before Chinese New Years. As all debts must be paid on that date it is a good time to get things reasonable at the Chinese fairs.

I received two of my luncheon sets from the Gung Chang this week. Would that I could send them so you could see them, for they are beauties. One goes to Edythe and the other to Joel and Grace [cousin Joel Beard, b. July 3, 1859]. I think I must get you one with the large individual doilies as they are pretty. The one in colors (not blue only) for Leolyn is not done yet. They got out of green so had to wait.

You must have been surprised at the engagement of David Booth. I wonder any woman has courage to accept one of those confirmed old bachelors. Lets hope she has the right hold on them and makes them less queer.

This morning came the photographs of Nancy and Stephen. We think them very good. The photographer must have been a good one to catch that full face one with those lights in both their eyes.

We would like a little of your rain, Mother. We had about half an inch of snow two weeks ago and that is all the moisture we have had since I arrived in September. That did not last long for the air was so dry. At first it evaporated before it reached the ground. The skating has been fine. Our pond was reflooding and now a sprinkling twice a week or so keeps it smooth and nice. I went last Saturday evening for the first time. Alas my left skate would not stay on well so I did not spend the whole evening. I am taking my shoes to the shoe maker to see if he can fix the soles a little heavier for the clamps to cling to.

Monday evening, after my trip to Peking.

Yes I did find things reasonable at Lun Fu Ssl. I bought two candle sticks. The base is a lily pad with a toad crawling up it. The standard is a stork with a branch of a lily in its mouth. A lily pad with a cup for a flower holds the candle. It is bronze and the stork has one wing flat to his side and the other raised.

Tues. P.M. when one gets in at 4.30, takes time for tea, puts away ones purchases, reads a letter and washes off the dirt of the city, it is nearly time for supper. Monday is my night in study hall and that means I do not get back till time for lights out. As four girls sleep next me and I insist on their being silent, I have to live up to the same rule. Today is our coldest day. The thermometer was only 2 above zero at 7.30 this morning. It had risen to 12 at 12.30.

If anyone admires your cross stitch piece and longs for one, I can get them one of that size with six oblong doilies, and six napkins to match for from ten to twenty dollars. The difference in price is determined by the pattern as some take more time and thread. If they want any color other than blue it will also be more. They make a fascinating pattern with a Peking cart, a man carrying two things on a pole, a donkey, a big pilo (arch) all in colors. Miss Harper paid 8.50 for the work only on some home linen she had.

Do you remember the high brown shoes I got at Hubble Brothers? I have just used them for a pattern and had another pair made. It is not so much cheaper getting them out here for I paid $18.00 for them. For two days I have worn them all day and find them satisfactory. I am using the others for skating and have an extra heavy sole put on.

Stupid me! I have lived in the same compound for four months with Robert Shaw and just last night learned that he knew Phebe K. Gould and Geraldine at Oberlin. There are over 50 Oberlin graduates in China. All the Shansi work is supported by them and largely manned by them.

Last week I took my Science class out twice to observe the heavens. First we studied constellations and the last time the moon was too bright for that so we borrowed Mr. Martin's telescope and looked at the moon. The instrument is a small one but a very good one. It was made by a Mr. Brasear whose business was grinding lenses but who worked for the love of working and charged only enough to cover expenses. In fact on this instrument he was out something because it was a special order and it cost more to make a single one. It was sent Mr. M. by a Miss Hazen whom I knew slightly at college.

Last Friday night we had a Pastime Club meeting in the form of a country school. I played schoolmarm. You should have seen me! I wore that old black silk coat that was Aunt Louise's with huge puffy sleeves and a fit like a kid glove. For a skirt I borrowed from Mrs. Howard Smith as she is taller than I and very short waisted. Mrs. Gordon furnished a high lace collar as I had given you, Mother, my last one. For long sleeves I used a shirtwaist and put deep frills at the cuffs. My hair I did on top of my head in a tight psyche knot. The children were all very young to judge from dress and style of hair dress.

We have just gotten over a siege of flu. One day there were seven in bed. All those are out and one new case started today. This extremely cold weather calls for constant care to see that the children wear sufficient clothing.

I must get to studying my science lesson as I am leading the class for review instead of trusting it to the pupils. Next week is review till Thursday then examinations for three days.

A Happy birthday to you Father. I do hope it finds you feeling better too.

With much love

Mary

Wed. P.M. Jan 18th 1922.

P.S. The committee is still working on the plan for our new dormitory.

Mary.

[This letter, dated February 1, 1922, was written from Tunghsien (Tungchow), China by Mary to the home folks. She met with other Holyoke grads and they discussed the political situation in China. The bricks have arrived for the new school building. She tells about the various people they socialize with. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Tunghsien, Chihli. February 1, 1922. [Tunghsien is the same as Tungchow/Tungchow according to the ABCFM. Looking at an old map, it appears that Tunghsien is an area in which Tungchow is located.]

Dear Home Folks,

Someway my Sundays are too full to get in letters these days. Last Sunday I was in Peking. The Holyoke girls met for the second time with the Chinese ladies for discussions. We started with current events in China and had a very clear presentation of the situation. 'Liang Shir I' was originally invited because of his wealth. He has lost that as the present state of the Bank of Communications shows, he having been the power behind that. Altho he is southern, yet the northerners have not entirely lost faith in him. They are in the position of "watchful waiting". If he proves good all right, if not he goes as the others have. Wu Pei Fu is also being weighed in the balance and Chang Tso Lin has entirely lost out except as he has control of his army and is feared for that reason. Susan Stiller wanted me to stay till Monday so I did. She had Mrs. Porter in for dinner on Sunday and we talked till late to get my train anyway. Mr. and Mrs. Steinbeck were in for supper.

On Monday morning I had a good time with 20 months old Martha. She is not perfectly well yet not sick. But it makes her somewhat hard to get acquainted with. Billy, aged 5 is a dear, a bit quaint because his mother and father are so scholarly that he has a vocabulary of big long words one does not expect in such a little fellow.

Last week was examination week. Mine came on Thursday and Friday mornings so I was able with a little extra effort to get them all corrected before going to Peking. My grades, I finished yesterday. Two children are failures in my work and I am recommending them to go back.

A week ago last Thursday we had a very anxious time here. Bergen Stelle of whom you know had been ill with a slight attack of the flu. That night he was taken with a heart attack and nearly died. Once the heart missed twelve beats. His exceptionally good health during his fifteen years and Dr. Loves immediate presence pulled him through. He is improving steadily but slowly. This makes the second of our seniors to have to stop work. Both are full young, graduating before sixteen. Both had flue and after bad results.

On Monday, Jan. 23 the first bricks for the new school building arrived. Over 70,000 were here before Chinese New Years and many loads have arrived since. The piles begin to look imposing they are so big. A little sand is also here. But the plans are not yet complete. The architect told Flora last week that he would be down this week with them. They have had to be cut and cut to get a structure within our means. The first draft would have needed 60,000, or twice what we have.

Three times lately I have had a nice walk out the new road toward Tientsin. It is a nice place to walk because it is less dusty than the much used roads, and because it is comparatively free of traffic. Since it is incomplete and not open to traffic, only an occasional rickshaw or foot passenger uses it. Villages or boundary posts mark convenient distances for short, medium or long walks. I have yet to take the very long walk.

On Monday last we were gay here. Most of the mission schools are having holiday so all the ladies from Te Chow are in Peking. Five of them and two young men from Harbin, Y.M.C.A. were down for the afternoon. The men came to us with letters from the father of two of our girls and knew all the Harbin crowd. As the "crowd" are all girls and they wanted to show off the campus, I became chaperone and went to see the "round corner", the goats, the pigs, the dairy, and to climb the Academy tower for a view of the campus and surrounding country. Miss Huggins had a special tea so everyone would surely see the Te Chow people.

On Tuesday a party of seven ladies came down by pisa on the canal. They brought most of their lunch but Flora made soup and coffee for them. Then we gave them tea before train time. As they were not special friends of the people here we did not invite in extra guests.

Feb. 3. When I had finished the first sheet of this letter, I put on a sheet to make out my list of books I would like added to our library and that covered the whole sheet. We were to make a very full list.

Yesterday we had Mrs. Sheffield and Mrs. Stelle in for tea. That takes more time than when we are alone. Afterward Miss Fenn, Mrs. Hunter and I went for a walk as far as the gate. We did it rapidly so as to get good exercise altho but little of it. Mr. Hunter is in Peking and his wife does not like to stay alone so Martha and I went over there to sleep last night. Then we stayed for breakfast too. It is nice occasionally to hear the bell and not heed it. Our bells ring so loud that they are heard all over the compound, even when rung inside.

I am sending a snap-shot of Flora. It is very good, especially of the new coat. I had mine taken at the same time to show off my stole that I knitted but though the stole is good, I am so awful that I shall try again.

Written in album: "Flora 1921"

Among other things I have a multitude of feet. Mine are big enough without duplicating. The other picture is of the house in which I am living this year. The windows with the crosses over them are mine. They face south-west, by west. The upstairs porch of which you see the end is where ten girls sleep. The front windows are those of a room for four girls. All the downstairs windows belong to the dining rooms. In the rear are the kitchen and servants quarters.

Phebe, I talked of Mr. Sherk to Flora but she was not enthusiastic. I am, for I know the man and have faith in him. Just before your letter, came the one from the man who is marrying a girl all know and for her sake he has a big pull. Also a man out here is a possible candidate and his nearness is an asset. I know very little about the whole thing. I have been informed that someone has applied and that the application is highly pleasing to all. Naturally I felt a little queer under the circumstances. One thing, it relieves me of any feeling of responsibility. Now I hope to spend next summer with Willard and Phebe, since I am thus free.

I had a nice letter from Hattie telling of the fine trip Frank and Nellie had. I wonder if Nellie is not the better for it?

I wonder if you have succeeded in getting more men? Little Ethel seems to be making good as far as she goes. I remember the day she was "still doing dishes", and wonder that she sticks to the job. With nine to feed and clothe I should think her parents would be glad of what she can earn.

I am sending a letter of Phebe K. altho it is dated November. It gives some of her first impressions very graphically and I know you will enjoy it. If you have had the same thing already, just do not read it.

I am still hopeful that someday I can write accurately on my machine. You know the story of "Try, try, again." I did all my examination questions on it and it took less time to correct them than when I have done it at earlier dates. I go to the dentist Monday to get my broken tooth mended. Lots of love to you all Mary

[This typewritten letter, dated February 12, 1922, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the home folk. She suggests that the home folk could get a commission for selling her Chinese merchandise. They went to the Lantern Festival but because of the presence of soldiers not one lantern was lit. Some Chinese authorities did not want the missionaries to be disappointed over this, so they sent them a big box of fireworks with a promise to build a stage to shoot them off. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S. February 12, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

Last Monday I sent by 'sample post' a parcel to each of the three ladies. These are the contents;

Mother's : bureau scarf and tray cloth.
Phebe's : chain white carved beads,
 " white (glass?) beads
 " blue pressed beads.
Elizabeths : 6 bags and 1 bib.

If you are to be agent for selling and I for buying, you ought to get a commission. The girls out here are carrying on regular business at the following rates. After costs here at current exchange (buying price and postage) and costs at your end (possible duty) have been added then the buyer gets 40% of the gain and the seller 60%. That means, as is true, that the seller has the hardest job. Hence I will give my actual cost prices and you can charge what you judge things are worth. In some cases I may suggest prices, but please do not consider them binding. If you want anything for yourselves, they are at cost price. silver

Bureau scarf - $1.75 @ 170 is 1.00 gold. Postage 20 cents
Tray cloth at 1.00 @ 170 is .60 gold. Postage 20 cents
White beads 3.50 @ 170 is 2.10
Blue beads 2.50 @ 170 is 1.50 postage 24 cents
White glass 2.50 @ 170 is 1.50
6 bags @ 40 cents each
 2.40 @ 170 is 1.50 postage 24 cents
Bib .35 @ 170 is .20

I should suggest charging at least the silver price; and double the gold for the linens anyway. I hope I wrapped the things securely and that they arrive safely. Phebe, please do take the money as you suggested and repay yourself for the $20 for my dress. Miss Brewster will be sending $6.03 someday also .90 cents for the tea Mr. Sanford had.

I also owe Father $18.40 for life insurance which he paid in November. So if I go over please give the extra to him. I send a draft perhaps, but it is better to send things if you want them for it supplies your wants and pays my debts too.

A week ago last Sunday I was in Peking at Susan Stifler's. We had a second meeting of the Holyoke group and the Chinese ladies. Mrs. Read was our hostess. We admired her house and got an interesting story. The owner is very artistic and put much heart and soul into planning his home. It has foreign windows, a cellar, glassed porches to protect it from the north winds, double windows, the protection of servant quarters in the front and other things. When he got it done he entertained his chief and showed him all the fine points. Says the chief "It is very fine. Tomorrow you may move out and I will move in." He had to do it. Now he rents only to foreigners in order to keep the man out. We did not learn how he manouvered to get the man out at all.

On Tuesday I had tea with Mrs. Howard-Smith. We planned for a Mrs. Wiggs party to be given at her house, on Friday. Every one was asked to dress for a special part and we acted impromptu some of the most dramatic scenes. It was a jolly evening, but a long one. Mrs. Howard-Smith gave a first and second prize. I got first. It was a half dozen place cards. Do you remember the little dolls dressed in silk and with double fronts? They had been taken and split so both faces could be used. Then they were pasted on stiff paper with a butterfly cut to look as though it were held by the figure. That was for the name. If there are any left and you want to use them thus, please do. They would be darling for a childrens party.

Last Wednesday evening seven of us had a party in Miss King's room. Her brother had been ill and she had provided grape juice for him. But he recovered before it was gone. Hence she made some grape sponge to use it before it could work. We had cake, apricot pits, crackers and cheese, and cocoa also, hence quite a feast. We read several chapters of Mrs. Wiggs aloud in preparation for Friday night.

I have been making a list of misspelled words from my science class. Writing the above sentence reminds me of it. One boy used "allowed" in a similar phrase. Did you ever use "sault" on your table? "Dose" the "due" fall or rise on a damp night? The wind "blue" very hard here one night, and "shoke" the house. I realize that I live in a glass house mother, but yet I chuckle over the above.

Saturday was "Lantern Festival" and in the evening all the boys went into the city to see the sights, also Mr. Martin and four of us teachers went in another party. There was not a single lantern. No ice lanterns had even been made and the shops had not lit the few lanterns they had hung inside. There was not a flower-pot but only a very few Roman candles and crackers. We were prepared for the disappointment, as the soldiers of Chang Tsao Lin who looted the city a year ago last August are still in possession and if a shop keeper had any money he is not parading the fact. Soldiers were every where, standing around or marching along the streets. They were rude and bumped one quite unnecessarily. There were a few people on the streets but no crowd. Evidently we were observed by some in authority, for yesterday came to Mr. Martin two huge boxes of fireworks and the promise of men to erect the stage necessary for putting them off properly any night we wish. The accompanying note said the doner understood that "several Little Preachers" went into the city to see and hear on Saturday and the giver did not want them to be disappointed so sent the fire works for us. The man is one who knew Dr. Sheffield very well and feels a keen interest in all us foreigners. The boxes are so big and heavy that it took $2.00 to fee the men who carried them out.

Just at present all are well. We have had a few colds but nothing worse. Bergen is mending slowly. His heart is not right and the Doctor will not let him even feed himself yet, nor see any one. Gertrude Martin has had a very slight case of scarlet fever so is in quarantine. No one says the name out loud and the period for fear of more cases is getting near its end.

I must get a new ribbon [typewriter ribbon] for this is quite gone in spots. I wonder if they are the ones I used so hard when I first started? I surely do use this machine, for letters, tests, lists and every available chance I can.

Did I write that Bob Shaw who lives in the compound knows Phebe Kinney? He is an Oberlin man of recent date. Mr. Mior has been here over Sunday but did not remember any of the Beards. He knows two or three who graduated ahead of her.

If you want a good book, light but wholesome, read "Much ado about Peter" by Jean Webster. "The Children of the Whirlwind" by Leroy Scott is another good one. But it is not as good as "No 13 Washington Square" by the same author.

We teachers have taken some nice walks these last weeks. We are of one mind, that exercise is a necessity of life and there is always one who has energy to pull the rest out. The new road is a pleasant place to walk too and that helps.

Lots of love to every body.

Mary.

Finished Feb. 23.

Dr. Smith gave us a fine talk on the Moslems yesterday. He had maps to show how they had spread and told how it was done. "Every Mohammedan merchant is a missionary of his religion."

Dear Home Folks,

Longer than I like has passed since my last letter. We are having a siege of colds again. I took a "knock out dose" last Saturday evening and got over mine without having it. Miss King is not so fortunate and has gone to bed today after fighting a cold for some days. Two of the girls are down too. Hearts or rheumatism are the favorite turns for the flu now. Both mean a long siege and they seem to get confused and the patient to have one one day and the other the next.

We had a joyous occasion here last Wednesday, the 22nd when we broke ground for the new building. Flora called us all with the bell. We formed a huge semicircle and Dr. Smith stepped out and removed the first shovel-full of dirt. Then all of us took a turn. The sister classes made joint holes and there was great rivalry to see which would get the biggest one before the luncheon bell should ring. In the afternoon they had a mock track meet. We teachers had to run one race, a 100 yard dash so we ran it crab fashion. Every child wanted to enter every event so more numbers were cut out than run. I timed the relay race and it took 35 minutes. Flora had a teachers meeting for the late afternoon so we left early. I was glad of an excuse to go for it was a cold raw day and one got chilled standing around.

I must get a new ribbon [typewriter ribbon], but every time I have been in town lately there have been so many school errands that I have not done a thing for myself. I am helpless inasmuch as I may not get off except on Mondays.

Last Saturday I went in for another meeting of the Holyoke girls with the Chinese women. Mrs. Frame was with us for the first time. We talked of home costumes, marriage, and funeral costumes. The present mixture of Chinese and foreign make any statements only conditional. One unfortunate thing is that the non-Christian element is adopting the trivial and meaningless little things of our marriage ceremony and not the more serious. Our Chinese friends seemed to feel that was in danger of becoming a serious danger as the same ones tend to drop the serious part of the native costumes also. Of course the Christian element recognizes the better part and holds to it. These transition days are interesting. But if the people learn not to reverence their household gods but do not learn to reverence anything in its stead, one can hardly expect them to adopt anything but the superficial. It is the same with styles. The highest heels are on their shoes instead of the native flat soles; the ornate in furniture, not the simple lines. Just like the foreigners who come to America and whom you see so much.

I wish I could share my malt candy with you. I am munching some as I write. I had some made with peppermint in it to take to Susan Stifler last week. It is hard to get a little made so I had a whole dollars worth. Part I am saving to take to Mrs. Ingram next week. She has invited both Flora and me for the week-end. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton is out for three months and there are to be receptions for him on Saturday and Monday and a special service on Sunday at which he speaks. He spoke last Sunday for the first time but is to be here for three months. His daughter is teaching at Yen Ching college.

Mr. Josselyn, Jean Dudley Josselyn's husband has had to go to the Phillipines with the Minister and party as official interpreter. Jean and baby have moved to her sisters and Dr. Boynton and daughter have taken her house for the five or six weeks Mr. J. is to be away. The party have gone to the Islands for the wedding of one of the daughters. If they stayed here a big function would be expected and the bride did not want a big wedding. Of course it sounds well to say that one wants to be married on American soil. I do hope that our next representative has a family of whom we can be more proud. These girls have the name of being "game" for anything, drink, tobacco, etc.

Last Saturday was Flora's birthday. Yet I missed all the celebration by going to Peking. I had planned a tea with birthday cake, coffee candy and sandwiches. Meanwhile Mrs. Gordon without a word had a big dinner all planned with all the compound invited. It was to be a surprise for me too. But alas I had accepted an invitation for dinner in Peking that night so had to accept. I told her it was not wise in this busy world to try to surprise too many at once.

I have received two Sentinels recently. The first told of Mr. Hall's death and the last of the funeral. He will be a great loss to our church. The paper did not say the cause of death. The Mason funeral must have been impressive.

This week has brought letters from Gould and from Stanley. Also one from the matron of Monticello [school in Godfrey, Ill. where Mary taught] the last two years I was there. Her daughter has married an officer and he is being transferred to Peking. She would like to get a job out here and wrote me to see if I could help her out. I have recommended her to the board. That is all I can do.

Dr. Arthur Smith brought me an interesting letter to read today. It is from a woman who was teacher at Monticello when he was there as a boy. His father was pastor of the local church and the family lived in the school. She had read the account of the golden wedding in the Missionary Herald. She is 91 and three quarters years old, but writes a clear hand, in pencil of course.

We read much in the papers of political conditions but nothing of it all disturbs the peaceful routine of our work. As far as we can ascertain the premiership is still a mottled question. Everyone predicts that there will be a conflict of arms before the affair between Wu and Chang is settled. Like the armies of Caesar's day, the Chinese wait for warm weather before starting the conflict.

Friday afternoon. This has been another rainy day, that is it has been very damp and a fine mist has descended most of the time. It has been cold too. Tomorrow Flora and I go to Peking for Dr. Boynton's reception, and the week-end with Mrs. Ingram. Mrs. I. gets good reports from Robert who graduated here last June and is now in Oberlin College.

Stanley's letter said nothing of the little trinkets I sent the children and which ought to have arrived soon after Christmas. There has been considerable trouble about packages reaching their destinations and I wonder if they too are lost.

I am going to send this off lest it get stalled over Sunday. I'll have my new ribbon before I write again.

With lots of love

Mary.

March 20, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

I have been so busy being advertising agent and also one of the "all-star" cast that my school work has had a hard time not getting neglected. Tomorrow is the great day, March the twentieth. "The Rajah's Revenge", a movie of surpassing interest, a masterpiece, a mile of smiles, would make a horse laugh, first production and only such like expressions I have clipped from advertisements or printed in colors, nine sheets in all. Perhaps you guess what is going to happen! The much anticipated Teacher's party is about to come off, but it is to be a mock movie instead of the usual evening of games. We start with a dinner at 6.45, extra courses, decorations, menu, pretty dresses, etc.

The doors to the theater are to open at 8.20, but the play not till 8.30. Flora is the Rajah of Bjaddjab and for a cigar has a flash light like your big one. It is delightfully funny when she takes a big puff and makes it light. I am the heroin and have a toy dog with which I play incessantly. The Vamp powders her nose every few minutes, especially just before she stabs herself because the hero is true to me. I elope with a second man because the vamp has tried to steal my lover. I give him my ring and when he is killed by the Rajah I hunt through his pocket and find the ring. You see we have taken a tragic plot and made it ridiculous. We had to auction off the two boxes at the theater because they were in such demand. One went for 1500 pins and the other for 1502. When all is over we are returning the pins.

After the play everyone adjourns to the room downstairs and we serve ice cream and cake. To keep up the movie illusion we are borrowing a victrola and some jazz and other light music.

Last time I wrote Flora and I had just been to Peking for the weekend if I remember rightly. It was a good time and a restful one too. We visited the Shaw baby, had lunch with Cleora Wannamaker, went to church and talked. On Monday I visited all the rug shops and then went to Mrs. Fette and ordered Leolyns rug. It will have a border of water waves and rocks and a big dragon sprawled all over the center. It is some different from what we talked of but her ideas were very hazy and she said to get what I thought pretty.

Last Sunday Cleora spent with me. She came on Friday night and had to return Sunday evening. We made caramels and they were good. This is her receipt [recipe]. The easy method appeals to me for I helped Rose Martin make some and it meant standing over the stove for over an hour and stirring constantly.

3 squares chocolate

½ cup milk (or more if you wish).

½ cup molasses or corn syrup

1 cup chopped nuts.

Cook all the ingredients together except vanilla and nuts, to temperature 254F or till it forms a hard ball in cold water. Add nuts and vanilla and pour out immediately. Do not stir while cooking.

It will be chewy when still somewhat warm and very hard when thoroughly cold. Mrs. Gordon said it needed a day off to eat it after it was cold. That was because I waited until it was hard before cutting it and it was such hard work I left it in big pieces. Regular all-day suckers.

The American Board had a joint meeting with the Peking station last week so we had a big crowd down. Then too our girls had a match in Indoor Baseball that afternoon and many came down to watch that. There were enough to fill a whole car going up. Our girls won 23 to 18. For awhile it was a tie and excitement ran high.

On Wednesday morning a gang of men came with picks and shovels and began work on the cellar of our building. We were getting jealous of Dr. Smith as the digging there began on Monday. Now ours is so deep we can not see the diggers as we pass. Mr. Martin opens ground for his building on this coming Saturday. Bricks, dirt and lime pits are every where with the three buildings.

About noon today the wind began to rise and the dust has been thick every since. Those here last year make believe they can not see it there is so little of it. The sunshine is now coming through but it is blue in color.

We have had a nice lot of papers recently and this week came a book "In Red and Gold" from Miss Brewster. I did enjoy the "Wang the Ninth" so much. I have some lace collars which I shall send next time I get into Peking, there is one for each of you. I do hope you have spring suits or dresses that need them. I have one of the Italian Filet ones on the black dress you sent and it dresses it up beautifully. I am glad it is black and just the style it is. It gets so many complements that if I took them to myself I should be to vain for endurance. I wear it for week-ends to town, for teas, to read a paper for the Mothers Club, for church etc. It is my one and only as the gown is too soiled to feel comfortable altho it does not look as badly as it feels.

I also will send a dozen hair nets of the kind I get for 50 cents a dozen. If you like them, better let me keep you supplied. I can get darker ones sometimes but these were the darkest they had the day I was in the Exchange. That industry was a part of the famine relief work. As it is still in demand they keep it up.

Yesterday we had the second recital of the year. Jean's violin pupils all played, and did exceptionally well. One girl especially got feeling out of her instrument. One of the girls expressed it nicely, "She looked out of the window and it was as though she got her music from the tree tops."

We are now wondering if we will not be preacherless today. Mr. Shwartz was to come down by auto and altho the wind has abated it is far from calm. A raised road across a plain is an ideal place to catch the wind, as I know from experience.

Phebe and Elizabeth, will you please write me what colors you would prefer in a silk dress. I will get your preference if I can. As I shall get them to send by Flora there is no great hurry altho I may need to look more than once to get what I and you want. (Please lay the awful error on word order to the effect of teaching Latin where the above would be correct.)

Evening. Mr. Shwartz did come and give us a fine sermon. The theme was visions of worth and worth of vision. He is a man with vision therefore a good one to give such a talk. They had a closed car so his wife and four year old son came too. They are leaving for America in June. The P.U.M.C. in letting him go and planning to put a Chinese in his place. Too bad. Mrs. Shwartz knew Mr. Williams who preached in Trumble [possibly Trumbull, CT] once.

All the girls are in their rooms tonight as Flora thought to save one trip through the dust for most of them by not having a song service. Mrs. Gordon has some in her room and the others are down in the dining room reading. Our room lights are not good enough to read by. Did Flora write you that we had $2000 given especially for an infirmary and $1000 for electric lights? Fortunately the gift came in time but we are to put them in and trust that the rest will be forth coming.

I do hope the next mail brings word that all is well with you all. It is long since we have heard but I dare not talk for it is two weeks since I have written and I fear longer since Flora did so. Vacation begins this coming Thursday. Some of us hope to get to the Western Tombs for a few days. I have been once but want to get away and the crowd is a good one to go with.

Much love to every one of you. If Stanley is around, extend birthday greetings.

Mary.

[This typewritten letter, dated April 8, 1922, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the folks. There is a World Student Christian Federation Conference in Peking with over 800 delegates. She tells about her vacation and the visit to the Eastern Tombs. Preparations for the new school building progresses. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

April 8, 1922.

Dear Folks,

I am surely absent minded to start this way. But you will forgive me I am sure. School reopened on the 6th. All are back except the Merrick girls who are staying to get their tailoring and shoe making done so as not to have to leave until the last minute to get their boat for home on the 3rd of June; and the Dildine children, both of whom have been ill.

If I remember rightly I wrote last before vacation. I went to Peking on the morning train on Friday the 24th with the children, and did some necessary shopping and left a dress to be cleaned. The afternoon I spent in correcting papers as I had given three tests the last days and most of the papers were to be done after the children left. My marks were not all done when I left on the evening train Saturday for the meeting of the Holyoke girls and Chinese women. We met with the bride of eight weeks and there were eleven of us. The subject was the renaissance movement in China. The anti-religionists had just come out with their articles in the papers and it seems that the Chinese papers had been having them for some time. The movement started in Shanghai and has spread so that city, Tientsin and Peking are all big centers. Dr. Mott says it is a good thing to have them in the open, and he plans to have interviews with some of the most noted leaders. The head of one of the largest government schools in Peking is a strong anti-religionist, so are some of the literary men of note. The World Student Christian Federation Conference is the cause of the present outburst.

There are over 800 delegates to the said conference so no visitors are allowed. I hear there are 34 nationalities represented and all are in native costume. The negro, a man of fine physique and strong character is attracting much attention. The costumes are much talked of too. You see we are getting only the superficial setting yet, as the meetings last till tomorrow evening. On Monday they all go to Tientsin for a reception by Ex-president Li Yuan Hung.

To return to vacation. I came down on Monday by the noon train. Four of us were to go to the Hsi Ling, or Eastern Tombs, on Wednesday. That meant leaving here Tuesday night as the train leaves Peking at 7.30 in the morning. We had not all been together to complete plans so Alice Harper and I were to do it. Alas, I found she had gone to the city to see a friend who had telegraphed they were there for two days only. I gave the orders to the cook and got some of my things ready. Tuesday we packed food, dishes, bedding and personal things and were off on the night train. In the meanwhile I had been to a tea at Miss Ingrams and to call on Mrs. Howard-Smith. She had heard of her Father's death and Flora and I did not want to let the vacation go without calling.

We stayed at the Hostel of the Language School. If they have room they are glad to take people in for 75 cents a night and 50 cents per meal. I shall patronize them when I am to catch early trains and use a stopping place as a convenience with no time for any visiting. On the return, I was there from 8.30 P.M. till 5.30 A.M.

We had good weather, altho it was a little cold nights and mornings. The yamen has stone floors and no heating facilities. We wore our fur coats to eat in when at the rooms. I took my camera and got some fine views, 23 in all. One film got light struck so every one I took was good. The others took a few, about a dozen. It was good to go again for now I have a clear idea of the whole while before it was most confused. There is so much to see, it needs time to keep it straight. I'll send you some pictures with the description soon.

I got home from there on Saturday morning. Alas I got up for the 6.00 A.M. train and missed it by three minutes. I was cross with myself. The servant was not up when I got to the gate and I waited for him, instead of going on and letting him get the train if he could. I had to get here for a shampoo, pack, unpacking and repacking so came down by rickshaw. It was 9.30 when I arrived. The baggage was in town so I had my ebolutions [ablutions-cleansing] before lunch to save time. It was out of the question to go back on the noon train because the other girls had gone on to the wall and there was no one to see to the food and things we had brought back. Hence I got up for the early train on Sunday morning and was off for Tientsin to visit the Merricks. As it was Saturday, there was a tea at Mrs. Stelle's and I went. Mrs. Love invited me for supper and I accepted. At the Merrick's we had a nice quiet time. They could have no guests for meals as they had disposed of much china and could set a table for six only. We went to church that night and hear Dr. Darwent. On Monday I shopped with Flora all day. It was hard work but I like it. We looked for silk for you girls but found nothing so very fine we had to have it. Soon we will hear what to get and be on the lookout for it. Flora left early Monday but I stayed on till evening and came up with the children and down by auto. It was just midnight when we got here, a record trip. On Wednesday I was too sleepy and tired to amount to much. I was glad I had finished my grades before going off to Hsi Ling.

Today we have had a treat. Mrs. Dunlap, Mrs. Josselyn, Miss Stahl, and Dr. Detweiler came down and gave us a concert. All are excellent musicians, Contralto, violin, piano, and tenner [tenor]. They had asked if we teachers would join them for picnic lunch so we did. It was cool enough so we had to wear wraps but not too cool for comfort with them. All but Dr. Detweiler are well known to the children and were greeted with applause. He was too after his first number.

Tea was at the Love's and we had a goodly number as there are several week-end guests here. It is time for the girls to be in bed so I may not play this machine any more tonight.

Sunday, waiting for the breakfast bell. Mother's letter came yesterday and was most welcome. News of snow seems strange when we are in our summer clothes and the grass is getting green. This will be equally out of season when you read it for things will be green. Violets are out but not yet thick enough to give the violet hue to the landscape. We found the Pasque flowers and the tiny forgetmenots at the tombs. Breakfast bell has rung! Miss Harper and I have been talking clothes for nearly an hour. We do not change in tastes you see nor in interests! I have just fixed an order for 139 prints to be made from my Hsi Ling prints and some school ones the children want. Hartung ought to be a friend of mine, do not you think?

The compound sports a dog these days. Mr. Kendall, our architect, had a hound and was forced to keep him most of the time in a small court yard. The dog was so frantic for exercise that he nearly devoured any visitors and people were afraid to go there. He is perfectly docile here where he has the run of the big compound. Formerly it was a rule that no pets were allowed, but the change in personnel has overlooked some of the old rules.

The flowering almonds, peaches and cherries are getting gone.

This morning came the Sentinel telling on Captain Durrschmidt's death. It is hard on his parents. I wonder what the investigation will bring out as to the cause of the trouble.

The excavation for the new building is nearly done. They are digging around the edges for the foundations now, and will begin to tamp it this week. Also the new tennis courts are ready for rolling. We are putting in four where there were only three before, by extending the space on both sides.

I sent the three collars, one for each of you. I did not label them for one of you may be in need of the longer one and I not know it. I just had a tatting collar made for my suit in an effort to have one thing different from every other woman out here. I love those filet collars but there were at least five at a gathering I attended recently. I was one of the five, too.

We read much of the political turmoil but continue on our way undisturbed.

With lots of love to everyone
Mary Beard.

April 25, 1922

Dear Home Folks,

I'll favor (?) you with a sample of my handwriting because I am writing in school. I forbid the pupils to play on the typewriter to disturb the people studying so must obey my own rules.

You'll be getting all sorts of reports about the political situation and the movements of Chang Tsao Lin's troops and Wu Pei Fu's position. To be sure we are periodically cut off, first from Hankow, then from Nanking, then from Tientsin and troop trains have the right of way so service is much delayed. But if there is any danger, it lies to the south of us nearer Paotingfu or TeChow. Not even the Chinese here are excited and we all go on with the even tenure of our ways. We read the papers, when trains run so we get them, with special interest. The latest reports seem to expect a peaceful settlement as Chang Tsao Lin was expected in Tientsin to talk things over. He is losing in reputation as all his movements are offensive while Wu Pei Fu is merely holding his troops to take what comes.

We have two sets of troops here, one in the city and semi-hostile ones all around. That saves us from danger of looting as neither will let the other do it; hence it doesn't get done.

Two girls who live in Tientsin and who sail for America June 3rd had expected to be with us till the end of May but have gone lest we be cut off and they can not get through. Troop trains are delaying the service so it takes six or eight hours from Peking instead of four or three.

Summer is upon us with a vengeance and it is hot. We have had no rain yet and the farmers are delaying putting in crops. No winter wheat was planted for lack of rain and a famine to exceed that of 1921 is predicted unless we get rain soon. In the south floods are inundating the fields so planting is impossible and drought here!

Our gardens are coming on because we irrigate. Strawberries and peas are doing finely. We have had asparagus and rhubarb already as well as horse-radish root.

The Seniors want us to give "The Rivals" by Sheridan for commencement so these last two weeks have been spent largely in getting it ready. We had to cut it badly then make typewritten copies as we can not get hold of the books in sufficient numbers for the cast to use. Instead of using every one as in former days, we had competitive try-outs. There were so many good ones it was not easy to decide but we made the announcements last Friday.

Most of the children who are proficient on the typewriter were busy getting the copy out for the annual, so I had to do a large share of the play copy. Finally three of the children came to the rescue and we finished yesterday afternoon. There are thirty sheets and we made from three to ten copies.

Last week end (Apr 15-17), Easter Sunday. I had Helen Russell, a Holyoke girl, down to stay with me. I had to be over here for the preliminary try-outs on Saturday evening so she came too. The boys gave a lot bit of a play first, which showed the type of original productions which have been popular this year.

On Sunday morning we walked into the city and saw the pagoda, the shop where the mud dishes are made, the chains and the ordinary city sights.

There was a big funeral of the wife of a military official which caused us to flatten ourselves against the walls for awhile as it took all the street. In one chair was carried her portrait, life sized; in another, a tablet for her spirit. There were paper flowers, paper scrolls of silk, paper men, a paper chair and other fancy things to be burned for her spirit. The catafalque was a most elaborate one with a huge paper wreath of flowers at the front. There were 32 bearers. 'Tis seldom a woman gets such glory.

Two weeks ago we had great excitement here. Miss Bostwick's cousin came down with scarlet fever the day after she had played for us in song service on her violin. The danger season is over and no more cares, so we breath easily. A week later one of the boys came down with Chicken-Pox. He is out in a tent in the yard and we are still on guard for the eleven who have not had it to come down. (Only 1 of the cast for the play has not had it.)

After church. The thermometer says 88 in the shade. I have been over and closed the blinds on my south windows of the school room to make it look cool at least. Flora has gone to Peking and I fear will have a hot afternoon.

Wed. A.M. We read the play through yesterday and it is still a trifle too long but whether we cut it more now I do not know. Mail came through from Shanghai yesterday for the first time since Thursday last and this morning a lot arrived. A paper, March 18, addressed by Phebe came among other things. I am glad to read that the Woman's Club is prospering. Mrs. Lathrop's report on her library work was interesting. You certainly will miss the Sherks. I did wish our Board would have sent them an offer. Mr. Mengiss[?] comes well recommended but is very young and inexperienced.

Must close and get this off.

Lots of love
Mary.

Tungchow, Chihli, China.
May 1, 1922.

Dear Home Folks,

I know you home folk and Will will both want to hear all about these exciting days, so to save time, I will duplicate that part of my letter. Exciting, did I say! 'tis a misnomer! We are going on about our work just as usual and only an occasional rumble or series of rumbles to the south reminds us that we are near the scene of battle.

It was Saturday morning that we awoke to the sound of distant firing. As a real thunder storm arose, I for one suspected nothing till the storm had disappeared and the thunder did not stop. Then too we began to have trains every two hours or so. They came empty and went full. That delighted us, as, if we were to be in any danger, it would be from the soldiers here. Hence the more we got rid of the safer we were. For days empty trains had been here awaiting the troops which were marching in from Je Hol, and we were glad to see them move right through. But it was a thoroughly orderly movement. We were not disturbed at all and unless we were listening hardly heard the deep chug chug of the loaded trains. The first reports said we would not be able to get into Peking as the gates would be closed at once. We had expected to have the Campfire Girls stay down for Saturday night, but sent them in lest they not be able to get in the next morning. The boys were to camp at the Prince's tomb, about three miles this side of Peking but stayed here and camped near the pond. The Legation had sent out orders for no one to go to the Western Hills for the week end. Chang Tsao Lin's troops were out there in large numbers.

Mrs. Corbett, who had come down for Sunday with Mrs. Martin was for going home lest she get stuck here. Finally she stayed. We had trains every two hours all night and all day yesterday, for transferring troops. But we also had the regular three trains sandwiched in between them. This morning Flora, Miss Harper, Miss King, two of the girls and I all went to town, did our shopping and got back at noon. Peking is much more upset than we are. The Teng Shih Kou compound is full of refugees, seeking refuge from their fear as there is nothing else to flee from thus far. The streets are quite deserted and some of the shops will not wait on customers because of their fright. "No, no, they have nothing to sell". I did not meet that as I was told where not to go and was too limited in time to seek adventure.

Here in Tungchow, all is serene, but every train load of men that leave add to the feeling of security. We have had a few requests to take in refugees. But unless the real trouble comes we shall not. Then we will take people but not things under any circumstances. The Legation knows we are here and stand ready to send us up to twenty men as guard if we send for them. The compound committee is now in session, deciding what we shall consider near enough danger to require aid and protection. Looting is the only cause for worry and the looters do not want foreign stuff as it is too hard to get rid of afterward. Neither the Legation nor we anticipate any trouble here but in this land of surprises one prepares for every conceivable thing hoping to hit the right one.

We get the most confliction [conflicting] reports from the 'front'. For instance, this morning the first report was that Wu was retreating and Chang was persuing him. That meant that the firing line was moving south. On the train the report was that Chang was retiring and Wu persuing him. As in Peking the noise of canon was growing louder and as one of the Legation men was down at the battle front yesterday and had reported that Chang seemed to be getting the worst of it, we are inclined to believe the second report.

The most inconvenience is that mail is so interrupted. Today we got the April 23rd Shanghai paper. We were glad to get it for it means things are getting through, all tho slowly. Two people got through last week from Shanghai, but that was before any fighting had begun.

We are bothered too a little about money for the cooks find it hard to get change on the streets. We used to pay our cook in $100.00 checks. Last week he asked for $50.00 ones as the banks were not carrying enough funds to cash the larger one. Miss Huggins had her cook return a five dollar bill as the shops could not change it. Our train this morning had on what looked to me mighty like some bags of money. They were small, of the usual style, and evidently very heavy. Also they were cared for by several men.

Life is not all war rumours by any means. On last Saturday we had a fine treat in another recital. This time, Miss Olive, the music teacher at Tsing Hua came and sang some Schubert songs for us. She sings so easily it is pure joy to listen. Her voice was just as clear on the last song as the first altho she sang a dozen or more. The last was the Ehrl King. "Who is Sylvia", "The Peddler", "I must have a Husband" were others on the program. Miss Young of our own faculty played a group of MacDowell compositions also. She plays very well. I am glad to say that she has decided to stay another year. Her brother is sure of being here so she will still be able to be with him.

Last weekend we finished typing the play and on Tuesday we gave out the parts and had a reading of the whole play. It went well. We had one more rehearsal but it was not very valuable as the children had not had time to learn their parts. The next is Thursday and we hope for results.

Two books came from Miss Brewster on Friday, "Mr. Wu" and "The Bit of Benin". I have started the latter. It has an oriental flavor all right. The other I have not even looked at. A letter from her says she has given Phebe a check for $8.50. Phebe also writes of receiving it. That left me more than paid up on the dress but I fear I owe something since the April life insurance had to be met. That is somewhere about $9.00. Ask Mrs. B. if she did not add pay for the tea that was a gift. Her sum is more than mine.

We got Phebe's letter telling of Stanley's operation over a week ago. Of course the tie up of railroads has kept the last two mails from coming through so we have not gotten any further news. I sent to Myra last week a silk baby sack and shoes to match. I hope "Susie-John" wears them out. The tails of the pussies will appeal to big brother and sister I know. It will probably be a bit big for at first but I calculated on growth. I took one like it up to Adele Cross this morning. She was delighted. The silk may not be awfully practical but the babies are so dear in them I wanted Myra to have one for hers. I do hope that the next mail gets put off at Japan so we get it soon, for I would like news of Stanley.

We did have two tiny rains this week so the air is a bit damp but the soil still calls for rain. We had more dust that rain, as we had two dust storms also. The raining came near making another mud storm like two weeks ago, when rain not wind brought the dust down.

Today I got Leolyn's rug from Peking and am enjoying the use of it on my floor. I shall use it till Flora goes as it is safer from moths in use than wrapped up. Also it can then pass as a used rug and the duty will be less heavy. I like it and only hope that Leolyn and William will too. I have their luncheon set also so am nearly caught up on things I was to buy. I will look for another turquoise matrix chain some day. I love to do it but have but little time for so doing. I have the jade pendants but am waiting for something more bulky to send with them.

I enclose the hair nets I got for you girls sometime ago. Try them. I can get darker ones generally, if you need them darker. They do not come in separate packages unless we pay more than double and then it would not save you much. Let me know if you want more.

Lots of love. I hope Mother and Elizabeth are better and Phebe got to Pearl River if only for a day.
Mary.

May 8, 1922.

Dear Family at Pearl River, Ruth and all,

I was so delighted that our trains began to run soon enough to not delay Harriet's and Mother's letters. I think Chang Tsao Lin and Wu Pei Fu must have known the important news that was en route and cleared the lines for it. The first mail in three days brought the announcement and it had not been unduly delayed either. The next brought Mother's and this morning came one from Phebe dated the 28th so it gave news of Stanley and Seaver and the Spaces but not of Ruth Blakeman.

These have been interesting days but not dangerous ones by any stretch of the imagination. On Wednesday last, April 3rd, Flora wanted to go to Peking on the noon train but learned that there was to be none. There had been none on Tuesday either. We had heard no firing since Monday night. But it had been very heavy and steady all day Monday and Sunday. On Thursday morning there was no train and rumors kept coming in that Chang was in full retreat. In the afternoon Dr. Love tried to get the legation by telephone to see if they thought we should have our marine guard come down. There was difficulty because the legation was trying to get us to say that they were going to send them since things were in a very upset state. Finally connections were made and when we came back from our rehearsal where we had missed all the excitement I found ten beds all in a row on our front lawn and a cook installed in our domestic science rooms to cook for our guests to be. There was a table set up and coal was arriving as well as supplies of towels, soap, basins etc. About nine they arrived, delayed by a bad blowout in the city. We were ready for ten and seventeen had arrived and all must stay the night as it was a long job to fix the car. We hustled around and got beds and bedding enough. For the night they camped out down by the moat. It was thrilling to see the row of beds. The next morning Mr. Stelle got out his tents and Mr. Lund produced the one lent by the marines to the scouts.

The officers tent is just under our chapel window and the other two are on the level below as the terrace is too small for all. Thursday was taken with getting them settled. On Friday the men planned a base-ball game but it rained. The game came off on Saturday and the marines won 25 to 20. The watchers said it was interesting.

We ladies had a sewing bee that afternoon for Mrs. Love. The Amah who helps out on sewing has been ill so none of us have been able to get much done by her. It is harder on Carol than on the rest of us, for she expects a new little Love in June and it would mean having the two other ones short on clothes for someone else to care for.

Our speaker from Peking did not dare to come down yesterday altho we had our full quota of trains, and autos could get out of the city. We had our first visitors on Saturday when Mr. Gibb came down by auto to get his children. The gates were opened from nine till five to let people through but kept closed between times. Mr. Besel had tried to get a train for us Saturday night but Chang had taken all the engines and most of the cars to Tientsin and pulled up the tracks behind him. Wu and the government were busy trying to get the break fixed but had not completed the task. It was good to hear the train whistle altho it was a different engine.

Dr. Smith took the service and some of the marines came. Last evening we invited them all over to one of the houses to make candy and sing. One or two are quite musical and we had a good time. I made divinity and Alice Huggins made regular fudge. The plates were clean when we left. I heard more funny songs than I had heard for a long time. Yesterday morning I went to breakfast with Maude Hunter and Lieutenant Mills was also a guest. I had met him before and thought him a stick but he was a happy surprize. We had a very jolly breakfast. He thinks he knows the daughter of a friend of mine. Her mother wrote me that her daughter had married a marine officer and was en route for Peking. But she failed to mention the married name so I have been unable to locate her. I only know that her first name is Florence.

May 11. Our marines left on Tuesday just after lunch. We gave them a rousing cheer as they departed and took their pictures in the big tents.

Mother's letter of the 11 is here. We're glad to get such good news of Stanley, Myra and Ruth. Still we are wondering what kind of a reception Nancy and Stephen gave Ruth.

If the rumor that we at Tungchow fled to Peking, deny it. We stayed home and worked as usual. Neither did we have 500 Japanese soldiers in the city. The city organized itself for protection of itself and had no outside help.

I must get this off. Please send home as I know the Long Hill folks will like to hear every particular and I am not sure I shall repeat all facts in another letter.

Love to all

Mary.

I mailed a package for Ruth Blakeman two weeks ago, care of her mother. Mary

Because Flora announced that it was safe, visitors came from Peking for the Mother's Club picnic. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Tungchow, Chihli, China

May 11, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

A letter from Willard this morning shows us that reports are circulating which might make friends feel anxious about us. Place no faith in them. We have not been called into Peking, nor have we had 500 Japanese soldiers down here. When Chang Tsao Lin started to retreat somewhere in this direction and no one could tell where he was headed, the American Legation sent us a Lieutenant, a Sergeant and twelve Privates as guard. They came Thursday evening, May 4th and stayed till Tuesday noon, May 9th. From Thursday morning till Sunday morning we were without trains or any communication from Peking except by telephone or telegraph or by the Legation truck which was down twice. That was because the city gates of both Peking and Tungchow were closed and only official orders could get them open. Fugitives from Chang's army were coming in and there was fear that they would loot if opportunity were given. A few were admitted to Tungchow after being deprived of their arms. I understand that Peking did not admit any.

On Saturday the Peking gates were opened from nine till four to those who presented proper credentials and the father of two of our pupils came down in an auto for his children. We could have had a train except that Chang Tso Lin had taken all the rolling stock to Tientsin in transporting his troops and had pulled up the track behind him. There was not an engine in Peking to pull the few freight cars left. Traffic between the capital and Tientsin is still irregular. We had three trains on Sunday and they have continued, very nearly on time too. We no longer keep the compound gates closed, neither does the city, but Peking still did yesterday.

Our guard was called on for no duty. Their presence seemed to be enough protection. They had two interesting baseball games with an all compound team. As each side had one game we rather hoped they could stay another day and play the rubber. We gave one evening to a candy and song party and the hostesses had just as good a time as the guests, I am sure.

As our houses are all full this year we could not take our guard into the homes as we would have liked. They wished to be all together so we loaned them tents and they camped just behind our school building. The domestic science kitchen provided them with the only real plumbing in the compound.

Our Corner-stone laying was set for the 8th of May and for a few days we thought we would have to celebrate alone, but Flora went to Peking on the noon train Sunday and saw the speakers to assure them that all was right to come and had it announced in the Union Church service. As a result we had several guests besides the speakers and those concerned in getting them here. Dr. Boynton, the preacher for the Union Church for three months gave the talk. Dr. Arthur Smith gave the dedicatory prayer. Mr. Howard-Smith read the scripture and Mr. Gleystone presided. That gave representatives of the Congregational, Presbyterian, and London Mission boards each a part of the program. Our marines were here so they attended too and gave the appearance of a goodly assembly.

Elizabeth, I thought of those lovely pussies many times this spring. We have nothing of the sort here. Our willows bear little inconspicuous pussies that one has to look twice to find. We have yellow roses and Wisteria in profusion and they are our crowning glory in the line of flowers. This year the violets are less beautiful because it has been so dry. The alfalfa is less than a foot high instead of nearing two feet. The gardens are doing well, thanks to being watered. The peas are beginning to look as though they would provide us with peas soon and the strawberries are well blossomed. A good thunder storm last Monday evening wet the deepest of any rain yet, a little over an inch.

I am sorry Mrs. Fratcher has forsaken you. She was at least convenient, even if she was undependable. Little Ethel must be getting bigger so it does not seem so incongruous to have her for helper. The phrase "robbing the cradle" was lurking in the fringe of my mind when she was there.

Mar. 14. Things are still quiet around us altho there are rumors that Chang is going to make another stand. If he does it will be to the north of us so we will be in the line of the victors not the defeated. Yesterday word came that we would be without trains again as they were being commandeered for moving troops, but we have had more than our number today. A pass gets easy access to the city, so to be trainless would be inconvenient only.

Yesterday was the Mothers club picnic and there were over a hundred down. The Camp Fire girls gave a typical ceremonial and received their ranks. They had learned several new and appropriate songs, and the fire with the costumes made a very pretty picture. The scouts pitched their tents, gave several complicated drills, piled up in a pyramid, took down their tents and stood at attention. Everyone did very well. The whole was not so long but that we had ample time for tea, which was served at Mrs. Martin's. For that tea all the members of the club contribute so it is not all on one household. One of the cutest things was the crowd of children that Jim Hunter took to see the four baby goats born that morning. He looked like the Pide Piper of Hamelin. Babies of all ages from two to high school age went.

Monday. This morning I went into town and mailed a package to Leolyn. I also bought a square which I will send to fill the order of Miss Brewster. I could not buy much as I paid for Leolyn's rug and shall be hard up till I get the money back. I have asked for that to be sent to me lest I get too hard up this summer. Miss Brewster's large square like the doily I brought out is at last here. The pattern is one no longer made so there was delay in hunting up a woman who knew how to do it. Then the package got held up in the railroad blockage of the "war". When at Mrs. Lowry's a few weeks ago I got a smaller piece as I knew it was no longer made and I like it well enough to want a sample for my own.

Peking was perfectly quiet. The only suggestion of any trouble is the baracading of the gates still. The sand bags are still there and each train must wait for them to be removed. Then the soldiers are still encamped just inside the gates, and on the walls. Stores are all open and doing business as usual. We have not been deprived of our trains again. There were only three engines in sight in Peking though.

We have been so glad to get frequent letters telling of Stanley's steady improvement. 'Twas too bad to have the pus form but I hope it soon cleared up. I like to think of Stanley back home and Myra up and around with baby Ruth the center of attraction and the 'big boy' and Nancy happy with a little sister.

I hope you have some desirable neighbors in the Space house. You will miss them altho you and they were too busy for much visiting. It was nice though to have one real civilized neighbor.

I'll get a sample of the dog toothed edge for mother next time I am in town. I thought of it today and saw a beauty but lacked money enough to get it. I have to go in soon for properties for the play and can take cash enough then. A cloth of the home spun with that edge will be a beauty.

I hope Seaver Smith and Aunt Ella both continue to improve. You did have a lot of hospital items in the last letters.

Flora and I are at present very well. F is very tired and worries greatly over things. Are Mother, Elizabeth and Phebe all well and rested again. I hope so with all my heart.

Lots of love

Mary

Lay Corner Stone of New American School Building; Tungchow
[Newspaper from the Tungchow area]

The North China American School has for years been too large in numbers to be accommodated in its own quarters, so that it has been housed in American Board residence in the compound. This year the school has enrolled 63 students, of which 38 have [been] pursuing college preparatory studies. The others are enrolled in the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Grades.

During this last year the money arrived which had been given by the Russell Sage Foundation, so that a large new building is now in process of erection, which, when finished, will contain a dormitory for girls, a large dining-room, a play ??, besides a suite of rooms for an infirmary. The new building just west of the present school building, and at the south of the four-acre campus.

On Monday, May 8th, 1922, the corner stone for the new building was to be laid. The following is the order of exercises.

Dear Home Folks,

Phebe's nice long letter came on the morning of my birthday. It was an ordinary busy day till the evening. Flora had invited in several people for dinner and we had a very gay time till about 10.30. It was delightful out on the porch because it was hot. I received three handkerchiefs two white ones and one with a green border. The home letter was the best of all for it told of all the sick people being better.

Yesterday I went into Peking at noon. The College club was giving two plays in the afternoon at 5.00. One was "Suppressed Desires" a delightful take off on psychoanalysis, and the other "Alice-sits-by-the-fire." Both are very funny so we had a jolly time. Afterward I went for dinner with Mrs. Frame who was entertaining the Discussion group of which I have written before. We had a most interesting time trying to settle the question of how soon China can dispense with the services of the foreigner in her industries. I did not realize before how the government thwarts every attempt to advance in that line. Miss Zee told of one return student who started a silk worm industry out at the Western Hills. Just as it was getting where it was paying and promising to yield good returns, an official called and announced that he would take over the business. Another man who was an engineer got the necessary papers which would permit him to work some gold mines in Mongolia. He invested a considerable sum in machinery and got it out here. Some little kink arose with a petty official and he was not allowed to take the machinery beyond the petty official's station. It is there getting rusty as there is no redress, without a central government which can enforce its access. There are some fine laws on paper for the Republic but they have no one able to enforce them. Some hope that Wu will be able to do so. An article in the paper today says the Christian Science Monitor has no faith in either Chang or Wu but looks to Sun Yat Sen as the Man of the Hour. The North is far from agreeing there. "The climate of the north does not agree with Sun".

We are feeling anxious these days over Dr. Smith. He and Mrs. Smith went to Te Chow the 19th. Dr. Smith complained of feeling dizzy when he arrived and had been ill ever since. Monday A.M. Yesterday the latest word was that he was slightly better, fever down to 99.

Miss King leaves for home today because her mother had Typhus fever. The latest telegram said, "Serious, not hopeless, come." She and her brother spent all day yesterday packing so they can have this afternoon for errands in town and leave on the early train tomorrow. Fortunately a doctor was visiting Dr. King at the time she was taken ill and has stayed right with her. Otherwise it would have been at least two days before a doctor could have reached there, as they live far from the railroad.

I was in Peking for the play and when I returned I found out last chicken-pox patient out of quarantine. That means that we are all out and in health once more. The little children of the compound have Whoopingcough, but we are keeping away from them. Only two or three are candidates so we are not fearing much from it.

You ought to see my room! I am using it for the work shop in which to make costumes. Costumes in blue, red, yellow, purple, pink, green, etc. are scattered over everything. At night I clear the bed and one chair for me and my clothes and forget the mess. When a costume is complete I put it away in a chest of drawers in the hall. Three are there, and two others most ready. They number twelve.

Thanks for the account, of things sold, Phebe. I'll note it when I get the letter from Flora again. I'll get the chains when I get into town, probably after commencement as costumes and properties hold me here except on Sundays and that is not a good day for a missionary to shop. The stores which carry curios are open all right! Next Sunday is the beginning of commencement so I could not go if I did wish. Dr. Furgerson is giving us the Baccalaureate sermon.

In my diary I noted the other day that a year ago the 21st of May I had my last exam and hustled after it to get a train home that night. How well I remember it! It was hot too. A year ago yesterday we gathered the first strawberries. We had our first on Friday for decoration on my birthday cake, here this year.

When I go into town, I realize how little rain we have had. Not more than an inch of rain at once since I arrived last September! The fields are still brown, and only a few even plowed. There is no use wasting seed putting it into dry ground! A few small truck gardens, where irrigation is possible, are tended with exceeding care and are green and flourishing. Our gardens are good, thanks to the wells from which we irrigate. The lawns are brown and I have had the greatest difficulty getting wild flowers for the botany class.

Two of the Chinese girls who have been in our discussion group this year are starting for America in July. One, Miss Zee, is to be at Columbia next year. You would enjoy her if you were able to have her up. She is well up on everything Chinese, and has a wonderfully clear understanding of conditions. I am sure she would make a good speaker for some meeting if you want her. Her English is very good and her accent only slight so she would be pleasant to listen to. The way in which she has entered into the spirit of our group has pleased us all. I will give her your address. You could reach her by addressing Miss H. Zee, Teachers College, New York City.

It is good to think of Stanley able to be back at work again. I hope Aunt Ella continues to improve. The winters are hard on her. Does the warm weather help Mother and Elizabeth too? I wish I were there to help as I did last year. I really think I would rather get breakfast and pick strawberries than make costumes and search for properties. The teaching I love. But I would rather make my own clothes than a lot of things for the boys and girls.

Tut, Tut, what a growl that is! Don't mind it, it is just to let off steam and not to be taken seriously. Altho I would like first rate to be home.

Not yet do I know where I shall be for the summer. Letters addressed to me here will be forwarded wherever I am. I would like to go to Shansi, but do not know if I can get a room. Neither do I know if I could get out early if heavy rains should fall. But I have been to Pei Tai Ho three summers and would like to try a new place. Further more the train service is not yet started through Pei Tai Ho and no one knows when it will be. At present the only access is by water. That is expensive and a bother as it means several changes, from train to boat, back to boat and perhaps a long trip by donkey as per olden days before the train ran to the beach.

I must stop and get at costumes. I'll write again before commencement if I can. Please all keep well for I am most seriously considering coming home after my three years for a visit at least. I can not get a furlough salary for the short term, but I do not care. I'll live cheaply till then so I won't have to worry about that. If I sell enough jewelry I can do as I please.

With lots of love
Mary Beard

June 1p, Q92W.
[Probably June 10, 1922]

Dear Home Folk,

I found a lovely item in the Spice of Life in a recent Literary Digest. Perhaps with that as key you can interpret my epistles more easily in the future. Having practiced on me, I think you can decipher the song.

Commencement is over, the children are all flew except four. Two Harbin girls instead of going early as anticipated have had to wait over for sailings. Train service is not yet established beyond Shan Hai Kuan at all and only official trains run that far. The girls go to Dairen by boat and from there by train. They leave on Thursday. The other two are the Tucker children whose parents came up for William's commencement and who are now waiting for a train to take them to the shore. Report says that a train leaves tomorrow, another Tuesday and a third on Wednesday. When another goes is not promised. These are supposed to get the crowd up there. Some are wondering how supplies are to be gotten. No freight train is promised yet.

Commencement went off finely, even better than usual. I am so glad since it is Flora's last one here. The seniors did unusually well and had interesting topics; Ants, The History of Shansi, and The Red Cross Famine Relief Work in Shantung. Consul Fuller gave an inspiring talk. He first told in brief the story of Alexander Hamilton's life, that showed the sterling qualities of the man that assure his success. Thoroughness and care of detail were two he emphasized. The idea that success is won by hard labor not a gift of the gods was preeminent.

"The Rivals" in the afternoon went off with a finish not attained before by our plays. We were more than happy to have it so since it more truly than ever represented the work of the school. We had literally made all the costumes, as we had to start with the goods in the piece. This is to be the start of our "green room" and thereafter the costumes of any worth will be kept for state occasions only. We did not have as big a crowd as sometimes but it was an enthusiastic company. No one of the class is from Peking.

I was asked to sit in Trustee meeting on Wednesday, so was away all that day. Since Flora will not be here to carry out any of the new measures it was thought advisable to ask me to be present. I was a mere listener except for an occasional remark.

Mrs. Gordon departed with the children of Friday morning. I never saw a better example of the "logic tight compartment" theory of the mind than she is. Every thing to be moved, but it is none of her business since the item is not mentioned in her contract. She had trouble sleeping the last few days in the rush, so did the rest of us. I am glad she went though. (Do not ever tell Flora that!) She and Flora and Miss Bostwick get on each others nerves till it is almost unlivable in the house with them. Tis a gamble as to which gets most unreasonable. It is more physical work but less friction.

We have had a letter from Mother since I last wrote. It is good to hear often. Little Caroline Love arrived last Monday. She and her mother are both fine, so says the Doctor father. The five older children and little Ruth Martin have the whooping cough, the railroad is not comfortable for travel, hence Mrs. Love is wondering what to do when she leaves the hospital.

It is after ten and cool enough to go to sleep on the porch, so I think I will go to bed.

I shall be here in Tungchow about three weeks longer, then to Pei Tai Ho probably. Mrs. Martin was most enthusiastic about my coming to Shansi but has grown cool. Hence I shall take the still enthusiastic roommate, Martha Fenn.

With lots of love

Mary.

June 26, 1922.

Dear Home Folks,

Have just read a letter from William Morgan [husband of Leolyn Seaver Beard]. He sends me the money for the rug I am sending by Flora and for the luncheon set I got made for them. They are all well, Gwen has had the chicken-pox. Billy creeps but Polly is happy to say "dada-dada". I can now really consider starting for the summer. Really I had not enough money to get me to Pei Tai Ho, to say nothing of paying board and room rent in advance. This and my June check will put me on "easy street" for awhile. I will now hunt for the chains Cora wishes.

Since school closed I have been working on the new prospectus, helping Bergen with his Virgil, outlining the work for Betty Scott who is inspired with a desire to complete her years work and get Flora's signature on her diploma also, helped some in moving to make room for the Whittakers etc. The Tuckers were all here for two weeks waiting for a train to the shore. They left last Friday. Mrs. Arthur Smith was the most relieved as she had the parents and two small boys with her. We kept the two who had been in school.

The Whittakers came last Wednesday. They have four children, aged from eight to six months. They are real children and keep this house alive from top to bottom where the keys are available. The baby is a dear.

A week ago last Saturday, little Francis Wickes died. She had been ill with something like dysentery but not entirely like it. Of that she was better but she lay very quiet and listless. Dr. Love saw her the last thing before going to Peking Friday night and both he and Dr. Tucker thought her better. She was worse twice in the night and at 7.30 had a convulsion. Still there was no great alarm till about 10.00 and at twelve she died. It was meningitis, probably cerebral. We spent that evening covering and lining the little box the carpenter made for the coffin. It was dainty soft and white when we finished. The funeral was the next morning at 9.00. Several of the Peking friends came down either by train or by auto. I helped the children who live here to fix the grave that morning. We had to get up early to gather the material so that it would be fresh. Mrs. Wickes was wonderfully brave and composed and wrote a beautiful note to send around. It was her wish that no one see the baby on Sunday so that we remember her as she was in her well happy days, for she was a wonderfully bright happy child, though only a little over a year.

This week end Flora and I spent in Peking with Mrs. Young. We were to have gone in for shopping in the Chinese city but it rained all the time. I went to the movies on Saturday night and we had to wait nearly an hour for a letup in a severe thunder shower. We got more than our moneys worth for they started up the music and films again for our entertainment.

The rains started on Friday with a thunder storm which lasted less than two hours but wet down five inches. The moat rose about five feet. The sunken road was a river while the storm lasted. It rained Saturday evening as I said and all Sunday morning. Then it cleared for the afternoon and evening. On Monday we were outside the city for shopping but got caught in a severe shower, so had a cup of chocolate at the Bakery and went home again. Today is glorious, cool, clear.

The building is growing apace. The slates are here at last and the roof is fast approaching the place where it needs them. All the lath are on the walls. The men did that while waiting for the slate. The war held up the delivery of the slate because it was purchased to be delivered here whole. That meant getting proper transportation, and Chang Tsao Lin had everything, proper and otherwise for a long time.

On Sunday morning I went with Mrs. Young to see the Porters off for America. They had been down for a farewell visit to Tungchow the Sunday before. They will be in New York as Mr. Porter is to fill a professorship at Columbia for two years.

Last night Mrs. Gordon returned to get her things for the shore. She is taking her meals with Mrs. Whittaker. She evidently feels the lack of hospitality at our house. Having done all her after school work both Flora and Miss Bostwick are ready to blow her up. I am provoked with her but a little relieved that she has not been here because she and Miss B are at cross purposes all the time and I was dreading the days when they would have to be at the same table. Flora is far from friendly but has been able to speak without a sharp tone some of the time. Miss B. can not. I was ready to take the train back to Peking when I saw Mrs. G. get off. She has not been near the school and evidently does not intend to go there. I hope she does not for it makes F about ill to have to interview her.

This week sees our servants thinned out a little, Mrs. G. takes one, Mr. Shaw's party take two and Mrs. Whittaker takes one for a month or more. Three are to get their walking tickets. That will leave us three cooks, a table boy two coolies, one washerman, a house boy, and amah. Do you think we ought to have all the service we need?

Dr. Smith is here and slowly getting stronger. He had a set back in the shape of a carbuncle, which had to be lanced.

This long letter and I have not mentioned the heat. The thermometer had fallen from 103, the highest, to 84 today. It is quite livable now.

This morning I helped Bergen with the last 100 lines of the last book of Virgil. He has the test on that tomorrow and the final on Saturday.

Tis time for an afternoon nap if such is to be indulged in. The children are napping out loud most joyously. Perhaps I will get to sleep and perhaps not. My floor is my napping place as the porch is too hot in the afternoon. It faces west.

My summer address will be , Care of Dr. C.H. Fenn, East Cliff,

Pei Tai Ho.

This will probably be too late for you to use, but letters sent here will be forwarded.

Have been reading some papers sent to Flora recently. I wonder if you talked with Mrs. Ewing. She was not far from here, but has not been out much since we have been here. Miss Bostwick knows her and her husband.

Would you like me to send some small things for a church sale sometime? I would send a limited amount as my contribution and you could have all you can get. When do the sales generally come? I can send ahead when I see something appropriate, unless you think of something you know would sell.

[About June 26, 1922]

....Gould's being here and getting off early Thursday morning and Kathleen's going Thursday afternoon and Dorothy Wednesday. I hope it was delivered Saturday evening so you could have a fresh dress for Sunday. You must have taken the organdie sash to that yellow dress of Geraldine's for I cannot find it anywhere.

Did you know there is a big Y.W. Conference here in Oberlin? I did not know it till today but heard the Chapel bell ring all day Saturday and once Sunday. I thought it was for the summer school.

I went to Elyria with Kathleen and bought her a proper traveling dress for none of hers were suitable to travel in. It was dark blue silky material, light weight and cool and she put it right on immediately- perfect fit. Then I put her on the train 5:43 from Oberlin, which Lydia Perry and her party had taken at Oberlin.

We found her easily, and I had a card from Kathleen written at the Shredded Wheat Co's factory which I'll send and you may bring home.

I telegraphed Aunt Molly to see if she could entertain K. over Sunday so as to make it easier for Lydia, than to put her on to the Pearl river train. An answer by telegraph said "Out of town for two weeks." So it was fortunate we did not send her on, simply sending a special delivery announcement of her coming.

Gould started early Thursday morning and expected to arrive Saturday evening. Hokhalter went with him, as far as his home, somewhere in the east.

Dorothy got off Wednesday evening all right and I have had two cards from her since, both strictly business. But Ruth Garland let me read a letter from Betty which told a lot of their experiences which I'll tell you when you get home.

The Bankhardts are very busy packing and moving today. They may be gone when you get home. They have found a house in Cleveland.

If possible, write Marian Hahn a letter from the camp. She will appreciate it. You know you did not answer that long letter she wrote you last winter vacation.

I have done nothing toward moving yet, as I have been so busy getting people and their clothes off. I have sent a box to you, one to Kathleen this morning which it took all Saturday to prepare and one to Dorothy Thursday. I shall have to get one more off to Kathleen and one to Silver Bay before I can do anything to moving. Geraldine sent a telegram this morning asking me to send her cello at once. So now I must close this to go down to the office to see about that.

Enclosed it $1.00 and hope you get along all right and enjoy all the conference as much as you have enjoyed thus far. Be careful of boating and swimming. Very lovingly Mama.

Pearl River N.Y.

June 27th [1922-Ruth is mentioned as being 11 weeks old. She was born in

Dear Mamma,

This is the first time I have had a chance to write you a real letter. I just bought this stationary this morning. Do you mind very much if I don't send you all of my leftover money right now because I may need it. I will send one dollar now as far as I have estimated it costed me about $28.50 for traveling and about two dollars on extras. I bought two ice-cream cones and a 20 cent chocolate bar on the way and a pair of socks, whiting and stationary this morning.

Now I'll tell you all about my trip. After we got to Cleveland we went straight to the boat and Lidia and I took Miss Suliver's cabin. Fortunately it was an outer. We sat on deck until the boat got quite a ways out. That was until two. I got slightly sick but not to speak of. I woke up very early in the morning and Lidia said we had not sighted land so went back to sleep. Lidia woke me up and we could see land then. My lunch lasted me for both supper and breakfast but was not quite satisfied so got a 14 cent breakfast in Buffelow. Cornflakes and cream. We got a ten thirty train to Niagria [Niagara] and two of the girls took the gorge trip but three of us Lidia, Rubby somebody and went to the Shredded Wheat Plant. They weren't taking visitors around then so we got a 40 cent lunch and then went back again.

First we went into the reseption hall which was very nice and cool and waited for the party to start around. The next place which he took us to was a sixth floor veranda where we could see the river and a little of the city. Then we were shown the proressess of making the boxes and sealing them and then we had a part of a biscuit with bananas and cream and sugar and a flat biscuit with butter. This was in a very nice room with a lot of little white topped tables. Next came the proressess of shredding the wheat and making and baking the biscuit which was hot (from the ovens) as well as very interesting. Then he showed us auditorium where the employees could dance, hear lectures and see movies and a rest room with magazines for them to read and two nurses to tend to them and then their toilets and baths which were immaculately clean. The guide said that they were given fifteen minutes twice a day to rest and read. The whole building was just a picture it was so clean and everything was white.

After we left the Shredded Wheat Plant we went to the falls where we walked around and got wet. We went down in an elevator to the base of the cliff and Rubby took some pictures. Then we went over on (as far as I could make out) Goat Island. That's across the bridge where we didn't go before when you were there. We saw there, the Cave of the Wind's (where you go under the falls) and the horse-show falls. We saw a party that had just come from the Cave of the Winds, in their rain proof clothes. I got a little barrel with pictures of the falls in it for fifty cents.

We got into Buffelow and I got another 40 cent supper there we got onto the train. We got into New York at 11 and after getting help from the travelers aid we Lidia and I came across to Jersey City got some dinner and after a wait of two hours got a train to Pearl River. Uncle Stanley met me at the train and then it was that I found out that Stephen was sick. June 29 Dr. Clark or rather clock gave us all the shick test [The Shick test is a skin test for Diphtheria] that I told you about. I felt quite faint after it but was all right after supper. I did not get a chance to go to church Sunday and it doesn't look much as if I would at all. I lay down and took a nap with Nancy but she didn't go to sleep. She is a very naughty little girl and has a very decided mind of her own. Monday when she was going to bed for her nap she didn't like something and flew into a tantrum. Her mother whipped her but it didn't do any good. She did the same thing at dinner today. She wanted her meat just so and she couldn't have it that way so away from the table she went. She came back after a while and was good. This morning she wanted to put her feet in my lap and get my dress dirty and I told her she couldn't so she slapped and kicked me and finally bit me so hard that it made me cry. That made me homesick and it has been hard to keep from crying since then. I certainly do not like her at all. Once in a great while she is a little cute but I will be glad when Stephen gets well. Its getting pretty stale here now just playing with Nancy all day.

Ruth is a darling baby. I have held her twice. She is eleven weeks old and sleeps about all day. They don't pay much attention to her and I wish they would.

Stephen is a good deal better and wants to get up but he has to stay in bed. My shick test is getting all red, which shows that I am not immune but Uncle Stanley says that he doesn't think I need to take any anti toxin yet until I feel symptoms of diphiria. That doesn't mean that I will though.

They have lovely food here and aplenty but I always get hungry before meals. I have been late to breakfast once already but I'll try not to again.

My duties are first to dress Nancy in the morning to clear off the table, to make all beds to play with Nancy, to get her ready for meals and to put her to bed for nap and get her up and play with her again in the afternoon and to put her to bed at night. Besides that I do all kinds of errands for Aunt Myra that she wants. They have a collared maid named Parthena that gets meals, washes dishes, washes clothes etc.

Gould isn't painting the house yet but is working in the garden and fixing the chicken house. I feel a little more at home with him here.

Mamma please send me clothes. They only do washing once a week and everything of mine is dirty in the line of dresses except my traveling dress. I'll have to have some more socks or stockings and nightgowns. Please hurry quick. I got Gould's camra here all right.

Lots of love Kathleen.

Dear Mamma and Mony:-

I was shelling peas on the porch rail when one of the girls bro't Mamma's card to me. I was so surprised and so thrilled that I nearly fell off the rail. Jerry was down on the tennis courts. I couldn't let her wait a minute longer, so I sent for her, and she too let up a howl of excitement. Well, we have been hoping and praying that you two would find something to get you out of Oberlin this summer. Tell Uncle Elbert that he came along as an answer to our prayers. Now the whole family is having a real jolly time this summer. I can enjoy my vacation ten times more now that you are out of Oberlin.

I'm glad you were all moved before you left. How long did you stay at Aunt Etta's? Who all was there? I suppose you plan to shop all day Wed. in Albany, don't you. Now it would be a mean shame to come so near to Silver Bay and miss coming up, unless business calls too urgently. I do wish you could come up Thurs. to see us. If you don't on the way to Putnam, you will on the way back, won't you. Now that you are out East, don't miss the chance.

Yes indeed, I have been wanting things terribly that I wanted to go to Ticonderoga for, but lack of time and money prevented. First of all- my bathing- suit. I haven't had one. I have been using Jerry's when she doesn't use it. I don't know what size to tell you. I guess you get them by the bust measure. Get about a 38 or 40 bust. Be sure and get it long enough and big enough thro' the hips to allow for shrinkage. Please don't get a cloth one - one like Jerry's is best- a one piece wool or part wool suit. Please don't get one with sleeves - a wide strap over the shoulder like Jerry's. In fact, if you remember Jerry's- one almost exactly like hers will suit [remaining letter is missing]

Pearl River N.Y.

Dear Mamma and Marjorie,

Neither the parcel nor the letter that I was expecting came. You see I only have three dresses to wear at all so I really need some more seeing that I can't have them washed and ironed any time I want to. I finished my lavenled sweater and bought a set of collar and cuffs and cleaned my belt and shoes and wore them today. Aunt Myra said she thought it was very pretty and I do too. It fits me very well and the whole suit look very natty I think.

We went for a ride this morning in the car. We went to the forty foot swimming hole that Jerry spoke about but not to go in just to see it, there were some men in bathing suits and one without any sitting around on the bridge. One dived off the diving board while we were there and one went off a swing that was over the water. It was just a little place where a little stream ran but it is very deep forty feet they say and Gould said it dropped right off from the bank. He went there once with Mr. Green. We saw on our ride a very old place where a movie was being staged about a week or two ago. I really took a nap today and Nancy didn't. She said she had to hold her doll so she couldn't lie down.

Stephen is up now and downstairs. We have to be careful still about touching things that have been in his mouth but we are all so glad that he is down. He seems to like me pretty well and I just love him. He will talk to me for the longest time in his funny way. He has quite a hard time talking and sometimes screws his little face all up doing it. He calls me "Hapaleen" and never says any s'es. He calls himself "Tephen" and Nancy "Nanty".

I went over to Miss Pope's tennis court the other night and played with three other ladies. One of them could not play any better than I can and the other two are good players so each of the good ones took one of us worse ones and we had lots of fun. I don't believe I have laughed so hard in a long time. The ladies were so funny and so many queer things happened that it made me laugh so hard that I couldn't play sometimes. We played until we couldn't see, till nine o'clock.

I am having a very nice time here on the whole though at times I have my hands full with the children. We have ice-cream about twice a week on the average and I have all the milk I want. I have gained a pound a week since I have been here and now weigh 98 lb. including clothes.

8:00 P.M. We went out riding again this afternoon over in New Jersey. That sounds far away but it isn't only about ten miles. Just this evening Nancy and I took toxin anti toxin for diphtheria. That is so I will never get it after about two months. It didn't hurt at all and it only itches a little now.

Lots and lots of love Kathleen

Dear Punk [Kathleen] and Gould,

(I got this ink downstairs in the book cupboard and filled my pen with it. I don't know what it'll do to the pen!)

I'll begin with today. This morning I sung in the junior choir! Miss Gertrude Warner [Gertrude Chandler Warner, who was 32 years old in 1922, became the famous author of the popular children's book series The Boxcar Children. She was a lifetime resident of Putnam, CT.] called up yesterday or the day before and asked if I would be willing to help them out in that way. So I told her I would be glad to. There were several girls in the choir whom I knew. Flora White, Mary Child, Edith Child, Ruth Child, Silvia and Elizabeth Wheelock and do you remember that little Helen Morse who used to be in your class, Punk? Well, she was in it. She looks exactly the same. Did she use to wear glasses then? She does now. And she wears her hair bobbed.

Last night Uncle E., Fulton and I went downtown to get some eatables and Aunt Emma over at the library.) (My pen didn't fill with the purple ink so I went downstairs again and found this.) While downtown we saw a lot of people that I knew. On the street we met Hazel Geeson, and we saw her in church again this morning. She is so grown up. But she is real pretty. Then of course we saw the Bartletts. I have only seen Ruth but have spoken to Dorcas twice. They both wear earrings and look vampish generally. I also saw Ina Aldrich but did not speak to her. (This pen is acting awful.)

Edith Pease, Florence Danforth and Lib Rafferty, Bertha Child and Clara Keller ('member her) all have their hair bobbed. Edith looks very good. It has improved her looks wonderfully. She is really pretty now. Oh, one person more. I saw Miss Dingwall my S.S. teacher today too. Now, I will write something that Gould will understand!!

Billy Dodge [Uncle Elbert's car] started from N. Tonawanda [New York] last Monday morning chuck full. There were Uncle E., Aunt Emma, Aunt Etta, Fulton, the twins, mamma and me. We left Uncle Willis and Myron alone. At N. Bergen we left Aunt Etta and the twins for a visit with one of Uncle Willis' former parishioners. Then the car was just comfortably full- two on the front and three on the back seat, and a lot of suitcases of course. Uncle Elbert had taken me out alone and given me a lesson in driving the Sat. before, because he wanted me to spell him on the long drive home. This was before he asked Fulton to come. Then Sunday he asked Fulton. And all the three days I didn't drive a speck! Fulton drove when Uncle E. didn't.

Well, we made Auburn that night and as we came into the town we passed Auburn prison which is a mammoth gray stone building. It reminded me of the Men's Building, only all the windows were iron-barred and there was a high wall around it. We could see only the highest floors, but the lights were on (as it was almost dark) and it gave me such a queer feeling to think that the men in those lighted rooms were prisoners and not students. We women slept in the Women's Union Building that night and the men in a Hotel.

We started on at about seven thirty the next morning and slept at Schenectady that night. The third day we stopped for about an hour in the morning at Albany. While the two women shopped Uncle E. stayed with the car and Fulton and I went up the hill to the Capitol and went through it with a party under a guide. Fulton had been there before so he had seen most of it. At the end the guide went around to back of the men and asked fifty cents and I was so afraid that Fulton had no money, and I hadn't. But fortunately he did.

That afternoon we went over the Mohawk Trail. The scenery was wonderful. And there were no less than six souvenir shops along the trail, if there weren't more! And, Punkineenie, in the first one of those shops that we came to I bought your birthday present! It isn't much, so don't get your hopes too high.

Just before we got into Springfield that night we had our supper, (we had all our meals by the roadside) and after we got out of Springfield it was a straight run, so to speak, to Putnam and Uncle Elbert knew the way. Fulton and I tried our best to get to sleep but did not succeed until we had reached Woodstock or some place like that near Putnam. But we woke up before we reached Putnam. We arrived at the house somewhere around one o'clock a.m. Thurs. morning. We had to throw stones up at Hattie's window to wake her up! Just before we went to bed Uncle Elbert played "The End of a Perfect Day" on the Sonora.

Since Thursday we have done little besides rest up.

Sat. I went over and saw Edith for the first time. She is going to have some of the girls that I know, at her house Monday afternoon to see me!

It is so funny, all our letters these days have three addresses on them. First Oberlin; that is crossed out by the Garlands and the N. Tonawanda address put on. That is crossed out by the Humes and Putnam put on! Our letters have to run around quite a bit to find us!

Do write! We received Punk's good letter yesterday and read it aloud at dinner! Love to both of you, Monnie.

[About July or August 1922]

...as chaperone and had a fine time. The water was fine and clean, but I found I was out of breath and out of practice. I played two tournaments with Nan Woods, Mr. Wood's daughter; won the first and got knocked out of the second. We both did poor playing then.

Father and I went into mixed doubles, and came up against Dr. Montgomery and Miss Walsham, a fine English player, for first game. We got 1 game out of two sets with some hard playing but we got fine practice.

Rena Nutting of Diongloh came up for Annual Meeting a [and] brought five friends of hers with her. We entertained them one night at our first dinner party. On the next Tuesday they went with us and four Y.W. girls to Kushan. We walked to the top and got the superb view of all the lower Min Valley, fields and villages. Then we dragged down to the Monastery, had dinner, a rest, and a trip around the buildings. Rena's party then went to Kushan point to a houseboat that took them to the Peak and we, home. The Monastery was very natural, all but the new paint and decorations they had just added. I have forgotten my way around, but as I came to each turn it all came back to me. The priests seem more used to foreigners and not so devout as I remember them. I want to go back again and look it over at more leisure. Eunice got a basket full of botanical specimens some of which I pressed, others we analyzed. Both she and the baby are well, growing rosier and fatter every day. Ellen fell down and cut herself twice one day not long ago. She and Billy make such a noise we can't see sometimes, but they are cute and we love to have them in the house.

I have been writing the Annual Letter for the Mission this summer, and have at last finished composing it. Now I am copying it and using my Corona to do it.

Last Saturday night we had a concert at which Eunice and I played a violin duet. As there was no rack for our music, Father and Mr. McConnell held it for us. They seemed to make as much fun as any of our work. Isn't it great how these men get in on things?

A good deal of my time has been spent in helping a green washerman with the ironing, and teaching him how to do it. He is very nice and I'd like to keep him; but our big washes have tired him out and scared him away.

The St. Clairs have been up to supper, and we have entertained Miss Bement and a Y.W. lady to dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Storrs came tonight. Mrs. Bedient has been sick so much I couldn't ask people as I have wanted to. Now she is better and I hope to have several groups. We are planning a picnic party for next week and the Wood's are coming over next Tuesday, so we aren't badly out of it. Calling I have done none of.

Last week we had several extra practices for the cantata the Forty-Sixth Psalm by Buck to be given next Tuesday night. It is very pretty and not very difficult, but we seem to be taking a good deal of time and trouble getting it. Did you sing the last summer you were here? Annie Smith, Margaret Bissonette, and Margaret West are in it this year with a lot of Chinese girls.

Tennis finals come off soon- next week, so I am keeping those afternoons free. Today Mrs. Bedient and I go down into the bromie[?] for tea with Stella Cook and her family. This is the first time I have been.

I hope you liked your nursemaid work at Pearl River. What subjects are you taking in school and what is your new home like? What is Jerry doing, and where is Dot's room? There are so many things we want to know and all of you were so busy in June you didn't write. Just as I haven't written for some time! What did Marjorie do all summer? How did you find the people in Conn.?

Did you get your package with the fan for you that I sent some time ago? I hope so.

Mail time is here. Lots of love to you all, keep well, and do write soon.

Your sister Phebe.

[Aug. 6, 1922]
East Cliff, Peitaiho
Care of Dr. C.H. Fenn.

Dear Home Folks,

Mother's letter found me at Peitaiho. Flora was already on the high seas, I got in the sea every day, and have been on it once.

On last Wednesday a party of ten of us went to Ching Wan Tao in sail boats. It took two and a half hours to get over. There was a fair breeze only. Only one of the girls was seasick, and it was not I. We climbed over the cliff to the bathing beach and had a fine swim. Then we dressed and ate our supper out on the rocks. It was passed the first quarter of the moon so we had a fine moon. At eight we started back. The wind was all gone so the men had to row all the way back. We were out for the moonlight sail so made the men row slowly to prolong the fun. Even so it took only three and a half hours. The sea was like glass.

Do you remember that gay bathing suit of blue and green and yellow stripes, that I bought last summer? I wore it for the first time on the sailing trip. We wore our suits under our bloomers and middies and the skirt of my other was too bungling for comfort. Perhaps I was not easily visible! when I took off the outer layer! I have since been wearing it on the regular bathing beach, just for fun. No joking, it is fine to swim in.

I have gotten more tennis than ever before when off for the summer. Generally I have figured that I pay nearly a dollar a set. Already it is less than that, and only a third of the ice[?] gone. I played both mixed doubles and ladies singles in the first tournament and am in for singles in the August one. Henry goes with a party to Je Hol before the end of the week so we did not enter for doubles again. There are a lot of new people here, especially a large group from Mukden who were too late for the tournament. For them especially a new canvas was made. A Mrs. Bullard, husband [wife] of the man out to help the Deans in their business, is our star player among the ladies. Flora will appreciate the fact that she beat Miss Waller fairly easily, getting the first two sets so the third did not have to be played. A new lady, Mrs. Austin, is likely to be a close second if she does not win. Most of us were glad to see Miss Waller's defeat for she was so sure of victory and spoke so scornfully of "all the chaff one must wade through to get a real game".

There is great rejoicing every where over Flora's decision to return for the Tientsin school. The Tientsin people feel it spells success for their venture and the Tungchow that it means good fellowship between the two schools. I first heard of it at Dr. and Mrs. Tucker's silver wedding from Dr. Tucker. The wedding was a great success. It was a rainy day but the porch was crowded all the afternoon. I saw nearly everyone I know at Peitaiho and met a lot of new people besides.

We have had two applications from people for work in the grades. Both have been turned over to the Tientsin committee. One is that Miss Smith who wrote from Honolulu some time ago. She is in Shanghai now. The other is a lady who wrote from somewhere in New Jersey. Mrs. Evans has the letter so I can not tell any more about her.

Mr. Corbett writes that he has secured Miss Burgess and Miss Muir from Tsing Tao has accepted so our staff is full. Miss Carlisle is somewhere in Japan or China. I have letters sprinkled over the country to meet her but have had no word, altho she came on a boat which landed in Shanghai the 29th of July.

Two weeks ago there was an epidemic of engagements here. At a big party given at the Lieper house two engagements were announced. One was Max Lieper's. That same week we had letters telling that Francis King and Mr. Joe Lee were engaged. Francis insisted on carrying out her plans and completing her college course so sailed for home just the same. She returns next July to be married at once. The folks at the King Cottage had a party the next week and of course all wondered if there were "a reason". A house party on young people like that is a good place to generate romance. But we were doomed to disappointment. A conjurer produced the excitement, together with a fake announcement for the swallows who had built over the front door.

We have a unique party here. It was a cafeteria supper, Club sandwiches were the only article of food, but the variety of materials to be put in were many. For desert we had a soda-water and ice-cream counter, and served drinks and sundaes. Afterward we played games. Martha and Henry had worried a bit lest the guests be bored for they dance at all their parties and Dr. and Mrs. Fenn do not allow it here. I think it was a relief to most of them to have a change. At least it was a sincere appreciation that we got for our hard work.

On Monday last I went over for the night with Cleora Wannamaker. It was the birth day of Miss Kentfield, a Holyoke girl up from Foochow. There were thirteen of us, Pa, Ma and eleven children. Mary McClure who is taller and broader than I were the twins. We dressed in nightgowns as babies. The others were boys and girls. If the pictures are good enough I will send you one to show what "a dear baby" I can make. We went calling afterward on the Stelles, Mrs. Sheffield and the Stanleys. 'Twas great fun.

Alice Frame had the Holyoke reunion this year. There were seven of us and Mrs. Mather did not get here. Miss Kentfield gave a touch with other centers. All the rest were Peking or Tientsin.

Last night our whole family went for a picnic over to Light house Point with our neighbors. The neighbors are English and served us a regular dinner with plates, knives, forks, etc. Yes even after dinner coffee, and a wee bit of icecream. It was a good dinner though. Afterward we came home and had a moonlight swim. Another beech party did likewise so the shore looked as though we had mistaken the hour for that before lunch. Dr. and Mrs. Smiley were of the party. They have a baby boy only four weeks old, and got down this last week.

Mrs. Lieper has been ill ever since she came down. The doctors dispared of her getting well here because that is such a lively household, so her husband had gone to Peking to the hospital with her. Both the parties who announced their engagements wanted to be married from that house near the end of the summer. The excitement was great and not conducive to rest and quiet.

This is the first Sunday that I have not been down to see Caroline Love have her bath. It is also our first really rainy day since I came up. It feels and acts like a North-easter. We are all in the house as there is not a dry corner of the porch except where Martha's and my beds are. We are not so certain of that being perfectly dry so have spread oil skins over the beds. Also it is cooler. That is a relief for the day and nights have been very hot for two weeks. It has taken three sets of underwear to keep comfortable, one till swimming time, one till after tennis, and a third for the evening. All were wet when removed, especially the tennis ones.

As Dr. Fenn can use his eyes for only two hours a day, we do a lot of reading aloud in the household. Martha and Henry are off for parties more than the rest of us so Mrs. and Dr. Fenn and I spend our evenings that way quite often. Mrs. Fenn is much worn out nervously but has not the ability to relax. It makes it somewhat hard for the rest of us at times. But Flora will tell you that Martha and I are not all that is to be desired when it comes to living with us. On the whole we are a happy family with much in common and enough not so, to provide material for conversation. We can gather bits of gossip and anecdotes for each others edification.

Tonight I am going to supper with the Burgesses. They have a new house built Chinese style. Tomorrow there is an all Congregational picnic, and the next day a N.C.A.S. picnic. Also on Tuesday I am to go over to Rocky Point for lunch with the Hugh Hubbards. I must call on the Stanleys then too, as well as on the McCanns.

The CampFire girls have been camping out at the Lotus Hills and come in tomorrow unless they have decided to prolong their stay. Yesterday was their at home day. I should have gone out to call had I know earlier. But there were sports on for the afternoon and the picnic at 6.30.

Rumor has it that Chang Tsao Lin is investigation [investigating?] Ching Wan Tao and regathering his force beyond Mukden. At least Wu dares not go south of Lo Yang to settle the trouble there. He has sent trusty generals instead. With six American destroyers at Ching Wan Tao and one Italian gun boat at Rocky Point we have nothing to fear. It is probably only a bluff on the part of Chang to get his official title which has been denied him.

Parliament has convened and had a stormy session in which no business was transacted except the vote to adjourn. They did get a quorum which was something. Twice we have looked in vain for the air-plane on a Friday afternoon. This week they sent posters down to announce their arrival. No airplane and no explanation!

I hope that Father did get Gould to help with the farm this summer. It would be good for both parties I am sure. What is Kathleen doing on east? Or is she just on a visit. I wonder if the older girls are at Silver Bay again. Does Ellen stay west or has she come on too.

Mother I tried to get some other edges for you. Francis King promised them. Then her mother was ill and she went home. That and getting engaged evidently drove it out of her head. The one I sent is the most common and the only one I have been able to get so far. It is pretty only I wanted you to have a choice.

Your tales of cherries make my mouth water. I had not even a taste this year. The Chinese ones are better than nothing but no more can be said for them. The one tree of foreign cherries died this summer so we will not get even one cherry each as we have sometimes.

I was glad to hear that Stephen was over the worst of the diphtheria. It was hard to have him sick with a new baby in the house too. Thanks for sending on Leolyn's letter. It was interesting. She too had a siege with sickness.

Mother says nothing of Anna, so I suppose there is no change. Oliver is much in my thoughts these days. I hear the jingle bells of the postman. The trains are pretty near on time these days so the mail is fairly regular in the hour of arrival. I got a registered letter from Mr. McKnight with regard to his daughter, nothing else.

I shall be interested to hear about the new neighbors when they do call. I hope they prove nice for you need nice ones next door.

Heres best wishes that the weather did allow Father to get the hay without too much further wetting. I'd like to be there. I'd give up the parties, picnics, swimming and all for a chance to see you all.

With best wishes for good health and happiness.

And with lots of love,

Mary

Kuliang,

August tenth. [1922]

Dear Kathleen,

We have been looking forward for some time to this day, Father and I, tho we haven't written you for it. For you are fourteen years old, aren't you? Today, I can imagine you feel about equal to your task of being Aunt Myra's helper, now you are fourteen! Mother wrote us two Sundays ago about your going East for the summer. I'm so glad you had a chance to go and see the new little cousin, Ruth. You must write and tell us all about her for we haven't heard anything since her announcement card came. And how are Stephen and Nancy? Probably growing as fast as they can.

Well, I started to wish you many happy returns of the day, and I hope you had a really happy day. Perhaps you had a cake and a sort of party with the little cousins and Uncle Stanley and Aunt Myra and Gould. I hope too that every birthday is helping you to judge what is right and best and truest in all you do, and think and say, so that as you grow older you may find it easier to do the things that are yours to do, and to check all unkind and unworthy thots and words. We sometimes think that when we're grown up we'll be perfect and like the nicest people we ever knew, just because we are grown up. But we must begin to be like what we want to be right away, or will always be a little behind. That's the way with me now! So you start early.

I've got heaps of things to tell you about Kuliang; but it's late, and the mosquitos are trying to eat me up, so I think I'd better stop and go to bed if anything is left of me to send you this letter tomorrow. Lots of love and good night.

Since Wednesday the biggest news of this region is that about the Swatow typhoon. It started on Wed. night a week ago, laid all the native houses flat, tore down great portions of hich and other strong business houses, and a great wall of water 12 ft. high washed over the city and the surrounding country for 40 miles people say. Not till the next Sun. A.M. when a boat came in did they get word out to the outside world. The dead are numbered from 10,000 up, and relief is being sent from Shanghai. When we heard our American Red Cross held a meeting decided to send $200 and volunteer medical helpers, and then took it to the Evangelistic meeting then in session. Before we left the church yesterday, $2000 had been pledged, and this A.M. before noon more was paid in check than was pledged! Several are planning to go down as soon as boats will and can take them to help care for sick, wounded and dead.

We have only had two tail ends of typhoons that stopped tennis for a while. The weather has been cool and pleasant most of the time.

What will you think of your sister when I tell you that I've been into the tank just once all summer? I went with the Smith girls and Harold Brewster and Margaret West. [Remainder of the letter is missing]

Dear Kathleen;-

Do you see anything suggestive about the date at the head of this sheet? Phebe and I have been talking about it for several days. And I have promised myself not to let the day go by without writing you to make sure that you knew we thought of you on this day. You do not remember it but I very well remember fourteen years ago this afternoon when you first made a noise with your mouth. And that was the first time you ever sucked your fist. How fast the time has flown! You are a big girl going to New York to help take care of three little cousins. I was surprised and delighted to read in Mamma's letter that she thought you were entirely capable of getting out of New York and up to Pearl River alone, but of course she would prefer that someone older should be with you. Here are my very best congratulations, and I hope you have a happy birthday and that many more will follow.

Phebe and I frequently meet conditions that make us think of you all here when we were all together. We have not had a typhoon this year yet. News came a day or so ago that they had had a very bad one at Swatau. This morning a lady from Hong Kong told us that it struck Swatau a week ago Wednesday. It blew very hard for four or five hours then there was a calm and the wind blew from the other direction as hard for several hours. Then the water in the river rose and swept away all the buildings on the river for forty miles up the river. The city of Swatau is built on the river and is all low. The business blocks were destroyed and it is estimated that 40,000 or 50,000 people were killed. The dead were lying in the streets and all about so that none of the passengers were allowed to go ashore lest they should be quarantined. It was four days after the storm before the first steamer got to the place. They are entirely destitute of food and in want of doctors and horses. In ten minutes the foreigners assembled in Conference on Evangelism subscribed $2000 and telegraphed it to Hong Kong. The wires are all down in Swatau so we must communicate to Hong Kong. To aggravate the situation the Longshoremen in Shanghai are out on strike and no steamers running between here and Shanghai.

Your last letter told about your being shut up with the measles. Mamma's last told about your going to Pearl River. Marjorie had gone off to some encampment for a week. Geraldine and Dorothy were in Silver Bay. I am sorry that I have not had the energy to write any of you so that you would get the letters at your summer homes. Perhaps you and Gould will get the letter I sent to Uncle Stanley before you leave Pearl River. Both Phebe and I will look eagerly for letters from you and Gould to see how you are enjoying the summer and to see what kind of a new little cousin you have found in Uncle Stanley's home.

Kuliang is much the same as when you were here. Tennis, bathing, walks to tipping rock, Moon Temple and Kushan are just the same. We went to Kushan Monastery two weeks ago, with Miss Nutting and her friends from St. Louis, and the Y.W.C.A. ladies. Phebe is just now getting up a party to go to tipping rock.

This week is Convention week and next is Educational Ass'n week. Then I hope there will be a hold up in meetings. We want to know very much where you have moved to. There will be only three of you in the home.

By the time this reaches you I suppose you will be in Oberlin. Lots of love to you all. May the Heavenly Father keep us all loving and kind and good and useful and let us all see each other again in good times.

Father or as you say Papa

Please return to F. B

East Cliff, Care of Dr. C.H. Fenn,
Peitaiho,

August 13, 1922.

Dear Willard and Phebe,

When I received the papers addressed to me at Tungchow, I was reminded of the long time since I had written you. Flora wrote just before I came up here, which was on the 18th of July. Flora and Miss B, were in Tungchow till the Monday after that. I have had letters from Tientsin and Yokohama so know they are well on their way.

These are days full of many good things. I was over to Gould Cottage for Anna Kentfield's birthday. We had a children's party and a right good time. It has been good for the girls there to have the friends from the south as it introduced a new element and kept them all interested. Miss Louise Mebold and Cleora have been kindred spirits and made fun for them all. They were Jack and Jill at the party, Anna was big brother Tom. Mary McClure and I were the babies. The others were Ma, Pa, and the big brothers and sisters. The pictures are good. I will enclose one to show what a dear baby I make.

I have been strong on tennis this summer and play nearly every day. There are two courts very near when one can get partners. The crowd is down on the hill top where the two best courts are. I went into both tournaments but got knocked out in the first round. The last time I had to meet the lady who promises to be next to champion. She is very sure but not a swift player. I got two games in the first set and one in the next. Hence I do not feel so bad. Henry and I played doubles in the first, but he was off on a trip to Je Hol for the next.

This beach in from of the Fenns is a good one. We have a raft when the wind has not driven it in shore. We put it out the day I got here. The storm last Sunday drove it far up on the beach and it was Thursday before it was possible to get it out again. Yesterday there was an east wind again and in came the raft. During the moonlight evenings we had several swims. There has been almost no phosphorescence so far, and the jelly fish have not been so bad as some years.

One day we went over to Ching Wan Tao by sail boat. As we entered the harbor the jelly fish were thicker than I had ever seen them. They almost touched each other as they swam about. We wondered about swimming but met nary a one on the swimming beach. It was nearly full moon and not a ripple when we came back so the men had to row all the way.

This has been a regular matrimonial bureau this year. This morning I heard of two new engagements and there have already been three. It seems to be in the air. Some are summer products and some the culmination of a winter's siege. All have given joy to the friends so far. I am wondering what is going to happen as a result of the Je Hol trip. There are some parties on that about whom there has been considerable talk.

Our new building was well on its way to getting ready for us on the 13th when I left. Not a word have I heard of it since except indirectly. I expect to have to go back the last of the month to see to the moving. Mr. Wolfe is to send me word when I can get to work. The Whittakers have one of our houses. I stayed with them till I came down, and hope to be accommodated when I go back if they are still there. I grew very fond of them, especially the baby. The Foochow friends are to spend part of a day with them and see the Tungchow station. They leave this week so I can not help do the honors.

Last week I spent the day with the Hugh Hubbards over at Rocky Point. Emma Rose is a husky much tanned little girl, hardly recognizable. Miss Ullham was there. She had recently had a letter from Phebe, she said. She was such a trump last winter in helping us with our library. Flora and I finished it up this summer before I came up here. It took two days hard work and some of the third.

I will send Mother's last letter and one received from Flora en route. Flora has probably written you that she returns next year to help start the Tientsin American School. That advertises as a feeder for the Tungchow school. They will start this year with the lower grades, perhaps through the fourth or fifth and wait for Flora to organize the others. We have had two teachers apply for lower grade work and have handed the letters over to them. Why could not the Peking school have started with this feeling of fellowship! Or rather, why could it not have continued to be in a state of good feeling, for it started that way!

This has been a hard year for babies here. Mrs. R.K. Evans lost both her twins, aged about one year. Last week, Dr. Love came to ask a favor of me. A family by the name of Boynton had just lost their only child, a little girl of two. They were strangers and had only one woman to do for them. Mrs. Fenn and I made the little coffin all in white. I went over to the funeral next day too. Dr. and Mrs. Love and I were the only ones there. Mr. Ballour took the service and did it well.

Last week we had a N.C.A.S. picnic over at the Scott's. 27 of us sat down for supper. It was a rainy day so we had to picnic on the porch. Baseball and a swim had been the program arranged for. Each one brought certain things. It so happened that all but one of the sandwich people stayed away, so did all the cake people. Mrs. Scott could make up the bread and pie and icecream made an excellent desert so we had enough. There are about 28 or 30 N.C.A.S. people here if all had appeared. The campfire girls were out camping for two weeks. They invited the new girls to join them, so they will be acquainted with some of the rules of the organization before they join us.

I have the first installment of the "N.C.A." here. The printers are waiting for the corrected list of subscribers before sending out the orders. This has been the worst year yet in delays. Mr. McCann says he has found these publishers impossible because of their proneness to never get anything out on time. I fear they have lost themselves a job for next year! The bulletin had to wait for the annual because it needed some of the plates.

What do you think of Chinese politics? Was there ever a worse mess. The weekly review of events in the Peking paper tried awfully hard to say something, but with poor success. There was nothing but a wrangle to report.

It is Monday morning and I am waiting for one of the boys to come for some help on the Algebra work he is doing this summer. He has been over every Monday for an hour of help. Aside from that my time is mostly my own. I have made a dress and some underwear. Mrs. Fenn brought up a hand sewing machine and kindly lets me use it. It is almost an East Cliff affair for so many friends come in to use it. One of the brides to be is making her wedding dress and comes up here to stitch.

If you want to send this on home it may give them some bits of gossip not included in my other letters. I hope you are having a good summer. Phebe's letter to Flora gave a jolly household. Mrs. Christian tells me Phebe was to spend a fortnight at Sharp Peak. I hope it was a cool time. We have had terrific heat here. We get reports of much sickness at Kuling and Foochow.

With love

Mary Beard.

Have mislaid Mothers letter and the photo of myself as baby. Will send later. Mary.

[This letter, dated Aug. 13, 1922, was probably written by Stanley and Myra to folks. She talks about Gould helping paint the house. Traffic is getting heavier. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Pearl River, N.Y.

Dear Folks:-

Myra says we did not write at all last week so we must be very very good this week. Gould has had a very good week and Mr. Edgrist has painted with him so they have the first coat on the house about half on. There are lots of things to do on the first coat that won't turn up on the second so that is quite some headway. The children have not gotten badly into it yet. I think the color will be pleasing when the second coat is on.

May [probably May Palmer, Myra's sister] came Thursday evening and to-day we all went over to Bessie's for dinner. Ester Sutton was there. We had a fine time and got back so supper was over and the three early to beds tucked in. Myra, Gould, Ruth and I are sitting up yet 9.30 P.M. Traffic across the river gets heavier all the time. To-day going over it was all right but coming back we had to wait for the third boat about an hour, and there were hundreds of cars on this side waiting to cross. I feel sure they would have to wait three hours. There was a double line west for two blocks and south as far as we could see.

Our dahlias are coming nicely but not any better than last year. One root that I divided for Dr. Clock, Bessie and myself died with me and Dr. Clock, but Bessie has a fine one. This is where I filled my pen. Our own corn is ripe and we have all the vegetables we can eat. I am sending some old letters from China. I wonder where Flora is. How good it will be to see her.

Thank you very much for the corn and apples which Gould brought. We have enjoyed them very much.

Miss Cooper writes that she will try to be here sometime the middle or last of Sept. to let us take a trip. She can't tell just when just yet. The invitation to Phebe to go to still holds if she can make it. We have no idea where we are going but that wouldn't matter, would it?

Lovingly from
All of us

[This typewritten letter, dated Aug. 27, 1922, was written from Tungchow, China by Mary to the home folk. The school building is getting the finishing touches but still has no plumbing or electricity. New people are arriving. She took a trip to Shanhaikuan. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Tungchow, Chihli, Aug. 27, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

I got back here on the noon train Thursday. Mr. Wolfe wrote me that there were questions about closets, shelves, etc. that he would like advice on. It is good I came. I find that there were no closets at all planned for any of the teachers rooms except that of the nurse. Now the only thing to do is to put in plain board ones for the walls are all done. It will mean small space, but it is infinitely better than none. It is strange we did not notice it before. I asked Mrs. Gordon to come to see about the pantry but she could not, so I have gone ahead. We are putting in enough shelves to start on and leaving room for more later if they are desired.

The building looks fine, and as though it would be comfortable to live in. The woodwork and floors are getting paint and oil, two coats each. The screens are partly in. Alas there is no plumbing nor electricity. Mr. Wolfe is making an estimate of costs for both and Mrs. Corbett is going to appeal to Mrs. Schell to see if the Russell Sage money is able to help us out. That will necessitate a makeshift for the year.

I finally got the book list that Flora left me to finish off to the publishers. Mr. Scott is going to see about the correction of proof, etc. He has very definite ideas about what he wants and thinks it would be easier to do the rest himself.

I had word yesterday that the Menzis landed on Friday. The paper says they got in at midnight, so I do not look for the Menzis before Tuesday or Wednesday. I do not just know what to do with them. I thought to have Alice Huggins take them in, but she has the decorators coming to do her upstairs walls on Monday. It will probably be the Whitakers who make room. They go on Friday so it will not be for long. I shall set up my dining room on Thursday if not before. So far the only work the servants have had is to open about 40 packages of books for me. I expect another lot by the Empress of Asia in on Friday.

Please let Stanley know that the Scribners started with the July number all right. My second number has just come. I waited for the second this time for last time I got fooled by the one copy. I had a nice letter from Stanley and Myra shortly before I left Peitaiho. The pictures of the children were good too.

I came up on the train with Mr. Gage, of Chang Sha as section companion. He is very interesting. Evidently he knows many people, for there were several men who came in the car to talk with him. One was a son-in-law of a Mr. Little who has the finest summer residence on Kuling, and the biggest estate if not the best house at Peitaiho. He was delightfully English. [According to the book, Near to Heaven, by Tess Johnston and Deke Erh, "Mr. Little's only daughter married a Mr. Hawkings and had five girls..."] Another sat on the arm of the seat, talked soto voice so I should not hear. I had the Scribners and a good book, so I was happy. I might even have withdrawn for him had there been any where to go. Alas the diner was full of Chinese and so were all the seats in our car.

Just think, I got my name in the paper! I played in the tournament at East Cliff and all the matches were reported. I got three games from the woman who got only four off the champion. Yet I lost three straight sets to Mr. Martin yesterday and only one game in them all. My racket went bad at the end of the season and the strings are so loose I can bend them back and forth. It has no twang at all, and needs a very hard stroke to get the ball anywhere. I shall take Flora's and plan to pay her when she returns. I shall also get mine restrung for it is, or has been, a good one. Genevieve and I have vowed that we will keep up our tennis. It makes one feel so good to get the few games every day. It is the quickest way to get the needed exercise that I know of. The long part is the need of special dressing before and after.

Have just been interrupted by a call from Miss Carlisle on the telephone. She and some friends are going to motor out this afternoon or tomorrow. I liked her voice. She has several letters here from home and she is eager to get them. Mail is also coming for Mr. Menzi.

I enclose two letters for Flora which need no explanation. The one from Nicholas Fittinghoff, I have answered. To Mrs. Newton I am sending a card saying that her letter has been sent on to America.

We are having service today. There will be just eight of us. Miss Mary Andrews leads. She is getting restless to get back to work. I really think she envys us who are on the job. We are not so envious of ourselves. I had lunch with Miss Andrews yesterday because Alice was in Peking all day and she does not like to be left alone. We played her favorite letter game for an hour after lunch. It was my busy day. Mrs. Whittaker found that the baby cried out every time anything touched her left ear. Hence she took her to the doctor in Peking by the noon train. I was in charge of the two children left. That was easy for they went to sleep and slept till nearly four. I make a daily round of the building so took them with me. Then it was nearly time to send them to meet their parents.

The sleeping porch looks less promising than the building. It was not under cover so had to be badly delayed by the heavy rains. It has been the wettest summer in many years here but the driest at Peitaiho. Mr. Martins big hall had not grown at all. The dining room is getting on nicely. There was trouble because of rain but worse yet there was no brick. Our building, Dr. Smiths house and the dining hall took up the brick even faster than it could be burnt.

'Tis time to go over to wash for lunch. I have provisionally promised the children a little time for a story after lunch and may have the call mentioned so will close and not trust to time this afternoon.

I hope soon to hear that the last packages arrived safely. I find three here that evidently Flora wishes mailed. When I get into town I can see about them. I shall plan to go so as to come with the Menzis if I can find out when to go. Miss Muir is in town and I want her out some day this week.

I hope you have all gotten rested and well this summer. Alas, summer is not a restful time on the farm, I know it. I think of you all when I am having the joy of needing tennis for exercise, and having swims, picnics, tramps too, and wish I could divide up with you.

Did I write of our trip to Shanhaikuan? We went just for the day. It was a strenuous day but much fun. 4.30 A.M. till 12.30 the next morning and hard going all the time is conducive to long hours of sleep and some stiff muscles. We had the latter and took the former.

Lots of love,

Mary Beard.

N.C.A.S. Sept, 3, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

My second Sunday back at the scene of my job. First I will give the school news. On Monday Miss Carlisle came down and had lunch with me. She had telephoned on Sunday afternoon but was not certain when she would come, so I was not at the station to meet her. Alice Huggins was on the train so she was cared for. She is very nice, small dark and rather vivacious. She appears very young. But I think is about 30. She has bobbed her hair and that inclines to make one seem young. On Wednesday, Miss Muir came down on the noon train. Mr. Menzi had arrived the night before in Peking and I looked for him. He and Mr. Hutchings missed it, as I found out later. Miss Muir is tall rather dignified very good looking. I noted that her third finger wears a solitaire. I was very well impressed with her. She seemed very sincere and solid, as though one could depend on her through thick and thin. She had good ideas but was not effusive at all. She is to be married next June or earlier so one year is all we get. I consider the man lucky.

Mr. Menzi arrived Wednesday evening so he and Miss Muir met as we were going to the train. On Thursday we spent all day in the office. I had to go to Peking on Friday for money to pay the servants so he went too. We got the money and some things for the store but were crowded for time. It rained hard all night and till nine o'clock. For some reason we were very late leaving here. It was the morning the Whitakers were leaving. They had breakfast with us so it was at 6.15 because of the children. We got to the station in time to get the train to the river and did so to get out of the rain. It was 7.45 before we left the river and it was nearly nine when we reached Peking.

The bulletins are here at last. I have not sent the ones to America. The prints are on a little stiffer paper and it makes it difficult to get them into the envelopes when folded. I am to get some of larger size for those I send home, especially if more than one are to go into an envelope. Mr. Grant has made the size a trifle larger than before. I wonder if it was done purposely. The prospectus of the Peking school is exactly the size of our old ones. Theirs has a cover slightly lighter than ours and smoother. The Shanghai announcement has a wonderful mottled cover. Did I write that Miss Burgess is sister to Mrs. King, mother of Frances King of our faculty last year? She will be along soon as Dr. King wrote she was leaving last Monday, Aug. 28th to meet her.

Have I written the list of engagements and weddings of the summer?

Mr. Lieper and Miss Harbinger, Engaged and married.

Mr. Fuller and Miss Straith, “ “ “

Mr. Sam Dean and ? , “ “ “

Mr. David Dean and Miss Lehman, “ “ “

Mr. Bob Shaw and Miss Hawes, “ only. (What about poor Miss Fenn?) [penciled in]

Dr. Wilson and Miss Lane , “ only.

The David Dean wedding came off yesterday out at the Temple of Heaven and was very private. The Lieper-Harbinger wedding was a big affair but the Fuller-Straith was very small and Sam just went to Shanghai and no one knew what for. From what I hear, he was not certain of the outcome of the trip.

The building grows perceptible in interior finish every day. I visit it at least once a day and often twice to show that I am interested in getting the thing completed. Our men began on cleaning windows yesterday. The top floor is ready for the floors to be oiled. All the floors are scraped. Part of the walls are tinted on the second floor. Mrs. Gordon is worrying herself lest the place be so damp that we all die off in a hurry. I can not get excited for we suffered no harm when we went into this building under similar conditions and then we had to live here 24 hours of the day. Thank goodness Mr. Menzi has common sense and does not take Mrs. Gordon's worrying too seriously. Both she and Mrs. Smith are praying hard for us under the trying conditions, so we must come out all right. That is not sacrilege as it sounds perhaps. Only I can not pray unless I work too and just at present it seems as though the Lord needed my time for work, more than for several hours a day at prayer.

Both Mr. Menzi and I are used to a somewhat strenuous physical life. Hence we swear off about five and get tennis or a hike. We omitted to do so the first day and he had bad dreams to tell of the next morning and I had walked for a long time in the night. That does not pay for me, I know. Margaret Wilder is coming with her father and lands in Shanghai the 8th. It will be quick work to get the wedding off before school opens, but we plan to do so. Probably it will be in Tientsin at the Stanley's and we will have to welcome the pupils without the first Principal. If there is delay, we plan for the Martins to give the wedding on the Friday after school opens. The children would love the latter I know.

The teachers are coming on the 9th for staff meeting. That will give a chance to detail duties so we can manage if Mr. M has to be away.

Major Stillwell and family called yesterday. The boy aged 10 and a half is coming to school. He has a reputation of being one of the most spoiled boys ever known but one of good stuff. His father had taught him at home as he was afraid of sending him through the streets of the city to school. I have heard nothing more from Commander Warner so fear that some of the Peking people got hold of him and he is lost to us.

Books are coming in well. Six big packages came yesterday. Most of the music is in. No supplies are yet here. I hope for some pencils so I shall not have to buy here. I am getting all paper from Henry Fenn. He will make up anything we want, pads, notebooks, etc.

I sent my home letters all to Willard. I was so glad to hear that Stephen had recovered from the Diphtheria and was on the high road to recovery. I only wish the same might be true of Anna. I do hope that Flora gets there in time to see her. Why must it be that Oliver has this to bear! [Oliver has already lost 2 other daughters.]

It is nearly lunch time. Do I always end my letters with a call to eat? It seems to me that I am prone to do so. Phebe would end hers with a call to get something to eat for the family. I would like to try that for awhile. I hope to hear a favorable report of the health of the family. I do hope that the summer has brought more ups than downs for the winter seemed to bring otherwise. Uncle Dan and Aunt Ella are doing well to get along as they do. I do mean to write them. But I have been most neglectful of all correspondence for myself. I will find my friends all leaving me if I do not look out. I will try to hold the family by frequent letters. Even the school may suffer for them

I have found someone who can not keep up with me on the typewriter. Mr. Menzi is the one. He has not done any for a long time. "Chih Fan," says the boy.

With love

Mary.

From an article in The Bridgeport Telegram, Bridgeport, CT dated September 14, 1922: "Miss Flora Beard of Pekin, China is spending a vacation with her parents on Long Hill avenue. Miss Beard expects to spend some time in Shelton before taking up her duties as teacher of English in China."

[This typewritten letter, dated Sept. 25, 1922, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the home folks. All of the teachers have arrived. Mary heard from Flora before she was to cross the U.S. on her way back home from China. Mr. Menzi was just married. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S., Sept. 25, 1922.

Dear Home Folks,

Some folks made good resolves and break them. I seem to be of that class, for it is three weeks since I have written. Much has happened as you may surmise. I think that Mr. Menzi had arrived when I last wrote. We spent every day in the office and got a lot done in the way of letting him learn the routine. On the 9th all the teachers arrived and we conferred all the afternoon. The dormitory was not ready so we camped in the Wickes house to be. It was fun but trying since one of our objects in early arrival had been to get ourselves settled and ready to receive the children. We are not yet settled as the teachers closets are just getting their last coat of varnish today.

Sept. 27 We are having the strangest weather. This morning we were wakened by a hard thunder storm about 6.00 A.M. It has been showery all day and has thundered occasionally. I ordered the furnace started a week ago last Sunday in the new hall and have not dated to let it go out because it has been so cold and the house is still damp.

All of the teachers are now here. Miss Wilkinson arrived on Thursday of last week. She has been in bed so far this week with Ague, but in expectation to be out tomorrow. Mrs. Gordon has been in bed all the week. The cook is running the dining room alone and doing it well. He does not pass as cook this year but as "boss". (I guess that would be the translation.) Hsu Hai is back and apparently doing well. One complaint came in and I reported it at once to him. Nothing more has developed. He agreed not to run his private establishment.

I had a letter from Flora written before she had formed plans for crossing the continent. The strike seems to be over, so I hope the delay for that was not long. Phebe's letter told that you were still in doubt as to the date of F's arrival. We were in the throes of opening when P's letter arrived. We are still there because the carpenters are still with us.

Please remember me to Dr. Tracy when you see him. I like to think of the Huntington church under his care, since both he and the people seem happy together.

I was so sorry to hear of the death of Zina. [Zina Chatfield Beard, cousin of Willard, Mary and Flora. Born May 23, 1863 to Theodore Edward Beard and Julia Ann Wheeler Beard.] He will be missed so much by the girls at the mill. I wonder what May and the boys will do? Will they keep the house and take boarders as before, or will May go to be with one of the boys where his work is?

I have not written to Oliver. I can not seem to do so. I do wish you would tell him that I think of him often and send much love.

You have the bulletins ere this. The two teachers to be appointed are Miss Muir and Miss Wilkinson. Both seem efficient. Wonderful to tell everyone, although chosen so haphazard apparently, has fitted into just the thing we needed. We had everything cared for except Math, Geog, and History. Those are the preferred subjects of the last two to arrive. Miss Burgess is one of the kind that I have to look out for lest she give up too much for the others. She is too self sacrificing, for her own good.

Last Friday Mrs. Ingram gave a big reception, for Miriam who leaves for America soon, for Isabel and her friend who have just come, and the Menzies and Dr. Ingram's brother. I went from the school. There were six of us to come back by auto. The College Club has its first meeting this Saturday and I plan for Martha to go if she will. It is a meeting to discuss finances and will decide whether we are to get the $300 or not. Mrs. MacMillan is making things unpleasant a bit, so I am wondering what will be the outcome.

The Smiths are in their new house. They were moving the same time we were. I have not called yet. The Howard-Smiths leave their house this week but will be with the Martins for a week before going into Peking for sometime. The Wickes are slowly settling. Mrs. Gordon is in my old room. She keeps it till the new house gets dried out somewhat.

Our guest room was christened last night. Lottie Lane Hildreth, a college classmate of mine came for the night. Tonight Mrs. Lewis is there. She had written Mrs. Stelle to take her in, but Mrs. Stelle is off in the country on a trip with her husband.

I think I did not write about the welcome to the bride and groom. Mr. Menzi left here off the noon train Monday, the 11th. Margaret was due in Tientsin that night and the wedding was to be the next afternoon. They returned to Peking on the late train but stayed at the hotel, and came down third class with the children the next day. We had gotten a lot of colored paper and cut it in small bits for confetti and hired two rickshaws which the boys decorated with old shoes, strips of colored paper, flags, and flowers. Two of the boys acted as coolies and brought them in style to the house. Mr. Menzi had nothing with which to beautify the rooms so we teachers had loaned table covers, pillows, rugs etc. and fixed things up very homelike. The room Miss Bostwick had is their room. So far Dr. Wilder has occupied it over Sunday. They would like to have him continue to do so. It may be used by anyone for a gentleman if empty. They do enjoy their sky parlors and Margaret does not seem to mind the stairs thus far. It is interesting to see how little the children seem to take notice of the fact that the new Principal is a newly wed. Perhaps it is because they are not at all sentimental in public, but most business like.

I must close and let this get off to keep it from being four weeks between letters. Tomorrows lessons are still to be looked over. The book bills are here already so I am trying to get those on the first bills. Did I note that Miss Muir has had much experience in keeping books and we have given her a light schedule so she can keep them? She has a system much like that Mrs. Corbett uses so we hope to have the books up to date.

Margaret and John McCann were late for the opening as they stayed to see Robert who arrived the Saturday after school opened. They brought the books and papers entrusted to Robert. We were glad to get them.

Lots of love till next time. No more promises for I did not keep the last one.

Love to all

Mary.

Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S., Oct. 14, 1922.

Dear Home Folks,

This is my week end on duty and today I had to spend considerable time entertaining the parent of our little Polish girl. The mother speaks English very brokenly, but better than I suspected when she brought her voluble son to talk for her. She is most grateful for all that is being done for Raya. She brought the substantial proof in the shape of some "Easter bread" which she had made herself. They are not very well off but seem like good wholesome people.

This week we have had a sad case of a nervous break down. Isabel Hemingway has gone all to pieces. Her left side is especially affected. She is in bed most of the time, but gets up for a good sunning while the children are in school. Our infirmary is useful at once, you see. So far we have only one bedstead for it so the second sick person has to stay at home. Mrs. Sheffield and Mrs. Stelle have given $500.00 for fitting up the infirmary and the plans are started but not near completion.

At last Miss Bailey has been able to get away for a night here. She got plans on foot yesterday for the old girls and for training the new ones as well. They all had supper outside by the moat, corn chowder. The scouts were away last week end so everyone has had some outing.

I went to Peking last week Friday evening for the first of our Holyoke meetings. I did enjoy them so much last year that I shall make an effort to go again this year. We were five, Mrs. Reed (where I stayed), Mrs. Frame, Mrs. Sweet, and Dr. Vincent, just out for the P.U.M.C. Mrs. Willner was out at the hills. Her husband is ill with a return of tubercular trouble which he had some years ago. I was in again on Monday for the Mothers Club. Jean Josselyn was entertaining and I stayed there too. It is just inside the city gate so most convenient for catching the early train, which leaves from the station just outside. Mrs. Dean of the Anderson Meyer Co. gave a good paper on the Junior Red Cross for which she worked when at home. She is also much interested in Camp fire and has been a guardian at home.

Jean is coming down every week for lessons for awhile. She is studying at the Language School and her class meets on Monday mornings so she can not get the pupils in. There are seven taking this year, so she has a busy afternoon. She says, "Yes I do this so as to see my friends in part, but it does not seem as though I should see them much."

Mr. Wolfe has looked in on us twice since school began and is expected this week. Meanwhile I have gone ahead and ordered the built in dressers in the two east rooms. We are short two since we must supply for one extra teacher and for Mrs. Menzi. The fixed furniture in the hall will give more space than an ordinary chest of drawers.

I expect the last girl in tomorrow, Edith Mae MacKnight. She had a sickness soon after her return from Scotland and has only just gotten the doctors consent to come.

I read from the papers that Foochow is having as troublous times as Peking is subject to. The newspaper accounts remind me of those here last year. Miss Wilkinson came with wide eyes the other [day] because the cabinet had resigned en mass. I only wish I had counted the times that has happened! There are reports that after the Chinese government take over the Post offices, we will have to pay 15 cents for foreign postage, four for domestic, and some considerable on package, papers, registered mail, etc. I wonder if they think that will pay!

The LuHe Academy dining room is done. Warner hall is now growing fast after the rest of the summer. It reminds me of the way our hall went up last spring. I think they are racing with time to see if they can get it covered before work must stop. The weather is better for work for the unprecedented rains seem to be over. We have not been able to let the fire go out at all since the first Sunday. Fortunately we can burn the coal powder so the bills will not be quite so big. The boys of course felt cold when we had a fire so started one of their furnaces. We had a fire in the school building till the furnace burnt out. "Big Li" is fixing it so took the part in to be cast. The boiler over at the school sprung a leak too. We had it soldered and it seems to be holding. The new cook stove is about six inches shorter than the old one. That is just enough so that there is not room for enough brick between the two fire boxes. After using the stove for three weeks it burnt out, so we had an iron plate put in. That has held for a week at least. I thought it was a noisy job to have the brick stove built over during the night. But there is more made in fitting a large piece of iron.

The carpenters put the partition between the dining room and the chapel in tight, so I made them pull it all out and make it removable. That partition and the raised platform for the speaker and the piano, make the new chapel most pleasant. The first Sunday, everyone was most unhappy and bemoaning the fact that we had no better place to meet. It is pleasant to have them change their minds as they are doing. I am interested to have them ask for the pictures on the walls. I put pictures in the guest room yesterday and the next is to get to the chapel.

Martha Fenn fell over a pair of stilts in coming for supper last Friday night and sprained her ankle. She is spending the week-end with the Hunters. She was out to church today on crutches. On Saturday the teachers sitting room was used enough to make up for all the days it has been unused. Martha held her classes there and we had the compound tea there. As per usual, most of the teachers were ready to help but not on hand to do so. Miss Carlisle shines in a case like that. She says nothing but when the time comes appears and asks what she may do. It is a continual surprise as she appears so superficial and frivolous. I doubt if she stays long as she craves excitement. She is off to Peking every week so are Miss Muir and Miss Young. Miss Wilkinson started this week. I hope she does not get that habit too. I think Miss Muir is planning to leave at Christmas time, from a chance remark dropped by Miss Carlisle. Of course it depends on the plans of her fiancé.

I am thinking seriously of taking up the camp-fire work, to insure my getting the proper amount of exercise. If it were a school duty, I should hold myself to it. As it is, I let servants, children, papers, all interfere.

Dr. Arthur Smith gave us our Founders Day speech and was very good. He was at his best but has been out but little since. They are enjoying their new house and are more settled than we. Mrs. Smith kept up her trips to the hospital so the settling progressed slowly.

The Howard-Smiths have made their farewell visit to Tungchow, as they leave for furlough this week Friday. She was down for lunch with me yesterday. He has gone to the P.U.M.C. for an "overhauling" before his departure. Mrs. Fenn and a college friend were also down for the afternoon. Luckily for us there were four people in bed, also I would have had to accept the offer to send out some pupils when our dining room got overcrowded.

I will make sketches of the arrangement in the dining room. That is full to its capacity now; no room for growth there. Everywhere else there is plenty of space. We could put up 8 more girls easily, but not more than one or two boys. If we take the Howard-Smith house that will fix that.

I have had two big packages of papers lately, one from you and one from Willard. Also one from Miss Brewster, not so large. I was interested in the new Shelton Post Office. I see that the block dances are still in vogue. Does Dr. Phillips go to Hartford again this year? Please give Mrs. Philips and Dr. Philips my best regards. I recall with pleasure the fine ride into New Haven the day I went up for commencement.

The latest engagement came out last week and Carrington Goodrich and Ann Swan. They became engaged at PeiTai Ho but thought Cupid was being too lightly treated up there so kept it till the storm blew over and surprised everyone, even those who had been fellow guests at Alices houseparty, the week before.

Please send $1.28 to the American Book Company, New York, and ask them to send me "The Trend in American Education" by James Earl Russell. It is just off the press and according to the notices contains some most readable matter for a teacher. I invested nothing in such literature last year because I had gotten so much the previous year, but must keep up this year. Please state that I am a teacher in the North China American School as the price is for teachers only.

Miss Lathrop's exhibit of work of the foreign born sounds interesting. She is still a keen minded woman, sure enough. If you see or have occasion to telephone her, please give her my love. I have neglected all my friends, not that I love them less, but that this new building requires a guardian most of the time and I am it.

I await your letters with joy and fear both. Each tells of Anna as failing. The last where they would not allow you to see her, is the most ominous. Poor Oliver! Why must he have all this to bear. Is it as Will writes that the Lord knows he can bear it! and still keep smiling!

It is so warm today that I am writing before an open window. Not many days have been that comfortable. The heat is down too, altho it was on for an hour this morning. I am beginning to think that our servants eat Standard Oil tins, they can use them up so fast.

This week-end Mr. Menzi has taken off and loafed. It is the first time he has done that since his arrival. It does me good to have him do so, for he was getting very tired. A few days with Margaret will set him up for the week. I must be off to meet the train lest I allow the new girl and her mother to arrive ungreeted. All the girls are to be on the wall to wave.

With lots of love and an uncorrected letter. I'll send your last on to Will, both Phebes and Mothers.

Mary.

[Handwritten on the back of the letter:]

I enclose a few nets too dark for me for you.

N.C.A.S., Oct. 22, 1922.

Dear Ones at Home,

I have been reading again some of the Sentinels recently arrived. This last mail brought a nice letter from Leolyn telling about Flora's stay there. Mrs. Corbett has had three applications also, as a result of her stay. The possible matron sounds good to me. We do not yet know all of the teachers who may stay, but it seems doubtful if any of the short term ones do.

I ought to send all my years letters off these next two weeks, for the increased rates of postage go into effect on the 1st of November. I am off to Peking tomorrow to buy a few Christmas gifts and try to get them off by the lower rate. An increase of 50 % will make a big difference. We got the poster with the full announcement this week.

Everyone is full excited, for Brewer Eddy is scheduled to visit Tungchow this Wednesday. He lunches at the American School, and is here till 2.15. In the evening there is a compound supper at Miss Huggin's house. In between he has to see the hospital, the girls school, the Academy and take a trip into the city to see the city church. I imagine that the goats and the pigs and chickens also get looked at.

Isabel Hemingway is a trifle better, but is awaiting the arrival of her father to escort her home. She is in the farthest room of the infirmary where she gets the least possible noise and it seems to help a bit. She seemed fairly quiet this evening.

Cleora Wannamaker has been down for the week end. She came by the noon train Saturday as she had to leave tonight. We had a fine visit and a good rest. She read a whole book and yet got in a nap today. I finished my book but did not get the nap. It was one of Tungchow's popular week ends. Mrs. Young was at the Martins, Mrs. Scott at the Stelles, Henry Fenn and Mr. Robinson at the Hunters, and Miss Leuders and Miss Craig at Alice's. Cleora and I called at Alice's several times. Miss Leuders brought down a two pound box of chocolates. They were good!

I just found out today that the carpenters took all the wire netting ordered for both our house and the Smith house and put it all in our buildings. They, poor things are entirely without any kind of screens till they get some out from America again. Our carpenters were desperate apparently. At last Warner Hall is growing rapidly. It is almost as mushroom like as our building was last spring. I went all over it and the Lu He dining hall with Harry Martin yesterday afternoon. The dining hall is fine with lots of room for growth. They have about 260- now and can feed over twice that number.

Leonard had gone to the Ming tombs and Great wall, with Dr. Young and Dr. Wilder. Margaret and Mrs. Young were to have gone too but Margaret has a bad cold and is running a slight fever so since she could not go, Mrs. Young came down here.

We had a bit of excitement on Friday night, when the engine ran off the track. It was switching and someone had neglected to turn one of the switches. The whole engine was off. Luckily it was on the empty track so no one was hurt or even jared. The passengers sat and watched it happen beside them. Mrs. Young stayed the night but the load of Chinese stayed patiently on the train till it pulled out about ten that evening.

Just had a letter from Mrs. Josselyn tonight that she will be detained at home for a week at least since the baby has the measles. She has been down twice only.

Typewriters are all the style with the faculty this year. Miss Burgess runs an Oliver and Miss Wilkinson a Corona. We make quite a bit of noise when we all play at once. Mr. Menzi thinks my machine a better one than the school one. I think it has been used more carefully and by fewer people. My examinations are the hardest task it does.

I read in the paper that Foochow has been taken. Also that no damage was done to the foreigners. The extra marines were not needed for active service. I await with eagerness some word from Willard. First hand information is so different from newspaper tales.

Lottie Hildreth told me somewhat of the Swatow floods. It seemed that the reports had been almost mild in stead of exaggerated. Her pictures were also those of absolute devastation. Her own house was injured but among the best ones left. A new sleeping porch hardly more than christened, was blown off, as was part of the roof. The Chinese city was leveled.

I never knew the "smelly sisters" to be so thick as they are now. They get into this house even though every window is screened full length. They seem to be able to eliminate the third dimation entirely.

Tuesday. Yesterday I spent the morning in town and the afternoon here doing up packages. I got the beads, or some. The blue ones were not in stock made up as I wanted. He will have some next week for me. Those I got are green with jade rings. Here are the prices for the last lot sent also for the new ones. A letter must have been lost for I am sure I sent the prices.

I have no clear idea as to how I stand on money at home. I hope it is enough to pay my Nov. life insurance.

Pardon the change of paper. My blue is locked in my desk and the key is at the school house.

Dr. Watson is here to have William examined by the specialists of the P.U.M.C. He feared a mastoid operation but the doctor says not. But there is to be a removal of tonsils soon. Dr. wants to leave the boy here, and has telegraphed to his wife for permission to do so. I am wondering if there has been a desire on the fathers part for the boy to come all along! William is eager to stay. He knows several of the boys already so will have a nucleus of friends.

Dr. Watson will probably take Isabel Hemingway home instead of having her father come out on purpose. He says he will undertake the job, but is not eager for it. It will be a task for she has such poor control. The excitement of the journey is liable to make her worse while the excitement lasts. She eats and sleeps well and yesterday seemed decidedly quieter. Not so today.

The little Scotch maid, May MacKnight is finding her own. She is naturally quiet and coming in late was a bit hard. She is still on a diet without meat but gets enough to eat all right. I have written her mother one reassuring letter.

My latest duties are to be having sleeping bags made for the boys. I have been asked for two and several others have spoken of them. I think next year there will have to be a note on the prospectus for the parents to provide for them. The "Whirlwind" is busy so it is not easy to get her. I have her making bloomers. Some of the old girls deliberately came back without bloomers, "because it was so easy to get them made here. Miss Bostwick always did it". I let them do the job themselves. All I would do was to send for the "Whirlwind" for them. They talk so much better than I that it is the easiest way.

We had the plumbing in the school building thoroughly renovated and the bill of $50.00 has just come in. Luckily we had the old tank soldered instead of purchasing a new one. The Peking tinker assured us the grate broke. It was just in place when the grates in the domestic science stove dropped out. Also the pipes in the heating system next the furnace leaked badly. I think now we are ready to go ahead. I am taking a look occasionally to see if the ashes are kept cleaned out so as not to overheat the grates.

I got a line on oil shortly. The patent lock has lost the nut on the underside and all that was necessary to get oil, all one wished, was to lift up padlock, catch and all, and the oil flowed fluently. A wire holds it fairly well and the boy knows it is there and that I try it every day to see if it is holding. The same amount lasted us three days longer after I made that discovery.

Enough duty notes. We have the nicest afternoon teas in our new teacher's sitting room. It is cozy and we do not have to hurry off to let the tables be set. "Four Chickens" waits on us and feels most important. Now he wears a white gown and looks the part. We are using my tea set instead of having the school ones brought up. I have hung some of my extra pictures on the walls too to relieve the barrenness. Chairs are what we are most lacking in. That lack is everywhere. Miss Fenn is going to furnish the students room for them, so that is quite bare as yet. Did I write that she is paying her own salary this year? Mrs. Corbett pays her board only. She had planned to do so when she joins the mission and so gives us the benefit of the help too.

Miss Young goes to Tientsin Thursday to meet her Mother. She comes out for a year. Mrs. Fisker has a second boy, so Genevieve has to go to meet the mother.

Lots of love to everyone.

Mary.

[This letter dated October 22, 1922 was written from Foochow, China by Phebe to Marjorie. Chinese Independence Day was uneventful but the girls put on a political play. There has been kidnapping of many of the missionary's Chinese workers for use as soldiers. During the night of Oct. 12, there was much fighting and firing by their East Gate. Southerners are now in control of Foochow led by Sak Ding Bing. They have had some anxiety and loss of sleep because of the fighting although they feel safe. Original letter is in the archives of Oberlin College.]

Today Monday I got a letter from Father to him from Ralph. We got a few good suggestions and are glad to know you are well.

Foochow, China
Oct. 22, 1922

Dear Marjorie,

In Dot's letter two weeks ago, I acknowledged your good one written on birch bark. It makes very pretty paper. Father and I were glad to get news of you for we have had almost no letters from the family all summer. Even the Farm people have forgotten us, for three U.S. mails have come with no letters for us from anyone in the States.

Yes, I found the little Chinese combs with a lot of other odds and ends in the box I sent the jade in to Jerry. Did you and Fulton finally take the drive to Pearl's that you planned? All this summer I thought of blueberries and blackberries. The cluie-bo-bo have been very scarce. We had them only once, and they were poor. When is Mother going to send the blackberry seeds for me to plant? I am going to try some slips from Nanking next spring. Already I have lettuce transplanted, and several kinds of flowers started. Thru losing our washerman we have had to press into house service my gardener who was my washerman last summer, so the garden is going to ruin until we can find another boy. Gan-Gan is too slow to keep here regularly as houseboy.

In Dot's letter I told you of the soldiers from the S.S. Regals who were not allowed to stay. The Bank of Fukien was able to pay enough on its notes to keep peace so we have heard nothing more from soldiers.

On the 15th of Oct. came the Chinese Independence Day. Because of the upheaval in the city nothing happened- no parades, no public meetings; but our girls made excitement here all right. We had vacation and they spent the time preparing for a play at night. It was introduced as a dream that one girl representing a student had. She had read of all the oppression and danger of the people in 1909 and hoping students could do something she fell asleep. Then came a student's Conspiracy, the student revolutionary army, and a battle. For that, the girls had covered their umbrellas with brown paper, and put little silver paper bayonets on- excellent likenesses of guns and the battle was so sharp and realistic that it was quite startling. Then came the Red Cross nurses, and all was very true to life. They closed by singing "Long live China, Long Live the Republic" to a lively Chinese tune. Early in the morning they had sung the same thing in procession to firecrackers before we ladies got up.

Father has probably written you how the city people had to give personal cards to their cooks to go on the street with to prevent their being kidnapped for soldiers and army cooks. One gardener was caught, but came back. We kept our men close. Mr. Christian, chaperoned his cook and Miss Atwood's when he went shopping, so they wouldn't be taken. For a few days about Oct. 11, there were practically no rickshas on the streets and the men that were there were old or weak.

During the night of Oct. 12 there was firing and fighting at the East Gate from 1-7 A.M. Our girls were fairly quiet till, about 8:20 some men being chased to be taken as soldiers or army assistants ran into our gate for safety. That started the fright and we had some crying girls. My teacher didn't come, so I had nothing to do till Father came out about 12 to tell us of the battle. Francis Brewster (he is here in the new American Oriental Bank just opened by Mr. Raven of Shanghai, Elsie Sites husband) also came from South Side, and told us that Gov. Li had fled from the city about 7 and gone to all the consulates for help and protection. As he crossed the bridge on foot, his escort fired to clear the bridge for him and surprised our U.S. sailors going to breakfast. They were about to fire back but were prevented as the shots were general, not for them, fortunately. Then, the story goes, Li and his brother each grabbed two of our sailors by the arms and tried to take them as body guards. Li, as we finally heard later took refuge in the Japanese Bank, whence he was taken to Admiral Sak's prison ship at Pagoda Anchorage. Since then (about Friday Oct. 13) he has not disturbed the city. We thought he showed himself a very brave soldier. Li fled because his soldiers lost, and the Southerners had possession of the city from then on. Father told these things to the girls in their dining room and made them quite calm and happy.

The next day, Friday the 13th, while Father was telling me how the yamen had been left open for the people to take what they wished, because the Southern soldiers thought there might be bombs there, in walked Mr. Peet so trembling, and hot that he did everything I told him to though he said he'd do none of them. He sat down and took tea, and tried to control both breaths and trembling enough to tell us that troops were expected that night, since Li's men up river, not knowing of the battle here, had been defeated and were on the run to Foochow.

We had scarcely got his message clearly in mind when in walked Mr. McConnell, Consul Price and the Captain of the gunboat with four officers. They were indirectly trying to scare us into "sensible" precaution. They tried to persuade us to go with our 150 girls to South Side as soldiers could not be sent here. Eunice Thomas was ill, so I came up and consulted with her. We decided to stay as we could see no possible danger here, between the two places where soldiers were- South Side and the city. Well, Mr. Goertz better come and stay with us then, the soldiers said. We were to hang our flags and send messages if anything happened. Yet they all said we were safe!

At 10:30 we heard a great commotion on the horse road in front of the house which lasted for half an hour. There were lanterns and yelling and we thought it was a fire or looting! But we were rather apprehensive. At about 11:30 Mr. Parker the new Y.M.C.A. boys work secy' came in to stay all night. We were very glad and relieved to see him.

But while I made his bed and prepared his room, he went all over the compound with Helen Carter and Mary Pike, up into the roofs of both buildings and roused some of the students. When he finally went to bed, we changed his room in order that he might have a front one commanding the scene of the trouble. We thought a watch was unnecessary and told him so, then he sat up all night!

In the A.M. Helen found him in the tower pistol loaded in hand, a sheet over the parapets, two or three towels on poles which he had been using to signal the consulate. It was too funny for words, because we really felt no anxiety, and he was making it a matter of life and death. All of us nearly injured ourselves laughing at his antics, though we appreciated the care for our safety.

At 10 that day Mr. Kelley of Mr. Newell's school came to relieve him. We don't like him and didn't feel the need for a day-time guard; but the Nantai people were all so worried about our willful disobedience of orders that we put up with it. He had our gates all blockaded, and went to investigate a group of 55 soldiers who had moved into the temple near Gek-Siong pang. He thought things were serious. But Mr. St. Clair had gone to see the consul and had told the folks there how we felt so Mr. Kelley was withdrawn that night and we could sleep in peace- from conducting our protectors about the place. On Sat. A.M. there was a battle that lasted until about 2 P.M. at West gate.

Sunday, the next day our girls all went to Gin Cio Dong across the street.

On Monday things were so quiet that Helen Carter started temporary work at Hai Gie at the university. She is filling in for two profs. delayed on their way from home. Father came out and took Mary and me in to see the hospital with 160 patients, three with legs off and one unconscious.

Tuesday afternoon three of us went to the consulate to meet Admiral Anderson the head of the Pacific Fleet. He is a kindly elderly man, but we saw little of the soldiers. To me it was a treat to see the people I haven't seen since I came from Kuliang. That was my first time on Nantai since Kuliang, and only about the first time in two weeks out of the compound. We found that Vernon Parker was feeling very badly about having intruded so on our privacy in trying to protect us, and we tried to make it right with all South Side.

I never was in a place where the ideas and feelings of one half the community were so little considered and believed as here. The South Side people think we in the city are about to be killed and they are nearly dying of fear for us. We know we are as safe here as anywhere and don't want them to trouble about us.)

Though we have had all sorts of rumors about Wu Be Fu's coming with a big army, and about looting, all has been quiet, except for a big fire over near the river one night. It burned over 200 houses and got us all up until we knew it was not near enough to hurt us. One of our school girls has recently died, and Ding Bing Ngieng, Miss Hartwell's manager died of cancer of the stomach last Thurs. Four girls have been sick, and gone to the hospital, and yesterday, due to more rumors, 28 of our girls left school. Our first exodus. Some are going to Anam, some to Amoy and Shanghai. People are still moving away, but most the stores are open and doing business.

Helen Carter and Mary Pike were in the city last night to help nurse the soldiers. I expected to go tonight, but they don't need me. In half an hour last night almost 40 girls made from cloth by the yard 202 bandages for the hospital. We folded it in 5 yd. lengths, then the lengths in 11 breadths for the widths of the bandages, and giving alternate ends to two girls we tore them down, 11 at one pull. Then the rolling took very little time.

At present Sak Ding Bing (or as it is in your papers Admiral Sak) is the controller of the city. Wong is the military head and Hu Ciong de, and a man named Li are under him. Sak is a fine old man, unselfish, not looking for money, and respected by the people, also a Foochow man. The others are outsiders, of very questionable character, young, not inclined to be friendly among themselves or to work for the good of the people. Foochow may have hard days ahead, but as my teacher says, since the Southerners are here, it is nio buak. Li is more or less independent with a picked-up army. Wong and Li are supposedly answerable to Canton, though the whole thing is very loose.

We have been wondering what the papers at home have been giving you - (Since Mother knows how brave and aggressive Chinese soldiers are) we have believed that you would not be worried. Absolutely nothing of an alarming nature has come anywhere within a mile of us yet. Father has repeatedly gone to the battlefields to get the wounded, and I have been on the streets alone several times in perfect safety.

The Consul has sent us directions as to our action if anything happens in the future. We are gently advised to go to Tai Main, but as they have no underground dining room as we have in case of firing, we feel justified in and safe in staying here. Food and bedding being a necessity we would have to take, we feel that we are right in not going to that bother. Since the bridge is a point around which fighting may occur, we don't feel like exposing our girls to fire by marching over the bridge. We don't feel that the time will come soon when we have to make a choice of staying or going and hope not at all.

Meanwhile I have been doing my language study and teaching. I have given a Christian endeavor talk in Chinese, and I have made my first prayer in Chinese- in chapel! It was quite a wreck but I managed just a short one.

We expect Miss Perkins about Nov. 15 and we shall all be glad to have her here.

I am enclosing a note from Mrs. Sherret-Rogers. She was very friendly to us this summer, and loaned me a number of English women's papers, call the "Queen" that corresponds to our "Ladies Home Journal". I got fed up on the doings and pictures of royalty, and learned a good deal about Scotland. She has spoken of sending more, but I don't quite expect them.

A while ago I read "Ramma". Have you read it? It is a very pretty story tho sad; and the picture it gives of the treatment of the Indians by the U.S. Government is very grilling. I think just at your age it would be most thrilling, but it seemed a bit over done to me. Now I am reading "The Virginians" by Thackeray, and the Emergency in China by Pott.

We are thinking that you were getting home and settled in Sept. so we are hoping for letters soon. Do tell us where you are living, what you are studying, where Jerry is, and how all the Conn. folks are. I have just got 3 new pairs of rubbers from Jean Neete, and a book on Etiquette from Aunt Emma- both things that I ordered. We trust that you are all well and happy and getting on well in your work! There has been almost no entertaining in Foochow this fall. We went to dinner today at the Goertz's, the first thing I have been to since Kuliang except the tea at the consulate all due to the trouble here.

Write soon. Very much love to you and to all the others. Please send this to all the members of the family and to Putnam and Shelton without the first and last pages. Also Aunt Etta. Love Phebe.

American Board Mission

Foochow, China

Oct. 29, 1922

Dearest Ellen;-

It is 6 p.m. and I have just come in from Ma Ang two miles outside North Gate- where we have a nice church. I'm tired for I've been going since 6:20 a.m. But I must start this to make sure it will get off in the next boat. I know all of you at home must think often of us here these days. It will be very interesting to get the home papers a month hence and read just what happened to us. I suppose we shall really not know until some one in America or England tells us for most of us have gone on with our work as usual- only we have added a lot of extra work by taking a share in the care of 550 wounded soldiers in the hospital. 160 of them have been in patients who require much care in many ways. There are still some 50 here. Until a few days ago we had a force of doctors and nurses in the day time of ten and at night of six. The South Side people- missionaries of both missions and some of the business men have been very good to come in and take much of the night work.

Monday- Our job now is to get the money to pay the bills we have contracted for the soldiers. Last week one official Hu Ciong De sent in $500 in paper money issued by the Japanese Bank of Foochow. This brought us $471+. Another Li Hok Ling sent in $400. in dimes. This was worth about $365. in Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank checks. Another official Uong Dai Ui sent in $30 in dimes, one soldier gave us $9.00 in dimes, and another $10.00 in dimes so we have about $875.00 toward an estimate expenditure of $1500. I plan to go to see Uong Dai Ui tomorrow to try for $500. We have thus far lost only 18 of the 160 that have been very seriously wounded. Until within the past few days Dr. Gebhardt has not had time to do any but the most pressing amputations. It took all his time to care for the cases as they came in and to look after the most pressing needs. During the past few days he has been searching for bullets in various parts of several men's anatomys. He finds lead pointed bullets and bullets encased in brass sheaths. One of these he found in a man's knee joint. It had struck the knee pan and split and part went down and part went sideways,- shattering the bones badly. These are very bad bullets and are inhuman. But so is most everything connected with this war. It is said that the Polio Commissioner under Gen'l Li promised his men on Saturday Oct. 14 that if they could defeat the Southerners and get into Foochow City, he would allow them the freedom of the city for three days. I.E. They can loot, burn and kill and rape as they chose. I must say that thus far the southerners have been quite decent. There has been very little looting- except of the official residences and offices of the officers who ran away. Mr. Nga told me this morning that his father went back to Lo-Nguong after the battles (he was in Smith Hall the Thursday of the first battle, and Mr. Nga's mother and his wife and little boy were also there). When the Southerners arrived they arrested the LoNguong magistrate and his three secretaries of whom Mr. Nga's father was one. They told him that they knew he had been upright and fair in all of his work as a secretary, and they would let him go free. They kept the magistrate and the other two secretaries, so occasionally honesty is rewarded even in China.

School has been running as usual for over a week now- perhaps 40 boys have left- their families have moved to Hupeh province,- to Amoy, to Che Kiong and other places. Two of our boys, students in the 5th year are captains in the Southern army. They know nothing about a captain's duties but they know a little about books. Business is slowly coming to normalcy.

Will you please buy me a diary- you know what kind I use - a vest pocket diary-leather cover-one that will last a whole year. I meant to write for it a month ago, so as to have it for Jan.1st

The last mail brought Kathleen's most interesting letter. This is the first that we knew anything about where you had moved to. Dorothy's sprightly account of the 500 mile hike which was really only a 50 mile hike came also in the last mail and a good letter from Gould telling of his interesting summer. Ozora Davis had a very lovely letter in this mail that Phebe has already read two or three times. It is full of a simple faith in Jesus that grips one- and is most refreshing in this age when people are given so much to materialism and questioning the reality of the comfort and aid of Christ's presence. Ozora has tested Christ's power to help in several ways. He has been ill with a serious disease and only by strict dieting is he living today. He has been surrounded by selfish, egotistical men who did not help him in his endeavor to build up a strong Theol. Seminary- and he has felt very keenly the lack of a simple faith in Jesus on the part of many of his collaborators. He has also had a hard financial struggle to get money for the Seminary.

We have just had a brief visit from a Dr. Mrs. Richards- representing the Am. Board. They left the States in 1919. He was the medical head of the Near East Relief Expedition that went to Turkey. They were in Turkey until last June- sailing from Smyrna just before that city was taken from the Greeks by the Turks and burned. They went to Ing Hok last and got back Sat. and went to Anchorage today to take the steamer tomorrow for Shanghai.

Phebe and I want to know more about you and about Geraldine. Dot seems to feel very pleasantly located in Baldwin. When I was a student in Oberlin I looked on Baldwin as sort of a Delmonico- the classy women's boarding place of all Oberlin. Board was $3.00 per week- the very top motel.- It was where Madam Johnson lived,- and I boarded at Stewart Hall that stood at the "end of the lane" and where board was $2.00 per week. I'm glad Dot is there in Baldwin.

With love to all Will

Wen Shan Girls School
Foochow, China

Nov. 5, 1922

Dearest Kathleen,

I suppose now, since you are in the Freshman Class in High School, and write such nice dignified letters as the one we received about three weeks ago, I don't dare to call you by such a childish epithet as Krack. I can picture you and Marjorie as you start off each morning to school together, and come home at noon together, too. You must both be glad that you have each other's company, for one of you spoke of it. I remember before I left, that you always had to go alone.

You didn't tell us anything about your Grammar School Graduation last June. Don't they have any? I hope you did. Don't you like Algebra? When you get the idea of how to do the examples they all just roll off as easy as falling off a log. I used to do them in the study period that came right after Algebra class and I usually got them done then, with no trouble. I like Latin, too, and English with stories and comps I loved. I hope you will like your science, for that is such an important part of the learning of the present day. Write and tell me what you are doing and how you like H.S. methods etc.

By the time you get this you will probably have been invited to the football banquet! Who took you and did you have a good time? Or don't Freshmen go?

Marjorie is a Junior! Before long I'll have to be sending her a graduation present. What college is she thinking of?

These last two weeks have been so quiet and commonplace after the highness of our association with naval officers etc. that it hardly seems worth writing to a Freshman about. But on Oct. 25 we got a letter from "The Secretary of the Army" telling us we were within the boundary of the battle area, and must move at once unless we wished to be involved in fighting. As there was no official seal, and as it came from South Side we thought it false. But as a safeguard Eunice took it to the Consulate to be looked up. Since we have heard nothing from it we have decided it was a fake.

Some friends of the Smiths came to see Foochow, Dr. and Mrs. Richards of Fall River. They came here to tea, went to Ingtau the next day Wed. and were back here by Sat. 4 P.M. How's that for speedy travel?

Mrs. Bedient's baby has come, a dear little boy. Philip Edward. I went over to see them one day in the M.E. hospital, and as I came home I had to pass under a bar in a gate at the far end of the big bridge. It was held up for me to pass. That is a safeguard to the people from thieves and fire bugs. We have the gates all thru on streets.

Last Friday night I went into the hospital to be night nurse, but as none was needed I came back next A.M. with a full night's sleep at St. Clair's to my credit.

Katherine Ling's baby was born 8 days ago. She was due last of last China New Year's brides from our school and faculty. Yesterday the baby died of acute indigestion, and the parents feel very lonely.

One of Mr. Smith's boys is to be married during annual meeting and has asked me to be bridesmaid. This is the first time here as bridesmaid, and this is to be a big church wedding. At that time too, the school girls are to sing two pieces at the concert, and I have to lead them, I suppose. It terrifies me to have to stand up before a church full of people and beat time. I hope there will be a piano, and I can play myself.

Mr. McLachlin has sent for Mr. Leake's violin which I used this summer for Helen to take lessons on. As I have not been able yet to send my own to Shanghai to be fixed I have none to play. Edith Goertz is taking lessons of me, so far she has come twice. She started as a very promising pupil, tho she seems not to have much stick-to-it-iveness.

Mrs. Williams asked me some time ago to buy her some Jasmine tea. Last Thurs. I went with Father to a big tea shop on South Street and ordered the tea, 180 lbs. for $159.24. They gave me four bags to address for the outside wrapping and in all we had 20 tin boxes containing 9 lbs. each. It took us over an hour the next day to get them off- stamped, thru customs and ready to go.

Yesterday I bought $26 worth of silver chains with catseyes, spoons, cuff links, etc. for her to sell. I love to buy when I am not using my own money! You see the things and get them, but don't have either the expense nor the trouble of care of the things.

Helen Carter has been teaching at the university for three weeks to substitute for two English professors who had to turn back to Vancouver for some boat trouble. They are expected on the next boat, so she will be released by next week they think. I fear life will be rather slow for her after so much traveling, so much reading of interesting papers, and doing bigger things.

Our new dormitory is nearly done. It was set back two weeks by a mistake in the placing of the partitions which all had to be moved. Upstairs they had all been muddled so that had all to be done over again.

To be ready for Miss Perkins arrival, I am moving into my new room over the kitchen and over looking the back yard, in the shade of the camphor tree tomorrow. I sleep there tonight for the first time, but my things all go in tomorrow. A wardrobe and table from Father's furniture are going to complete the set of bed bureau etc. for my room till I find out whether we finally go into the other house to live or not.

Thanksgiving will be over when you get this. I wonder if you will go to Baldwin this year! Don't miss an opportunity if you get one! Greetings to all!

As postage is up to 15 cents a letter since Nov. 1 I am going to add a note to Dot. Lots of love to all, and loving graduation congratulations to you my littlest sister.

Nov. 9, 1922.

Dear Folks at Home,

I have a new job! My latest is ordering goods for the making of sleeping bags for the boys. Mrs. Stelle has the women working in her house and just now while she is away her Amah is superintending there. Some are made of new material and sometimes of comforters that the boys have. I am having two outing flannel bags made to fit each. Those tie in and can be removed for washing. Before this cold snap, the boys said they were too hot if they used any bedding over the bag yet the bag is the thickness of a fairly thin comforter. (only three pounds of cotton to a bag).

Two days ago the thermometer took a sudden drop and yesterday at three P.M. it was only 32 on our front porch. I had sent for the man to fix the storm windows and he had not appeared. A new rather peremptory summons brought him inside of two hours. Before night the school house was enclosed in its winter windows and doors. Your room, Flora is a regular barn. I am going to try an extra window on one of the west windows and see if it makes it usable. I gasp at the coal bills we will have, but no one else does, so I forget it.

This letter progresses slowly. Here are a few of the interruptions.

I. "Miss Beard, have you a hot water bottle. Dorothy Dodd has a pain in her back." I get the bottle.

II. "Pardon the interruption, but the girl who is supposed to take a bath at 8.10 has not appeared and soon it will be too late for the next girl to get hers." I go call the girl as it is one of those on my floor.

III. I think of the comfort which is for sale and which Miss Burgess has said she would like. It is cold and I fear she needs it, so go and take it to her. She is grateful, so I am repaid.

IV. I was cold myself last night, so get out one of my extra pieces of bedding.

V. "Miss Beard, have you a book review?" I do not have one up my sleeve, but hunt up one in a magazine. Before it is done, a second girl comes with the same request. It was a time saver as I had the things out.

VI. A great noise on the next floor down (Marjorie and Margaret live there) which no one seems to quell, so I go down. A word sends the girls scuttling to their rooms.

Today Mrs. Dildine and Mary were down for the afternoon. This cold weather made them think of the trunk of bedding that had been left here. They also took the rugs and the couch. One of the rugs was on the reception room floor as it was the only unmarked thing I found. Last week I found Glen's rug like it so had known it must be theirs. We had a fine visit. They have been moved to Peking and Glen is attending the Peking school. Mary is not able to go anywhere and has only just gotten so she can study at all. She looks and acts better than she did last summer.

I have had three letters from Miss Bostwick. When I give up teaching I think I will take up purchasing for other people. Does Flora have all the things you all want? Perhaps it is that you have not seen the luncheon set and rug that I got for Leolyn. Mrs. Bostwick would like them both practically duplicated. Tis sad, but the Exchange takes no more special orders. I fear I will have to ask Leolyn to use the set only in the busom of the family and roll up the rug when she has guests. I have already bought two of those embroidered table cloths with napkins to match with some money Miss B. sent. They exhausted the $50.00 gold which she sent. She got a draft on Peking so I was able to collect at once.

I got a luncheon set at the Exchange which was marked down because of spots. I am sending it to Mother. If you like it better than the one containing the card, please change. If not sell for $8.00 or 9.00.

Mrs. Menzi has been ill for nearly three weeks with a bad cold. She thought she was over it and got up one day, came over for lunch and stayed up about half an hour afterward.

Miss Bostwick writes that I owe $1.50 for a strap that Flora bought for the rug. I gave you $3.00 with which to buy a strap, was it not enough? Phebe asks what I sent to Mother. It was the pin made of the blue glass of the lienzas out at the Temple of Heaven. We had it made when in Peking last spring vacation.

I am sorry, but when I was about to move over here, I cleared out permanently as many things as I could. Among them, I mailed the packages to Phebe. It was an expensive job, over three dollars. Also the gardener came and had a tale of woe. All the other servants had $1.00 from Miss Beard, and he had not. Mrs. Smith had written me about it earlier so I gave him one for you. $.40 cents came back from $1.00 given Mrs. Smith to pay coolies, rickshaw men etc.

Smily Li, the tinker and carpenter Tsao have been here helping lately. Both express deep regret that "Big Miss Beard" is not returning to Tungchow.

My life insurance is due about now. I hope that I had enough money home to pay it. If not, use what comes from the stuff sent last week. I have lost all track of where I stand. I mailed some things, not for sale as silk petticoats for the girls, the lunch set (the other to be substituted if you prefer). Do you know if Joel and Grace Beard ever received a package from me? I sent one the same day that I first started Edith's on its way, but have never heard a word. I wrote also that I was sending it, so that it would be expected and there be less possibility of loss. I am taking such solid pleasure from the blanket they gave me, that I hope they are enjoying the lunch set.

Fanny Wickes had a box from Honolulu recently. In it was a winter coat. I have bought it for $9.00. It is somewhat worn but will do very well to wear around every day. I have just had my fur one done over, the outside turned and the fur cleaned. It looks like new. So I shall not get a coat as I had planned for dress up wear. I have also resurrected my brown velvets suit and had that fixed. I am quite dressed up in my old finery. I thought I was getting a piece of silk from Ching King but there was a slip and so I am having to wait. Meanwhile I had my two silk dresses cleaned and they are much improved.

Friday evening. I was impressed anew today with the wonders of this building. It is so compact and is so usable, every inch of it. We have had permanent dressers with cupboards over them built in in both dressing rooms on the second floor and on the first. In the infirmary, behind the door is a cabinet with drawers in the bottom, and enclosed shelves running to the ceiling. The carpenters did not build in the big hall cupboard on the plans, and this is an attempt to meet the need. We have had someone in the infirmary ever since we opened it. Miss Carlisle is no fool. Terril Adams heard of the fine food served so immediately took a bad cold and had to move to the infirmary. He could not get up any temperature, nor other outward symptom of illness but professed to feel very bad. He had to stay two whole days and live on a soup diet and nothing else. I doubt if we get any more fake patients. He is reported to have remarked on never having been so hollow before.

Alice Frame was down with the Loves last week end. She took dinner with me on Sunday. I had a fine visit with her. She is such a busty lady that it is hard to get more than a look at her. She has been relieved of her Bridgeman work but is Dean of the Womans college.

The Peking American School laid the corner stone for their new building two weeks ago. Mr. Tuttle sent invitations to Mr. Menzi and me. Unfortunately Mrs. Menzi was not so well that day and I was in town with the understanding that he was coming in. Hence no one represented us. There is to be a big reception for the faculty of Yen Ching next Wednesday evening at 9.15 P.M. at the Legation. I think all the American community are invited. I would like to go but fear I have not the right thing to wear.

Mrs. Earnest Shaw has been down for a week with Mrs. Wickes. Baby Eleanor is a darling. She is most friendly to a certain point, but beyond that very wary. I did not get time to really make friends. Mrs. Burgess was down for a day with both children. I knew it not till she had seen the family off on the evening train and came to hunt me up to take a walk. The boys are both very well but she is very tired and nervous. She would like to put David in kindergarten but the class is all Chinese and Eurasian and she does not like it.

We have just had word that the China Council is to give us 500 this year and the China Medical 5000. Those gifts pull us out of the woods as far as travel money and salaries go. Now if only Mrs. Schell gets the 5000 gold for water and electricity!

Mr. Lund has fixed up the back room at the boys house for a sitting room and it is most attractive. Martha Fenn is fixing up the girls room. So we are getting the social rooms ready slowly but surely.

Mr. Wolfe has ordered an iron ladder which will be put on the west end as a fire escape. The funds did not guarantee getting a real one till other things were assured. The latest report is that we may be able to get it after all.

Mrs. McCann was up for several days last week. Also Mrs. Tucker was at the Smiths. Mrs. Mitchell is due for the day tomorrow. She is to take home all the extra unused things with which Lucy is encumbered. Her room mates are desparate over her 'truck'. Our three 'foreigners' seem to be working in well. Sadie and Raya were the greenest of the green.

The parents had, and still have, a streak of sending food to the children. Candy was so common that it was no luxury and the children were about to bankrupt the school buying castor oil and salts. Now all packages are delivered to me. If food is in them, I take the goods. The child may have it in small quantities after meals and at 4 p.m. but only then. Friends may be treated if desired. I am surprised at the little treating that is done. I am the one who had to practice self control with boxes of candy and bags of nuts and boxes of wafers in my care but not to be eaten. I even practice refusing every time I am offered as this might be construed to be a ruse to get candy.

Mr. Bessell says he can get reduced rates for our children. I have a nearly completed list of where each child is to go for vacation and hope to get the reduction. I can only send in the requisition and try. If we get it, it means we can buy the round trip tickets here on special forms sent for the purpose. The Chinese boys do it, why not we?

It is bed time. Lots of love to all.

Mary.

P.S. Dr. Smith had a letter from Mr. Revell acknowledging the receipt of the scroll Flora delivered. Dr. Smith send regards to Flora so did Mr. McCann and Mrs. Mitchell, Dr. Lewis, Mr. Martin, Dr. Wilder, Mrs. Sheffield, Mrs. Stelle, Caroline Porter, Mrs. Tucker are among those recently enquiring and wishing to be remembered.

[This letter dated Nov. 12, 1922 was written from Foochow, China by Willard to Geraldine. The political situation changes daily and Willard feels it is for the better now. Soldiers are taking ricksha men and farmers to carry the loads for them. The Annual Meeting had to be postponed because of the uncertain situation at Ing Tai. The schools have low attendance now but Willard expects the next term to be full because of the closed government schools. Original letter is in the archives of Oberlin College.]

Nov. 12, 1922

Dear Geraldine;-

For various reasons I have been addressing letters home to other members of the family for several months. This one goes to you altho you are not likely to be in Oberlin to get it.

I wonder if the hair nets I sent last May got to you and Dorothy all right and if you could make any use of them. I do not remember to have had any word from either of you about them.

Dorothy's letter describing the trip from Silver Bay to Oberlin was most interesting. It must have been instinctive as well- for you get a much more thorough knowledge of the country if you travel slowly than when you whiz thru on an express train.

The political situation is changing every day,- as far as I can see changing for the better. The man whom the papers call Little Hsu came to Foochow and outlined his plan of campaign for bringing all China under his sway. The Foochow people do not care for his scheme and at once right in his presence – so it is said- began to pull his plan to pieces. Then they began to talk publicly against the plan, then posters appeared against it on the streets and the day before he left posters were posted all along the streets urging the people to rise and put Little Hsu out. He left the night following the appearance of this poster.

Then the people elected their own Civil Governor, - a man whose home is in a village not far from Pagoda. He has students in the Anglo Chinese College. His name is Ling Seng. The man next in authority in his yamen is a student, Pang by name, 4 years in Foochow College- a fine, clean looking man of 40 years + . The head of the Bureau of Industries is Li Ung Bing a Foochow City man- as is Pang- and a graduate of Cornell University. This makes three young men with modern education- knowing Christianity, in the highest civil magistrate office.

The military situation does not clear up much. There are four military generals in Foochow in the Military General's office Uong Ing Ciong.

Under him Hu Cung De
Uong Dai Ui
Li Hok Ling

These three say they will leave Foochow shortly. Their soldiers are everywhere. They are impressing ricksha men and farmers and any one who can carry a load or pull a cart to carry ammunition and guns to various places where they plan to fight and also to carry their rice and furniture. One church member from outside East Gate was impressed and compelled to work 10 days and then let go. Looting is going on all the time- not very bad- both in the city and in the country. There are very few rickshas on the streets and those drawn by weak men not wanted by the army. It makes travelling tedious. The busses are jammed and the people rush for them and crowd into them just as they do into the street cars in New York City.

Miss Perkins arrived last Friday and Miss Allen with her. Both are looking well. Miss Perkins informed me that she had fallen in love with Phebe. The Girls School at Ponasang is pretty well off now-They have five young women on the job for 110 girls. Phebe was in for lunch Sunday. Mrs. St. Clair had asked Miss Allen and Miss Armstrong in also. I walked home with Phebe in the afternoon- instead of finishing this letter.

The U.S. "Ashville" is still here- at Ma Muai and there are still some five or six other men of war there. It is reported that Shaowu has been retaken by the North and again lost by the North. The county districts are very much disturbed. Conditions are so uncertain in Ing Tai that no one dared to leave for Annual Meeting so we are postponing it indefinitely.

College is now going on as usual. We have lost about 50 boys on account of the war and the conditions it produced. Miss Armstrong came back ten days ago and is getting into the teaching. This relieves me of four or five classes a week that I was trying to take for her. Mr. Nga told me the other day that we were likely to have a fuller school next term than this, because every building of the government schools is occupied by soldiers and also the whole Educational Board – Presidents, teachers and all- has changed with the change in government. Just now there is not a vestige of a government school in Foochow that I know of.

The churches are doing their work also under difficulties- as several of the members have moved away. The day schools are affected in different degrees according to their location. The one at Iong Gio Haeng is nearly empty. Most of the pupils there came from well to do families all of whom have moved away. But people still come to church and there is plenty to do. God is still on His throne and is still guiding men as best he can - seeing men are what they are. May he give to you all the best things because you use them well. With love to all Father.

[This letter, dated Nov. 13, 1922, was written from Foochow, China by Phebe to her brother, Gould. Phebe writes Gould on his 26th birthday on paper decorated by Mr. Christian's boys. She talks about a church service she and Willard attended at Au Seu. Mrs. Gillette invited her to help entertain 8 officers from the Gunboat Asheville. Phebe led her first prayer meeting in Chinese. Foochow, China.
Nov. 13, 1922.

Dear Brother Gould,

For some time I have been looking forward to this day with the thought of writing you on it. Today- and you are just about getting up to your work now as I write, - is your birthday, and you are past the quarter-century mark. How does it feel?

For you the years have already brought much of philosophy in connection with your work- for you have had many problems. I know from your letters and other things that you have asked the question that keeps coming to me- what am I going to do in this world? For you as for myself, a life only of self-entertainment and pleasure would be obnoxious, and from your summer and your offer to take the girls home in your auto, I know that you, too, find the greatest satisfaction in doing the little everyday things that help people.

Somehow as a milestone like a twenty-sixth birthday one stops to breathe and look around, to look forward and see that his time is, that he can't look ahead as a child and say, when I am grown up I will do so-and-so but he must say, What is at hand? This I must do now.

Both you and I are still in our preparation period, tho; you studying for your work, and I in apprenticeship for mine in language and methods. I find I still like to play pretty well, and sometimes it doesn't seem as if I really did anything. Yet I am carrying eleven music lessons, eight periods of singing and an English class, a week all as afternoon work. My mornings are given to language study, and I know I work then!

Before I go to bed I want to give you my very best birthday greetings and congratulations on the use you have put your years to already. And I also send my best love by the funny little Chinaman on the front page. Don't you think he is cute? Mr. Christian showed me this paper that his boys are making for Christmas use here, and I was so taken that I took a lot then and there. This is the first letter I have written on it.

I hope your birthday will be a very happy one for you, and that you will get some messages on or near it from the family. Good night for now, I'll finish later.

Nov. 19. You can see how busy I am by the time it takes me to take up my letter again!

I wish you could have gone with Father and me to the Au Seu church near the foot of Kuliang. We walked out and got there just in time to see the school boys charging around a corner and down the street into the church. Not much religious dignity there! We sat on wide backless benches and Father and I sang the hymns to the obligato of several other tunes and voices generally. The only brake to a perpetual smile on my face was the fact that the pastor or preacher rather continually glanced in my direction. The wee tike that took up the collection shot the box into each pew even if he didn't expect a contribution, and at the end he just gave it a preemptory shove in front of some little girls on the way- not even stopping. One girl capered all over the church and played peek-a-boo with the audience between the palings of the stair rail in front of the audience. I wish we could push on the village work as fast as the city work. But you will still have old China when you come to visit us.

Miss Perkins is back and at work again. She arrived nine days ago at 2 A.M. and two of us got up to greet Miss L??as and her. They had got stuck in the river on a sand bar and just had to sit and wait. I think we are both happy to be working in the same school, and I really enjoy her very much.

Yesterday, Sat. we all went in to tea at the new Kindergarten Training School. It is built in Chinese style and has carved paneled windows, grey round-tile roof, with eaves and beds painted, and the lions and dragons on corners and ridge pole beds. The Chinese pretend not to like it, but if they don't start right in to copy the architecture in their own plans, I miss my guess. The temple architecture here is the most distinctive and unique in China; and I hope the Chinese will come to use it and associate their best in house art with the best in education and religion. Tea was served on the little stone false garden at one side with unending steps up to towers or into caves, and little seats and bushes over all. I like the building and the place very much and I hope their work will prosper.

At the Methodist College last night we had a real American Red Cross supper. Our party used the new auto lunch-suit case with plates and cutlery that Miss Perkins brought us. As we ate we sang songs and cheered the note??. Miss Chittenden and Miss Wells were there and it seemed so good to see them again.

Do you remember seeing Miss Lamberts drill where the girls marched, used dumbbells and wands? She has a big playground now, where she has three sets of games at once, tennis, volley ball, and basketball. Here we saw a long drill and games last Fri. P.M. in full sight of the river and Kushan. Everything shrinks as I see it after so many years, but tho the thrill and grandeur of this exhibit wasn't as great, they did just as well, and it was all in charge of Chinese teachers. Our exercise was representative of boxing and fisty-cuffs, the notions all being taken from pushing strokes. The kindergarteners did the May-pole dance and were too cute for anything their short-legged little boys, and knee-high goose-steps marching. Ah, you must come back to renew old times in China!

I must dress for tea now at the Y.W.C.A. on Black Rock Hill.

Since I put this down I have been down to Pagoda [Pagoda Anchorage] for a dinner party and stayed over night. Mrs. Gillette was entertaining eight officers of the gunboat Asheville which is protecting us here, and she asked me to go down. Miss Blanchard and I missed all the launches, so took a sampan and rowed ourselves part way down. We beat the 3-hour record by doing the trip in 2 ¼ hours.

For dinner we had a Chinese feast and the men enjoyed it hugely. One was pretty good at the chopsticks and patted himself on the back after each of the 23 courses. Afterwards they wanted to dance, but we being missionaries didn't feel right to do it. They were pleasant and I think we all had a good time.

Miss Blanchard and I were planning to come back on her horse, taking turns at riding. But she didn't come over from Diongloh so we came by river and stopped at the University. I saw Mrs. Bedient and Billy, and the baby. Their new house is very pretty in quite Chinesey style with dragons and lions and dogs perched all over it.

Tomorrow we are going to have Mr. and Mrs. Skerrit-Rogers to dinner at Mrs. St. Clair's. Father wants to entertain them in the city so we are doing it tomorrow night.

I have led my first prayer meeting in Chinese. One of our girl teachers gave the talk so my part was small, tho it took special phrases to put it thru.

About two weeks ago at our first Anti Cob meeting Mr. Christian waxed humorous on his trip to Manilla and Borneo this summer. He said that Jap and Chinese consuls were asked to decorate their passports and asked several dollars for the signatures. They could scarcely see their little boat, and took it only because they had no rubbers that were adequate protection from the little puddle they had to cross. In spite of his funniness he gave a good account of Borneo. It is governed by a company like the East India Co. of history that tried to find the East Indies under Drake. Mr. Neff later told about the condition of Manilla where he taught for some time.

Sometimes I wonder if gay parties are worth the trouble. You have to skip work that ought to be done; you have to do extra work later; you get greatly excited and have an inflated idea of yourself, then suddenly when all is done you thump down hard on the level of fact and work again. I suppose that is because you don't get it often?

This will get to you almost in time for Christmas. I hope you will have a jolly holiday season, and go back to college all the more ready for study. What are you taking?

Mr. Goddard is planning to come to Foochow next year they say. It will be nice to see him again.

What do you think of U.S. labor conditions and business now? Are prices coming down? Ours are constantly going higher here. All curios, foods, labor of all sort and materials are going up.

No trouble is anticipated from the soldiers now. Our new government with three former mission school students, but not graduates, is getting things started and we hope will get the idea of justice into working order.

My eleven music pupils and six music classes are doing fairly well. It takes lots of time, but it is satisfying and interesting.

On Thursday I am to be bridesmaid for one of the Chinese boys at father's school. I don't know yet what I am to do.

Do write and tell us what you are doing and how you are. An American mail came today with not a letter for either of us.

Christmas and birthday greetings and much love from sister Phebe.

[This letter dated Nov. 22, 1922 was written from Ann Arbor, Michigan by Gould to his mother and sisters. He thanks them for sending him a package of goodies to eat. Dot and Gerry visited him at the university. He hopes to come home for Christmas.]

508 Hill St.,
Ann Arbor, Mich.
Nov. 22, 1922

Dear Mother and Sisters;-

Your big package arrived last Friday morning and you can't imagine how surprised and glad I was to open it and see all the luscious things to eat in it. I'm sorry I did not have time to write my thanks to you before, but I can do better justice to my feelings about it, now that all the things are inside me and my mouth is still wattering from the memories. I ate the last of the cake today. The rest of the "upper Story Frat", join with me in thanking you.

I suppose Dot has told you most of the doings here during the three days they were here. I was sorry I could'nt have been a better host; but I could'nt get a substitute for my job because there wasnt any one who knew it. I had to let the girls get to the house as best they could and they had to get to and from the game themselves also.

Time was so short and events so crowded that I did'nt get a chance to show the girls $\frac{1}{4}$ of what I wanted to. We took "first things first" and the rest will have to wait till next time if there is a next time.

Dot's letter asked me (for you) to leave the paint on the car. I am afraid I better not because that would be running a clever thing into the ground and possible cause a bit of comment, not favorable of "those Michigan Boys". For the Ohio game that was a real stunt, but to carry it much longer would be placing the name of Michigan "in public places" like fools names and monkeys faces. [See photo below.]

Now that the football season has finished I have until after Xmas before winter track commences and I hope to be able to land a job to fill in the time or that will be enough better to keep all year. I will probably be down Xmas time. Anyway for Xmas day, for I may be able to do pretty well on a job during vacation.

Thank you again for the cookies and that pretty birthday cake.

With all my love to you all,

Your loving son and brother,
Gould.

Foochow China
November 26, 1922.

My One Loved One;-

Today has been a perfect day in Autumn.- The coldest day yet- 36 degrees on the west side of our house this morning and 44 degrees in my bedroom. That's a drop of over ten degrees since yesterday. But it is very dry, with a strong west wind blowing, so it makes one feel good. I am writing in my old study and its pretty cold so that my hand aches but with plenty of clothes on it's all right.

I could not get a special letter to you, my dear, in the last home letter mailed Nov. 23. But that one addressed to Kathleen had in it a lot of love for you just the same.

This morning I preached here and conducted communion. Eighteen united with the church,- One woman and seventeen students. The people all looked cold. As I went into the church a lot of boys stood outside near the door as you go in where the sun was shining very brightly and where it was warm. It seemed almost too bad to call them in out of the cheery, warm sun. Pastor Li has had another slight hemorrhage, and is not at all strong. He has definitely given up the work of the church and is likely to be a sort of Secretary or helper to Mr. Goertz who has charge of the churches of the whole station now.

Li Gong was married in the church last Thursday. I sent the wedding invitation in Kathleen's letter. The lower part of the church was full of spectators. Phebe made a very pretty bridesmaid. I had Chinese dinner at noon and a feast at night out of it. And Phebe stuck to the bride till after 9 p.m. I was there from 8 to after 9 and then walked home with her. Phebe said she was very fearful of the Nau Bung. But all went off very happily.

This is probably the wedding in which Phebe was a bridesmaid. Phebe is standing next to the bride. Willard is just behind the groom.

We expect Brewer Eddy here before next Sunday to be here a week. We will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Christian,- according to the present plans.

Did I write that Mrs. Siek Ding Gai = Katherine Ling who taught in the Ponosang Girls School and played so well, had a little boy? It lived only about a week and died suddenly. I think it was not perfect.

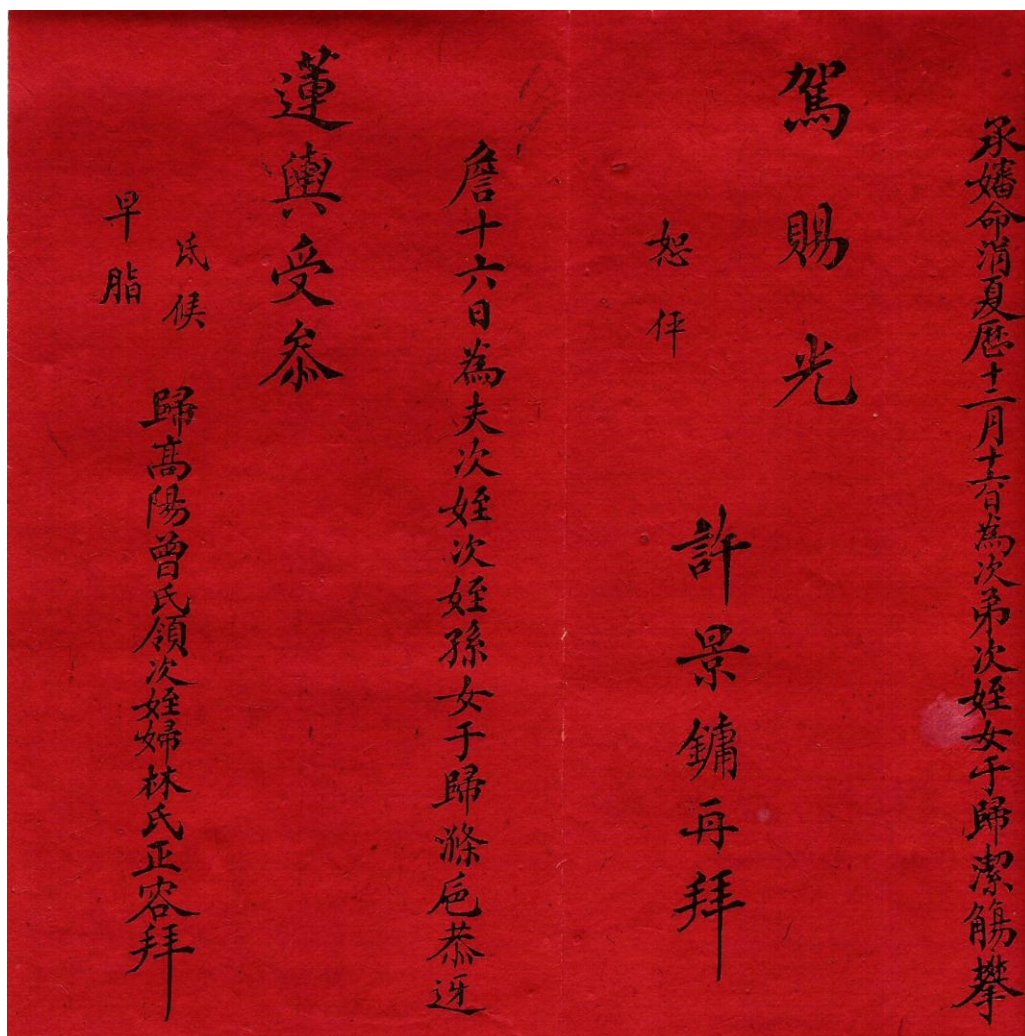

Conditions among the Chinese are very hard. The city is full of soldiers. There are four generals. Each with a few thousand of them. Every government school temple and some of the Guild Halls are full of them. I may have written that our gardner was seized, shut for 5 days and relieved of all his money and extra clothes. That was really a hold up and these hold ups are not infrequent. These four generals are hard up for money. General Li has been squeezing the people of the whole province for five years, and the business of the city has been at a standstill for nearly two months now- supplies cut off from all sources and nothing going out. Prices are high. Pork is 30 cents a lb. Beef has gone from 112 to 176 cash a lb. in the past six months, rice is $9.00 a dong. Wood is very high. Some few people of course are making money.-Those on South Side with houses to rent. But there is sure to be lots of suffering here and in many parts of China this winter I keep thinking. What very thrifty people the Chinese are- They work and get a little ahead and then a grasping official takes it from them and we think they will give up but no. In a few days they are at work again and seem to forget their bad fortune. Poppy is being planted in the southern part of the province in large quantities. This will bring much money to the planters, but they will be deprived of it for the army is protecting them in planting it and they will surely get their pay!

It's so cold I cannot guide my pen properly and its time for supper so I will say good bye till after C.E. meeting and try to finish this then.

The last two mails have brought nothing from home for Phebe or me. She almost felt homesick the other evening when Miss Rubins and Mrs. Thomas and Miss Carter and Miss Rike were reading theirs and she had nothing but we both had good mails the mail before the last.

Mr. Bidwell sent me in a recent mail a check for $10.00. I am enclosing to you Dear for any Christmas present. I hope you can buy with it something that will make you more happy and that will make you think of me. Here's my love to the children and to you Will

This is a wedding invitation found in a similar red envelope in Phebe Kinney Beard's scrapbook. It may have been the invitation to the wedding mentioned in the previous letter.

Interpretation of Wedding invitation shown with Phebe's letter dated November 26, 1922

Having chosen the sixteenth day for the marriage of my second nephew's second daughter and for her removing her home to that of her husband, the shining cups are in readiness that we may respectfully welcome you as you come in your ceremonial carriage to witness the marriage.

We eagerly await your arrival and we pray that you may early adorn your face and come.

Mrs. Hu (before I married into this honorable family of long ancestry, my maiden name was Cing) and Mrs. Hu Jr. (my older brother's second son's wife of the family of Ling) bow ceremoniously.

This invitation issued to women only in the name of the oldest woman of the clan- the bride's great-aunt on father's side, and of her own mother.

December 5, 1922.

Dear Home Folk,

There are three letters for me to answer in one. The card with the promise of the Elite [magazine] makes me most happy. Think how popular I shall be!! I am looking eagerly for the first number to get here so I can get the style for the new crepe dress. The goods is not yet here but I am hoping for it, to get made for Christmas vacation.

I have put the letter about the money in the French bank safely away. It will join the other material which Flora left. Some new lettering has appeared on the windows of the bank. Perhaps we get something and perhaps not. The papers have had no news about it for some days.

The second letter told of Anna's death. [Mary's niece, Anna Gilbert Beard, born April 25, 1896, died November 5, 1922 of "Chronic pulmonary tuberculosis with a duration of 3 years" according to the death certificate.] I do not know what to say. It is merciful to have and so sudden, but hard too. I sent a card to Oliver for Christmas and it ought to get there for the day.

I have had two lots of papers lately from you and two from Miss Brewster. The book and candy from Miss Brewster came on Saturday just as I was getting ready to be off to Peking for the week-end. I stayed with Jean Josselyn. We went to College Club Saturday afternoon. Dr. Yamai Kin gave a talk of the Chinese theater. It was a brief talk because she had a sort of puppet show there to illustrate. They gave two short plays the story of which we had in our hands. Dr. Kin had prepared it for us. It was clever. I am hoping to get [them] down here for the children some day. They are not expensive.

Thursday P.M. I have had much correspondence about getting student rates [probably for the trains] for the children. My efforts are not in vain for the Tientsin children, the Tsinan ones and all who go in groups of six or more get them. They are given for third class only, so third class is even more popular than usual.

Mrs. Herman was here for the night this week. She brought Walter, aged 10 who will enter next year. Victor is in Wheaton and enjoying his work, so she says. Mrs. Hicks is en route for China. Too bad we did not get her for matron here. She would have made a good one I believe.

Mr. Miller walked in unexpectedly the same day. He is the same as every, fat, jolly, self complacent. I was glad to have them come as it gave me an idea as to what the people on the Hankow line wanted me to do about tickets. The children said to follow the same plan as always, and that made it impossible to get rates for them.

Bergen Stelle has completed his senior work. It just came to me that his diploma is not ready for him. It has gone to Mr. Grant for the name. I heard in Peking during the week-end that Mrs. Grant is back. I would like to see her. Isabel Ingram says that at first Delnose [probably Delnoce] was not popular with the girls because she was so reserved. But she won great favor in the end. Her ability helped her.

Isabel is or has been tutoring the little new empress. She had received no word as to whether her job was to continue after the wedding last I heard. Then the Ex-emperor and his bride gave a reception to the officials of all the countries represented as well as to the representatives of the Chinese republic. Mr. Johnson the tutor of the emperor was in the receiving line. Isabel was one of the guests. The paper reports that only once was the gravity of the royal couple broken, that was when the Empress recognized Miss Ingram, and smiled a welcome.

For the first time the infirmary is empty. It has been so for three days. It does not pay to get sick when the skating is good and vacation is only a week off! Every child is going home or visiting. The Menzi family go to Tientsin to the Stanley's for most of the time. I am going to Paotingfu to the Hubbard's for most of the last two weeks. Miss Burgess goes to her sisters. I do not know what Miss Carlisle and Miss Muir will do. Miss Young's mother is out here staying with Mrs. Fiskens so that will be a happy family group.

Both the Jefferson Academy and the N.C.A.S. have written to William Fenn for next year. From a bit of a letter of his, I think he would prefer the N.C.A.S. but the other offer came to hand first so he is in a quandary. Mr. Martin says, and rightly, that he can get teachers more easily than we as the work with the Chinese appeals to more people. This is too new and too much like home teaching. The board meeting will perhaps settle it.

The order for pencils is slow as usual. Everything else is here. I had word that it left in August, addressed to Mr. Grimes. I hope it comes before the new year for I am almost out of pencils. Every day I fear I must say no more for sale. The Geometry class will begin on constructions first thing after we get back.

I have some more things that I had hoped to get home for Christmas. There is a ring for Daniel that I know he will love, a belt buckle for Wells, some toys for Nancy and Stephen. They will be so late now I will have to label them for birthdays or 1923.

Mrs. Wickes wants to pay for the canvas on their porch. It is the first thing I have wanted the price of that Miss Bostwicks books have not told me without difficulty. I hunted quite a while without success. I have not given up hope yet. Mrs. Wickes and husband have loaned us 300.00 toward a piano without interest. There was $100.00 and a bit over credited to the piano account on the books. The Robinson Co. will and have accepted that $400.00 and we pay the rest as we collect it, no interest either. I think that most nice of them. The instrument was $600.00 plus cost of packing, shipping, etc. I am expecting the man to put it in tune tomorrow or next day.

Genevieve has her first recital tomorrow afternoon. It is strange that all the people who are at all advanced are boys. Only boys play for chapel these days. Mrs. Josselyn is immensely pleased with Alfred Stanleys work this year. He is pulling hard work into it. He plays tomorrow.

Minister Shurman's granddaughter was born last Sunday morning. The Hugh Hubbard's have a little daughter, born the 28th.

Flora writes that she would like to sell my coats. I am not yet ready to part with them. The marked things I should love to have sold. I have not seen coats that I would take for the ones I have. When I do I may want to sell. Not now, thanks, just the same. I can not have a great deal left, for both Elizabeth and Phebe have written of selling articles. Shall I send more beads? I have not been shopping for many a day but have one string on hand. Not yet have I gotten a fraction of the things that Miss Bostwick would like. I bought till the money advanced was exhausted then stopped. Every day I expect a new draft. She got one on Peking so I cashed it at once.

Miss Wilkinson is back at last. With two teeth out, and the assurance of three doctors that she is sound, I hope that we are over our troubles with her. She has taken up full work. The poor classes are in a desperate state.

Miss Burgess and I are going out to mail our letters, to get them off by the morning train and to get some exercise. We had to stay in for rehearsal with the little children this afternoon.

Lots of love and best wishes for the new year. It is too late for Christmas greetings I fear.

Lovingly

Mary.

I shall be interested in returns from Flora's trip.

N.C.A.S.

December 20, 1922.

Dear Home folks,

Mothers letter with the enclosed one from Miss Bassett came this evening. Already two numbers of the Elite arrived. It has been three weeks since a home mail of any kind, hence four Literary Digests also came. Alas such a big mail when time is too limited.

A few weeks ago came a notice from Shanghai inviting all American schools on the Orient to meet at a conference on December 27-29. At our Trustee meeting just before vacation, they asked Mr. Menzi and I to go. I at once wrote Harriet Lacy that I was coming and tonight came a telegram to come for Christmas. Hence I am off Friday morning. Mr. Menzi goes on Christmas day so as not to be absent from Margaret longer than necessary. Mr. Tuttle, Principal of the Peking school is going and perhaps one or two of the trustees. The head of the Tokio school is coming over. It will be intensely interesting. I wish Flora were here. She knows things here so much better than any one else. These are the topics suggested for discussion.

1. Problem of securing teachers from home
2. Desirability of "mother" teachers.
3. Co-operative solicitation of funds from America.
4. Acceptance of Orientals and Eurasian children.
5. The dining-hall problem and childrens table manners.
6. Change in the curriculum due to location in the Orient.
7. School accounting and fees. Cost of operation.
8. School records, physical, educational, etc.
9. Standardization of curriculum, text-books, etc.

Do you think we can talk for two days. Or do you think we will get stopped on some topic and never finish?

Lucky for me, I spent Sunday afternoon addressing cards so am ready for departure. Also, I nearly finished wrapping things for Tungchow and Peking. The candy making will have to go undone.

For the first time, no representative of the N.C.A.S. will be in Tungchow for Christmas. I have had word from all the stations that everyone got home safely. I did get student rates, for Peking and Tientsin. It is a 50% reduction on the round trip, so traveling is cheap. The Tsinan children could have traveled so, only not on the express. In cold weather, that is impractical. The train was two hours late "as usual" as Hahn Romig writes.

On my way back from Shanghai, I plan to stop in Tenghsien at the Dodds. Mrs. Dodd was up to have Caroline's eyes looked after. She stayed and took Mr. Romigs place on the Board. Bandits are so bad that the men did not dare leave. Mrs. Cochran was the other representative. Mrs. Mathe was here, one member bonefide. Jean again could not get here. Her amah took opium to kill herself the night before. The son had been caught stealing from the Josselyns and she took it hard. Jean had to stay and look after the baby.

Caroline Love grows pretty every day. She looks like Betty but lacks the irregularity of feature. She is fat and rosy and full of smiles. She can sit alone now, if not jarred. How surprised she is when she rolls over!

I enclose a snap of the letter box in its new location. It will be fine, do you not think so, Flora. Also Flora you will be interested in the dining hall on the Academy. Was that begun when you left? I have one on our dormitory, but Mrs. Hartung got the order wrong and sent only one pring [prong?]. I had promised Mr. Kendall a snap, so will order you another. I will send two, so the home folk may have one too.

We are all reading the papers to learn what will be done about the murder of Mr. Colmanin Kalgan. Todays paper reports a hold up on the Tunghsien-Tientsin auto road. Bandits seem to be fearless. We feel safe with Feng's soldiers stationed here. Mrs. Arthur Smith is entertaining Mrs. Chang, wife of the head of this camp at luncheon sometime soon.

How do you like the school paper? I will have it white next time, I think. Or else have some more done in white if this proves popular. The half sheets that Henry did by mistake with the heading on the end, have sold well. They are cheap, 25 for 15 cents.

Miss Wilkinson handed in her resignation by request and it was accepted. She went to the same school as Miss Parsons. I shall think of that as our dump. I see Grace occasionally. She would like not to see me, but I insist. Then she is gushing. The fire is down in the furnace, and my radiator cold, so I must get into bed to get warm. This is almost a birthday letter for Mother and a wedding one too. Best wishes and love to all.

Mary.

*[On the back is written:
 There is a message rare and sweet
 That we are sending you
 It is the Christmas message sweet
 And Happy New Year too.]*

*The messenger is "The Elite"
 Who every month will sail
 That you a wardrobe most complete
 May have in each detail.*

From us all at Century Farm with much love-]

Dec 30, 1922

Dear Home Folk-

Tonight I am starting back for Peking after just a week here. We had a fine Christmas. I helped decorate the tree for Creighton and had the fun of helping unload the pkgs in the morning. Harriet gave me a lovely Canton ivory medallion; Mrs. Bontelle an apron.

The conference had six sessions all intensely interesting. We talked everything. I enclose the original program with some of the changes. The topics were not changed only the order.

I spent Thursday night at the school as there was evening session. ?? I returned here. On Thursday I lunched with Mrs. Main. Florence and the youngest boy were there also Mr. Main. It was a delightful visit. She sent love to Flora. Mrs. MacFuller has sent regards but I have not seen her. Nor have I gotten to Mrs. Raven's.

Mrs. Bosworth was over for last night and up for lunch today. She sends her love to Flora.

Today I spent a little money, the first except for Sunday collection and our car fare. A Fordum[?] vendor came and I got some silver ?? I got some baby pins for Caroline Love.

I am ordering a spring hat from Mrs. Bontelle, Harriet Lacy's sister. She is a fine milliner. My hats are getting the worse for wear after two full summers, besides the use at home.

I hope this gets off with a U.S. ship. It will be the last, as the Post Office closes tomorrow for ever.

There is great talk about the increased postage rates and the poor taste of initiating them at this particular time.

I am stopping in Tenghsien at the Dodds for about 24 hours, and returning with the Shantung crowd and down by auto to school. I shall be ready for school, I guess. But this has been a different vacation from most of mine in China. With love and hearty wishes for 1923 to all
Mary.

Birthday greetings to Mother.

Foochow, China,
Jan. 7, 1923.

Dear Geraldine,

It was very good to get your letter a few weeks ago, and know that you were really teaching. At least for the first year it is very pleasant to be near the family, and it makes me envy you to be within calling distance of both Gould and the family. For Gould it must be a treat to have you so near as 28 miles, for he has always been so far away that his seeings of us have been few and far between. We have heard from three of the family about your football party at Ann Arbor, so I think it must have been a grand success.

Even tho you don't like Junior Highs, and tho your town is small and the school run to athletics, it will be a fine experience for you to have had. See if you can't put into the children and teacher body more of a studious spirit. Aren't teachers supposed to change conditions in their schools as far as they can?

I am interested in the kind of people you have in town, and the amusements. How do you get on with the teachers and of what caliber are they? Being in Michigan would make me judge that the people were not very cultured, or the amusements very intellectual; and the teachers might easily be shallow and silly. Do you have any trouble with discipline, and have you supplies enough? Has anything been paid about teacher's conventions or a teacher's association to which you have to pay dues? I hope your first year will be worth the doing and get fun out of all you can. Keep up your music, too.

By this time you are probably back at work in the New Year. The family was all together in Oberlin I suppose for Xmas and New Years. I am sorry I didn't send anything; but mine went earlier in the year. Did you ever get that package I sent in June with fan, embroidery, etc in it? We had cards from oodles of people and boxes from the farm, Aunt Etta's, and I got postals from the Chinese from Aunt Emma. We shall be more than eager to hear of the party you had at Oberlin.

Of course we were prepared all summer for the news from Bridgeport. I hardly know what to write Aunt Grace and Uncle Oliver and since reading "The Vocation of Grief" in the Dec. Atlantic, I am glad I have not written before. I thoroughly agree with his sentiments. I can't be sorry really for Anna, and I am glad the parents are taking it so bravely. As you said it seems such a waste of time, suffering and strength. If their lives had been more full of a constructive gospel, there would have been more joy in the memory of them. If their death had been surrounded with less sadness and trouble the memory of their lives would be worth the suffering.

Mother may have let you see my last letter of about three weeks ago. I told about giving a paper in Foochow's Arts and Crafts at the Anti-Cob [Anti-Cobweb Society]. I am thinking of revising and adding to it, and possibly printing it. Of that we shall say later. Our last two Anti-Cob have been most enjoyable. The one before Xmas was a carol evening. A trained choir gave several familiar pieces in such a finished American way, as we hear only at such occasions. After the flatting, discords and gaps where held note should be that I hear in the school all the time, I am really evaporated into air at hearing pure real music. Last Friday night we were at Black Rock Hill- the Y.M.C.A. house. The University men gave a play that came out in the Atlantic two years ago- "If Shakespeare were here today". Their attempt at an English brogue was very funny! But it was good. Then followed the number of the evening- a play in which Eunice Thomas was the leading lady called "Suppressed Desires". It is pretty good so far as feeling for marriage is concerned, and it was played very well. Our next meeting is a District School, and our supper is to be a box lunch and an auction! Aint' it fun? Really you wouldn't know Foochow now. There is so much society doings, and the missionaries are as much of it as anyone.

The biggest excitement before Xmas was the Red Cross Bazaar that the community gave to glorify the $1000 expenses incurred at the time of the October war by the mission hospitals. Mrs. Price gave the Consulate for the building and different ladies took charge of various booths. When I went in the Canton and Swatow booths stood at the right in front. There were marvelous embroidered nighties and doilies etc., silver, carved ivory and other lovely expensive things. Next came the Foochow booth filled with Chinese writing paper, silver pins, spoons, etc, Lacquer, Chinese umbrellas, and even stockings that are made here. In the Shanghai booth were cloth for dresses, hats that were lovely, men's silk neckties, silk stocking Chinese dolls, etc. There was a white Elephant booth where second hand bedding, books, and odds and ends made fun; a fancy article booth and one of the largest displays of gold lacquer I ever saw. It was an education to see it. Upstairs was a toy room where there were Chinese-made doll's furniture sets, dang sticks and the cutest little baskets, round and square, and pails; Chinese doll's shoes, paper dolls, knitted sweater sets, and everything you could imagine. The baby bottle came in handy and was very dainty; for there are lots of babies coming or come. In the hall was the candy booth which our American sailors from the gunboat Helena patronized well. From that alone we made $216, for all the materials for the candy were given by stores and individuals. Tea and a cafeteria supper were served in a tea room that was very attractive. Orrin Maine and Dr. Lacy came in at the last on a boat from Shanghai that brought us a lot of Xmas mail. In all I believe they made about $1300.

On Friday, the next day came our lunch exercises for Xmas at Geu Cio Dong. I had trained the Go Deng or Grammar School girls to sing for it, the H.S. girls, and the boys in the church school. Besides I had to play a violin solo also. The most interesting number on the program was the little play the church school girls gave of the Wise and Foolish Virgins. A screen was the house into which the bride groom dressed like a Chinese groom went with the Five Wise ones. Everything was so simple, and all done in real Chinese fashion that it gave me a new vision of the story. It almost shocks you to see these stories you have always considered more or less sacred dragged out and played with no reverence at all. Yet that is their way, now- a childish way, and I am not sure they don't get a good deal more from seeing it than from the reading. So it was in the Mediaeval Mirade Plays.

Friday night our girls sang carols under our windows, and I was so tired I barely heard them. They went home on Sat. for the weekend to Monday.

Sat. P.M. the mission Xmas came, and I enjoyed seeing the children say pieces and sing songs. Santa Claus nearly scared some of them out of their lives, but Billy Bedient wasn't afraid. I left before it was over, and took our girls to sing at a Y.M.C.A. entertainment. The Y.W. gave six tableaux of the scenes of Jesus' birth, and the girls sang a verse of a card to go with each scene. They also sang a song of this ??? The last number was a movie- Uncle Tom's Cabin that I saw from the stage, the back of the picture. Topsy was the main part of the play and the Chinese did appreciate her pranks. Mrs. Cong a Bible woman was greatly impressed with Little Eva's pity and eagerness to teach Tom to pray and write and that all Chinese should see it for that reason.

On Sunday Father spoke at Sang-Bo my church. I stayed to a feast there and had a program in the afternoon. Before that was over I had to rush into the city to help with a program there. On Monday A.M. Mrs. St. Clair had two Chinese families in for a Xmas tree, then we went around the compound to see the other Xmas. I came out to get our own tree for the girls ready for the night.

We had a little program of Scripture carols etc; then Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus came in covered with snow, from America and gave out the gifts from girls. Two of the girls acted the Santa Clause parts dressed in our hats and coats. It is amazing how many gifts they are beginning to give each other; for in the houses they have no celebration of any kind, even the pastors. I got several interesting gifts- a teapot, a handkerchief, a silver pin, candy, and a lovely pair of bedroom slippers like field woman shoes made of velvet. I prize them highly.

School has been going on as usual since then; we didn't have vacation for New Year's Day.

Last weekend Father and I took Dr. Sydney Gulick down to Hai Gie- the University. We spent the weekend with the Bedients and enjoyed little Philip the new baby, and Billy came in on Sunday A.M. and got into bed with me for a good talk. We walked around and saw the sights in the A.M. and had a meeting in the P.M. All the faculty eats Sun. night suppers together and that night we had a very good Chinese supper. The Prices and McConnells were also down and went back with us that night on the launch.

Yesterday I gave a concert for all the organ and piano students in the school. We sent out ticket invitations thru the week, and practicing has been deadly monotonous and persistent all the week. At 2:30 not a soul seemed to have come, but after we got started people appeared from nowhere till the room was full. One girl attacked the piano so violently that all the children laughed. But on the whole it was fairly good. Tea and cakes afterward seemed to hit the spot.

A week ago Wed. Father and I enjoyed a party at Mrs. Reeves'. We played singing proverbs, and charades, and they were rich. Miss Lambert suggested that we ladies all lie on the floor and pretend illness to illustrate ill for illuminate and we did it- mixed company, too. Refreshments were like a little supper. The English are delightfully simple and refreshing in their parties.

On two different nights recently the army in Foochow has celebrated our New Year with a parade. Seldom have I seen such beautiful lanterns, and such interesting placards and floats. The one I saw last Sat. night was the dragon, with an immense head, followed by a tail nearly 300 ft. long. It was built in little humps like that mounted on boards held together by a wooden pin, and carried on the shoulders of men about 4 ft. apart. All was beautifully lighted with candles. Next came a gold fish as high as a man- a marvel in red. Then came several bundles of flowers as high as the fire gates along the streets. Each flower and some of the leaves were lighted by candles, and to see these gigantic carnations, trumpet flowers, lotus flowers, tube lilies, etc., coming along in perfect form was beautiful.

The New Year vacation is only three weeks off and I have not planned to go anywhere. One of our ladies is going up near Shaowu and if she got back in time I should go with her. But I may teach a Y.W. class in Chinese at the conference they have this vacation, so I must be on hand. There are many trips I can take by the day, and I shall study Chinese. Last Thurs. I passed three more exams not awfully well, and by April I want to finish all my 2 years' work if possible.

I have all the music for graduation so I feel busy. The girls are singing the "Lost Cloud" in three parts and are doing it well. Also "Follow the Gleam".

Will Dorothy graduate- that is take part in the graduation festivities as a graduate this year in June? If so I want to send her the gift for graduation now. Please let me know soon so it will reach her in time.

Do write and tell me of the family and of yourself. Do pass my letters much so you will all get all the news. I'll try to resolve this year to write every week. I am proctoring a study hall now and it is easy compared to one in America. Lots of love, best New Years wishes, Phebe.

January 9, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

Back at school and deep in work. Not all the children are in yet. Poor Franz Crumpacker and Edith Watson got to Shih Chia Chuang and were delayed by railroad strike. Franz after two days got on his wheel and got home in three days hard riding. So he got there for Christmas. Edith could not do so, being a girl and living twice as far away. She finally got there on the 28th. School had closed the 15th. Franz returned yesterday and we look for Edith tomorrow. Isabel Hemingway is coming then too. She has quite recovered.

We are all excited over Kathleen Parlow [violin virtuoso]. 18 of us are planning to treat ourselves to seats on Thursday afternoon. She plays at the Peking hotel at 5.15 so we can easily return that night by auto. The papers give wonderful accounts of her recitals in Tientsin.

I will go to back history. I stopped on my ?? trip for twenty four hours at Tenghsien to visit the Dodds. It is an awful place to stop at for no train arrives at a civilized hour nor leaves at one either. I came up by the Mail to get there at the best hour possible and that was 11.00 P.M. It meant sitting up all night too for the Mail carries only 1st class sleepers and my ticket was 2nd class. Mrs. Dodd was a thoughtful hostess and insisted on my having breakfast in my room. She put it on the score of the New Years guests she was expecting and the need of having the house ready to receive from 150-200 Chinese at an early hour. Anyway I slept till 8.00 and got rested. All the foreigners came in for tea that afternoon and we had a right good time visiting. I came up with the children and we came out by auto, getting here soon after midnight. Hot cocoa tasted good, for it was cold!

I got some kind of infection on my face and got the swelled head on the left side. Dr. Love did my facial decorations in iodine for a few nights and the thing responded right away so now I am nearly normal, but skinning. That and a cold made me feel tired so I took a weekend off, went without suppers and had breakfast in bed. It has saved me something, I know not what. For I feel all right and ready for work. You see I did not even write letters, but slept most of the time.

On Saturday night, we had a scare. I had gone to bed and was asleep. A disturbance or the light wakened me. My room was flooded with light. I was out of bed right soon and at the window. The gateman had a huge pile of fuel, enough to last him all winter, piled near his house. That is not so very far from the dormitory! It was all ablaze. Fortunately there was very little wind and that toward the west, hence away from us. Mr. Menzi was out there and had started the men to pulling out the bundles of straw that were not afire and so saved about two dozen good sized bundles. The gateman and his family had withdrawn into the house, and closed it tight and were waiting to burn, I guess. Leonard pulled him out and set him to work. He tried to have them shovel on enough dirt to save part of it, but the man got tired and our servants would not work if he lay down on the job. The stuff blazed low all night till after 7.00 A.M. I think the man must have sat out by it to watch it, for I awoke about two and he was there, and he was there when the train came in. All the children were down skating. Mr. Lund showed wisdom in finding out that they could be of no help and making them stay. I prevented any wild excitement.

The magazines are coming all right and are getting read too. We wish I had gotten the model for the rack from Miss Bostwick, as we talked so often last year of it.

My Digest still comes. I think I paid for two years before coming out. I had that in mind to do and thought I did it. I feel sure I must have for since October 28 I [have] been receiving two copies. Please write and ask to have my subscription extended for another year, instead of doubled as they are doing now.

The government changed the postage rates back to the former ones on the first of January. Several provinces had refused to recognize the increase and it was a mess. If a letter went out of the province the four cents was collected at the receiving office, if it stayed in nothing happened. Chihli, of course, could not revolt, but the papers could talk.

When we got back, the thing we have kept from happening for seven years happened. The servant had not kept enough fire and the pipes in the school house were burst. In all the north rooms and one section of each radiator was broken. "Smily Li" is still at work fixing them. We are taking out the pipes in the store room and using the good coils to replace the broken ones. Owing to the way the system was put in, we can use the good radiators and all the south rooms. A stove in the study hall makes up for the non use of part of the system. Flora's old room is like a barn. Recitations that are scheduled for that room, are conducted in the teachers sitting room over here.

My ink in the store was frozen. By some miracle, the bottles did not burst. I would have been a mess had they done so, for I made up three quarts last fall, thinking it would last most, if not all the year.

When in Shanghai, I met Mr. and Mrs. Yard. They were in Nichols once. He is a Methodist minister. She is still most fond of the Plumb girls and corresponds with each of the three. Ruby is evidently the one for who she has the greatest fondness and admiration. I remember, that they spoke of a friend, a missionary in Szechuan. But they are now transferred to Shanghai and live in the same compound as Harriet. She has three fine girls, the oldest either a junior or senior in high school. Mrs. Yard looks young enough to be a senior herself. I expected her to show me some infants when she spoke of her children.

I enclose one of the two letters that Mr. Scott has sent me. Flora may be near Springfield as able to call. I must close this and answer the two letters recently received with questions galore. I know I have not written of all the important happenings, but I think none of the most important are left out.

Letters from Margaret Smith still say she will not return for several years. Frances Gray is engaged to Mr. Hayes. He is nearly her age. Everyone seems happy about it except the Methodists who lose a fine helper. They will get married in the spring. Mrs. Martin has not been well all fall, so Jim Hunter took the Sunday School. She is better now, and will take her class back when Maude has to give up hers to care for "Jean". Franz Crumpacker has been bubbling over since his return. It is partly his joy at getting back, and partly the joy that his nose is to be broken before many months, as he learned during vacation.

I did not get the box of toys etc. off before going to Shanghai. I could not mail it here (Tunghsien) and was not foresighted enough to take it to Shanghai and mail it at the U.S. post office. I'll save postage now with the reduced rates.

Lots of love
Mary

Dear Boy [Gould]:-

Your good letter came about ten days ago and I read it and Phebe has read it and reread it I suppose and just returned it yesterday. The girls have both written most enthusiastically about the football game. Dorothy was hilarious about it and Geraldine says the people in America are football crazy. The papers say Yale has filled her Bowl twice this fall with nearly 80000 people each time and has had several tens of thousands in it at other times and has taken in about $150000 in gate receipts- enough to build and equip and run for ten years a school like Foochow College with five hundred boys. And this $150000 is only a part of the cost of the game to the visitors. Think of what many parties paid in auto hire, tolls, hotel bills etc. from New York and Boston and other places. Well the people in the dear, old home land are not all bankrupt.

There are many things in my daily routine to make me think of you. Each morning as I put on my tie I catch it with the clasp you gave me several years ago. Every time I go to any thing special I put in the stick pins you traded with me. It takes too much time to put it in every day. And when I go away for the night I have you along in the form of my travelling case with every thing in it that I need for the night, or rather in the morning. I wonder if you have ever worn the dress coat I left.

I am writing this at Ponasang. All the ladies were away except Miss Pike and Phebe and in the present conditions, they kind o' like some one around. It seems strange to sit down to write a letter with a good chance of being able to finish it at one sitting. It is very quiet here and no teacher, student or other person knows where I am. In the city I very seldom have an evening to myself. Last evening three men came in after supper- each for a private interview. At 9:10 p.m. the last one went and I was free to see Phebe home to Ponasang- 10:30 p.m. found me back home and ready for bed. It was a nice crisp night and we enjoyed the walk. These walks together are a very great pleasure to both of us. They do us both good too,- often it is impossible for me to get the exercise I ought to have in the day time, and a brisk walk out to Ponasang and back is as good as a fire to put one to sleep and keep him there all night. Then we have the road all to ourselves at that time of night in these conditions and we have most helpful talks.

Day after tomorrow examinations begin. Commencement comes on Jan. 31. Then a vacation. Do you know that no student is more grateful for vacation than the teachers are. Phebe is debating whether to go to Sharp Peak for a week- to Diong Loh for a week or to Shaowu for three weeks during vacation. I have promised to go to Diong Loh.

The term has been a hard one in some ways. We started out very auspiciously with a very large enrollment- the largest of my fall term in the history of the College. The teachers were in their job and the boys were doing fine work when the war came and of course put every thing on the "blink". Conditions all thru Oct., Nov., Dec. and Jan. have been very unsettled and it has been impossible to do good work. We lost some 60 boys whose families moved out of Foochow to other cities to escape trouble and some boys left to go into the student army- which is a great farce.

For a week now the city has lived in terror. One of the armies of 10000 are planning to leave in a few days. They want 6000 men as load coolies. To get them they send the soldiers anywhere to arrest anyone who looks as if he could carry a load. Tuesday I spent the whole day to get a ton and a half of rice in to the College from just beyond Ha Puo Ga. Not a coolie could be found anywhere who would risk to pull a cart. We found one who would go for $2.50 (for 2 hrs. work) if I would go all the way with him and guarantee to bring him back home. Well the rice shop proprietor and I finally took an empty two wheeled cart- pulled it to the rice shop, loaded it with 10 bags of rice each weighing 140 pounds and with three men= his clerks to push and pull, we started. Only a few rods away from the shop we stopped to repair one of the rear legs of the cart. The shop man stepped into a shop about 5 rods ahead of the cart. As he came out of the shop a man seized him. I happened to be looking the other way. I heard the other men shout "Keuk niah, Keuk niah." They have seized him. He is seized. I looked around and sure enough a young chap of some 20 years was pulling the man along by the arm. I pointed my cane at him and shook my head and he instantly released him. But with his pal the young chap came on past me and only 4 or 5 doors beyond entered a carpenter shop and pulled out the proprietor and hustled him along by me. I stood in the middle of the street and the poor fellow clutched my arm and begged me to help him. Before I could say a word, both brutes had their knives out and threatening to disembowel him. He of course let go of my arm and was hustled off to some pen where he would have straw to lie on- no covering, no stool or bed and two bowls of rice a day, until the army is ready to move. Then he will have to carry a load to no one knows where if he does not die before. The city is full of mourning women and children whose husbands, sons and fathers have thus been forcibly seized. Yesterday some 2000 women of the poorer classes besieged the Army generals to pity them and let their men folks out. I never saw a city so shut up. Not a shop open. Every morning some of us foreigners must go out to buy vegetables that are brought in by women.- Even teachers and students are taken. The women that empty our commodes have not been near us for three days. The villages out on the plain are all closed and the people do not dare even to open their doors. It is a reign of terror. The people come to us begging us to go and get their men out. Three women were waiting all the afternoon to get Miss Wiley and me to go to try to get their men out. We are practically powerless.

Well this is the civilization of China and only Jesus Christ can save China from this. The number who see this is few but increasing rapidly. And when we hear and see that the Christians to a very large degree escape,- for the pastors and preachers are on the job- they are in little danger of arrest. We realize that the Gospel not only saves men's souls but their bodies. It seems sometimes as if parts of the world had turned back and taken up the civilization of the Middle Ages- Turkey, Greece and China.

It's bed time. Write me how mama is and how she and the "kid sisters" are situated. Are they comfortable. God bless and guide and use you my dear Boy - Lovingly Father

N.C.A.S., January 21, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

We have been having a dust storm today, the first for a long time. The house has been cold too. But the heating plant is doing fine work. We can dress in comfort for the steam comes up so quickly. I turn off my heat because I can not get my room cold enough if I leave it on. Yet I can dress comfortable if I turn it on the minute I am out of bed.

The chapel with only pipes near the ceiling, and three north windows, has been too cold. Hence I have had the stove that used to be in Martha's room put up there.

Mr. Menzi has been in bed with Pharangitus(?) for the past two weeks. He is better now, but it will be several days before he can get out. Those poor people, one of them has been ill most of the time.

I went in on Friday for the reception at the Legation for all Americans. A talk with Dr. Ferguson will be of benefit because he is to come down early in the new Chinese year for a talk on art. He is giving a series to the Peking children.

I stayed with Jean and the Smiths and Heintz of Tsing Hua were there, also Alice Huggins. Since I had to stay in, I made the most of the night and went to see "Enter Madam", given by Peking talent under the auspices of the Art Institute. Everybody was there. Lura Aiken and her mother, just recently returned to Peking. How they were dressed up! Lura is giving piano lessons, English lessons and studying music. Professor Hymans seems to have taken her up.

Better than the reception or the Play, or the dinner, was the news that Minnie Corbett gave me after the play. She had received that day, news that Mrs. Schell had granted us $5100 gold with which to complete our dormitory. HURRAH!! The money is here! Can you not see the Delco plant! the fine fixtures! set tubs and seats!

But the contractors did a dirty job on the stairs. They have hung them in midair without proper stays and they are sagging so one is almost afraid to use them. On the top ones where the use is least, the drop is over three inches. Li is at work making proper stays and will jack them up, and put posts from the first floor up. It will be less artistic, but more secure.

Jan. 28. Li looked over the job of fixing the stairs and apparently accepted it, last Monday. Nothing has been done. Dr. Love sent yesterday to enquire and received word that he was too busy to do it. It is a matter of feeling because the job was let to out of town men I fear. Meanwhile the stairs are slowly slipping each day. I have not gotten him to do anything this year. He scorns my small jobs.

With love

Mary.

January 28, 1923.

Dear Home Folks,

I have a letter started, but had to remove it to type examinations and can not find it. If I find it I can still enclose it. Exams are over for the children, but I am still in the throes of correcting. So far grades range from 25-97. Miss Burgess beats me with a 6 and a 98.

Last Saturday the Peking American School boys came down for an ice hockey game. It was exciting! There was no score during the four quarters so they played two extra five minute periods. They scored one goal during the first five minutes, so won. They skate better than our boys but we had the best team work. Erick Thunder shot the goal. It was the speed with which he did it that accomplished the end. He escaped the outer guards and only Stanley had to be dodged. Tomorrow we play them on the Legation rink. The boys have worked hard all week and we hope for success. It is hard to get good practice here now, because the ice had to be cut this week. The field is cramped, especially as there are other children who want to skate also. Instead of fixing the moat this year, the athletic associations have hired a man to sweep and water the pond. We did not recognize the "exclusive" rights of the Chinese boys to the pond, but asked for a division of hours for the "compound pond". No one made any objection, the division was made and all has been well so far. For one thing, fewer Chinese boys than ever have had skates. Four at once is the most I have seen. They skate along with our children and enjoy the fun. Miss Young and Miss Carlisle have been very devoted to the sport, so the question of chaperone has not been any bother. That is lucky for the girls!

One Sunday, Moore Gordon came down and told us about the work out at the orphanage. It was a bit long but thoroughly enjoyable. He started with the reason for founding it, to care for orphans left by the floods of 1917 and then again by the famine of 1919 and told the story. The special point of moral that he emphasized, was obedience. They have a waiting list of several hundred. Two boys broke rules and went to Peking. On their return, the boy who had a home he could go to was sent thither in spite of petitions and pleadings. His place was needed by a boy who would appreciate it. The other, who had no home, and for whom it would mean sure death to be turned out, was put in the reformatory where there are only the barest necessities of life. But it meant waiting his turn at the end of the list of hundreds before he could hope to get back to the comforts he had been enjoying.

On Monday Chan Nai Nai's daughter came home ill. She has not been well for several months and I have asked Alice to get her home before she should get too ill to get well quickly. She did not want to come, and the authorities up there would not insist. Now she is here with a well developed case of Tuberculosis. Dr. Love has taken her into the hospital and says there is a good chance for recovery, but now it means a year or more. The poor Amah is of course quite broken up over it.

Miss Bailey is living up to her reputation and noting on the inspiration of the moment. Wednesday was the camp fire birthday. On Monday, I got a note asking if she could come for the dinner on Tuesday night. She did. And I think all went well. She had a ceremonial afterward, the first this year. I attended, and found it interesting. We are working on the question of room order. No teacher was ready to undertake the inspection last semester, and I had too many things to do. Hence I shut my eyes, rather than talk and not do. Now I am letting other things go if need be and doing careful inspection. Any clothes on the floor at any time, of day or night, I confiscate. During some hours of the day I take anything that is on the chairs or trunks too. Yes, I had to give in and let trunks stay in the rooms. We had not chairs enough to furnish seats and one can not insist on the girls standing all the time they are in their rooms.

Phebe's letter came Friday the 26th, just a month on the way. That very afternoon, came a bead man, and so I have most of the things you want already bought. I was very glad of the account, for I had no idea where I stood.

Here is the list of what I bought to send you.

1 turquoise chain to sell for	$4.00
1 blue bird pin " " "	1.00
1 turquoise pendant " " "	2.50
2 " " " " "	1.75 each
2 brownish " " " "	1.75 "
1 set white jade " " " "	3.00 pair or 1.50 each

These are perfect and hard to get now.

I have some white chains, but nothing that is as long as Miss Schnieder wants. I am going to restring them before I send. I hope to get the cord in town tomorrow. You wait and see if they are not prettier than some of the others I have sent! None of the chains this time have the little boxes. I suppose they are too bulky for the peddlers to bring around.

Did Miss Brewster ever get a turquoise matrix chain? She originally wanted one. Please let her know if you are telephoning, that I am enjoying the New York papers very much. I am sure you can assure her that I am not using a great deal of time writing letters.

We expect two new boys tomorrow, Arthur Hersay and Norman Long. That makes 32 boys in the boys house. There will be 14 on each porch. Another one will have to sleep inside, for there just is not floor space for another bed. The four oldest boys sleep inside. They are not returning and did not want to purchase sleeping bags for the one year. We are sorry to loose Arthur Romig as he is such a fine student and always pleasant to have around. William Cochran sends a small brother to take his place. We all hope he is as interesting.

I am enclosing an advertisement of the "Tip-Top" Duplicator. Miss Mason had one at Monticello and it was most useful. This slip has been lost till I moved over. Since then it has been on my desk waiting for me to remember to write about it. I have marked the size I want, also the supplementary parts it would be wise to have sent at the same time. I should think, that Flora might like one for Tientsin too. I should like to get it here for the next examinations if possible. This is an old advertisement so prices may have changed. They were about $3.50 before the war. I hope they have gone down.

I am sorry I was so slow in getting the second luncheon set off. Some way there was a long time between opportunities. It is more like the ones you have seen. Did I put a price on it? It would be $9.00 or 10.00. The other is much cheaper, $5.00. I write this late purposely, so Mother will take her real choice, unhampered by thoughts of price.

I have had letters from Mariel Evans, Eleanor Mitchell, Miss Lathrop, recently. The Mitchells are on Riga, Latvia and having interesting experiences. The Yarrows are in Rowayton, Conn. if you want to hunt them up. Did I write that Grace goes to Smith and her mother wrote for her grades? The Dildines are in Peking. Mary is so much better that she starts school this new semester. Mrs. Dildine writes that she hopes to send them back here, but if that school comes up to grade, she must keep them home as the doctor does not yet give them a clean bill of health.

Mary was down for the game Saturday and it hurt her to have to root for any team but ours.

With lots of love,
Mary.

I enclose the bill for my Geographic, $3.50.

N.C.A.S. February 11, 1923.

Dear Family,

Mothers letter came this week. Rain and mud sound good to me. It is, of course, terribly dry here. A high wind on Friday gave us a local dust storm, but it was short lived. Mrs. Gordon was out today for the first time in over a week. She had the influenza such as has been going the rounds. Mr. Menzi was back on the job this week, after an absence of three weeks. It was good to have everything in full swing again.

Before Mrs. Gordon got ill she was in the nervous state, that is familiar to those of us who know her, when everything was wrong. She sat on the poor children in the dining room till it was most trying. But she brought them to time by refusing to make birthday cakes if they refused to heed her repeated requests for less noise. Five missed out on cakes, then the noisy ones began to feel that it was too much to impose a punishment on others for the sake of the enjoyment they were getting. Also Mrs. Gordon began to feel that she had been too hard. The result was a joint party for the five and Mr. Menzi who had been in bed on his birthday. It was a success and I hope will be useful in keeping order in the future.

Last week Cleora came down for the week-end. I made the first Divinity of the season. It was excellent. Maude brought over some cherries and we added them. It was so good that Jean and I had no difficulty at all in cleaning up the dish when she was down on Tuesday.

Alas we lost the third hockey game. There was no score for three quarters, then Millard Arnold shot a pretty goal. No one could get another in. But the Puck traveled back and forth so fast it almost made ones head dizzy following it. Our boys did wonderfully well. It was a hard fair fight, with the most friendly spirit all through. I went with the Tuttles for lunch and a committee meeting for the curriculum committee afterward. We talked so hard and interestingly that it was 3.50 before I thought of my train. I rushed off and thanks to the train being late, made it at Tung Pien Men. It was a forlorn team that waited for the train; tired and no thrill of victory to cheer them.

I mailed two packages to you on Monday. One was the toys etc. that I have had done up for so long, the other contained,

3 turquoise pendants; 1 of hard stone and 2 of soft.
2 colored glass "
1 chain beads.

The prices are on them all, in gold, as you out to sell them. I shall not label any others, lest it get you into trouble with customs. Have you had to pay anything on the stuff I have sent? Most people are groaning over duties, on goods sent home. If you do, please add to the prices and reimburse yourselves. We are selling cheap enough, so there ought to be no kick.

I am going to have "Four Chickens" mail here on the street, four packages tomorrow, contents may sell as follows:

I.	III.
blue-glass beads -- $2.50	Turquoise matrix (solid) -- $8.00
white bone " ----- 2.50	" " with knots - 7.00
	crocheted lingerie top ----- 3.00

II.
Blue glass beads----$2.50
Pink bone "----- 2.50
Humpty-dumpty ----- .40

IV.
2 bunnies----- .40 each humpty-dumpty----- .40
brown beads-----2.50

I have seven more strings to send some time, but have not gotten them done up. I took time last week to make extensive purchases at Tais. The new year is at hand and even Tai was eager to sell. The things sent last Monday, I got from "Jerry" when he came down.

I had Alice Huggins over for dinner this noon. Miss Burgess had Miss Ingram, and Miss Fenn went over to keep Miss Sailer company. I am going to start and entertain the compound people. It is too late to get Maude until after the baby comes, I fear. Bobby is a dear, so happy to be out after being in for several days with the flu.

Katherine Dodd has a small victrola and it has been going all day. I have not minded, because she has no cheap, trashy records, but many good, classical ones. It will not be the demoralizing influence, that Dixie's machine was. I have got to get hold of Katherine, she is all right here, but her attitude toward her mother in heart rending.

Monday—I sent to Flora last week several prospectuses and some of the booklets giving the book lists. I did not understand that the booklet was to have anything but the books desired in it, so that is all it contains. Some of the other things are,

a victrola
outfit for teachers rooms i.e. sheets, towels, pillowcases, etc.
another piano
table linen, table cloths, 2 yards square, for ten tables. napkins, 2 dozen.
large type revised version Bible for chapel.
money for servants quarters.

Flora knows the needs better than I, for she worked more on that problem

I wonder how much you got for the fur coat? I am glad it is sold before it gets moth eaten or otherwise injured.

Please give to the church for me $5.00, out of the funds that you collect from the sales. I mean to give something every year altho I am so far away.

When you get tired of selling things, just say the word and I will cease to send them to be sold. I enjoy doing my part, but do not want to over do it for you. I sent the four packages to the office, so they ought to travel with this letter, and leave the 16th.

It is getting spring. I have had to turn the heat off and open my window. Also the ribbon on my machine is winding itself up all crooked. It is a Remington ribbon, and I may have made a mistake to be so economical. It costs the same price as the Corona and is nearly twice as long. By winding it over onto my spool, and cutting it, it should work.

I must write Miss Bailey. She has written early that she plans to come down, so I must answer. She wants to make gowns and have two ceremonials during her vacation.

Carrington Goodrich and Ann Swann were married last week Friday. I got an invitation on the evening mail of the wedding day and the wedding reception was at 5.30. I did not attend. Bob Shaw is in the seventh heaven. Ruth is coming north for two weeks.

Lots of Care
Mary.

[This letter dated Feb. 11, 1923 was written from Foochow, China by Phebe to Ellen. In it she talks about her recent trip to Sharp Peak where she was born. She ponders about being an old maid as her 30th birthday approaches. Original letter is in the archives of Oberlin College.]

Foochow, China.
Feb. 11, 1923.

Dearest Mother,

We are in the midst of a real Foochow winter; cold that finds and hugs you everywhere except as you hug a stove, cloudy days, and sometimes rain. In spite of the untoward weather, Reiltia Allen, Miss Hartwell's new secretary, Miss Bosbyshell, and I started last Saturday for Sharp Peak and a week of party. Father had started the day before for Diongho and stopped here to have me put up his lunch. Just before he left your package came, and I tore it open in time to let him see his tie and the pictures. These last are very good I think especially of "The four children" rowed up according to age. Father is most desirous of having a set for himself. Please send a duplicate as soon as you can get it here. Maybe Uncle Willis is sending him some.

Marjorie has grown so that we both thought her Dot. She is wearing Dot's Honey I hat, isn't she? Just before you get this you will probably get Dot's birthday gift of lacquer. I hope it reaches her O.K. and that she likes it. She ought to keep the room rather medium temperature and a pan of water on the radiator to make dampness enough to prevent cracking. If Dot likes hers well enough, (keep this secret, please) I hope to send Monnie one like it, or if she prefers in green or black, for graduation next June-1924. Please find out what her feelings are in this matter.

Well, I must hurry now, after all this that started to be an introduction to this message, to thank you very much for this lovely paper. I was sorely in need of this and Gould's beautiful box as all my nice stationery is gone. I love to use pretty paper, and I shall love this, really, all the more because you sent it. Lots of love goes with the thanks.

At Sharp Peak, I wished, as I stood in the suite where I was born that you and Father might have stood there with me. I love the place because it is near the sea, and I love the sea! Perhaps I do because I was born near it. No place was familiar to me; and I didn't get to the beach, for our hurried departure. That I think I would have remembered. Some summer now, I want to go down for a week or two, and see it under pleasant skies; for I like the place.

These days since Wednesday have been full of unimportant things, paying last bills before the new year, receiving furniture- my very first set, which really makes it most important, and just kicking around in general. It seemed strange today to go to Geu Cio Dong and see only a handful there, mostly not school girls. A schedule agrees with me I know. I get more things done, and planning a day's work is less energy-consuming. The name, old-maid is nearly mine, I guess. Thirty is fast approaching, and unless I hurry, I'll still be an old maid. So far, my last letter to you still stands. I wonder what you will or have replied.

My new magazines came last week, and I felt so happy to see the "Etude" and "Current opinion". The Lit. Dig. [Literary Digest] is excellent, but it comes so fast that I have no time to keep up. Rates are about even; but I shall have more self-respect if I at least approximate reading this thro. Gould said in his last, that he didn't know what to send for gifts. Perhaps if I just mention some things it will help. Records for Vic. [Victrola] I sent a list of last summer. Late books, either good fiction or worthy non-fiction are fine. But for fiction you'll have to get them right off the press, for we have already read "This Freedom" and "In the days of Poor Richard". Missionary folks are readers. Both Xmas'es so far we have had a lot of candy, and for appearances sake I've eaten most as much as anyone. So a nice box would save my face at Xmas. It is a luxury, and I should get on without it- and be called a child or a tight-wad, I suppose. But-----!

The family has written us very regularly this winter and we appreciate it! Please keep it up! We watch the mails eagerly. Silence we take for "All's Well", however we never cease to pray that you are well. Very much love, and many thanks again for the lovely gift, from your eldest girl- Phebe

I am enclosing just a tiny sprig of a flower I found at Sharp Peak. It was originally pink. I wish I could have found a wild lilac on the way to the boat!

Feb. 11-1923

Dear Kathleen:-

Last week I was in Diong Loh and no one got any letters for two reasons. (1) Last Sunday Mr. Topping and I rose at a village called Kong Cheng. We walked from Diong Loh there= about 16 miles on Saturday. We had Frank, Mr. Topping's horse with us but he could not find a coolie for one load so his house coolie took one load and we put the bedding on Frank. He acted as if he thought that was Kong King ing[?] him but he carried it and Mr. Topping on top of it for a while=about two miles. Then he stopped and refused to go. Mr. Topping got off. Then Frank went on all right. Sunday morning we found another coolie to accompany the house coolie and they took the loads on 14 miles to where we were to spend Sunday night. We took Frank and went to Nang Long a village about 1500 feet up above the plain. This is a very interesting place. One of the leading business men of Sing Ha, a large village on the sea comes from Nang Long. His family lives there. He is a very earnest Christian and his influence is very positive for Christianity in all that region. There are only 50 families in Nang Long. They have given up all idols and every form of idolatry. No more do they use wine at feast and superstition is gone. It is much like a Christian village at home- not all the people are Christians but they are all favorable to Christianity. Most of the men are in Sing Ha in business. We held a service at Nang Long- had dinner there and went down to Sing Ha in the afternoon. The road was pretty steep some of the way but Frank carried either Mr. Topping or me most of the way. We reached Sing Ha a little after 5. The wind was blowing very hard and it was some cold. We had to eat wholly Chinese food at Neng Ing and that evening we had to have a feast at Sing Ha. Down on the sea the wind blows fiercely.

Monday morning it began to rain about 8:30. We had breakfast then we had set before us each four eggs poached in sugar and water. I ate for breakfast 1 poached egg and two fried eggs. Mr. Topping took them all =six. Then just as we were starting a woman came in with two bowls of Hung Gang=rice vermicelli with an egg on it. He ate the egg=seven. We walked about ten miles and stopped at a village and had another dish of rice vermicelli with two eggs on it. He ate both= nine eggs Mr. Topping ate for breakfast last Monday.

You should have seen us as we left Sing Ha. The members sending us off with fire crackers. Frank is not yet used to them and they were so near they flew all about under his feet. He just danced for two or three minutes with Mr. Topping on his back. When it finally occurred to him that by going forward he could get away from the noise- he just scooted.

We reached our next stopping place Siu Lai about 1:45. This was on the way home toward Diong Loh. Going down we had made a detour to stop at Nang Long. The last two hours of travel before reaching Siu Lai it rained hard and the wind blew right in our faces so hard that it was useless to try to hold an umbrella. I was wet as a rat from my feet nearly to my hips. The wind blew the flaps of my overcoat about so that the rain got against my legs. My cap was soaked. But the loads came about 20 minutes after we got to the chapel and I took a good rub, put a blanket over my shoulders and was all right. Just before we reached this village we had to cross a brook some 4 rods [about 66 feet] wide. Mr. Topping was waiting for me and said we would both ride over. I laughed and said that little pony could not carry two of us. But he got off- I jumped into the saddle and he tried to get on behind. But he landed on the pony's tail. The pony tried to kick but with two big men on his back and one of them right on his tail, his hind feet did not get very far into the air. Mr. T had to get off and the next time he landed near the saddle and Mr. Frank took us over all right.

We had a nice service with over 30 people that afternoon. Next morning we started for Diong Loh and got home a little after 5 o'clock Wed. a.m. I stayed and examined Miss Nutting in some language work. Thursday a.m. I walked 8 miles to Long M??? and took the launch for home- Foochow. The Diong Loh launch left at 5 a.m.- too early.

Your letter is with Phebe so I cannot answer it in time. But it was a very good letter. 9+ [maybe he means years in school] shows that you are developing in the use of your mother tongue. My how would you like to see the first letter you ever wrote me. I have it preserved in my trunk. Mama's description of the task is almost as interesting as is the letter. Gould and Geraldine write as if it was good for them to get home for the few days at Christmas.

Both the Southern generals have left Foochow. Hu Cung Do- left the day that I left for Diong Loh. The soldiers are still siezing a few men to carry loads but the streets are again supplied with rickshas and the shops are open and in general Foochow appears natural for the first time since last September.

Commencement passed off very nicely. Civil Governor Ling Seng spoke at the exercises. Ten students from the middle school course and nineteen from the Higher Primary received diplomas. We are still buying land and houses for enlargement.

My 58th birthday was the day I walked in the rain and got wet thru. I shall remember it a long time. The evening after we returned to Diong Loh the station were invited to dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Hubbards and to my complete surprise a cake with birthday candles came on.

How you would enjoy the Topping children. Wilma is a little more than two years old. Her hair is very striking. Mama would have given a good deal to have had a baby with one tenth so many curls. Her hair is all curls and it stands straight up all over her head. I never saw hair like it. Her mother cannot brush it down. Each hair seems so full of kinks all the whole length. The baby is nearly six months old and sleeps from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. without disturbing anyone. A new boy's school building is going up at Diong Loh and also one at Ing Hok. The new house on the site of the old Gardner house is roofed in so the men need not fear the rain. The new Women's Hospital on the land that used to be my garden is just getting the roof on.

Every one is very busy planning the work for next year= I mean next Chinese year. The whole mission is $3000 mex. short we have appointed a committee of twenty to raise this here in Foochow. We shall be on the job when this reaches you. Please all of you pray that the money may come. I have talked for this method of raising money for the work for a long time. This is the first real attempt that had been made. I hope it will be successful.

China is a much distressed land. Conditions are as bad as they were under the old monarchy, but she has more hope- for there is a deep thirst for knowledge at least for an education and a Christian Education is her only hope. Many mistakes will be made as she changes from chaos to order and many men will be killed, for life is very cheap here as any previous letters have shown. Rattle brained young men and young women will make fools of themselves and cause misery. But out of it all will come a China that will help the world.

May God be very good to you all

Very lovingly
Father

I'll look for a burette.

The young man who came with 5 others into my study three weeks ago and demanded that the Foochow College students go in a procession to the various officials to demand the stopping of siezing men for carriers shot himself last week, accidentally- a good thing for Foochow.

N.C.A.S., March 2, 1923.

Dear Folks,

I know I have been delinquent in writing and fear that another Sunday will pass without a letter. Hence, I am writing instead of eating. That is not as bad as it sounds, for I had a most scrumptious tea at 4.00 and only a short walk since.

Two weeks ago I went to Peking on Saturday afternoon by rickshaw to hear Kathleen Parlow a second time. My man was a good one, but 5 miles this side of town he sold me to another fellow. This second was slow- s l o w. I would have arrived in time for dinner and no concert had not the Gibbs been trying to attend the same concert and by auto, not rickshaw. I stayed in for the week end with Jean. We had Alfred Stanley and Margaret McCann for Saturday night. We all went to the movies and saw a good story of the Yukon.

On Sunday Jean and I went to the hotel for the music. It was an all classical program. A Mr. Ellis, third Secretary, just new invited Jean over to hear his new piano, and try it as accompanist to her violin. Paul and I went for audience. Mr. Ellis is delightfully Naïve.

The Burgess family were down here for two weeks camping out in the one time Howard-Smith house, now the N.C.A.S. property. Mr. B. was very ill with something similar to Typhus during the Christmas holidays and the doctors forbade him doing any work till after the first of March. Hence the migration of the whole family. I was over there for lunch on Washington's birthday, and had the whole family over here for Sunday dinner. Vinton developed ear ache, so Stella and the boys made a hasty departure by auto Monday morning.

Jean Hunter arrived about 8.39 two weeks ago today. She is a darling. I saw her when four days old. She is gaining and Maude is fine. Bobby gets terribly excited when we ask after the Shao baby. Bobby was most ready to give us all up as no good. A kite had gotten tangled in the outer branches of one of the trees. It floated most delightfully in the wind and was a most desirable plaything. Yet we only tossed him and played get it. He really wanted it!

The Faculty Entertainment was this last Wednesday night. We had the Chinese Players down. They gave four plays, taking about two hours. After the first one, I invited small groups to go behind the scenes and watch the man manipulate the figures. It was like a Chinese audience after that with constant going and coming. But the children enjoyed it that way, so why object!

Jean Josselyn, Minnie Corbett, and Lura Aiken were our only guest this year. As usual several did not even reply. Flora can guess one or two names. I think I shall recommend dropping them from our list of patrons.

Tuesday evening. I had a fine time at Tsing Hua, though not a very exciting one. We just talked on Saturday eve. They had had "Way Down East" the night before so there were no movies. On Sunday, two people from the German Legation were out, Mr. and Mrs. Gipperich. They were very interesting people. He was born out here and spoke beautiful English. She was not very fluent. I went to the Heintz for supper. On Monday morning, I read in the library all the educational magazines I could find. It was like college days at Columbia.

Today Jena was down for her violin lessons. We went for tea at Mrs. Martins, the Alice Huggins and Miss Sailor walked down the Tientsin road. I found that Dr. King had arrived by the evening train. She was expected last Friday, but bandits had fired on the outgoing auto so the autos were not running. The trouble proved short lived.

I have much work and several business letters, so must turn to those.

Lots of love.

Mary.

Dear Dr. Beard;

I've just been writing a note to Phoebe to thank her for her help in the Conference and it struck me you might be interested to hear how much help she was and how sincerely I appreciated having her. I couldn't visit the Bible classes but I know Phoebe led hers well and that the girls enjoyed their discussion hours greatly. They said so.

And then, you know, Phoebe stepped into the gap that was left when the music director got stuck in Amoy and couldn't come.

I've got the world more or less roughly divided into two classes- the people who give you a pull down as you touch and those who give you a lift and certainly Phoebe is one of the latter.

Sincerely-

Charles M. Neely.

March 5, 1923.

My own darling Mother,

Later and later it has got and I have not written you to greet you on your own day, the 29th of this lovely spring month as it is with us. This note brings you my warmest love, and special birthday wishes. May the year that starts for you on that day lead you forthwith new fields of usefulness, a new start in learning-for we are not happy unless we grow and learn, and all the happiness and inspiration of knowing yourself needed by and useful to many loved ones and friends. If Mrs. Cong and many others here knew I was writing they would ask me to say Gung- Li for your birthday, for they often ask for you and ask me to send their greetings. I think it would please them to get a word from you some time.

Since I wrote you last I have had a very rich and beautiful experience. During the week of Feb. 19 I was with the Y.W. Conference at Sing Ding School. Living so intimately with the secretaries, the three English ladies there, and Anne Kentfield was a privilege. But working with and having two Chinese ladies from the Peking and Shanghai association was an inspiration. They are every bit as fine as we are, and it gives me fresh courage to try to see in my girls here the kind of women they were, the contact with the girls, the use of Chinese in the discussion group on Christianizing Relationships, and the responsiveness of the girls were all a very happy education to me.

Isn't it wonderful that Easter comes in the spring? I have been sleeping on the porch with Miss Pike, and every morn we are wakened by the 'Chinese Robins' wide rollicking repertoires and other bird calls. Each day sees new growth in the leaf buds on the old trees in front of our new house, and the sun rises earlier each day. Some days bring a warm damp earthy smell that intoxicates me with joy. And sometimes as I sit in chapel I look thru the window at a curtain of green leaves and grown trunks and the sun shining thru the swaying leaves is enchanting. What little things bring joy or sorrow!

I am doing evangelistic work at Sang Bo with the Bible woman and our girls who go there to help on Sunday. We are doing intensive education on Easter and its story for the next month. After a Sat. afternoon of calling revealed discouraging ignorance and indifference in church members, it was very reassuring to see the turnout we had Sunday A.M. Nearly all were men and women as opposed to mostly children at other times. And when Mr. Goertz preached a short sermon after the pastors, the audience was most attentive. Pray that I may be sensitive to the needs of other people, to suggestions sent by God and to His influence in this work.

My Easter Greetings to all the family. I hope you are all well and are not over working. When you get this all the glory of spring will be bursting about you. I can almost feel it!

Tell each of the girls to give you a big hug and birthday kiss for me, and Gould too if he is there. How I'd like to do it myself! Listen to the Easter music for me, too. I'll be teaching the Hallelujah Chorus and the Easter piece for our concert here this next month.

Very much love from your oldest,
Phebe.

March 18, 1923.

Dear Folks at Home,

Phebe's letter mailed the 13 of Feb. reached me the 8th of March. Mothers, mailed the 6th was two days later in reaching me. Such is the irregularity of the mails.

Yes Mother, the pipes all got fixed, and very quickly for this country. There are some leaks yet, but nothing serious. Finally, I had a stove put in the chapel; we were paying out 10.00 per week for oil for heating. We still pay out a lot, as the Menzis use the oil heater most of the time. Last week the servants used all the oil in five days that usually lasts seven. I made a terrible row about it, and now they want me to watch every move. I say no, either they can be trusted within limits, or we can not use them. I was done up with a bad headache and fever to 101.6 for three days so did not watch as closely as usual. I do not feel like trying it though, either physically or otherwise.

Alfred Stanley is to get up tomorrow for the first time. He had the scarlet fever lightly and was over the worst before we knew what it was. Jack West is down with a bad sore throat, but so far no rash has appeared. There are no other suspects. Mrs. Stanley was here for three days but went home. She may return when the nurse leaves and it gets lonesome for Alfred.

Several times lately I have been wakened by a strong odor of tobacco. Once I went down stairs and all seemed serene. The servants were all in bed so was everyone else. A week ago, it happened again. I had been in bed for most of the last four days and was too weary to go investigate. Last night I went down, Miss Carlyle it seems indulges, "late at night, so what difference does it make". I asked her to please go out doors hereafter, not smoke in the house. She has decided not to return for another year and is evidently going to be as reckless as she pleases. I thought Miss Muir was indulging too, but she was not. She is a most capable woman, but spoiled by her life overseas or else naturally unprincipled.

What fun to have a family party on Mothers birthday. I should have liked to have been there. I am glad Mother is keeping the colored set, it is more unique. If you can sell the other for anything over $8.00 I shall make my usual allowance on it. If that is too much, get what you can. Do you want such things to sell? I can buy as men come around, if you do, or get in Peking.

How hard for Nellie and Hattie, to have Frank [cousin-in-law, Frank Ernest Blakeman, husband of Nellie Elizabeth Beard] taken. And how hard to have to see him suffer so. Leaks of the heart are not always fatal. Bergen Stelle has a rather bad one. To be sure, it is a constant source of worry. He is still in bed with a cold that would hardly have bothered the rest of us. He runs a low fever every day. Mrs. Stelle and Clarkson are going home with Bergen this summer. Mrs. Stelle says that she could not be happy nor could Mr. Stelle to let him go alone, after this siege.

Monday A.M. Mr. Bentley preached for us yesterday. The children volunteered remarks on his sermon and every one was impressed with it. He used the story of Micaiah, II Chronicles, 18, and brought home the lesson of doing ones duty, hard though it be and against popular feeling.

We have had good rains right along and the country side is all plowed and partly planted. Miss Ingram, Miss Burgess and I are going to take our tea and walk off somewhere this afternoon. She has a class till 3.15, so we have gotten the tea things and will meet her at the Academy. My lunch box that Miss Bostwick gave me is being used. It is so warm that one hardly needs a sweater even.

What do the rumors about Flora's not returning mean? Are they true or only rumors? I think that I wrote that Miss Smith had proved most satisfactory. Mrs. Evans is giving a course in History that she is working up for the little folks, and I get glowing accounts of it. She is writing it in the form of a scroll, beautifully illustrated, and it fascinates the children. Also they get the facts and retain them.

There is a fad for Womens papers here. One has started in Shanghai and one in Tientsin.

March 23 I am going to make an end of this letter and get it on its way. All the children were off yesterday morning. The Shantung crowd traveled on the new steel train and were most delighted. It has compartments even on 3rd class. There are three berths on each side, and the seats are leather. It was most clean and unscratched as yet. In the day time each compartment is supposed to hold eight. Our party was just sixteen.

There are seven of us here, not counting, the scarlet fever patient and the gastritis patient. Both are most well. Philip will probably be out next week but Alfred has to do most of his peeling yet. We seven are planning for the hills next Thursday to stay till Monday. We go to Tan Che SSu, that being the one place to which no one of the party has even been. We read Juliet Bredon on the place[porch?] last night, to the enjoyment of all.

I am going up tomorrow to attend the College club also to hear the Persian Garden, on Monday. I am staying with Cleora at Teng Shih Kou. I have been to Jeans every time this winter, because she has been here and given the invitation personally.

We are having guests this evening. The dining room is too full to have much company in term time. We will have to improve the few days we are here, if we get around.

Last Sunday Mr. Luders and two friends were here and accepted my invitation to stay for lunch. I got a thank you note and a check for $50.00 two days later. It pays to entertain, at that rate.

With lots of love,

Mary.

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

March 18, 1923

Dear Marjorie;-

It must be your turn to get the letter this week. Last week I wrote to Gould, and asked him to send it to Oberlin.

Today has been much like a day in May at home. The sun has shone all day but not hot and bright. There has been a dampness in the air that has made me wear an overcoat all day. This morning I went to the Upper Bridge to church. There were seven men-learners who were thinking of joining the church. We talked with them and admitted three. One of these was an old man 74 years old. His two sons were already members. Another was a young man whose brother has been a Christian School teacher in our mission for several years. The third was a near relative of a teacher in Trinity College. There were two others pretty ming bek. (Do you know that means? Ask Mama). But they were boatmen and knew no character and had not been learners very long. One was about fifty years old and ran his boat with a crew of ten between Foochow and Upper Bridge and Kienning here, - where Archdeacon Phillips lives. The pastor = Ung Huai In and the church members were afraid he did not know quite enough of the Truth to join the church yet. There is very much idolatry and superstition connected with a boat captain's life. He must burn incense and shoot off the tripod when he starts up river, and he must go to the temples built near the bad rapids to burn paper and incense to the idols to propitiate them so his boat will not be wrecked. It takes a very earnest boatman not to have anything to do with idolatry.

After admitting these three men four little babies were Baptized. One was a two month old son of pastor Huai Li,- one was a four month old grandson of his,- the little boy of his oldest daughter who I married a little over a year ago. She was one of Phebe's pupils at Ponasang.

Yesterday Mr. St. Clair and I started at 12:15 for Kuliang. It was very cloudy and almost raining, so we went prepared for rain. We took rickshas to Deuk Sei, half way across the plain, walked to Huang Sei the last village before you reach the foot of Kuliang, took chairs from there to the foot and walked up. I went specially to look at Miss Todd's cottage and at Mr. Belchers. Mr. and Mrs. Storrs want Miss Todd's cottage. Mr. Newell I think has bought Mr. Belcher's - for an investment. We walked all the way down and across the plain to East gate where we found rickshas. I stopped at Deuk Sei to see some little chicks that were just hatching. I gave the eggs to Nuik Ciu the Christian fruit and vegetable man to set under his hen. I found 12 or 13 hatched out. He is to bring them to me tomorrow. Then I shall have a regular chore night and morning to feed and care for them. I have now seven hens and one rooster over in my old chicken house. This month thus far I have brought in 82 eggs. I received 3 cents a piece for them.

Mr. Munson is very much better. He has been down stairs now for three of four days. They plan to sail from Shanghai early in April.

Mrs. Cong asks me over and over to remember her to Mamma. She thinks a great deal of Mama and tells me that Mama loved her very much.

The compound is quite lively with children these days. Mrs. Rogers Ellen, Mrs. Leger's Margaret, Barbara and Robert, Mrs. Dumason's Paul and Marian, Mrs. St. Clair's Betty. These are playing together all over the yard. They have a slide in the corner of the terrace near the big rock,- the other side of the walk, and they enjoy it hugely. They slide down one at a time or two or three at a time and sometimes on top of another. Betty has a doll as large as a new born baby. Ellen is crazy to get it and shows much ingenuity in making plans to get Betty out of the way so she can play with the doll. For several days Betty was out doors with the other children in the morning. Ellen quietly slipped into the house, found the doll and played all alone with it for an hour or more. But one day Betty did not go out and was playing with the doll herself. Ellen came in and saw the condition of things and asked Mrs. St. Clair to send Betty out to play. Mrs. St. Clair said no Betty could stay in doors then what do you suppose- Ellen got to work to induce Betty to go out and she got her out and playing with the others, then she slipped quietly in and got the doll and played with it all alone.

My sheets have gotten beyond mending. For several months they have been pretty easily torn. I hoped to get some from Miss Garretson's sale but someone else got them all. Phebe found just five yards of sheeting at Heng Sings 91 inches wide - five yards will make me two good sheets and enough to last me a long time. I did not suppose that wide sheeting could be found in Foochow and I had told Phebe to buy some cotton cloth of suitable quality and I would have two widths sewed together.

I wish some of you would order for me the renewal of the Oberlin Alumni Magazine. If you, any of you, care to see it. Have it sent to you and you send it on to me. A week or two in my receiving it will make no difference. I will send you the next money I get from Mr. Bidwell.

I see by the Sentinel that cousin Frank Blakeman [Judge Frank E. Blakeman, spouse of Willard Beard's cousin, Nellie Beard Blakeman] was very ill in Hartford, Conn. and little hope was held out for his recovery [Judge Blakemen died around the time this letter was written]. I wonder if Dr. Leonard's death will effect you- some of you used to help Mrs. Leonard I think.

I am having a very anxious time just now over the purchase of some land with graves on it between the West Gate and the Upper Bridge. The graves are over half out. Someone had entered an accusation against the villagers who sold and one has been arrested and trouble is being made. I have to find a place for the men to stay. It's no fun. The land is being bought for the union Normal and Middle School- of which Mr. Newell is in charge with Mr. Billing.

510 boys are registered in Foochow College- about ten have been turned away- four arrived from sustain Friday and are waiting till tomorrows faculty meeting to see if they can enter. Thus far the faculty are working together finely.

Political conditions are still unsettled. Selfishness is the rule all over. Report says that a General Song is coming down overland from Shaowu, Kienning, Yon Bing, Ciu Kau to Foochow about 40,000 soldiers to take Foochow for the North again. I cry out, How long O Lord, how long, must these poor people be thus oppressed plundered and killed to allow a few ambitious militarists to play at getting power for themselves. They are using soldiers and the poor just about as one used sticks of wood- to make a fire- to make furniture or anything that he wishes- I just heard yesterday that a poor fellow- member of Lau Memorial church, who was seized to carry loads for the southern army when they left the last of January- could not stand the hard work and the cold and snow up country and died. This is the fate of many.

I saw Phebe only twice last week. She was here last Wed. evening when I came home from a wedding at 9:30 pm. I walked out to Ponasang with her. She was looking very well. I'll enclose a letter from Mrs. Neely that will please you all- specially Mama.

May God daily become to each of you more real and may He give each of you more power daily to live a forgoing life filled with good-will for every one.

Very lovingly,
Father.

Foochow, China
March 31st 1923

Dear Dorothy;-

You will receive a shock to get a letter in reply to yours so soon. But I see by my register that I have addressed the others since I have you. Your letter has a good ring to it, - as if life had in it much that was worth while for you, and so if you looked forward into the future with pleasant anticipation. Such an attitude of mind spells success. I congratulate you on the choice the Baldwin girls made of their representatives in the social functions. Of course way off here in China it cannot hurt you if I feel a little bit proud. Just as I do when Phebe is chosen for some important duty and when she accepts and performs it so quietly, so unostentatiously and so efficiently. In the Easter Concert, she has had the entire training of the Wen Shan girls and she has had quite a bit of responsibility in the full charms all of which she has done admirably. She is making very pleasing progress in the Chinese character. I think I wrote of how she filled in the breach for music in the Y.W. Conference.

I wrote about the experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Christian on their way down river from Shaowu. He has written out the account and has given me three copies. I am enclosing one. Could you let Gould and Geraldine see it and then send it to Aunt Etta and Aunt Emma. I will send a copy to Shelton. We all feel with them that God's protecting care was about them in this danger.

Life seems very cheap here- has seemed so since the war last Oct. Yesterday a man from Kucheng, and army officer- who had been in Foochow for about two weeks, living a very fast life = with wine, and women, and cards and gambling, went into the city from South Side to see the Military General to get him to act as generalissimo in the Y.M.C.A. Campaign for members. His name was Ciu. He himself was leader of one of the teams. He succeeded in getting General ???'s consent to be generalissimo. While riding in his rickshaw near the electric light works an unknown man shot him thru the head and also thru the body and got away. He was taken to a Japanese Hospital nearby. Mr. Cio Lik Daik was a close friend of his. Mr. Cio had after urged him to give up his fast life. Mr. Cio went to call on him at 8 o'clock last evening. He was rational and told Mr. Cio that he had been a very wicked man and that if he had listened to and obeyed him he would not have been shot. He asked Mr. Cio to pray for him. Only a half hour or so after Mr. Cio left he died.

Sunday p.m. - This is a lonely Easter day. This morning I went to Iong Gio Haeng. They have about 100 boys and girls there in Kindergarten, and boys and girls day schools. Each child was given a national flag and the procession marched into church and for an hour the children, their teachers and four or five Foochow College Students had a nice Easter service. Then the children marched out with their flags to the tune of Onward Christian Soldiers. They found it as difficult to keep in time singing as the Oberlin Choir used to in their recessional. But the whole was done by the Chinese themselves- and done very nicely.

I see Talcott and Baldwin this afternoon filled with girls in Easter dresses. When I was in College the girls could not leave the boundary hedges, - except as they went out to service. You are taking your afternoon nap and doing your work I see no harm at all in the work you mention. You free others for different kind of service. It is interesting to see the different ideas about keeping Sunday and other Holy Days. On Good Friday we suspended classes and held a service in the morning and told the boys not to play games at all during the day. You may imagine what the foreign teachers thought when in the afternoon they saw the foreign men playing tennis. I deplore more that hard feelings and ill exhibited in these matters than I do the things that are done. Why is it that people show so much heat that sometimes grows into anger when they talk about the best way in which to foster the true relations with God? I am getting to try to let others have much liberty in thought and action, for it seems to me that the whole world needs the forgiving spirit and good-will that Jesus came to help men understand and to get.

Am I right in thinking that you will go thru the forms of graduating next June but will take further study until June 1924 when you will actually get your sheepskin?

Phebe and I plan to go buying jade and perhaps other things tomorrow p.m. after the Easter Concert. May God give you all, the best things, and help you to receive and use them to make people happier.

Very lovingly Father

I sent you four tins of tea about a month ago.

Tan Che Ssu
Easter Sunday-

Yes, once again I am off with a party of left over children for a bit of vacation. We are eight, Miss Burgess, the two West children, Mary MacKnight (11 yrs), Charles Leonard (11 yrs), Clarkson Stelle and Lyman Martins. We came up Thursday. On Friday it took all day to see this temple and the outlying little ones. One contains an effigy of a priest in the depths of a cave. Yesterday we went over to Chick Tai Ssu, the second largest temple out here. Tan Che Ssu is the largest and oldest and to my mind the most interesting. Today we have lain about camp and the children have played tricks. First I appeared to myself in my khaki skirt, soiled middy, pink hat and high brown shoes. Then Miss Burgess the 2nd came out. I went to my room for something and found my pillow and night clothes put to bed as a huge baby.

We have a court to ourselves now but have had two sets of neighbors, one Danish and the other Russian. At least two other parties were here last night. It is a large place. I had my fortune told this morning by pulling a stick from a bunch which I shook according to custom. I am to be rich, prosperous, ?? for and go to Heaven. Salvation for two targyees[a type of coin?] !!

We left two boys behind, Alfred Stanley is still in quarantine for Scarlet Fever. Philip Newton overate when out at Scout Camp and has been in bed with inflammation of his digestive tract ever since. I left most careful instructions as to diet with Chin Shuh Fu and one official boy in charge. Doctor Love said there was nothing but time and careful diet needed. He got in a hurry to get well and ate everything sent up, perhaps even ordered some and so stays in bed longer. He runs a slight temperature, 100 or less, most of the time.

Mr. and Mrs. Menzi were at the Halls with the Fenns and were to stay at Kou Lau Tsi with them till they should be off to the Great Wall with the Longs this week-end. We get back Monday evening and I spend the two days making every body work cleaning house. Mrs. Gordon started the custom at Christmas of locking all the dormitory doors so the servants are scared to be left with the place unlocked. I was sorry, for I prefer the old method.

I sent off 3 packages just before coming up. I'll have to send prices later as I have not the lists here. I'll also send again costs of Miss Brewster's things as a letter is evidently lost.

Lots of love
Mary.

NORTH CHINA AMERICIAN SCHOOL
TUNGHSIEN, PEKING, CHINA.

April 14, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

Having written several school invitations on my best note paper, I think the school can save me steps and furnish a sheet of her paper to write home on. My last letter was written from Tan Che Ssu. We did have a good time in spite of the few difficulties. And everyone is the better for the trip. Our train coming in from Men Tou Kou was half an hour late, so we had a rush to get the train for Tungchow. We did it, but had to leave all the baggage for Fu Kuei to bring. He waited for the round the city train and came as far as Che Hwa Men. From there he got rickshaws because he was unable to get a cart as we hoped. He got in about 8.00. Mrs. Gordon had gone to Moore's and had expected to get back Friday. She was ill so we were the first back. The invalids were less of invalids and the servants had proved faithful to the trust at least as far as Philip's diet was concerned. That was the most important bit of care they needed.

Dr. Love says that Phil has had a light attack of typhoid. He has been in bed a month. He is up in his room every day now but not dressed as it is easier to keep him in that way. Flora can tell you Doctors trick of doing that. Alfred Stanley is still pealing. I study with him occasionally by sitting outside the window or several feet away.

Last Monday about 50 of us went in to a lecture by Dr. Morris, Chief Geologist of Roy Chapman Andrews's expedition into Mongolia. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Peking American School and we were their guests.

On Tuesday evening, Mrs. Wilson, Mr. Walker, Dr. Waddell, and Miss Aiken came down and gave us a concert. It was most excellent, and well appreciated even if some of the little folk did get sleepy.

Monday Morning. At last another home letter. The last came just before vacation. That told of Frank's serious illness, this of his death. I wrote Hattie from the Hills. It was a good place to find some especially interesting things to tell of.

I have not been able to find the account of the packages I mailed before the Hills trip. I know that there was a long white carved chain for 3.25, a shorter white carved chain (rosettes on the sides) for 2.50. Do not hope for more of the last, for I, so far, have seen none.

1 pink glass chain for 2.50

1 brown carved seeds for 7.00

bunnies and humpty-dumpties for about 40 cents each

1 short lavender tiny bead chain for 1.00

2 bib, doily and napkin ring to match, for child for 1.50 each.

(Alice has cuter ones now with Chinese figures on them)

If there were other things, please appraise them for me. I shall find the list sometime, but -when?

Miss Brewsters center piece I valued at 6.00 gold. That is cheaper than I would go to the trouble it was for anyone else. But I can not duplicate it anyway as the delay on that was because the people have given up making that pattern and had to hunt long to find a woman who knew how to make it. Another like it would be 10.00 or 12.00.

I will get Floras pieces of turquoise matrix some day. I have been everywhere but to Tiffany's and can not find the ones with the gold in them. Jerry sent me a whole envelope full, but not with the gold.

To make the long chain of white, I had to get two chains and restring them, hence the higher price. I bought some lace the other day. I will send some as soon as I can get time to wrap it. That may be dutiable, if so the duty is high. I sent in small packages to save export duty, and postage, also the probability of import duty. Have you had to pay anything?

Yes I recognize the contents of the boxes. The silver slide is a gentlemans belt buckle, intended for Wells, if you think best. You probably got a letter soon after the packages for I sent one, telling of the contents.

We are having another good rain. It was much needed, in spite of the earlier ones. This will hustle things along. Violets, Foxgloves, dandelion, vatch and the relatives of the Forget me nots are getting thick.

My neighbors are in bed and I must stop this noise so they may go to sleep.

Mrs. Menzi is in bed again. It seems to be a sort of indigestion and she can eat but little. Dr. is a little afraid of mild typhoidas with Philip Newton. I surely hope not.

I am wonderfully well, in spite of hard work. I had to take week end duty this week as Miss Carlyle went to Peking Friday night and telephoned that she would not be back.

[The following is hand written:]

I went and watched Caroline have her bath a week ago last Sunday. She is beginning to be afraid of strangers and I see too little of her not to be a stranger. Yesterday, I watched Jean Hunter. She is a darling, just beginning to take notice. Bobby adores her but is inclined to be a bit rough.

I plan to be with Willard and Phebe this summer. For how long I'll decide later. As far as I can see, I'll only be needed to close things up.

Lots of love

Mary.

Phebe is it not about time to deposit $10.00 of the univ[?] fund to ???

Hope Mother is fully revived long ere this reaches you.

Thanks to you and Miss Brewster for all the papers.

[This typewritten letter, dated April 29, 1923, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the home folk. She took the younger Campfire Girls on an outing. There was another house fire in the compound. She gives an update of the co-workers and acquaintances. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S., April 29, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

Phebe's letter and the ones from Pearl River came yesterday. I was off with the Camp Fire girls to help them get the Honor of identifying 15 trees. We went beyond that and did 25. They can not get the next 10 though, for I have found only 2 more, on the campus.

Phebe's reference to finance in the church reminds me that I have forgotten to ask you to give $5.00 to the church for me. Take it from what you are getting from the sale of the things I am sending. There was nearly that amount left after the last deposit of which you wrote. 40 cents for the lock is O.K. I forget what I did pay for it, but not more than 30 cents silver at the most.

May 6. Guess what my latest fad is? I have handed over to the other office my allowance accounts, which Miss Muir has wanted all along, but I would not give over because she groaned so over what she already had. Also I have systematized my store so it takes less time. Further William Cochran left last week so I do not have the three periods a week with him. Does not that sound as though I needed more to do? I thought so (in fact I planned to make it seem so) hence I am starting the "talked of" picnics with the Camp Fire girls. Last Saturday, the 28th we all went out for picnic lunch and afterward spent the afternoon identifying 25 trees as I wrote above. The boys had gone by the noon train for the week end, and the girls had hoped to go too, but Miss Bailey could not get off. This was their consolation party.

On Wednesday night I took the "Brownies" out. They are the girls in training for Camp Fire but now too young. On Friday a squad of five and I went out. We told Chinese folk tales for entertainment and thereby each girl won an honor. Also two girls fried their eggs on a stone and won a second. Marjorie Maxwell, the leader of the squad, won an honor by planning and carrying out the picnic. This coming Thursday another squad goes out. We have much fun, get acquainted, win honors and work off that superfluous energy that comes with the spring days. I wish that Flora could have seen Marjorie manage that picnic! She was efficiency itself, calm self contained and most considerate of the girls and myself. It was Marjorie who took a torch and made sure that nothing was left behind. It was she who rescued the things when a coolie kept hanging around as though there might be something he could pick up. She is coming out this year and showing the fruits of the much thought and worry put on her. I shall never get over the miracle of it, even though every year in my teaching in boarding school I have seen it happen to one or more girls!

Last Monday afternoon, Miss Burgess and I went into Peking. We shopped hard till 3.00 then went to Jean Josselyn's and rested till four. She had a committee meeting on, so we again started out for shopping. We were staying up to attend the College Club play, The Dover Road, by Milne. It was one funny thing after another till we came away with our sides aching. I had just gotten Phebe's letter asking for the things for Miss Brewster, Cora and others. I think I have in hand everything ordered except one or two which I had sent earlier on a venture. I enclose a list of the contents of 7 parcels. Two went yesterday, the others are waiting for the outer wrappers.

Dr. Wilder gave us a very good sermon today, on "Inspiration and Revelation." He took the first five verses of the Bible for his text and showed how modern science had confirmed the story of the creation not discredited it.

We had the Stelles, Mrs. Sheffield, Mrs. Young and Dr. Wilder as guests tonight. Afterward Miss Young had planned a musical evening. Several of the boys played, Mrs. Hunter came over and sang, Miss Young herself had just started to play the "Largo" when Mrs. Gordon opened the door and announced casually "Dr. Smith's house is on fire". We ran! But we arrived just after the flame was flooded out. Auntie Ming was taking a bath and had left the lamp lighted in her room. What happened will never be known. Two of the Academy boys were walking by and saw the flames in the upstairs room. They tried the doors but they were locked. That Korean fellow who is so great an athlete and who won over half the points in a triangular meet himself, was one of the boys. He climbed up the side of the house and in the window. The casing was locked so he broke the window. The revolving bookcase and the books are ruined. The floor is badly burned under where the case stood. Fortunately the curtains had not caught so the fire was closely confined to the one corner. The house was still full of smoke, but there was no danger, when we left. The mattress was burned on one corner and the rug damaged.

Did I write that Miss Young had word several weeks ago of her father's death? Her mother is planning to stay out now till the end of the summer at least and may stay longer. The Fiskins are probably taking the Stelle house for next year. Captain Fiskin has the year for study, and they feel that this would be a fine place for the three children. Mr. Stelle will make his headquarters in Peking for the year. Mrs. Stelle and the boys leave in July.

Alice Huggins has just had word that the steamer on which she was to sail is taken off. She is out of a sailing, so are a lot of other folk as Mr. McCann had booked a crowd to go together.

Margaret Smith still writes as though she were planning to stay home indefinitely. The people are hoping that when she gets word that Mrs. Stelle is going she will decide that her family can get along and she can return. Her father has remarried, and that may make a difference, provided the new mother and the wayward brother prove agreeable to each other. Miss Moody, new this year, has definitely been located here for next year, to help look after the schools. She is of the famous Moody family and very charming. Miss Dizney has been granted for the year at least for the hospital. Dr. Love has two women nurses (Chinese) now and has begun to take out patients. One day Miss Liu officiated at a birth in the hospital and at the same time the other nurse was out on a case in the village. There was not ten minutes difference in the time of arrival of the two infants. Neither nurse called the doctor. It is a triumph to have a nurse called here.

Dr. Love has a hospital baby now. Perhaps Flora will recall the half starved infant in the Station Class last year, a child of over a year which was listless and weighed barely as much as when born. The same babe appeared this year, no heavier, perfectly listless, helpless as a new born infant, yet nearly two years old. The mother had died when the child was born, a relative had taken it and begrudged the food it ate. She had given it away and it was the third woman who had it. She has been in the hospital three months now, and has gained several pounds, two the first week, has one continuous smile and is much beloved by both the nurses. She is sitting up and playing and no longer keeps her hands where they are put.

"Four Chickens" was back for a call en route for Mongolia the other day. He was very much dressed up and was acting as interpreter for some well to do Chinese, was to travel by private auto and in style. Such is the way of the best servants.

I have had two books from Miss Brewster lately. The last I have let Jean have the first reading of, as I knew I should not get at it for several days or possible weeks. I plan now to save them for summer. I had to inquire what "in camera" meant. Jean, the diplomat's wife, knew.

Lots of love

Mary

I am anxious to hear again about Cousin Carrie. I do hope Elizabeth got rested and is better. I may be en route home a year from the time you get this. Mary.

Do you know if Joel and Grace Beard of Saybrook ever received the luncheon set I sent? I never had any word from them.

Dearest Mother,

These last months I don't recognize myself as a correspondent. I am so delinquent. Just a week ago I got a dandy letter from Marjorie and from Dot, too, and it put Father and me into fine spirits. Even if Mr. Goddard says I am the only one of my family that can't manage things, I am proud of my sisters who can.

Mr. Goddard has been here over two weeks and left today with the Legers. He is rather strange and is beginning to show his age, I think- trembling, etc. He is a good thinker, but there is something not reassuring about him, that I don't remember before at all. Just as I wrote Geraldine the last time, Mrs. Warner and her husband were here. They made their headquarters with us in our new house with unfinished walls; but we saw them only at breakfast and after 10 P.M. Tho Mrs. W. was not strong nor fond of walking; they saw most of the essential things about Foochow, even the work of other missions. Mr. Warner had a little movie machine, and a chromotone Camera, so he took movies of several things. Father and I were reception committee, and enjoyed the time together and with the Warner's. Their boat got in so late that we stayed at the Gillette's over night, coming up on his launch specially next day. We love Mrs. Warner! She is such an all-round woman, so strong and sensible, with no sneaking behind the back-talking. Everything is in the open, whether it is hard or easy to say; and always fair. At Dingloh they had half a week with two good sunny days. Just as they came, there was some trouble with the ricksha men so we had to hire private ones to be sure of having conveyance when we wanted it.

Charles L. Gillette, M. D.

AN apostle of healing and a devotee of beauty.

Mrs. C. L. Gillette

HER graciousness, poise and friendliness offer a sustaining buoyancy and ready sympathy to everyone. We are sorry the tides prevented her two sons, Don and Bobby from getting their pictures taken.

I have been preparing the girls to sing at an entertainment the Y.M.C.A. was to put on, for the last three weeks. It was to have been on the night before the day of shame and the Y.W. School Students decided it ought not to be, so threatened to stop it. The Y.W. girls were also to give a little play that night. The students came in and took the best seats, which were reserved that night for the members, as the occasion was part of the Annual Membership Campaign. Mr. Cio went in to ask them to leave and had just about succeeded, when in stormed some outside boys who are stirring up things in town, and started a row. Mr. McConnell tried to lead the boys out, and received a rain of chairs. No program came off, and the Y.W. girls were safely sent away. That made us doubt about the propriety of our girls going over. We withdrew, and I think no program took place.

On the Day of Shame the students all paraded for three hours round town. They were quiet and orderly but as it was a hot day many were sick or overcome on the way by the heat. Our girls made flags and had a patriotic program here in the P.M. They told about the River Conservancy, material that Mr. West had given the week before at Anti Cob- a very instructive evening with reflected pictures. Two of the girls also gave a short play showing how they could buy patriotic made-in-China things of all sorts and just as good as those they got from Japan. The student organization ("arricy") [?] is kicking up a row on the boycott point, so that was important that day. Last Friday the student Assembly, a good organization talked all day passing resolutions finally that their government must guang the Tupin and give the students representation in the Assemblies of the country. Two of our girls went. Mr. Smith is very pessimistic about conditions and provinces. The three armies are on the way to Foochow from the South, no one knows if there will be fighting for Foochow may buy them off.

Last Wed. our mission prayer meeting was at the Newell's and was followed by a picnic supper. The people all seemed to have a good time, and the Legers were there for the last prayer meeting. They went yesterday. The Munsons, Charlotte Neely and Helen Carter sailed in April- all home now. Eunice and Mary Pike go in a month or so. Mary McClure, who made such a name for herself with the bandits in the North started from Ling hai yesterday and will be in Oberlin for commencement. You will all enjoy meeting her I know. She will look you up- she asked me if she might. I sent your address. I am trying to get some rattan furniture to go with my wooden things in my room but the man is too high. My two flowerwood book cases are already in use three weeks. Our Kuliang family is at last fixed. Aunt Mary, Cleora Wannamaker, Miss Waddell, Mrs. Bedient and her two little boys, and perhaps a Miss Cios of Peking. All plans aren't quite sure, but I am glad I know who is coming. I do hope, so does Father, that you and Kathleen will go east this summer or go to Cousin Addie's. It would do her worlds of good to have you there. I hope Dot and Monnie get the job at Thousand Islands. I am hoping to finish language study this summer. Best wishes to all, and very much love from Phebe.

Aunt Phebe sent me a lovely box of Nabiscos for a birthday gift, early. They tasted so good! Tell Dot to send her summer address soon!

Dear Home folk-

I am at Jean's, hence the hand writing. Fritz Kreisler's [Austrian born American violinist] concert was Saturday and 10 of us came up for that. Some went back by auto but others of us stayed up. He was grand!

Yesterday Jean was playing for the music at the christening of Joyenne Sweet and Robert Bancroft Reynolds and I too was invited. The babies were dear and gurgled delightedly when Mr. Earnest Shaw put the water on their heads. Afterward we took Marion and went to Central Park. We sat on a bench in a quiet corner while she ran about and picked flowers and watched the almost steady stream of passers-by.

We went to the Hotel du Mond [?] for dinner. I wish we had discovered it earlier, it is so nice and clean and reasonable in price. It is quite the thing to dine there quietly. One does not have to dress, as far as dinner at the other hotels.

On Friday last I went to a dinner in the Central Park Hotel where Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Caroline Porter were the guests of honor. Mrs. Porter was and is welfare ?? for foreign students at Tenchow College. About 30 of us T.C.ites were present. I stayed with Miss Knox.

My birthday was a ?? I had to return by the early train from the TC China [?]. Miss Olive and Mrs. Bonyer [?] came down and gave us a delightful concert. Mrs. Martin [?] and Mrs. Seib came too but did not perform.

We had tea at the school and Mrs. Gordon had made me a nice 3 layer birthday cake which was a real surprise as I had been too busy to think. Then Kreisler in the evening.

The note[or some type of cloth?] came a week ago and is still in my drawer and it is almost impossible to get a tailor. I have tried the two I had last Fall and Spring and now am trying for ?? ?? . I think I'll end by making my own dresses during the 3 weeks I am at school after the close. Many thanks everyone, it is just what I want and need.

I hope you all have a restful summer in spite of strawberries and[?] milk etc. We have had lettuce, radishes and peas from the garden but not strawberries yet.

Lots of lot to all

Mary

[This letter, dated June 5, 1923, was written from Tungchow, China by Mary to the home folks. A wedding was held that week. Their Warner Hall was dedicated. Commencement week was successful. She received word of her niece, Anna Gilbert Beard's death. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

June 5- 1923

Dear Home Folks-

We are having our first real hot spell. It began Sunday. Now it is 3.00 A.M. but too hot to sleep so I decided to write the neglected home letter.

Last week Wednesday was the Lane-?? Wedding and nine from Tungchow attended. Four of us returned by auto. The ceremony was in the big front court at Tung Fu. Dr. Smith led the bride to the altar. Dr. Wilder performed the ceremony. Rosamund Frame was flower girl and wore "my pink wedding dress". The reception was in the big court where the living room[?] is and the bridal party were in the living room. Anna Lane wore her mother's wedding gown made over and her mother's slipper.

That afternoon Mr. Keyto gave us an excellent talk at the Memorial Day exercises on "Dedication the same as Memorial."

This last week end was a memorable one for Tungchow. Lu He dedicated Warner Hall and we had our Baccalaureate Sermon at which Jean Hunter and Caroline Love were baptized. Mrs. Caroline Porter was down for the afternoon. Jean and Mr. Josselyn were also over for lunch and Dr. Wilder was down. Mrs. Porter and I walked along the moat, took a peek at the hospital and attended the last part of the dedication service. Then we had a regular Teacher's College tea, Miss P??, Dr. McCall, Mrs. Frame, Mrs. Boynton, Dr. and Mrs. Timothy L?, Alice Huggins (to attend T.C. next winter) and I. The first three stayed for our service and went back by auto. Dr. and Mrs. Warner were here, also the son. We had Dr. and Mrs. Warner for lunch Friday.

Phebe's letter came yesterday with Stanley's enclosed also the one to Miss Brewster. As to buying the expensive items. I should love to do it but my finances have not allowed it. If I could get advanced money I could do it. I saw some wonderful ?? matrix, ?? etc. for $35, $50, $60 up. They are here but I do not have ready cash to risk all on one big thing that I am not sure of a sale for. I will send a pretty pink tinted carved fish ?? which ought to sell for about $20.00. It is unique and well carved, strung on gold thread. If I can I will get the beads suggested in the letter. I fear it will be next fall though as I am planning to go to Foochow via Hongkong and cash is too low.

Today our boys and a lot of girls went to Peking for the third of the baseball games with the Peking American School boys. (The first was ?? 12-11 Peking; the second in Peking 13-12 Tungchow) The team was met at the train with a note saying that it was too hot and the parents would not let the boys play. Our team and would-be rooters were "sore". A half day wasted! I had gone to do all the last shopping so everyone else could attend the game.

I'll finish later for I am getting sleepy.

Wed A.M. It is nearing the end of the last examination period and I have been in charge. We have all of the Romig family here and the extra 4 are sleeping in the infirmary. The rooms are lovely guest rooms when hung with curtains and furnished.

Mrs. Martin had a gift of bedding and towels from Dr. Jefferson's church for the hospital or other institution if they did not need it. We received 12 sheets, 6 pillow cases and 12 towels. It fixes us well for caring for guests. Helen Harnett[?] went home last fall without calling for any of her things so her bedding is here too.

Mother's (May 2) letter followed Phebe's (May 7) on the next mail and yesterday (June 5) came Mother's written May 14. That told of Anna Gilbert's [Anna Gilbert Beard, born April 25, 1896, died November 5, 1922 of chronic pulmonary tuberculosis with a duration of 3 years] death.

We had a very successful and attractive commencement. The concert in the morning was excellent. I heard it from the dining room as I had to be down by the spring fixing lunch till too late to dress. Captain Fiskin (Genevieve ??'s brother-in-law) gave us over a dozen large asparagus ferns and ?? with the blue and yellow flowers we bought made the chapel most attractive.

We had a very small crowd but an enthusiastic one. Dr. L? Wektin's[?] theme was "You get out of life what you put into it". Both George and John did well. She read their essays as they had not finished them early enough to learn them. Miss Muir sang two solos. Mr. Romig in addressing the class congratulated the school and class but said that the real honor of this class belonged to Miss Beard who had helped the boys through the earlier years. There was instantaneous loud applause.

We had to dismiss He [Chinese name] a few weeks ago and I missed him on getting the children off. The new man knew so much more than I did that he called one less wheelbarrow each time etc. Consequently it was a hectic time sending servants in all directions for the neighbor's wheelbarrows at the last minute.

I am glad Elizabeth is better and hope all are well now.

With love

Mary.

We leave by boat for Foochow June 26th.

June 25, 1923.

Dear folks at Home,

Last week I forwarded to Willard Phebes [Phebe Maria] last letter, as well as the next to last. I expect you will not risk getting another to me here.

Miss Burgess and I have had a wonderfully cool time staying over. We moved at once to the big east sleeping porch and have had cool breezes every night. The days for a week have been very hot, but the earth is not yet so heated that it does not cool off at night. We sadly need rain. The corn is curling every where except in the fields next the moat. The grass that the gardener set out so hopefully two weeks ago is about half burned up. Two men are busy most of the time carrying water for the many flowers set out. If the picture I took this last week is good, it will show the walks and flower beds around the dormitory. I shall not get it till fall because it was taken for the new prospectus and will be left with Mr. Menzi.

I am off tomorrow morning for Tientsin and our steamer sails on Thursday. The other girls have never stopped off in Tientsin and are desirous of a day there. We take a Japanese line and do not change at Shanghai. Coming back we go to Hongkong and back to Shanghai and up by train. Laura wants to stop and see Tai Shan but I know I shall be too poor to think of seeing anything I ever saw before, over again.

I had already sent a lot of beads before I began to get word of the duty you were paying. I will send no more for a while. These last were mostly beads exclusively, so I hope duty free.

Mother I have mislaid the sample you sent so have not gotten the silk. I was in the Indian store one day and looked, but he had no browns at all. He will have some in later in the season, so I will make that one of my first errands.

Mrs. Stelle is taking the rug to Miss Bostwick for me. I sent it to Shanghai and have written the Evans to ask them to get it from the steamer for me. She stops at Evans but is going by train. Mrs. Fette gave me a lock for ten cents, that fits into the buckle and answers the purpose of securing it. But I suspect that there are a few hundred like it floating around.

Monday P.M. This morning Mr. Sun took Miss Burgess and me to see a Temple Fair not far from our East compound gate. It was the first day so the people were few, but the stalls of toys, food, clothes, baskets, pitch forks, scraps of silk, blown glass, ice cream, etc were all in readiness for tomorrow. I bought three little toys for Mr. Sun's children. The god [dog?] was dressed in green of a beautiful shade. It is the first I have seen which was in anything but red or yellow.

My trunk is packed all but one dress which the washerman has not returned yet. I found these few dark nets in cleaning out. They are too dark for me and besides I purchased 144 for $3.00 just lately, so am not in need. Please use them

I must stop and order a bath, take some things to the neighbors, and be ready for supper at 7.00. We had Chinese food at noon so I am not very hungry. I wish you could see the servants make the stuff that looks like flat sphagetti. 1 little piece a foot long will stretch to five or six feet, as they toss it about.

Lots of love
Mary B.

Dear Mary;

Tuesday 5 P.M. a thunder shower has been in progress for over an hour. I am writing by lamp light. It has been a hot day, but we had a nice breeze. Papa commenced haying, mowed yesterday and got in one load, before the rain came to day. The rain will do a lot of good. Flora got papa to go [to] the woods in April and get some laurel and put under the south west sitting room window at the end of the front porch. It was a rainy day and the laurel has lived, put-out new leaves and had one blossom. Our peonies have been beautiful but are about gone. We have a new man a Paul Clapp, from northern Vermont. Harry, the milk boy is leaving and a little boy takes his place. Ethel Bagby is here spends the night and Phebe takes her into her room. It is too bad, but one could not do better. We are having strawberries. Mrs. Wetmore who has been here eleven weeks was called home last week on account of her daughter's illness and I think does not intend to come back. I think perhaps we can get along as Elizabeth is better so she comes down on the porch each day. Dr. and Mrs. Phillips started with Mr. and Mrs. Wetherby for Wilkes Barre, Pa. Monday to be gone a week.

We had a Mr. Wilhelm preach Sunday as a candidate. He was much liked. I suppose you've been told that Dr. Phillips has resigned to take effect next October which completes eight years here. They celebrated (or their children did) their 50th wedding anniversary last Friday evening. The Church of the Redeemer gave them $600. and our church gave them $50.

Oliver and Grace were up Sunday night. A Mrs. Revere was with them. She has taken one of their rooms. Stanley thinks he may come up a week from Sunday. I suppose Gould and Kathleen is some where on the way. He was coming with his "auto". We hear Ellen is coming on to Putnam. Dorothy is to take charge of a company at Thousand Isles and choose seven or more helpers. Geraldine and Marjorie are to go with her. Daniel and a boy were here yesterday and to day picking cherries. Phebe says the cherries are very wormy. May God bless and keep you. I suppose you are planning to be with Willard this summer and I am wondering if I had better mail this to Foochow.

With love mother.

Dear Ones at Home-

This is the "Glorious Fourth", but we all three forgot it until I wrote up my Line a Day and noted the date. There are we three Americans (Cleora Wannamaker, Laura Cross and I) one Chinese, Mr. Lang and a Mr. Villas, either Spanish or Phillipino later I think, as 1st class passengers. We have a dock large enough so we can take 13 steps in pacing the length or breadth of it. In the middle of it is the Captain's room and the glass topped ventilator for the Saloon below. Our stateroom is a nice big one, 5 berths and 2 port holes. One bath room does for everybody with lavatories both Japanese and European style. When one wants a bath the tub is filled to within about 4 inches of the top so we can rediscover Archimedes great law when there is a splash all over the floor. At first I wondered why all bathers left their shoes outside the door, now I do not.

We are carrying bean cakes south. But tell Flora they were loaded with the cranes so we did not get that interesting succession of thuds as they went to the bottom of the hold. We were 2 ½ days at Dairen and only unloaded and loaded by day. Hence the nights were quiet though hot. To be sure we have a fan in our room but it is "gone broke". So is the victrola in the saloon.

At Dairen we went out to Hishakura one afternoon and to Port Arthur[?] one day. At the later there was little to be seen as one is not admitted to the forts nor anywhere one wants to go. There was a special excursion for the American sailors the day after we left. I wish we could have gone then as possibly they would really see things.

On July 1st we were standing on the deck gazing into the harbor when we saw a grey nose of a boat round the end of the wharf. 10 more followed and all flew the Stars and Stripes. It gave a thrill to see them there. (That was our Fourth Celebration, I guess.) We had noted that the city had "Welcome, Sakura Beer", "Welcome, American Restaurant", "Welcome Pool Room", "Welcome American Hotel", etc. everywhere and had commented on the cordiality of the place to keep such signs up. Of course we thought them there for the three distinguished American ladies who were through passengers on the Japanese steamer for Foochow!! We stop only at Shanghai then Foochow and are due the 8th. It makes a 9 day trip and we ought to be rested when we get there if naps morning and afternoon and bed at 9.00 P.M. will do it. Laura is staying below as she does not find even this small motion comfortable.

We were 2 ½ days in Tientsin at the McCann's because the steamer was "put up" a second time and we did not learn it till we reached Tientsin. It gave us a chance to visit ??ship and get soda, and coffee and sundaes a plenty. I have engaged Madame Yanagi to make my Canton crepe that I have ordered from Canton. It is the heavy weight and black. I shall have it a style suitable for dressy afternoon or informal evening. My gold dress is to be relegated to 2nd best where it belongs. The Vice Consul at Canton with his wife was at Jean's one week-end when I was and she is getting the crepe, one piece for Jean and one for Mrs. Menzi and me.

The N.C.A.S. is seeing great doings this summer. No 34 has all been papered and painted for the Menzi's next year to occupy the upper floors and Mr. Bealsy and the little boys the lower. The London Mission Home is having a big verandah put on for sleeping. Plumbers are to install the water system and the fire escape is to be added to the dormitory. Electric lights are to wait till the compound decides whether to go in with us and the money is borrowed for the new boy's porch at the L.W.S. home. Mr. Fenn is to be with Mr. Lund with the big boys.

We hear most delightful things of Mrs. Powell. She has been studying Chinese with a student from Tungchow in anticipation of her trip to the Orient. Hazel Bailey knows the daughter at Nanking and has met the mother. Her experience as Matron this last year was ideal as training for our work.

We have a rat on board. Cleora gave a horrified shriek one night when she saw him running and on the ledge just outside the ventilator which is around the top of our state room. Laura met him in the hall one day. Last evening we saw him playing in the life boat that is suspended ready for me. He came in on a rope, ran along the chain and jumped to the floor. Cleora and I jumped, as the typical woman should, when he started in the direction of our feet. We do not dare leave the stateroom door open at all for one day we did and he evidently got in, as we found traces in several places. I roll my kories [duffel bags] about to see if he has discovered my rug for Miss Bostwick or the grain for Willard yet. Those stand in the hall. Our port holes are outside over so I guess we are safe. Mr. Villas has a port hole over the front deck and two rats came in it one night.

July 5 The last two days both the other girls have lain low. Hence I made up to my fellow passengers and the two men with the Captain and I played quoits [a game similar to horseshoes]. The first day I won everything with high scores. Last night I lost most ingloriously in two games after supper.

We three ladies have one corner of the dining room to ourselves and are served "European food." The accompanying menu is a good sample. So far everything has been good and well cooked. The butter is strong but there is some very good jam so we seldom touch the butter. One other table is set and that is shared by the other two passengers and the officers. They have either Japanese or European food served. Evidently there are several other passengers who do not appear on deck for several trays are sent down each meal. None of us have seen any other evidence of the people. Yesterday a strange man appeared twice at the other table but he disappeared immediately after eating.

We are due in Shanghai about noon today and leave tonight. I leave Miss Bostwick's rug here for Mrs. Stelle to get as she comes through. Also I leave a book, "The Willing Home". It is one of those Miss Brewster sent and very good. I think Mrs. S and the boys will enjoy reading it. We three have penned it ?? Dairen with pleasure. Bergen was saying he did wish for me good books, ?? was nicer for a ?? gift.

My next letter will be from Foochow. I do hope the summer finds you all well and that you keep so. Probably I'll be coming your way next spring. Hurrah!

Lots of love

Mary.

Dear Mama,

Thank you so much for the ring. I'm sure I will like it, from your description. I have always wanted a ring set with my birthmonth stone. And now I really am to have it! Have you thought of Kathleen? She has never gotten her ring either. I have no fancy pins of my own, I am using that round circle friendship pin of Dot's all the time; and if you could get me perhaps a set of collar and cuff pins (one large and two small) and one or two odd ones. I will pay for them all.

Now, for all your questions. You told us to beware of the mail yacht. In the first place, I doubt whether it is a yacht or not. And we have not been in it yet. Then, it is not a sail boat. We have not seen one sail boat around here. And I think we have written that we have seen only one or two canoes here, only one on the water; because motor boats are too common; the waves from them would almost tip canoes over. Rowboats have to be careful.

Ans. 1. We have received all three boxes safely.

Ans. 2. I have not worn my silk skirt yet. I never know what we will finally do of an evening; perhaps go in a row boat or something and the row boats aren't so clean. I shall wear it tonight if we go over to the Bay in the motor boat.

3. I haven't done anything with my brown crepe dress yet. What ought I to do?

4. We have gotten a nice ironing board; made for us by the carpenters!

5. I guess I am doing almost as well as the other waitresses. You ought to have asked Dot about that. She is doing very well; satisfactorily, I think, to the boss, and certainly the same to us, from all I can see. And she isn't partial at all, as I can see (again!)

6. About my tip, I did mean that I felt foolish in the way that I did it, not because I did it. Every other one of my tips has been left beside the plate, so I never have a chance to thank them.

About our finances, I wrote you that I, and I think Jerry, am going to use our tips and save our earnings. Do you think we ought to send them to the bank? I mean, we will not draw our money, any of it, till the end of the summer. We could draw it and put it in the bank here until we go home. But I'd rather just let the management keep it until I want it.

I think I forgot to thank you for doing my skirt. I am very grateful to you for the trouble you took with it. We are going to the Bay at quarter to nine tonight so I shall wear it and be Oh! so careful of it. Lots of love
Marjorie

P.S. Please get away from Oberlin as soon as you can. We will enjoy our summer so much more with you in the east. And do go to Aunt Myra's if you have the chance. It will be good for both you and K.

Dear Mamma;-

I certainly would like a good Elgin watch- somewhat larger than my last one- and an odd shape if there is a pretty one. Use your judgment.

I'll send $10. right away. Have to pay my insurance policy, so can't send more.

I'd like the watch up here right away if you can get it. I would also like a pretty pocket-book if there are any not too expensive.

Mony's in a hurry so

Love,

Dot.

Kuliang #316

July 25, 1923

Dear Ones at Home-

We have been here two weeks and I realize that my last letter to you was mailed from Shanghai. The trip down was somewhat rough but the Seikyo Maru pitched instead of rolled hence a few of us graced the deck and dining room. We stayed on the steamer at Shanghai. The first night we went with some ladies at the Missionary Home whom we knew, to see Jackie Coogan in "Trouble". It was clever. But we missed the last car back to Yang Ste Poo and had to go down by rickshaw. The crew had taken advantage of our lateness and preempted the deck chairs. Hence we spent the remainder of the "morning" slapping mosquitoes and perspiring down in the cabin. The next night we stayed after supper and we preempted the chairs.

Every cabin filled up for Foochow. An English gentleman and his wife from Hongkong and a teacher at the Shanghai Municipal School were the only non-Oriental. Mr. Smith was a very poor sailor and the teacher an excellent one. I was highly amused to have the former say any one who really “enjoyed” such a “slight sea” “ought to be shot” while the teacher gentleman thought a man who was ill in such a “gentle sea” quite a “disgrace” to man hood.

We had to wait for 11.00 A.M. to 3.30 P.M. on the lea of an island because the head wind had delayed us too late for the 6.00 A.M. tide. Then when we were finally safely on the launch, we cruised around at the Anchorage over an hour to find a junk with cargo for our steamer. It was 9.00 when we docked and were hailed by Willard. We took sampans across the river and rickshaws to the city compound. Mr. St. Clair and Willard were keeping house with only the gardener for help. Mr. St. Clair had gotten a fine supper for us and we did justice to it in spite of the 5.00 o'clock supper on ship board.

We were up at 5.30 Tuesday morning to be off by 7.00. Our goods and some Willard was sending up made 15 loads. We took rickshaws across the plain and chairs up. There was a strike on and people for two weeks had had to walk. Willard said it was a pull that enabled him to get coolies because he is head of the “Council” and Chairman of the Coolie Committee.

Several of the business men who come up every week end have clubbed together to walk until the coolies come to terms. It means a great loss to the coolies for it is really the commuters who bring in the revenue for them.

One day I met Mrs. Cannon, whom Flora will remember lived next us at PeiTaiHo one summer. She has three children and Bobby is a big slender rather pale boy of seven. Mrs. Price is here all the time. Junior aged 4 months is a solace to his mother and a beautiful baby.

The American Board started Mission Meetings last week Tuesday. I went for the four mornings and enjoyed it. This week they are having executive sessions and visitors are not invited.

Phebe and I went to an “At Home” one morning from 10.30 -12.00. The same crowd had another set of guests for tea in the afternoon. The Toppings, N?ts, Hoyts and Miss Burr have had various groups for dinner. We have had guests twice for dinner, once for lunch and once for picnic.

We have plans for two or three functions a week so as to get in all whom we desire to see. We had a good time at the Mission Picnic Saturday evening but had to cut it short to go hear Dr. Goforth tell of his experiences with General Feng.

Last week one night Dr. Goforth arrived entirely unheralded with a letter inviting him to come for conference July 21-29. No one had any inkling of it but the Public Worship Committee have done well by him and he is having meetings every afternoon and evening. I went Sunday so did all the household but we have had other engagements ever since.

I have bought several embroidered garments, some silver, some lacquer and a few scrolls. Alas, the lacquer men have had a lot of new lacquer and it has been very interesting to see the colors of the fresh work. But I steer clear now for I have on my right wrist one of the worst patches of poison I ever had. It has run since Friday and is only just getting better today. I never saw such large blisters. But unlike the poison oak infection, it did not make me feel ill at all.

Everyone makes enquiry for Flora, especially the American Board people.

We got a big bunch of papers since I arrived but no letters yet. A boat was due yesterday and I hope it brought mail.

Thurs. A.M. Last night I christened my birthday ?? dress. I had a tailor here make that, also two Korean cloth dresses-, a yellow and a blue. The ?? is made like this with white organdy vest, collar and cuff. The occasion for dressing up was the entertaining of the Henry Lacys and the Smiths and Mr. Farley. I am going to the Smiths Monday evening to hear one of Helen's letters. She is a Junior this next year at Mount Holyoke.

Mother's letter came yesterday and I stopped writing to read it. Am so glad that Gould is to be on the farm to help Father and that Kathleen will be with Myra. Dorothy is quite a competent young waitress with full responsibility! It is nice that Ellen comes east for it would be lonesome with all the children gone.

The N.C.A.S. and Shanghai school children are making some money for the schools by getting up some tableaux for August 4th. They have not started their canvas yet, but will soon. They will charge 80 cent admission and actors too have to pay. It is to be in the Club House as they hope for ?? ?? a ?? for any private house.

Willard's home is the same as before except that the room built for Flora and now occupied by Willard has been made much smaller. It is just an octagon now. It was changed to allow more light into the kitchen.

I have my old job of 1915 and look over the fruit to be sure we get ripe fruit for breakfast. We had the first mangoes today. Lechies are most gone. Peaches and plums are good.

Phebe K, Willard and I entered for the tennis tournament but have been unable to practice at all. Now the time is so short, I fear I can not play at all.

The swimming tank has been closed since last Monday to get cleaned and mended. It needed it, for the mud was awful and there evidently was a leak as it never filled full.

For two days we have had a real typhoon wind and occasional dashes of rain. Phebe and I got up early and walked down the hill part way with Willard who was off for a day in the city.

I'll write again before we have to leave. That will be about August 12th as we return via Hongkong and Canton. We take a ?? boat which stops a day at Amoy, one at Swatow and lands us in Hongkong the fourth morning. Then we return to Shanghai 2nd class on one of the Emperor Boats and 2nd day by train to Peking.

There are a few things I want.

- (1) 1 pair corsets- La Camille- Lox-it
3912-8? Size 26

I bought them in Shelton.

- (2) 4 pair white cotton stockings size 10 (outsize) ribbed top preferred.

I am glad to hear of Elizabeth's recovery, but wish you could get help, so Phebe need not have her room and quiet interfered with.

I had thought surely to see her next June but with Flora staying it does not seem so important. A note for Mrs. Corbett yesterday suggests 1925 as for tentative contract when I come out. I'll talk it over with Will and Phebe and let you know what I reply to her.

Lots of love to every body.
Mary Beard

Phebe and Willard send love and will write next time. He is in Foochow today and Phebe has just returned from an all day job ?? trip. MLB

I believe this was taken the same day as the previous photo on Kuliang, Summer of 1923. The man with the white hair and dark suit appears to be Willard possibly talking to a lady who resembles Phebe K. Beard.

Because of similar markings on the back of this photo [WLB] that are similar to those on the previous photo, I believe this was taken on Kuliang the Summer of 1923. It is probably an outing by some of the missionary residents around the Kuliang area.

We three Beards have had a good summer- too short though. This morning he had a "coffee" with about 40 guests. It was great fun. We are in the midst of the tail of a typhoon so we thot the guests courageous to venture out.

We heard of Harding's death Sat. evening and it was announced after the tableaux given for the benefit of the N.C.A.S. and the S.A.S. They got about $65 for each school.

Lots of love Mary.

Aug. 11, 1923.

Dear Dr. Beard,

Because of your utter absence of conscience, you are completely discredited by both the citizens of Fukien and the students of Foochow College. Do you know what kind of a man is Dang Hou Iu whom you invite to be the teacher of mandarin of Foochow College? His character is so bad that we are ashamed to say about. But owing to your falling in darkness, we can not help telling you about him. He is "Lupus in fibula" so that you trust in him. He covets unlawful money by issuing many mandarin books to compel each of the students of Foochow College to buy a copy. Besides, in the daytime he enters the theaters; at night he accompanies the prostitutes. We investigate that he has not graduated in mandarin College of Peking. From this point of view, can he be the teacher of Foochow College? Except Foochow College, there is no position for him to get a living. We desire that if you do not expel him out of Foochow College we not only do not study in Foochow College but also announce this matter to public and even to American consul. The longer he teaches in Foochow College the poorer Foochow College will be. The earlier you expel him out of Foochow College the more fortunate Foochow College, the faculty, and the students will be.

Thanking you in advance.

Your obedient pupils.

Kuliang
August 13, 1923

Dear Home Folk-

Our baggage has departed for the plain and we are going after lunch. It has rained steadily for over a week. Some say we have had a series of typhoons and surely the wind was gusty enough to seem like it. But up to that time the weather was fine and we did all we planned.

We had hoped to go via Kushan today and may yet. The report is that the plain is flooded so we would best go the other way and avoid the plain. Willard ordered a sampan to meet us at the University if clear so we may go that way yet.

A week ago Saturday evening the pupils of the NCAS and of the S.A.S. [Shanghai American School] gave a series of Classical tableaux. Mrs. Hoyt coached them and was in charge. Everything went like clock work and the girls were charming in their costumes and ???. They charged 8 dimes and 4 dimes admission and cleared about $157.00. The children are dividing it evenly between the two schools. They (the children) are wondering just what to ask it to be used for.

Last Thursday morning we gave a big "coffee", about 50 invited. Nearly 30 came in spite of the fact that it rained and blew all the time. Among them Flora will know and who wished to be remembered were-

Mrs. Gowdy (Mr. G. had gone down.)

Mr. and Mrs. Sites (Evelyn ??)

Mr. and Mrs. Ford

Mrs. Cannon

Mrs. Kellogg

Mr. and Mrs. Eyestone

Dr. and Mrs. Trumble[?]

Others who send regards are

Mr. and Mrs. Price

Mr. and Mrs. Beech

Laura Ward

Mrs. Peters

Gillettes, Newells, Smiths, St. Clairs,

Miss Perkins

Miss Funk Mrs. Lambert

Perhaps these are not all, but all I can recall now.

Willard, Phebe, and Miss Hazel Atwood are going down with us and we are taking the cook and a boy so we will not have to keep home too hard after seeing the city.

Our steamer sails Thursday morning. We will have Friday in Amoy and a Mr. Day who was on the mountain will meet us and see that we do the city. A nurse from Swatow is going with us and will be partial pilot in that city. In Hongkong we stay with the ??? was Miss Winchester (sister of Mrs. Moore Gordon) and Miss Tow a fellow traveler coming out two years ago is to look after us in Canton. We ought to see the lions do not you think?

Fortunate for me, I have been commissioned to buy Canton ??? for others. I know otherwise I could hardly get away by spending as little as I have.

Willard has been very busy this summer and it seems that I have hardly seen him. He had to go to the city twice on business and again to speak at the special memorial service lat Friday. There is a residence meeting every Monday morning for about three hours. A coolie strike just before we arrived took much time to settle but it got settled amicably at last. Mission meeting lasted one week and was all day the last two days. Also he has had long conferences with several men of the mission, the head coolie, the landlord etc.

This last week was a big social whorl. We ate at home alone one night, Sunday; for two lunches and five breakfasts. Besides these I was out for a Holyoke 10.00 o'clock coffee; we had our big coffee and were all out for one tea. The cantata, Ruth, was rendered on Friday evening for the Chinese and on Saturday for the English speaking community. Willard and Phebe both were singing in it.

It is nearly lunch time so I must close and wash up. Lots of love

Mary Beard.

Several weeks ago I ordered some construction paper to be sent to me from Chicago and the bill to you. I will need the bill as it must be paid by the school. I hope my duplicate is in Tungchow when I get there as I want to use it for some school things I am getting cut.

Mrs. Corbett wrote me about renewing my contract again. Mrs. C?? is coming out again probably as a life project. Do you feel I too could really pledge myself for an indefinite contract? My chief difficulty is that I feel it is a small salary in which to lay up a nest egg; also that I want to do my share in the care of my home folk if my services can be used.

Lots of love
Mary.

[This letter, dated Aug. 14, 1923, was written from Shelton, Connecticut by Phebe Maria Beard to Mary. She writes Mary to inform her of their mother's diagnosis of terminal cancer. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Shelton, Conn.
Aug. 14, 1923.

Dear Mary,

We wrote you that Mother had been ill. She seemed to have some form of indigestion and for the past week she has been living on farina and milk and has been very comfortable but there is still that lump in her right side. We had Dr. Fleck of B-port come up one day and examine her and he advised an operation but we did not want that without further advice so we waited until Stanley came up Sunday knowing that he would know who further to go to. Ben had said that he wished that she would go in to the New Haven General Hospital and stay there for observation. When I told Stanley that he liked it too and said that Dr. Harvey, the head surgeon there was a classmate of his and about the only man in the class that he had ever cared to keep in touch with. So he called him up and Dr. Harvey asked Stanley to come in to lunch with him Sat. and talk the case over. As a result of that we took Mother in to the hospital Sunday (yesterday) afternoon and Dr. Harvey said if we came in about 11 this morning he might be able to tell something. So Myra came up to stay with Elizabeth and Stanley and I went in but the Xray plates would not be ready to read for some time and they still had more to take so we do not yet know what is before us. Miss Miles, the trained nurse that we have had for a week, is with mother days and the nurse in that ward takes care of her nights. She is in a private room and is as comfortable as castor oil and bismuth meals allows her to be. Dr. Harvey has had another doctor examine her and she says that they have taken her pedigree from away back. He also says that he does not want to operate unless he is pretty sure that the operation will be a benefit.

Tuesday. Ben went in to see Mother today and they are still taking Xrays. She is not having much of anything to eat meanwhile and is as comfortable as they can make her.

Wed. Oliver, Abbie, Edith and I saw Mother this afternoon. She was very tired, but they are thru with the Xrays. I saw Dr. Harvey for a minute and says that mother's trouble is very serious. The growth is of a cancerous nature and he has asked Stanley to come up tomorrow and he will talk over the best thing to do. Mother seemed relieved to have that Xray business over with. Grace is in Plainfield so Oliver is with us nights.

Thursday. Stanley, Myra, Nancy and Stephen came up this morning and Myra stayed with Eliz. while Stanley and I went in to New Haven. The bunch as shown by the plates is about where the small and large intestine join. Dr. Harvey does not advise an operation on account of Mother's age and because he cannot learn by all their examination just how extensive the trouble is. He says even if they tried Xray treatment he would not dare do it unless he operated first and cut the intestine and joined it again so as to make a free passage about the bunch for the Xray treatment would be likely to cause swelling enough to shut the passage as things are now. He feels that mother's life will be nearly as long as things are as it would be if the operation were successful and alter her ??- heart, kidneys etc. are in fine condition the risk is very great. He thinks that the bunch has been growing for the best part of 6 months possibly and then I asked him if it would be a quickly growing trouble from now on, he answered that in his judgment we could hope to keep mother only four or five months. She knows that there is serious trouble but we do not want to say the word cancer for that has always been a humble word-especially to her. Mother has always surprised us by keeping her strength and health and I am hoping and praying that God will spare her in as much longer than the doctors think if she can be comfortable. It will take her some days to get over the strain of the hospital treatment. She is living on farina and milk. They tell her she can eat some other things but every time she tries to she comes to grief so she has given up every thing else for a time anyway. Her stools are quite bloody much of the time and she has a good deal of gas. (Sunday) Yesterday she was uncomfortable much of the day but two good movements in the afternoon made her comfortable and she slept well and seems quite herself today. She has her dress on and sits in a chair in her room some.

Flora is at Oliver's over Sunday on her way home from her six weeks at Columbia. I shall be glad to have her here. This anxiety about Mother is telling on Elizabeth. She is feeling some better now, but she ought to get away from the cold weather, but I know that she will not and I cannot blame her for not wanting to leave mother. We are going to keep the trained nurse for the present and probably right along. Father is keeping Gould all his vacation, too, for which I am glad for Father's urinal trouble is slowly increasing and he does not feel much ambition. He has been to town twice this week with a load of apples but he gets very tired. We try to have him take Gould or Paul but he can't seem to want to. I think that he is going to sell the north mile[? Route?] to the Polanders and we do hope that he will. We are having cold fall weather and a very dry summer.

We are anxious to hear all about your stay with Phebe and Will and how you got back to Tungchow. We do not like many of the reports from China these days.

With lots of love and many prayers that God will help you as he is helping us in these hard days-
Phebe M. Beard.

Dear Home Folks,

I wrote last the day we left Kuliang. We were off at 1.30 in bloomers and middies for KuShan- 9 of us- we three; Willard, Phebe and Hazel Atwood, and three girls who were to return to Kuliang. It had rained for days and was still cloudy. Hence it was a delightful walk and that long hill, which Flora will have painful memory of, was climbed without any trouble. After seeing the monastery we six took the path down to the Fukien Christian University and arrived at Mr. Kellogg's about 6.30.

The silk worms had started to spin just that morning so we saw the racks of cocoons. From there we took the University sampan up river to Foochow. Willard had engaged a man to come down after us but he was evidently afraid we would not come because of the doubtful weather. We had had coffee, brown bread and crullers at the monastery. On the sampan we had cinnamon rolls, potato chips, and fruit. It was 9.00 when we landed and we had to walk considerable distance for rickshaws. We went in to Wilkinsen's, sat around a table on stools and drank lemonade! Does not that sound modern!!! When we changed rickshaw, Willard's bag got left so when we had gone a little distance he returned. It had not yet been found when we left altho he offered $20.00 and no questions asked. In it were his watch, keys, a little money, two of Phebe's dresses and a few other things of lesser value. The first two items are the most important.

The cook and boy had accompanied the baggage so we had a hot dinner when we got in about 11.00. On Tuesday we were up late and had 9.30 breakfast. We took rickshaws over South side and visited all the educational institutions, bought some star gongs, and back in the afternoon. The morning was spent seeing Willard's College grounds, the kindergarten and rest of city compound except hospitals.

On Wednesday we spent the early hours on South Street buying salt cellars and lacquer and visiting the We Shan School where Phebe teaches. We had to go back later after going over the new woman's hospital with Hazel, to buy parasols. That night we packed up and tried to get to bed early but it was after 11.00. We were up early Thursday to catch the 8.00 launch for our boat. Willard and Phebe went down with us. We had just time to take a sampan and hasty walk through Dr. Gillette's hospital and home at the Anchorage. The home is beautiful, all paneled in flower wood. The hospital reminds me of Dr. Love's in size, orderliness and cleanliness.

It was rough getting to Amoy, but being mostly at night we slept. When I arose Thursday morning I found out my arms had itched so in the night. From elbow to wrist they were fiery red-first stage of lacquer poisoning. Hence I had made my last purchases of soda, zinc ointment, absorbent cotton, bandages, and wore stylish long gloves. It meant dressing both arms and hands about every three hours night and day and the process took from ½ to a whole hour. When it spread to my hands, the girls had to do my hair, wash my face etc. Cleora even gave me a tub bath one day.

At Amoy a Dr. Day-Dutch Reform met us and took us by sampan to the University grounds. Back of them is a beautiful setting of rocks, trees, etc. and a temple undergoing extensive repairs. It was cloudy so we were able to get around. We also visited the mission hospital. (The doctor said my treatment of the poison was good. It would run its course in spite of anything. Keep it as comfortable as I could!) Then we walked the length of the island which is very foreign and lunched at the Day's. They have four fine children. We were sailing at 4.00 so Mr. Day took us out to the boat at 3.30. We started nobly, turned around and stayed 24 hours. A Typhoon was en route and due at best reckoning at Swatow the next morning at 7.00. We were due there also so put off our arrival. (That typhoon doubled back on itself and hit Hongkong.) That brought us into Swatow Sunday so we had to wait till Monday afternoon to get our clearance papers. The captain kindly waited till 6.00 instead of going out at noon as he could because he knew it was a rough sea and only a night run. At Swatow we bought a little linen and walked the length of the city. An English lady was with us and was most indignant when to her question about how to get back to the boat, the salesman replied, "There is only one street in Swatow, take that."

Sat. A.M. We had a rough passage to Hongkong but arrived safely about 10.30. Mrs. Menler (Margaret Winchester, sister of Mrs. Moore Gordon) met us and we saw the sights of the city. The typhoon had caused landslides on the famous 57 mile drive around the island so we could not take that; also it had spoiled the short drive. It rained so we contented ourselves with the city. Moreover, much time was consumed in getting our tickets from Cooks. Every berth was taken on the Canton night boats, both British and Chinese. We were told that probably we could get cots in the saloon if we would go to the boat and see about it. We went, got the passage and were told not to stay long on shore as the "Fat Shau" was to pull out early. She was scheduled for 10.00 P.M. but the third typhoon signal had been hoisted and we were to run away. We left at 6.00 and had a private boat except for 1 Chinese. A foreign man came racing aboard about ten minutes before we left and departed with a string of coolies carrying bags. A fat darkie on the dock remarked in scornful loud tones, "Fool Missionary! Fraid of typhoon! Been running off and on all day and now he runs away! Ha! Ha! Ha!" The Chief officer turned to us and said, "I hope you are not Missionaries." I replied, "We surely are, but not 'fool ones'!"

We successfully ran away from the typhoon and had a wonderfully calm trip. At Canton we had breakfast on the boat then followed Helen Tow's directions. Those were, "take rickshaws to the West Gate then change to chairs. It will not be necessary to direct the chair men as all foreigners go to one spot from there. Helen had given us up as we had expected to arrive on Monday but was glad to see us. We bought ivory, feather fans, silk and visited the Canton Christian University. Then we went out to the Hackett Medical College for dinner. At noon we stopped down town and had native food at Sinceres[?]. It was excellent. We returned to Helen's in a row boat and were about an hour on the way. It was also nearly an hours ride in a sampan to the College which is on an island. I wanted to get to see Mrs. Bucksnell, wife of the Consul but could not as that was an hour away in another direction and the day was too short. We reclined on the Thursday morning boat and it was a lovely trip. Our party is enlarged as Miss Elmer [Elmore] has joined us. She is going to Peking since she has found travelling companions. Her sister, Mrs. Nelson, knew Willard in Oberlin. The Nelsons are ex-A.B.C.F.M. missionaries. They are in the new American-Chinese School since the Board has closed its Canton work- so is Helen Tow.

Mrs. Menler met us again at Hongkong and took us to the cable road for the trip up the Peak. It was a glorious day and we took our time and enjoyed the views to the full. After early dinner (7.30 instead of 8.00 or 8.30) we went across by ferry and got aboard the S.S. Empress of Australia and searched out cabin 503. The view of the city with all the lights on was splendid from the deck. We missed the long coronet of the foreign peak because the storm had felled many of the poles. Being second class we took our opportunity to run freely over first class and visited everything.

At dinner we had fruit last and our fingers were sticky so we asked for finger bowls. "No get finger bowls, second class", says the Boy. For fellow passengers we have a woman taking her two girls up to school, a regular vamp, an English lady with a keen sense of humor, a flirtatious Englishman, an American who is travelling to recuperate from an illness and several Chinese and a few of other nationalities. I played Bridge with Laura and two others for awhile last evening. T'was a friendly game and we were free to chat so I enjoyed it greatly.

Today is hot. We find the best breeze and lie still. Tomorrow we reach Shanghai and will leave for the north Monday or Tuesday. Next Saturday night, I hope to be in Tungchow. I do hope to find some mail. We had one home letter, Mothers, on Kuliang but I got one almost the last thing before leaving Tungchow.

Laura lost her handkerchief over the rail this morning. When we went to breakfast we saw it hanging to one of the window catches.

Afternoon- We have just had a band concert in the dining room while we drank tea. It happens twice a week to second class passengers.

This was a fine summer. Really I feel refreshed in spite of our gay life. So much has happened that one was kept busy thinking of something beside work. Last summer was no real vacation with a trunk tray full of work for the five weeks at the shore. I appreciate Will's view of his summer with us.

We four girls had jolly laughs. Flora can tell you what fun Cleora Wannamaker is. We were all in holiday mood so kept each other in gales of laughter.

We went and took a look at the swimming tank- wonderful green tile built in. Some of the people went swimming yesterday morning and used the suits there. When the Chief officer came for his swim- behold his suit was already in the tank. The fun flew!!

I am mailing this on the steamer and wonder how soon you will get it. It leaves Shanghai August 27th.

Lots of love,
Mary.

[This letter, dated Aug. 30, 1923, was written from Kuliang, Foochow, China by Phebe K. to her Aunt Mary. Phebe talks about life on Kuliang since Mary left to go back to Tungchow. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Wen Shan Girls School

Kuliang,
Aug. 30, 1923.

Dear Aunt Mary,

Your cards from the stops along your way, indicated that you made your schedule almost as you planned. I hope you had time enough to really see Canton. How fortunate that you escaped the typhoon! And that the Australia escaped being run into! We were glad to hear that your arms are almost well, or were in Canton.

About the beads you are going to get for Geraldine. We think you had best send them direct to her at Oberlin (just Oberlin, O. will get her!) and she can use them or divide them as she thinks wisest. I forgot to send or give you a check for the beads, so I will enclose it here. You said some chains were over a dollar, so I'll send $12 instead of $10.

A few days ago Mrs. Hoyt came over to see if there was any way to get Bobby up to Peking later than this next Friday. The Wests got panicky over rumors that trains were dangerous because of bandits and are sending Jack and Margaret to Tientsin by steamer this next Friday. We see Bobby out back of the typhoon wall occasionally and he apparently is getting on nicely.

Mrs. Goertz is still waiting tho she has been at the hospital three weeks.

The mountain is fast getting depopulated. Every day people are going down. Already the Leger house and the Peters house is empty and the Thorts and Armstrongs go soon. Miss Waddell leaves Saturday, and we all go on Sept. 10. And these days just coming are the best of the season for weather!

Last Tuesday morning I went with six other ladies toward the tea gardens for breakfast. It is a pretty walk and we started at 6:30 so the sun didn't reach us till after 8 A.M. At that time we were perched on a big rock near a stream eating the last of our breakfast. We were almost thru wading in the brook when one lady sat down splash into a shallow pool, and brought so much of the bottom with her, that she had to take her skirt off and wash it out before going onto the tea gardens. Three of us came back to Kuliang, and had a bit of excitement of our own when Miss Cooper stepped into a paddy field and then trying to get out wiped the path clear, and rolled down the bank on the other side coming up sitting, with the most disgusted expression possible on her face. When she got over her daze, we all laughed till we ached.

Tuesday night we went to the Topping's for supper with the Henry Lacys. The moon was perfect in the evening, so we didn't need a lantern.

Little Henry had some fun with Mr. Topping's horse that cost him a ride. He chased it Sunday till he ran away and lost his rein. The Toppings got him O.K., but Father Henry said, no more rides this summer. Last Tuesday P.M. was the time that the children at the Tuesday meetings ride the horse, and poor little Henry couldn't. He tried riding a calf just before service, too, and the calf nearly lay down on the ground and let the boys sit on him all they wished.

The meetings of Bishop Potts[?] have been very good and all sessions crowded. He has been very well liked and such a treat to us all. We had him here for lunch one day. He probably left for Foochow today.

Hope this reaches you in time to get the bundle off before school.

Much love from
Phebe K.

[According to her death record, Nancy Maria Nichols Beard died September 3, 1923 of Carcinoma of Caecum and was buried in the Long Hill Cemetery.]

[The following news articles are in the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Mrs. O.G. Beard Died Last Night

Mother of Mayor Bennett N. Beard Was Born Here in 1843.

Always lived in Community Which She Loved- Married to Oliver Gould Beard in 1864- Two Sons [correction- Son and a Daughter] in China- Another is Director of Laboratory

The silent passing of a life that has spanned nearly three generations is watched by all with deep felt respect and sincere regard for the labors it has lived through that posterity may live in a bettered world. The family of Mrs. O.G. Beard, who passed away last night, feel this to be an appropriate time to express briefly to the community in which she so beautifully lived, their heartfelt gratitude for their devoted mother.

Nancy Maria, oldest daughter of Phebe Ann and Nathan Bennett Nichols, was born on White Hills, January 30, 1843. Of the five children, a brother, Town Assessor D.A. Nichols, survives her, still living on the old homestead.

Was a Teacher

Always a student her early education was obtained in the district school and supplemented later by several terms at the select school held in Huntington Center. After a few years of successful teaching she was married to Oliver Gould Beard, of Long Hill avenue on January 20, 1864. They began life in the old Beard homestead where they have lived together for nearly 60 years. Eleven children were born to them and during that time they have rounded out a life of usefulness and high standing such as has not been enjoyed by many families of the community. In the education of her children she was always a sympathetic adviser and from her they received inspiration to conquer their problems.

Ten children lived to reach maturity and eight of them survive her. Two are in China, Dr. Willard L. Beard, her eldest son, is president of Foochow College, Foochow, China, and Miss Mary Louise Beard is a member of the high school faculty of the North China American School (for American children) near Peking, which was organized by the Misses Flora and Mary Louise Beard.

The children living in this country are Oliver Gould Beard, Jr., of Bridgeport, Mayor Bennett N. Beard, of Shelton, the Misses Flora, Phebe Maria, and Elizabeth Beard at home and Stanley Drew Beard, director of the Lederle antitoxin laboratory of Pearl River, New York.

Her deeply religious nature led her, after the cares of bringing up her children were over, to world wide philanthropic interests-temperance and missions particularly. In her early married years she joined the Huntington Congregational Church and later transferred her membership to the Shelton Congregational church. She had been president of the Foreign Mission society, of that church, since 1903. Her connection with the Woman's Christian Temperance union, of this city, as its president, also extended over a long period of years.

She Loved Children

As mother of a large family she was unusually fond of children and her quiet nature won their complete confidence. Those who knew her even casually will always remember her cordial approach yet dignified bearing. Among her family and intimate friends she was a counselor, in distress her presence encouraging and in joy or grief her heart tenderly sympathetic. Her staunch Christian faith and fortitude has been a rock of support and comfort during her long period of life and she passed away as she had lived, confident in the faith which had been hers to enjoy and to hand on to those who knew her best.

Mrs. Oliver G. Beard

High on a hill of far vision, is one of the fine old farm houses of Connecticut. Oliver Gould Beard and his wife Nancy Maria, almost six decades ago, set up their consecrated home. In the wondrously blessed years since then influences have gone forth from that home which connect the hills of Huntington inseparably with the far antipodes, and make from the faithful lives of that father and mother a golden chain of good which encircled the world. The chain is not broken just because Mother has gone on to the higher hills of Paradise.

Of the eleven sons and daughters born in that home, eight of them now living, two are half a world away imparting to the people of "a land that sees light" the vision of God they got from that mother on the Huntington hills. One is conducting a work of incomparable value for the saving and prolonging of human life in one of our American scientific centers. Two are conducting faithfully the necessary business of a workaday world in two of our important Connecticut cities, one of them as the chief executive of his municipality. The others are maintaining in the old home those traditions which the mother emphasized, which made it great and will make its influence everlasting.

To have been in that home, to have experienced there the fine hospitality of that courtly father and that queenly mother, to have shared even a little of a fine companionship of those brothers and sisters, is an experience never to be forgotten. So, while those who have had it and the others who know extend their sympathy to those who love and are bereaved, they mingle it with felicitations on the memory of such a mother.

Services Held for Long-Time Resident

Many Friends Pay Last Tribute to Memory of Mrs. Nancy Maria Beard

Final tributes of respect were paid to the memory of the late Mrs. Nancy Maria Beard, wife of Oliver G. Beard, of Long Hill avenue, who died Monday morning at the home in this city, at the funeral service held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The large home was filled with the sorrowing relatives and friends, who came to pay their silent tribute to her memory and the many floral tributes which filled the rooms attested the high respect and esteem in which she was held.

In view of the years of service spent in the work of the Shelton Congregational church three ministers, Rev. Luther M. Keneston, the first pastor of the local church, Dr. William M. Lathrop, his successor, and the present pastor, Dr. Watson L. Phillips, officiated at the service. Dr. Phillips read the scripture lesson, Rev. Luther M. Keneston gave the eulogy, and those present at the service commented on the fitness and continence of his remarks for such a solemn occasion. Dr. Lathrop rendered prayer and at the conclusion the long line of the funeral procession was formed and the remains were borne to their last resting place beside the relatives and members of the family who had preceded her. Interment was in the family plot in Long Hill cemetery. The bearers were three sons, Oliver W. Beard, Mayor Bennett N. Beard and Stanley Beard and a grandson, Gould Beard, son of Dr. Willard Beard, of China. The funeral arrangements were in charge of C.E. Lewis & Son.

Sept 7, 1923
Shelton, Conn

Dear Mary,

Unless the mails have been uncertain from the conditions in China, our letters will have told you of Mother's failing strength- and now she has gone to be with Ruth and James- it was all so sudden at the last that even tho we were steeling ourselves for the parting we are stunned by it. She was as usual at four o'clock Monday afternoon and at three minutes after ten she was gone. We had hoped that she would be comfortable and could stay with us at least the months that the doctor thought possible, but she has gradually lost ground from the time of her first attack of pain two months ago. Since her return from the hospital she has not had those severe attacks of pain but has been just sick and uncomfortable but so patient and uncomplaining through it all. She has never spoken of her condition hardly and has been interested in all the news that we brought to her. We knew that she knew that she was seriously ill and she was willing to meet whatever was to be. The afternoon of the day that she went to rest I took care of her for two hours while the nurse took a nap. At four o'clock when I took her her malted milk she raised herself up in bed by taking hold of the top of Father's bed. She had a good deal of strength left and would not let us prop her up with pillows. She said that she had not sat up that day so she would sit up in bed. She took her saucer and found the milk with it and blew it to cool it a little. I said "Let me put a little cold water in it". "Oh no, I like it this way", she said. Then she had to wait 15 minutes to take a pill with a cup of hot water so I sat on the bed with my arm around her and we talked until the 15 min. was over and then she said she guessed that she would lie down again. She seemed as well as she had been all day and when she lay down again she dozed off for a little and about five o'clock she began to feel the nausea that has troubled her more or less for the last month. It came on more violently just as the nurse came down and she injected the codine as she had done and it did not entirely stop it and then came a sudden change. Weakness and nausea caused a sort of chill and then could not get any warmth again- with but water and blankets. She was conscious almost at the last minute but not able to speak always. Father held her hand and asked her to press his and she did. Ben and Wells- and Oliver and Grace got here about 8 o'clock and as Stanley had only left her at noon we thot that it would be better for him to call him in the morning and he came up here just after lunch and stayed over Thursday when we laid her to rest. Myra came up for Thursday and Ellen came with Emma and Elbert and they all stayed over night. Ellen is here for a week and it is so lovely to have her here. Oliver and Grace will come thru for several days every week. We have not looked over mother's ?? yet and do not know if she left any written messages.

I know just how you long to have been here but guess will be a blessed memory of the dearest mother that ever lived just as she always was here in our home.

I am trying to get a letter to Will and I'll write you very soon again.

With love unbounded and a prayer that God will bless you even as he sends this grief. I am ever your loving sister- Phebe M. Beard

N.C.A.S. & Tungchow, Chihli
September 9, 1923.

Dear Home folks,

My last letter was mailed on the Empress of Australia. It was to make a record trip, but last I heard the Australia was lying in harbor at Yokohama waiting for a diver to find out how seriously her propeller was injured by the tidal wave.

We have gotten very little news from Japan yet. The papers print whole columns when ten lines could tell all they know. We were relieved on Friday to get a telegram from Mr. Breakey that he was safely in Shanghai. And today word came from Mrs. Wilder that she has arrived. The Canada came through after the Earthquake, and brought about 1500 refugees according to reports. Miss Smith, of the Tientsin school was in Yokohama to meet her sister and just got out. The Chinese are getting up relief funds for the Chinese who are suffering. The foreigners are doing the same for their fellow countrymen, but not exclusive of the Japanese. But you will have had all this and more in the home papers.

At Shanghai we arrived at Wu Sung at 1.30 but it was 3.00 before we got off on the launch. Then the engine stopped and so it was 5.30 when we reached the jetty. Miss Bosworth and Carlton Lacy were there to meet us. They had seen the Missionary Home man and he was to take our baggage but they would look after us. It was nice to go to a private home not one with a capital letter. Mrs. Lacy was running a regular hotel dining room for all the men who were back ahead of their wives.

We took time to remove our hats only and hurried to the roof to watch the eclipse of the moon. At the same time we watched a dragon parade on the nearest street. The dragon was about 50 feet long. There was one group of men carrying banners on poles some 20 or more feet high. A chair hung with lanterns was another noteworthy feature in the procession.

Monday morning we went down with the car at 8.30 and stayed all day. At the Miss. Home I found four fat letters from Will and Phebe. They had found home letters from Shelton, Putnam, Oberlin, Pearl River all waiting when they returned from seeing us off. I was acting as guide for Cleora for her shopping, so I took the moments when she was looking at goods to read my letters. I was most through when it got to be lunch time. We had lunch at the new Army Y.M.C.A. lunch room. It was a dandy lunch for only 80 cents. The rooms were full of British men from the ships in harbor. They get a 5 days leave and Mrs. Brown says every bed is kept full for they come and engage a bed for the full time. Our American men get only one day at a time so can not avail themselves of the sleeping accommodations. They are trying to make it an American center, and are meeting with surprising success.

Monday afternoon, Cleora and I called on Peggy Carlyle Pond and on Mrs. Raven. Both are near the Lacy's. We called up Mrs. MacLachlin, but she was out. She came over when she returned and I am sure was most disappointed to find out it was I not Flora. Miss B. had said Miss Beard only and Helen had not asked for particulars.

Our trip up was uneventful. Dr. Edwards, sister of the Dr. Edwards who lived next door to the Lowry's at Pei Tai Ho was in the next compartment. A mite of a woman with fiery red hair unstreaked with gray, was a neighbor also.

I stopped in Tientsin at the McCann's for two nights. I just missed Robert and his bride by two days. The family seem much pleased with her. Her pictures show her a fine looking girl, though not especially pretty.

On Saturday noon I got here. Mr. Menzi and Miss Burgess were down to meet me. Margaret was here also. The Martins had returned, a bit earlier than they intended because the cyclone had removed the roof of their house and demolished things badly. Jean Josselyn was quite badly injured by the chimney falling on her. She says she is all right now, except for a little stiffness. Mrs. Martin showed some pictures of their house, the Dilly house, the Krause one, the Methodist ladies, one and the Gleystein one. They surely were wrecks.

On Tuesday morning I went to Peking to purchase some of the beads for which I had been given money. Cleora, and Miss Elmore (of Canton) and I spent nearly $100.00 between us. I have most of mine wrapped ready to mail. The Foochow people financed us on local funds and we have to spend the equivalent sums on beads for them. No exchange!

We have 80 children enrolled, still a large percent of boys over girls. The new porch will not be ready for occupancy the first few nights, so the boys will have to use their tents. The plumbing is only just started, so we must get along any old way for two or three weeks. We are having to take a big corner out of the chapel for dining room. It will make a horrid angular chapel, but we must eat!

Flora, if you are not returning, have you any directions for disposing of the things you left? The ones of value as I remember are, Mosquito curtain, pillow, coat hangers (Miss Burgess would like to purchase these, and I have loaned them against hearing from you), hats, cot bed and pad, bed pad, blankets. There may be others but I do not recall them. The blankets I used for guest room blankets as being better for them than storing.

Phebes last letter says that Flora was to attend Columbia this last summer and go back to South Orange. It sounds interesting.

I hope that my duplicator got ordered before all the sickness. It will save us hours of labor. With the increased numbers, programmes examination papers etc. will be more formidable.

It is 9.30 and Elizabeth and I are off on the early train so I must get to bed. We re reading aloud "By An Unknown Disciple". It is very readable. "The Conquest of Fear" is another book I am reading. Today came "Rich Relatives" from Miss Brewster. It is just in time for I have finished the last of those I had this Summer. I read much en route but not much on the mountain. We had too much visiting to do. It was a good summer. I feel mentally refreshed, altho it was physically tiring to get back the way we came.

I hope for a letter by these last steamers, and that the health of you all is better.

Lots of love

Mary-

Dear Home Folk,

Phebe's letter of July 27 is the last to have arrived. I am answering all the items so I may send it on to Will and Phebe K. They have sent me the Oberlin, Putnam and Thousand Island letters, so I feel quite up to date.

I am glad you took out the other bank account for me. I have lost track of how much there is in the Savings bank, but it is well to distribute ones valuables, even if they are few. Phebe, I was looking over back letters and you said you sold the fur coat. That was yours so the $20 should have gone to your account not mine. I am glad you did sell it, for it would have been liable to deteriorate. I enclose the identification card, filled out. Thanks, for all the trouble.

You were quite right to make a reduction on the luncheon set for Myra. I am glad she has it. I found two chains recently that were too attractive to resist, in spite of my straightened circumstances. So I got them and they are on their way to you.

Opaque blue and jade @ $5.00

Pink bone @ 2.00

2 white bone pendants @ 50 cents each.

I could get pendants with cords all made for very little more if people like them. Let me know and I will plan to bring some with me.

Mrs. Powell arrived on Wednesday evening. I like her so far, and feel that she is a person who will wear. She brought messages from Leolyn and pictures of both Leolyns and the four children. They are very good. You may have them also. William wants me to order more rugs for him, and I shall as soon as I get into money to go on. I never was down so low. Perhaps my accounts of my summer trip will tell you why.

I hope Mother continues to keep better, and that the seat of the trouble is found. It is good to hear that Elizabeth is down stairs. I hope for better news yet near time.

We are starting in with 75 pupils and three not yet arrived. It fills us nearly full. As last year, the boys are most numerous. 45 to 30. Mr. Lund has the high school boys over in the London Mission house and the small boys are on Wisteria Lodge with the Menzis. The Menzis have the whole second floor and 15 boys the down stairs. They have kitchen, dining room, sitting room, and two bed rooms, besides the huge porch. They expect another Menzi the middle of the year.

Mrs. Wilder arrived last week. She was on the Canada which came by Japan just after the earthquake and they brought 1500 refugees to Shanghai. Many of them were Chinese, some Japs and all other nationalities. She says that it was awful to watch the smoke and fire from the steamer. They anchored some 10 miles out from the harbor. There had been such an upheaval of the bottom of the sea that they dared not allow ships to get nearer till everything was recharted.

Mon. Jean Dickenson and I have just had a good game of tennis. She came down for a rest, and has been staying with me. I let her go her own way mostly. Yesterday I saw her at 4.20 for the first time. She was out for the two meals. Am I not an ideal hostess?

The ladies house is to be so very different this year. Esther Moody, Miss Ingram, and Marriette Lum will live there. In January, Margaret Smith and Miss Dizney, a nurse, join them. Then they will not entertain much, for the house will be so full.

I have some bank books for the N.C.A.S. Bank and the allowances are to be checked out this year. I hope it will simplify not complicate the task.

I will write again, for it is time to be off to see Jean on the noon train.

P.M. We have had to take a big corner out of the chapel for extra dining room. It makes a dandy dining room, but the poor chapel is queer, sort of L shaped, with the speakers desk at the corner. We had church there yesterday for the first time and it will accommodate the company. Some wanted to have us go to the Chinese Academy and use their small room upstairs, which will seat about 2100 but the invitation was half hearted and since the difficulty between the schools last year, we are not over eager. Miss Ingram alone would welcome the change unreservedly. She despises our basement chapel, and is very open about it, therefore we do not mind.

The lack of government has gotten where it is bothering us. The new head of the bureau of communications insists of having everything opened for customs. On two of our consignments, prepaid from Tientsin to Tungchow, he has insisted on examination at Peking and repaying duty and freight. A large order is now awaiting reshipment in Peking. If it were a real law, not one instituted to put money into one man's pocket, it would not be so trying. We are butterless till we get the order or purchase in Peking. It means sending a man up for every package, besides the extra for shipping.

The plumbing goes very slowly. We have a moat all across the front of the house and nearly across the rear. Occasionally a man comes in and puts in one more pipe, or takes a measurement. Meanwhile, you can imagine the discomfort with no place for toilets, bath tubs or washing facilities. We had baths this morning in an attempt to get the family clean. But our fourth floor bathroom is going to be a delight.

I am wondering if the duplication machine is en route. We can put it to use as soon as it gets here.

Next time I write, I may know for sure if I come home in June, I expect to. Hurrah!!

Lots of love

Mary.

Sept. 16, 1923.

Dear Kathleen;-

Before I get wrapt in this letter I must say that I have sent an extended account of the loss of my little hand satchel with my watch and chain, and locket with your's and mama's pictures in it (and the recovery of the bag) and my pen, and ever sharp, Phebe's two dresses, two belts, two skirts, all my keys with the holder mama sent me, my glasses, and a check book. - I have sent this account to Aunt Mary in Tunghsien [Tungchow], for she was with me when the ricksha ran off with the bag. She is to send the letter on to mama so I will not repeat here.

Phebe is still at Kuliang- coming down tomorrow. I came down for good last Tuesday. College opened last Wed. for flunkers, Thursday for others in Middle School, and Friday for Higher Primary. Last evening 472 had matriculated- we had 526 last term - we are cutting down. No one who did not register his name with $1.00 by August 25 has been received. Every day we turn away many. The government schools are doing practically nothing.

Telegrams have been coming yesterday and today announcing the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Dr. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg and children of Shaowu and Mr. and Mrs. Le May, new for Shaowu and Miss Holton for Ponasang. - Mr. and Mrs. Storrs and three children are here in the rooms formerly occupied by the Legers. Donaldsons are at Gek Liong Song and Smiths at ?????. Reumann's, Goertz, Newells still at the mountain, and Dr. Mrs. Kinnear and Ellen still at the Peak. Eunice is here to teach in the College. The St. Clairs are still on the mountain. Phebe has been with Mrs. St. Clair since last Tues. when I came down.

We have had a very nice summer on Kuliang. The typhoons hit all round us but let us alone. We had a few rainy days in August but no flood. There was very little illness and a spirit of good will among the Kuliangites. Every house was occupied and nearly every room was full. Consul Rine has bought Mr. Nightengales house and will tear it down and build new. Mr. Short of Ly Chung has bought Miss Todd's house. Dr. Kennedy of Shaowu has bought Mr. Belchers house and Mrs. McCurry and Miss Hofe have bought the Rines = over near Ga U. I think every house is already rented for next summer and I know of four families from Amoy that want houses but cannot get them. Four babies were born on Kuliang this summer. Hayes- Meth.- Goertz, Brewsters (Fisher) and Dr. Walker of Hinghua.

I was very proud of your marks for last term and I shall look forward with great anticipation to see your next report card with all A+. It was most gratifying to learn also how well both you and Marjorie had done in violin. I congratulate you. Phebe and I both look forward with much interest to the letters that will tell us about your summer- all of you. We do not yet know whether Mama got out of Oberlin and of course do not know at all where to address this, so I shall just send it to the old address.

This evening we had the first Christian Endeavor meeting. I was asked to speak and told the students that each must make a decision to distinguish carefully between right and wrong. Then to choose to do the right in the face of all contrary influences. This gives any one poise and I believe is one of the surest means to insure success in any line of life. One of the greatest assets that you children have is that your parents and all your relatives both Kinneys and Beards have helped in establishing you in the habit of thinking every time you make a decision- is this right or wrong- the deciding to do the right. Then another very great asset is the fact that you have been taught to keep on God's side of every question and to rely on Him to give you help. Every day- several times I talk with Him about each of you by name, and ask Him to give you all needed help.

Very lovingly, your

Father.

Foochow

Sept 23- 1923

Dear Mary,-

Just a word before I stop for bed. I presume Phebe M. has written you that the doctors after a careful Xray of Mother say that she has cancer and that she may be with them for four or five months. My letter came last night. Altho I knew that we must be ready to hear any time that either Father or Mother were called home, yet this broke me up, as I know it will you. I feel keenly for Phebe. God will give her grace and strength. I'm glad they have a nurse and help in the house. Mother will have every care that love and science can give her. Phebe will have the support of three loyal brothers.

This is not a news letter – only a brother's letter to tell about our mother. It was very beautiful to me when home two years ago to see how proud Mother was of you.

It would have been very nice if we could have seen her again- and we may yet, altho it is very doubtful.

May God be nearer to you than ever. He seems nearer as each one of the family circle goes home.

Mrs. Goertz with her baby 3 weeks old came home yesterday- Dr. Walker's – of Hinghua-little boy is about 15 days old. I am eating with the Lockes. The St. Clairs move down day after tomorrow.

Misses Funk, Burr, Mebold, and Bement have reached Yong Kau, nearly to Shaowu all right.

Storrs, Kelloggs and Le Mays left us Friday afternoon. They have reached Ciu Kau all right. The ladies were fired on before they got there and the Ciu Kau launch we fired on two days before the Storrs etc started.

Phebe took lunch with me today.

Very lovingly

Will.

Phebe K is going to send Phebe M's letter to you.

This letter from Phebe makes me all the gladder that you and I could be together this summer.

I'm sending another package of papers big enough to take you a week to read.

Your letters came last night.

[This typewritten letter, dated September 25, 1923, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the home folk. She has heard of her mother's terminal illness. The plumbing installation at the school is still progressing slowly. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S., September 25, [1923]

Dear Home Folk,

Phebe's letter telling of the seriousness of Mother's illness came on Saturday. I have sent it on to Willard today. This afternoon I got a letter from him with the request that I send it to you. His contains good news for the loss of the bag was considerable.

I shall most eagerly look for the next home news and the final decision. If it were June instead of September, it would be an irresistible temptation to spend the summer in America. As it is we all pray to the same God and to him half the distance round the globe it is nought.

Sept. 26. I was on duty last week end. We have arranged for one woman and one man to be on together, so both boys and girls will be looked after. With the chapel cut as it is, I did not have courage to try a sing. Also because there is no one now who plays well enough to attempt a hymn without special practice. I have been reading aloud some of the stories in the book "Port Arlington Stories" which is one that Miss Brewster sent me last spring. I took it south intending to leave it, but found the stories so readable that I relented and kept it to share with the girls. The latest book from Miss B. I have not read. It is "Rich Relatives". It looks good. Some day I will need refreshment and revel in it. I keep those books busy most of the time. Mrs. Love took about ten to Pei Tai Ho, and I took all the new ones to Kuliang; two are in Peking, etc. Last spring I put some of the best in the school library where they will see much service.

A package of papers came yesterday and I was interested to note that our neighbor is to have his excuse for picking a quarrel with father removed. It must have been some noise when that blast went off! The paper was most vague as to where the ditch was to be. Did you get the predicted crowd?

Our plumbing still is progressing S-l-o-w-l-y. Someday we hope to have it in. They are closing the ditches and outside tanks, so there is hope. The boys at the new house are in the same sad state, no water, no plumbing, no anything. I think I wrote that we are to have a bath room on the top floor, and that the teachers bath is put into a third room on the second as we found that one room was not enough for 16 or 20 girls.

We have had our first attempt at lab in General Science today. It was disconcerting to find files, test tubes, stoppers, etc. that could not be made to fit. The Chem. Material was left over at the lab till fall and the Academy class had fitted up their desks ere we called for it. Evidently, they had used much of our stuff. Mr. Menzi and the Chinese boys are not very friendly, so it will be a little awkward to get it back, I fear. Mr. Fan is a good friend though. It is only the pond fuss that causes the disagreement, and they were nasty about that, so was Mr. Martin.

Today is a big tea in farewell for Mrs. Firman (mother of Mrs. Sweet) and Mrs. Edwards, of the Y.M.C.A. I had hoped to go in, but the early train sounds awfully early. When I have gotten courage to try it once, I shall know it is not bad.

The above difficulty was not my carelessness. Suddenly my spacer refused to work. I had not properly cleaned the machine since its summer of idleness and it was calling for care. It has taken nearly three fourths of an hour to fix it and now it runs a bit hard. But it runs as I try to make it, and I hope will limber up.

The last boat brought several papers from Miss Brewster, telling of the last tributes to President Harding. I took time to read them at once, and will get them where the children can see them. My Geographic also came. It is after supper, and I must get to my studies.

May God bless you all

Much love

Mary.

Will's letter goes to Oberlin. You have the original.

Foochow China.
Oct. 6- 1923.

Dear Kathleen;

Phebe and I have greatly enjoyed your letters from Pearl River this summer. They gave us a view into your own mind and also into the home life of Uncle Stanley and Aunt Myra, and they told us that Nancy was a little witch, Stephen a very pleasant happy little boy, and Ruth a little darling. I shall look forward with lots of joy to seeing Ruth. Her pictures look as if she were a very happy little girl. I was glad also that you could get up to Century Farm a few times and see Gould and the folks at Century Farm.

You are an unsophisticated sophomore now- in High, and Monnie is a sedate senior. I wish you both a successful and happy year. I shall look with eagerness for letters from Dorothy and Marjorie telling of their summer. The last letter from Geraldine was very interesting and told about the life at Alexandria Bay and of how much she made and of her pleasing prospects for this years work in South River.

Things are going on very nicely here just now. The weather is fine. Today I plan to go to Chiong Ha = where Mama and Monnie and you and I went the year before we went home. I shall walk to Uong Bieng and take a boat to the landing place for Chiong Ha. One of the teachers = Mr. Lin Ting Po will go with me- we will spend the night at Chiong Ha, and stay there for church tomorrow. After lunch we will go to a place called Liang Pau. In the evening we hold a meeting there and come home Mon. morning.

I must stop now with all good wishes for all and lots of love to each.

Has Gould yet had an operation.

Lovingly
Father

[This typewritten letter, dated Oct. 12, 1923, was written from Tungchou, China by Mary to the home folk. Mary has not heard yet that her mother has died. Their students were invited to the Peking American School for a party. Rumor said that there would be dancing, so the NCAS had to decline the invitation. Mrs. Gordon had to be dismissed from the school over a disagreement on how to run the dining room. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

N.C.A.S., Oct. 12, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

This is our founder's day, hence I am stopping this last period of the morning to write to you. Generally I need this time to prepare for my afternoon science class.

Phebe's last letter told of Mother's return home after the period of observation in the hospital. I am glad you have a good nurse. It is easier for the sick and the well both. I find myself watching the corner of the daily paper which says, "Next mail is in", more closely than usual. Each of the P.M. boats has brought mail.

Last week Saturday evening the children of the Peking American School gave a house warming and invited our three upper classes. The freshman class is larger than their whole high school body, so they had to be left out. Mr. Menzi got word that the "party" was to be a dance with possibly games on the side. Mrs. Corbett visited Mr. Tuttle and found the rumor was true. Hence on Saturday, Mr. Menzi talked with the pupils and every one said that they must send last minute refusals and stand by the policy of the school. The regrets went on the noon train Saturday. It meant keeping the children here and providing entertainment. Mr. and Mrs. Menzi invited them all over to their house and also such of us teachers as were not already engaged for other groups. We made candy and played games. To make it a bit festive, the party lasted till 10.00.

There was to have been no class for Sunday School, so Esther Moody had taken a week-end off and was in Peking. I took her classes the only way out. It had been a very full week and all the extra made the faculty a weary lot to start this week. We are getting rested though, as there have not been quite so many outside duties this week.

Another extra last week was an attempt to get together on dining room regulations. The senior and junior girls are helping by being heads of the extra tables, so after we had talked over the rules we had them in for tea and told them about them before they were read in the dining room. We had the first meeting on Tuesday. Mrs. Gordon was there and helped talked them over till time to go for the evening train. I found out later that she had handed out another ultimatum that morning. Well, to make it short, she departed that night and is not to return. Chu Shih Fu is running the dining room, and the head table boy is looking after the service in the dining room. For this last week things have gone even better than before. That atmosphere of strain is missing. We no longer commit the unpardonable sin, if we forget and laugh out loud, or get a last minute invitation for a meal and accept it without running home and telling someone. Chu Shuh Fu looks less worried, with the full responsibility that with his efforts to please his mistress. He was loyalty itself, but he saw the weakness the same as we did.

Mrs. Gordon came on Saturday and took her things. Moore wrote a nice letter telling Mr. Menzi that he did not think it wise for his mother to return, but that there was no reason why the head man might not stay, as far as he knew. Now comes a letter asking for the head man to come up for a talk with Carl Gordon, this Saturday night. We hope the place here has been put so attractively that he will not leave.

Last Monday I was at Mr. Tuttle's for a luncheon committee meeting. Miss Moore and Miss Nourse were also there. The ladies were a bit nasty about the Saturday night but Mr. T. was fine and harbored no resentment. There will be another member of that family soon. We do not get the niece of the Pettuses. She has arrived and the Pettuses decided they could take her in since we were only other alternative.

I go to Peking tomorrow to help serve at the College tea. I accepted because it is about time I did my share if I am to continue to belong. I am going to christen my new dress. It arrived last week and all who have seen it say it is becoming and good style. If I had had anything to start the season with, I should have waited till finances were easier. But the gold colored dress that I wore so much at home, was still my best, but a poor best after four years of wear. I shall feel dressed up in it now, since I have a better one in the closet.

Another batch of papers came this week, and have gone on to Will. I am hoping that Ben's chance of getting rid of the castle at Newtown proved good and that it is off his hands.

Mrs. Hunter had taken the Domestic Science again, and it is such a relief. The girls start in as though they appreciated the difference.

We had Chinese food today in the dining room. Mien, something like spaghetti, was the base dish. By the way it disappeared, it was appreciated. We ended with "tan hou-lers", fruit dipped in candied sugar. We have had those several times this fall to the joy of all. If no one is ill from today's meal, we are to have it once every two weeks or possibly every week.

I have Miss Bostwick's two small rugs on the sitting room floor. I have not dared to order Leolyn's, lest the Berkeley fire has left them so they dare not afford them. Mrs. Powell had a telegram that she had lost everything. The two houses are so near each other that one could hardly go and the other be saved.

Dr. Smith gave the address today, and he was well up to par. He and Mrs. Smith returned last Monday from six weeks at the hills. Both are looking very well. Dr. Smith acts better than he did a year ago. Both asked me to remember them to Flora when I wrote. Mrs. Fette also enquired for her, when I got the rugs.

We have had the heat on for a week and it makes the house a joy to come back to. At the school, the tinker is working on the chimney, so that is still cold. All the pipe that heats the hall went to pieces this summer.

A letter from Miss Bostwick tells me that she is in Oberlin. She will be seeing Ellen and the girls, also Mrs. Stelle, who has the house Ellen had.

A mail was due in Shanghai yesterday. I may miss getting my letter quickly by my week end in Peking. But I will be back Monday.

Best love to you all.

Mary

Dear Mary:-

Night before last the mail- no it was last night the mail brought letters from Phebe and Flora- also paper that are full of good words about our dear, lovely Mother. In talking it over with God this afternoon after I had read what the papers said I had to add, "The half was not told." The tribute from Mr. Hill was beautiful. In Mother all we children have a rich heritage. I think during the past fifteen or twenty years she has taken much deep joy in the success that her children have attained. She never said much about it but she had a way of expressing her inmost heart without spoken words. Her's was a life bid with Christ in God. Phebe has been wonderfully good to write us so often with the care and responsibility that she has had to bear. God has answered our prayers that Mother might not have to suffer- long before we asked Him. It is hard to realize that while we were enjoying ourselves in Foochow together they were just about getting the facts that told them Mother could not stay much longer with them, and that as you were getting back to Tunghsien they were doing the last loving earthly things for her.

I am not sending the Sentinels for Sept 4,-7 and 8 to you for the letters say they are sending you some also. I am sending you others and Phebe's and Flora's letters.

I want that R.I. rooster if it does not come too high. How much does he want? Mr. Goertz promises to bring him down when he takes Edith up next Jan.

Very lovingly

Will

It looks from Flora's letter as if Phebe and Elizabeth would like you home next June.

October 21, 1923

Dear Home Folk,

The difference in blackness of the date and the address is due to a change of ribbon. I used the last one to do a lot of lining. That wears out the ribbon terribly, by leaving only half of the printing surface good. Willard had his machine on the mountain last summer. It has done him good service.

Phebe's letter telling of Mother's death on the 3rd of September was here when I returned from Peking last Monday. I had really said my "goodby" when I got the letter telling that she was so seriously ill. I knew what that meant for us out here. I am so glad she did not have to suffer severely again. I kept dreading that for her, as you all were too. How comforting that so many of you could be with Mother at the last. Yes, Phebe, I too have memories of The dearest Mother that ever could be. My year at home so recently is very full of them.

The friends here have been most kind, Miss Burgess and Mrs. Powell especially. Poor Mrs. Powell is most upset by her losses in the Berkeley fire, losses for herself and for so many friends too. Today she got the first illustrated papers and was all broken up by them. Those beautiful hills a black ruin! We hope for letters on the next mail. People were likely too stunned to write at once.

The talk at the College club last week was by Prof. Grabau, on the paleogeography of China. The China Survey is getting out a book on it and he showed us some of the proof plates of the old maps. I fear that inhabitants of those days would have trouble in getting their bearings in the China of today. There was a sea where the Himalaya Mountains are now and Japan, the Phillipines, Borneo and the other East Indies were all part of a continent with eastern Asia. "The first invasion of China by Americans" was by way of an arm of the Arctic ocean that extended down into Asia at one period. I hope that we may have the same or a similar lecture down here after Christmas. The survey are getting their book out for the holidays and will be very busy.

Hazel Bailey is not going to take our Camp Fire girls this year. I am entertaining at lunch tomorrow Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Curan and their husbands. The ladies have been Guardians and I hope will take up our group for the year. Miss Burgess is ready to help and so I think is Mrs. Powell. Mrs. Powell is working in slowly, but well. She is not as adaptable as a younger woman would be, but after our experience of last year that is a blessing not a draw back. She helps Dr. Love less but me in the house work more. I have now turned over the caring for this house almost entirely. When called on, I act as interpreter (I see Flora smile) and adviser if advise is wanted. She inspects all the rooms too.

We are still running with the cook and table boy in the dining room. Margaret Menzi is account taker, and we take any question of food, service to her. The Chinese food last week Friday was greatly appreciated. We hoped for some more this week but did not get it.

Mrs. Powell and I went on the street Thursday after school and got pongee for curtains in the sitting room. She was having a guest for the week-end and wanted the comfort and beauty of curtains. We also got material for the hall windows. In ways like that she is a great help. I helped measure and cut but she is putting them together. I can not get the Amahs to look on her as their boss. The reason is probably that she always has to come to me for interpreter.

Mrs. Love was out to compound tea today for the first time since baby came. The baby is still nameless, but growing apace in spite of the lack.

I spent all of last week end with Cleora. Mrs. Hubbard of Pao Ting Fu and Miss Breck were in the city. We went to the movies Saturday night. On Sunday morning I heard Dr. Hodgson at the P.U.M.C. on "The best is yet to come". He also spoke at the Union church in the evening. He has been out for some special conferences. Cleora and I went to tea at Mrs. Maxwell's. She had quite a gathering on Sunday afternoons. It is considered the proper time for the P.U.M.C. faculty to call on each other then. As Mrs. Maxwell had out of town guests, she had invited several specially. As Miss Bailey said, it is a case of social function till 5.15, then the host and hostess rise and announce that it is time to start for church. One might stay and enjoy the home surroundings but the family go to church as a part of the necessities of life. They are on time too!

The plumbers are still with us. At last all the seats and bowls are out of the lower hall, so I begin to have hopes that there will be an end. It will be fine when it is done.

I found a new candy store in the city. They make all kinds of sesame candies. We are trying the plan of having candies, raisons, etc. for sale two or three times a week, as a means of keeping the children from buying the dirty stuff of the peddlers. If it is a craving for sweets that makes them buy, it will stop it if it is a desire to break rules, it will not.

Young Quincy Adams is proving to be a boy with the propensity for anything underhanded, forbidden, striking, etc. He is a nuisance till he gets broken in a bit. In one week, he has dared John Lewis, and they had their heads shaved; upset a whole bowl of sugar into one of the girls desert; and made himself conspicuous on every occasion. His ambition is "to be noticed". Some of the others have the same ambition but lack the courage to confess it, or do not consciously name it. I do not credit the rumor that Mrs. Adams is going to the States; Young Adams decided to come and came.

Young Samuel Cochran is proving just as fine as William. He is full of his fun, but there is not a bit of yellow in him. I was able to be of a bit of use to Dr. Cochran and he sent the nicest letter of thanks. It came on the same mail as Phebe's telling of Mother's going. I will send it and let you read it. Flora will tell you of others she had when here. There people are most appreciative, and not afraid to express their kindly feelings.

Mrs. Sheffield was thrown from her rickshaw two weeks ago and her face is still black and there is a huge lump over her left eye. For several days she was laid up but she was doing full work when I was in town last week end. There were no cuts, only bruises. Mrs. Stelle writes that the boys make excellent household assistant. William Tucker is slowly improving. He hopes to be about some by Christmas. Little Arthur is a dear, and so like big William!

My heart has been with you at home these last weeks. I have the sorrow of not having been able to do for Mother, but you have to live every day where every thing is a reminder of her. God was good to let us have her so long.

Lots of love to all.
Mary.

Dear Miss Beard;

This is just a line to thank you for all the interest and help you have given my boys. I wonder if you know how deeply parents appreciate what conscientious and able teachers like yourself do for their children. Good teachers throw into their work so much of themselves, so much good will and helpfulness that no salary they could possibly draw would ever begin to repay it and certainly it cannot be paid by any thanks we can give.

I have thought more than once of your hospitality whenever we go to Tungchow and of your coming down to meet the "new boy" as we walked up from the station a few weeks ago.

A good letter came from Bill on Saturday and he was just finishing his summer work at tutoring and ready for his examinations. Next mail will tell of how he does. He spent Sunday with Lois and Peggie at my brothers in Plainfield. My brothers son will be in his class at Hotchkiss.

Yours very sincerely

Samuel Cochran

N.C.A.S., Oct. 30, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

I ought to be thinking out a costume for tomorrow night. But I am not going to spend this time on that. Maybe I will get a sudden inspiration. Last week Friday we had a wonderful treat. Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Leslie Severinghouse sang for us and Miss Mary Ferguson accompanied them. Miss F. is a younger sister of the Miss Ferguson who played the violin and daughter of the advisor to the President. Flora will probably remember her.

We had a holiday Saturday. There was a track meet over at the Academy and our boys were competing in several events. Then the scouts were off for a camping trip, by the noon train. I planned a Campfire picnic too, so we too had some fun. We went over north of the city near the canal and a cemetery. We had the whole village out to watch us eat. The place was a fine amphitheater, so the crowd could see everything. They were most surprised that we could make the fire go, then that we knew how to cook the food. It was a question with them, as to whether we were boys or girls, being in bloomers, we could be either. We tried the second time to get Mrs. McClean and Mrs. Curan, without success.

Flora's letter came and I had an opportunity to get the nets yesterday. I got one dozen double ones. I have been wearing them and they outwear the single, about 6 to 1. The difference in cost is not much, 30 cents and 40 cents. If you like them I will get a gross and bring home, at $3.50 per gross. I buy by the gross now.

Wed. eve. Have just come up early from the Halloween party. I wore a pair of dirty white stockings in which I had cut holes till they barely stayed on and a pair of brown shoes unevenly smudged with Blanco. My skirt was a tattered piece of silk from "the property box"; my waist, a bag; my belt, a rope and my hair dress another piece of rope. A tin can for pennies and a bamboo cane completed the outfit. It was not handsome. Mr. Breakey and Mr. Fenn were both ladies. Lyman Martin came in Miss Moody's dress and was as fine a woman as usual. Miss Young was in Captain Fiskin's uniform. The feast was overwhelming in its plentifulness. As extras, there was soup, salad, nuts and candy, and cocoa. The others are still having games. I wanted to get this letter off, also, I must correct some papers to find out who gets delinquency notices this month.

Yesterday came a book "The Breaking Point" from Miss Brewster. I have just finished the last one, and enjoyed it much. I have had two bundles of Sentinels from you and two of New York papers from Miss. B. lately.

Mrs. Corbett wrote a nice note about Mother. Her last bit, taken from a letter to her just about a year ago when her Mother died, I want to share with you. "If we always love those that we lose, we never will lose those that we love". I am so glad that mother did not have a terrible suffering that is Mrs. Goodrich's these days. Her trouble is also cancer of the intestines. The doctors operated in August and found the trouble so far advanced that they could help none. She is still in the hospital, and now her dear ones are praying for her freedom from pain.

Miss Andrews had gone to Paotingfu to be with Miss Chapin. She is very happy there and holds several classes per week with the girls in the school. It is enough to make her feel useful.

Last Friday, Margaret Virginia Wickes arrived. She "looks like the others", Alice thinks her fine, but says there is "no on to look after me" at home now. She planned all herself, to go to the Martins, hoping for more care there.

I have written Mrs. Corbett that I am surely starting for home next June. My next step will be to engage passage through Mr. McCann. Mrs. Powell suggests that I stop and take Leolyn east with me. I am thinking of a bee line through Vancouver. What would be the prospects of caring for Leolyn among her two families if she came? I know we will be unable to offer an extended visit, or at least I should judge so from the letters.

I do hope that the news from Elizabeth and Father is good next time. It is wonderful to think that Father can still keep up the business. I do hope that Miss Runnells could come. I like her and it is pleasing to think of her in our home.

I had a letter from Lillian Burr. She read of Mother's going in the paper and was sorry she did not know sooner. She has not been well for several months but is much better. Her trouble is that she does not get strong altho she seems quite well again. Mrs. Stelle wrote me from Oberlin. She had seen Miss Bostwick. She is having great fun keeping house for her two boys.

We enjoy the Fiskins as neighbors. They enter into things easily, but not too much so, and their enjoyment of the place is enough to win the hearts of us devotees. Cara, the baby about three, is terribly shy, but the boy and the baby of about a year are friendly as can be. Mrs. Young is nice.

I surely hope that the school never has any more one year teachers. The atmosphere this year is such an improvement over last! Mrs. Powell bothers sometimes by talking "contract". Her contract has specified certain duties and no others are to be taken on except by hint or much tactful urging. The infirmary has been vacant all year. Now the Amahs are moved to their room so patients could be cared for. But she will not lift a finger except at the doctors bidding, not even give a "cold" pill. It is a contrast to last year when the children got doses till the doctor groaned over the medicine consumed. Salts are the one and only remedy for all ills now. Theodore Romig is over in the Menzi guest room with a badly infected arm. Doctor cut it open today and is afraid of greater infection unless it had most careful care. It is a queer world and the people are queer, they seem to run to extremes. We want a happy medium!

We still have Chinese food once a week and the last child has succumbed to eating it. Mrs. Powell refused the last kind but liked the other. The cooks made 3200+ chu bao baos. (do not criticise the spelling, please).

"My heart is in the Highlands" of Long Hill.

Lots of love

Mary

I am looking for the duplicator. Thanks for ordering it. I'll bring the things to Flora. See the new stamp. I'll send the rest of the set 4 cents, 3 cents and 1 cents later.

[This typewritten letter, dated Nov. 10, 1923, was written from Tungchou, China, by Mary to the home folk. She has received her duplicator. They believe some of the servants are stealing from them. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

North China American School
Tunghsien, Peking, China

Nov 10, 1923.

Dear Home Folk,

I have been using my good bond paper for many school purposes lately, so am going to be swell and write you on school stationary.

The duplicator came last night, and I put it together at once and used it to take off the tests for today. It was good to use one again. Why had I waited so long to get it? Everything came through O.K.

Nov. 13, I went over to Maude Hunter's for the week end and had a good time playing with the babies. Jean is a darling, fat and smiling as can be. She is getting to know whom she knows and whom she does not. But she is quick to form new friends with those who play with her. Bobby is getting the same idea that the other compound children have, that I am to be pummeled, and played hard with. We had a real wrestling match, punctuated with squeals and shrieks of laughter. Both children are very well. Jean cut her first tooth, and got up a fever of 103 over it. But she was all right by morning.

Miss Young and six others have proved the ease with which we can visit the Great Wall from here. They had an auto come down to leave at 6.30 and take them to the Hsi Che Men. Then the auto met them at night and brought them back. It cost about $5.00, much less than trying to stay in Peking, and much easier.

We have put in a second basket ball court, in the hollow space behind the school building. There is also room for an indoor baseball field for the girls. Our group is too large for one field now, so the compound have let us have the added room. To be sure it takes a fine fertile piece of ground. There is talk of trying to get the land over beyond the boys house, but there is no certainty of ever getting it. It, too, is good farm land, even better than what we have.

Tuesday, our Chinese food day; We had "strings" with "chang" and several kinds of cold vegetables and one soup. They forgot to get us a desert. I suppose it is that they never serve one for themselves.

Wed. Eve. This afternoon Carol Love came over with Dr. Parry, who was the college physician at Holyoke when I was there. Dr. Parry was the one who looked after Mother when she was ill at commencement 1905. She and her sister are travelling around the world. Both are doctors and came to see the hospital. The other sister knew Dr. Loves father and a lot of folks he knows as she has lived near Hamilton College. She knew Martha too.

Captain Fiskens is giving the Camp Fire girls and any of the others who wish to join us an hour of marching, and exercises once a week. It is most interesting and mighty good for us. We have to act with military precision. It is interesting to note that the boys are again doing drill, after a year or more of thinking it too militaristic.

We have had considerable trouble with thieving. It seems to be a concerted effort to oust the head man. As far as we can make out, the cook whom he succeeded, is at the head of the gang. Tien has the reputation of being a gambler now, and so is open to all sorts of suspicions. We are lying in wait to catch him at something, then the Loves will dismiss him. The Fiskins have a servant dismissed several years ago for gambling and he is suspected of being implicated with the bad gang.

Mrs. Waller was down today and sends regards to Flora. Jean Dickenson gave me such to deliver last week. She was at the Martins. Enid is home now. Her health is not very good so she dares not return to a job where she has to live on Chinese food, as at the Wangs.

Your Christmas things will be late for I have not been able to get into town for three weeks. I expect to go next Monday. I shall not send much as I love to deliver things in person, and next summer is not far off. God bless you all and keep you well.

Much love
Mary.

Foochow, China.
November 18- 1923

Dear Boy:-

Last Wednesday I thought of you as you passed the twenty seventh milepost on life's highway. It was just about the day that Phebe sent me your letter to her that told about Grandma's death and funeral and your drive from Shelton to Mt. Vernon, S. River and Ann Arbor. It has been very gratifying to read in several letters that you were at Century Farm when Grandma died and that you could represent me. For several reasons God directed you to go there this summer. Every one seems to think that you did right. Mama was especially pleased. Your picture of the children and grandchildren gathered about Grandma during the last minutes was the most complete that I have received. It touched me deeply that you could be in my place there and again it was very gratifying to know that you were in my place as pall bearer.

Grandma was a wonderful woman. How she could bear eleven children and bring up ten and do her own housework when we were small and take time every day to study her Bible and pray and also help other children who had no mother and all the time take an active part in church work and at the same time keep up with and help her own children in their studies I do not see- Yes I think I do see. She was able to select the first things in life and do them. She never chose the second best; or the thing of secondary importance. As I remember her, she took (she did not find) some time every day to be alone with God. I see her so often she lay on the lounge with her Bible. She never spoke of it- but she did it. I think it must have been her silent example that led me when I was a Sophomore to decide to read my Bible daily before breakfast- a habit that I have kept up for over thirty years- it's a good habit.

How are you coming on financially? Write me all about it- How much did Mr. Miller help you in all, how much has Uncle Stanley lent you in all. How much did Grandpa give you this summer? Dorothy ought to be out of the woods financially with her work in the Oberlin Schools in Oberlin with $500. I understand that Grandma left one third of her estate to Grandpa, one third to her children and one third to her grandchildren. You may get $250 there. How much does your life insurance cost you a year? I keep wondering also when you will graduate from Ann Arbor.

You had an exciting ride from Philadelphia to Ohio, - without adventure. I am hoping the time is near when you will stop such stunts as driving thirty six hours without rest. I did a lot of such stunts when I was young. I wish I had known enough to conserve my strength. In the long run you lose- nature comes round years after and collide. I can do with most of the young fellows here now, but I know if I had taken more time to do some things when I was 16-24 I could do more now and do what I do much better. How is your hernia? I do not hear about it from any source. The picture of your flying in a Ford made me think of the new universal machine- with three wheels that could be converted from an automobile to a hydroplane and again into an aeroplane at will.

Things are going along rather quietly here. In the College we are having a much better term than last term. The senior class is hard to get on with. But there is no (as yet) serious trouble. There are two boys who have tried bluffing instead of working and their bluff is not bringing them a diploma. They are disgruntled and influence the class. It was very significant that at the close of last term when the students elected the Y.M.C.A. Cabinet- not one of this class was put on the cabinet. I have not yet made up my mind whether or not I shall tell them that unless they attend morning drill. They have nearly all cut most of the time this term and the Sunday evening C.E. meeting. I will not give them diplomas.

Our boys played the Anglo Chinese boys at Volley ball- ten classes vs. ten classes. We won seven out of ten in two contests- we won 14 games and lost 6. In the cross country run yesterday afternoon we lost out completely I believe. ?? got 1st place. They ran from the Club, past the Am. Consulate and on to the stone sect. Back they came by the pond at Duai U and up by the Mesani Hall and the Y.M.C.A. home where we lived.

I wonder how much of the account of Mother's life that appeared in the Sentinel Fri. Sept 4 you wrote.

Eunice Kinnear Roger[?] is not at all well and she does not seem to improve. She is teaching 16 periods a week in the College and it is rather serious for us. Phebe is getting into things too fast. They are putting her on committees etc faster than I like. She is efficient and does good work.

God bless you, keep you and see you

Very lovingly Father.

[This letter, dated Dec. 8, 1923, was written from Tungchow, China by Mary to the home folk. She writes a letter home and includes a typewritten newsletter for those who lived and worked in Tungchow. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

[Dec. 8, 1923]

Dear Home Folk,

I am sending a copy of a letter for the edification of Ex-Tungchowites and it may contain some news not written you before or a different angle any way. Flora may need to interpret for it was written expecting readers to know the place.

We did have a nice Thanksgiving. I kept myself too busy to think very long at once on the loneliness at home. Cleora was down and arrived Wednesday evening. I also invited Hosmer Johnson and the Burgesses. The latter could not come, but Hosmer did. I was chairman of the decoration committee so we had to work hard from 3.00 till 6.00 setting tables for 45 and decorating. The seating had to be done over because the tables did not fit together as we expected.

I wonder what you did. Did you get together as usual? I hope so. It is generally Stanley's last fall visit to Connecticut.

The stockings and packages of ?? came last week. Already I have worn some of the black stockings. Many thanks for them. They fill a real need as I was feeling sorry I had not asked for some when I wrote. I had had to give up white shoes because my stockings were too few to last from week to week. I bought some English ones here and they lasted one day without holes and about six washings before the Amah referred to darn them.

My Campfire girls are busy getting ready for a sale. One [of the] most attractive articles are some blue velvet ?? trimmed with gold braid and some blue and gold ?? books made Chinese style like the coal-books[?]. We will have less than last year but we are only 12 instead of over 25 as then. Miss Bailey is not having time to foster the group at all. She got weary last year because I did not have time to "carry" her along as Flora had done and too she got in m?y with Miss Young and Miss Fenn her first trip. So far we are without a guardian, but hope for Mrs. Howard-Smith to renew her interest when she arrives.

The children are starting their skating in a pond at the west end of the compound which was formed when the big pond was refilled from the moat recently. It is very shallow.

The mail is just departing.

With love

Mary.

[The following is typewritten:]

Dear

For fear lest only one of you will get any news at all, I am going to give the general news for all, and be rude enough to use a duplicator.

I'll begin with the N.C.A.S., since that is home. We have 75 pupils in session now. Last week Dr. Lewis of Pao Ting Fu came and took John out, and they are just about starting for America now. Scamp that he was, we miss him. The trip home through India, Egypt, Palistine, etc. will do wonders in waking him up. The close companionship of his father will help a lot too.

About two weeks after school opened, we had a surprise. Close to six one evening an auto drove up. Out stepped young John Quincy Adams, and announced that he had come to stay. He was tired of being the only American boy in his school. He gave us a second surprise one evening very soon, when he and John Lewis appeared with their heads shaved. It was to "create a sensation", and no one paid any attention to them unless the boy drew it by some remark. I caught him one day with his hand clutched tightly in the hair of one of the girls. When questioned, he said it was his only way to get even, and the children old and young were in the habit of always kicking him as they passed. They had reasons for so doing all right, as he agreed. Pulling hair was not lessening the reasons either!

Speaking of "the gentle sentiments", we have never had so bad an epidemic as now. Every one down the line to the eighth and some on the seventh have some one special with whom to pair off. The wonderful moonlight nights and the influx of girls from America, with the ultra modern ways, are probably to blame. Every body ages the group higher up, and the girls were in college towns.

You must know of the additions to the community. The Fiskens are fitting in beautifully. Captain Fisken teaches at Lu He, and helps with the athletics. He also gives our girls drill every week. He offered for the Camp Fire, but the group is small this year and so we invited the others to join us. They take turns at all the social functions with the rest of us. The next compound supper is to be there.

Barbara Love is making Caroline share the honors, by growing more attractive every day. Caroline is loosing her excessive shyness, and loves to play. Her vocabulary is most limited, and not often used in company.

The latest arrival, Margaret Virginia Wickes, looks just like the others, pink and white from the first, with brown eyes, and lot of dark hair. She rubbed the skin off her chin one night when she got hungry before it was time, so had to be tied up for several days. It detracted from her beauty and distressed her mother. Mr. Wickes has been off in the country for two weeks, so Fanny kept the nurse an extra week for company. I expect he is home tonight, for tomorrows church program reads "Wickes".

By the way, Jim tried a new stunt on us this year and put the duplication paper in wrong for all the notices. Hence we have them pasted in our windows.

The Ladies house has been a point of interest. When the devoted swain can not get an invitation otherwise, Miss Ingram comes to the front and she has a beau. Mr. Breakey, our new teacher of History, likes to spend an evening over there when allowed. Mariette sings for him if there is no other consolation. They have been a very happy household, with the varied natures. Esther has her big baby doll down here now. How the Compound Children do love it!! We all pick it up when we go there.

We are all busy on the Thanksgiving dinner. The last I hear it was to be at the Loves. Maude wanted to relieve Carol of it, because she is afraid it may upset Carol and the baby. We go to Rose Martin's play afterward. Elizabeth Burgess has made up the cutest nut cups ever. We are fitting words to the initials for the place cards. Alice Huggins set out of the tables. We have put stiff papers on the back of the large turkeys and they will stand around and watch us eat the turkey substitute.

Dec. 3. It was not turkey substitute that we ate Thanksgiving, but real turkey, and mighty good too! 40 of us sat down to a T shaped table at the Loves. We described the people by adjectives beginning with their initials on the place cards, and used the little turkeys that Alice sent. We are most grateful, Alice! So will future committees be, for the runner is good for future use and so are the turkeys and sheafs of corn.

The entertainment was at Rose's and we were divided into groups and had to give some kind of word or scene connected with history at or near the first thanksgiving. Pi-Lie-Moth-Rock, was the best. The whole word was A chicken, Girl with feet through sleeves of coat etc.

The Peking people invited so many of our group for noon that with the compound children we were only 64. The girls had made place cards and used the runners that Flora sent out last year. There were no flowers as no one had thought ahead to get them. You see Miss Bostwick, we miss your thoughtfulness on that score. Cornucopias, with fruit and vegetables pouring out helped a lot. Dr. and Mrs. Wilder and Cleora Wannamaker, guests of the evening who had been able to come early, were with us too.

We kept the infirmary empty for the first two months, but have made up these last weeks. It is only colds and not serious ones either, but it means staying in bed for from two days to a week. With every pupil on an open porch to sleep, the children's beds are not very nice to have to stay in, this cold weather.

The boys played three games with Peking in Basket Ball. They won the first two games but were nice and played the third here as scheduled. We won easily. It was the only game for which we had our first team. Theodore Romig had been off with a badly infected hand, and Alfred Corbett with a case of skin poisoning that had made the doctor fear a deeper infection, since it was on his head. The last game was here and the girls played the same day. We won both games, so were most elated that evening. The girls have waited in vain for a return challenge, and have at last given up training, after three weeks.

Mrs. Goodrich passed away, two weeks ago last Thursday. Her suffering the last few weeks was terrible, the opiates gave very little relief. The funeral was in Peking but they brought her here for interment. Ten autos of people came down, and many of the Tungchow friends went over, so there was a crowd at the cemetery. Dr. Goodrich is bearing up wonderfully. The house at Teng Shih Kou is still empty, awaiting the decision of their compound committee. Mrs. Goodrich sent her piano to the girls academy here. She knew that the end was near, and disposed of many things, by asking her children to deliver them. There was a memorial service here a week ago at Warner Hall, in Chinese. Carrington and Ann were down at the Ladies House for the week end. Mrs. Sheffield was with the Smiths.

We have our plumbing in but the pump is too weak and can not throw the water from the basement of the school building to the top of the dormitory, hence the water still runs up on two legs but back by the drains. "Appendix" as the children call him is the carrier. He is a trifle bigger than last year, but still manages to spill a bucket of water on the stairs occasionally. You must know that Mrs. Gordon left us in October. She is now somewhere down in Honan working with the Chinese, a place where they have wanted her for a long time. She got discouraged because the workmen were so slow. Chu Shih Fu is running things with Fen Lin in the dining room to help. Margaret takes account once a week and either she or Mr. Menzi visits the kitchen daily. So far all goes well. We have Chinese food once a week and that pleases all but a few.

Next year sees a big turn over in our faculty. Martha and Genevieve and I leave. I do hope Miss Cummings is coming out for my work, as that will make it easier for those left.

[This letter dated Dec. 9, 1923 was written from Foochow, China by Willard to Geraldine. Willard would like his family to take up the mortgage on the Shelton house (presumably the Century Farm house). He tells about the Foochow Civil Governor and the price of getting a road project done. Officials were talking of taxing opium and students were concerned that it would result in the selling of opium legally. Original letter is in the archives of Oberlin College.]

Foochow China
Dec 9-1923

Dear Geraldine;

You are nearest to Shelton, so I am asking you to be the clearing house for this matter of our family taking up the $1500. to buy the whole mortgage on the Shelton house. I have held $1000 on it for several years. Aunt Ruth held it—the other $1500 till she died then Grandma [Nancy Nichols Beard] took it. Now Grandpa [Oliver Gould Beard] offers it to us. I think it is as good as any investment you can make. Gould and Dorothy and Marjorie and Kathleen will write you. Phebe will take $250. I $500. I hope Mama will agree to let Marjorie and Kathleen each take $250. If you and Dot and Gould cannot take $250 among you, just write so and it will be all right.

A Miss Sheldon and a Miss Day from Bloomfield N.Y. are here now visiting Mr. St. Clair. They do not seem to know much about South River, but it is sort of nice to see anyone from so near you.

This will reach you after Christmas. I hope you will have a pleasant Christmas. I thought of you at Thanksgiving as with your own people somewhere- possibly at the farm, and I shall think of you at Christmas as with the family somewhere. I have not yet found you on the map.

Foochow runs along in much the same groove as it has been in for a year. Church and school work are influenced only a little by the political conditions. The civil officials are as good as they can be without power or money. The Civil Governor is an old man nearly 70- good but weak. He is very good to one, receives one whenever I call on him and does what I ask of him. I try to ask only reasonable requests that he can grant. I saw him yesterday to ask permission to move walls and take in a piece of land which we purchased outside the church compound. The St [Street] commissioner offered to allow it but wanted to change the road himself and asked $800 to do it. I told him I did not have the money. (I could get the work done myself for $200.) The Governor asked about the length of the road etc. and if it could not be done for less than $400. I told it would not be being = comely for one to talk price about the matter. “O yes” he said. “Perfectly right”. Then turning to the Street Commissioner, whom he had called in, “How much will that road cost?” The reply came at once. “We can do it for $300.” I told them I would be willing to give $220. The matter will likely end in our giving about $250. big dollars. It will cost them about $200,000 cash = about $180. This is not a big squeeze.

Some weeks ago there was a corner store laying at the University = three miles down the river. Governor Sak was going down in a special launch which he had engaged. He asked me to go with him on this special launch- with the Bishops etc. and he offered to tow a house boat with a lot of people who were going down.

But the Military Governor is not so nice. You remember that opium was put out of China in 1908 and 09. None has been sold in Foochow since – except secretly.

Last week the officials planned to raise a lot of money by taxing opium. This would make it lawful to sell opium and lawful to smoke it. The students gathered last Wed. a.m., went to the three highest officials and asked them not to make the traffic legal. The officials promised not to tax opium.

I hope you are keeping well- dear Girlie, - and that your work is pleasant- I lead a class in calisthenics each a.m. at 6:00.

Very lovingly Father.

Dec 31, 1923

Dear Home Folk-

I have my corner of the Old year all to myself tonight. It is in a long chair in front of the register in a corner of the sitting room at the Hunter's. The Hunters and Fiskens have gone in to Peking to watch the festivities at the Hotel and will return by auto in the wee small hours. Amah and I put Bobby and Jean to bed. I am so well acquainted with these two children now that I can cajole them into doing most anything. All Bobby needs is a bit of imagination and he is off in a wonder land of animals and autos. I spend Christmas eve making him a snap ?? using autos and engines. He has nearly worn it out already.

I am going in on the early train to receive with Cleora at Mrs. Sheffield's. Esther Moody also goes in. Margette went tonight. Jim, Capt. Fisk and Lyman are the only callers I know are going in.

Gertrude Menzi grows handsome everyday and her proud parents glory in her. The nurse left yesterday and Grandma Wilder came to spend New Year's Day and help with baby. Carpenter Li sent them a beauty of a kiddi-coop which he copied from a picture. It is perfect. Maude and Martha gave them one of the cabinets. Both[?] Maude and Rue Martin a table with flannel top.

The skating has been fair. We went three times this vacation instead of "every day". I have been most cozy, mostly played with the children and sewed a little.

I ripped my "gold" dress and am making it long waisted. When completed I shall have it dyed, brown if it will take, other wise black. ?? one black satin dress. I am not partial to ??.

The laundryman failed to return my clothes promptly so I had to take time off and complete a night gown or go cold in a cotton one. I just got the buttons on tonight.

I have found a way to relieve piles. Take Nijol[?] ! Perhaps you knew it, did not so send on the word.

Phebe's last letter told of all the new autos. I will hope for a ride in each one next summer. Keep the Overland and perhaps I shall not have forgotten all about how to run it.

The Hunters and I had supper at the Fisk's yesterday. It was a unique but mighty good supper; fruit cocktail (harmless), waffles and chicken and coffee and dill pickles and plum pudding with hard sauce. The chicken was creamed and served in small individual dishes. The coffee was plentiful and served all through the second course.

The Wickes baby is just like the other Wickes babies, long black hair big brown eyes and a pink and white (not red) complexion. I was there from Christmas supper and visited baby again Saturday after tea.

Uncle and Auntie Ming had Miss Ingram, Miss Burgess and me over for Sunday dinner. It was a grand feast and a nice visit. I was invited the week before with Esther Moody but had just accepted an invitation to keep Margette company as she was to be alone.

I started the men at home cleaning today. They got the walls ?? and the floors. Tomorrow they will tackle it with water and oil. Two dust storms thru vacation made everything a cinnamon brown.

The plumbers are still with us. Today they once again brought the water tanks down to try again to make them water tight. The door to the tank room is narrow so there are two tanks instead of one. Both leaked. The foreigner at the head of the company was here and seemed to understand the necessity of making the system complete by Wednesday.

I have been very negligent and have not had carpenters around. But Len is trying to get a school carpenter and suggested that repairs wait for him. Alas he has not materialized.

I hope this Christmas season finds Elizabeth comfortable and the rest of you well. I thot of you all and of the empty place for Mother. I am eager to hear if you had any Thanksgiving gathering or if it could not be.

I'll be home as soon as I can after school lets out and I can pack. I am giving away a lot of things now when I do not think it advisable to try to transport them, yet they are still useful or beautiful.

Lots of love to you all

Mary.

Stanley's letter and Myra's and Ruths letters are fine. Will will send a letter telling of Xmas day etc.

My dear Boy:-

Your handwriting has been on several envelopes addressed to me recently- forwarding a lot of letters about Geraldine and her letters and your own. Phebe and I have had a very clear idea of her care from all parties including her own letters. We thank the kind Father for all the success of her operation. Your letter written on Thanksgiving Day was about the latest. All the news was of the best. I think one letter came from Shelton a day or two after Thanksgiving and she was going to sit up the next day. Shelton letters also report that Aunt Elizabeth was much better- so she was much better- so she was sitting up and feeding her self. I do not however look for great improvement there. I am prepared for any news.

I judge your hernia is not growing worse and does not give you much trouble. I am wondering if the money from Grandma will help you so you will feel like having the hernia fixed soon. That money came just in the nick of time to help Geraldine.

I see by recent letters that Mrs. Goddard has written Mama, and Mama has sent the letter to you. You have likely seen Mrs. Goddard before this. Mr. Goddard is in Los Gotos, Cala. He writes me that he has bought a small house there and is keeping house by himself. Poor man, his days of happiness are passed unless he changes for the better. I am afraid he has definitely decided to get a divorce. He was a very much changed man the last time he came to Foochow. Several have spoken about it to me and they did not know what was the matter with him. No man can feel toward another person as he feels toward his wife without having it effect his whole life. Neither can he cover it up. People will notice it and wonder until they know the cause. I hope you will call on Mrs. Goddard occasionally. You may be a little comfort to her- without ever referring to her sorrow.

Orrin Main was here a few weeks ago. He will likely have charge of serviculture in Fukien Christian University while Mr. Kellogg is home this year. He is not much changed. He tried teaching in the Shanghai American School last year but did not make a complete services. The Shanghai Am. Sch. is a big affair now. They occupied new buildings last fall and had to rent extra rooms from the first. I sent mama a paper with the account. The North China Am. Sch. is also growing rapidly- almost faster than accommodations can be found. Several children go there from Foochow- 2 of Mr. and Mrs. West's children. He is the engineer in charge of the Min River Conservancy- deepening the channel. A Polk boy. He is in the Customs I think and now Mr. Goertz of our mission is in Peking- having taken his 12 yr. old Edith up. Incidentally he is to bring down for me a full bred Rhode Island Red rooster. I have one here full blood, and three fine hens- half R.I. Red and half White Leghorn. This cross makes a very fine bird,- larger than the Wt. Leghorn- and the eggs are larger. They lay well and do not set much. I tried breeding from these half bloods and the second generation is not a success- so I'll breed back to full blooded stock and see how they come out.

For the past two months I've been getting up at 6.10 a.m. and feeding my hens. This means a quarter of an hour- gathering greens and scraps. Then I lead a class of students in calisthenics. This gives me about 45 minutes of good brisk exercise. I get a good sweat. Then a good cold bath and shave and I am ready for breakfast. They boys think it not at all fun to get up before it is really light for exercise. This regime however makes me feel fine.

Phebe got tired and Dr. Dyer told her to drop everything before she went too far and get away for a good rest. She went over to Mr. and Mrs. Newells over at Sie Buo for a week and last Wed. she started for Ing Tai. She had begun to feel better already before she started for Ing Tai.

Harbingers of Spring are here. The apricot tree in front of the house is a mass of flowers. Not a leaf shows but it is white with bloom. The tree in front of the house in which mama, the girlies and I lived 1916-20 was bent over by a typhoon. It lives but does not bloom as full as the one in front of our house. Birds are also singing spring songs and building nests and mating.

Examinations began Friday. Commencement is Jan. 23- I hope to get away for a week or so, - go to Ing Hok and come home with Phebe.

It is always a great pleasure to read your letters. Your Thanksgiving letter was specially interesting- with its clear cut reasons for being thankful. God bless, guide you and your family Father

Mary tells about the various ill people there including her own sore finger. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Jan 16, 1924.

Dear Family,

This week we are more normal. Miss Burgess is back at work, after 10 days in bed with infected sinus and ear ache. Mrs. Powell arrived Tuesday noon. I got the infirmary cleared Sunday, but on Monday put two girls in. Today two boys came. There are many heavy colds still up and around. Miss Dizney comes over every morning and holds clinic, from 8.00 on. It has been a very great help. As for Dr. Love, he thereby gets a chance to eat breakfast in the morning. Any special cases get sent over, or he calls.

Lois Dawes had a fever of 104 last night, and it was only down to 101 this morning. Alfred Corbett "got funny" on the ice yesterday and strained a ligament in his hip. It puts him off the hockey team for this year.

The boys went to Peking and played the Marine team on Monday. The score was 3-1 for the Marines. Not bad, since the Marine team is the best in the city and has beaten everything so far. The Marines come down here to play this coming Saturday on our rink. This year the Boys have boarded off a rink on the pond. That is kept in good order. Tonight the girls had fun because the Academy Boys also have a rink and our team was playing the Chinese on their team and theirs on ours.

I have been having an infected finger for a week. The last two days it is really better, but it has been stubborn about yielding. (I see I need Mother to put an extra B in the above word [stubborn]) I want it to hurry, for it is tiresome to have to soak it several times a day, as well as time consuming.

We have the examination schedule ready for the ordeal next week. As usual, the Chinese classes are worse than a Chinese puzzle to fit in.

The children, Bobby Hunter, Trudy and Ruth Martin are just recovering from severe cases of tonsilitus. Now Mrs. Hunter is down, and today she broke out with a rash, and we do not know what it means. Miss Dizney is caring for her, so did not make us the afternoon visit we hoped for. Mr. Wickes was taken ill when out in the country and created quite a stir when brought home on a stretcher the other day. He is better.

The tiny babies are fine. Barbara grows so fast that I hardly know her if I stay away for a week. Caroline is less timid than she was, and fun to play with. Jean is a dear and greeted me most joyously when I called this noon. Margaret Wickes had to have her hair bobbed, because it got in the way of buttons on the back of her dress, and of bib pins. Gertrude Menzi has so much hair that she is in danger of needing to have it cut too. She is a beauty, and Mother and Father are most proud.

Mr. Goertz was here for 8 days, to get Edith established. Edith is doing finely; not so desperately homesick as I feared. She and I got up and had early breakfast with her father Monday morning and saw him off. The train was some late and we a bit early, so we took a free ride to the river. That insured seats too for the whole 12 who were going up.

I have taken my white fur coat in and am having it made into stolls. It makes three large ones and one small. Perhaps you girls will want them. If not, they will sell. The coat was a "white elephant". I wore it about twice a year here and stretched a point so that I might wear it once the year [when] I was home. There is a very good man on Teng Shih Kou now and I took them to him.

Lottie Lane Hildreth, who was out class president in college senior year, is again back in Peking. She is banished for a full year. The change is already working wonders. She is taking classes at the College and at Bridgeman to help out. She is to come down here and help with some of the cataloging of the new books. Martha was doing it, but she is carrying Billy's work, so the library has to go. Billy is better and the Doctor says can return to work at the new term. He gained 12 pounds the last two weeks.

Wish I could share my malt candy. I am munching it as I write, as a preventative for coughing. It works too!

Mr. Goertz took to Willard a Rhode Island red rooster, also a setting of eggs. Willard has one hen left, and I hope this will give him a fresh start. I sent my korie [duffel bag] down. In it were 20 pounds of millet and 10 of corn for Will and Phebe besides 20 for Mr. Goertz. I also looked over my possessions and sent the new towels, extra thread, etc that I shall have since I am staying three years instead of the possible five. As the whole Kienning station was burned out and the three ladies lost every thing somebody will be able to make excellent use of the things. I added my old black serge skirt which was the first long skirt I ever had, or the remnants of it. The serge is good as ever. I sent to Phebe the three legged mud vase, that Flora will remember. I had had made a frog of the same material to fit it. I hope it carried all safe. Mr. Goertz kindly, put it in his suit case which he was carrying by hand. In that way, he could check my korie. He had seven packages when he left here, and was to get three in Peking and more in Shanghai.

Margaret West traveled with him also. She is leaving school. It is a relief, as she was flunking in everything. She trumped up a bad appendix to explain her sudden departure.

It is most 10.00 P.M. and so Good night.

Thursday P.M. Last week the academy boys had an oratorical contest and all the high school went over to hear. It was very interesting, "China and World Peace", in which it was hard to find anything about peace; "The essentials of friendship", mostly about love between man and woman or of the sentimental kind, "The early civilization of China", which was very good, well planned and well delivered; and Physical and Moral education in China. The last two were a tie for first place. They were graded on delivery and content.

I called on Mrs. Dunlap two weeks ago. She sends regard to Flora. She is not singing for us this year as the Doctor will not let her.

Miss Dizney is here to help Dr. Love for six months, possibly, not probably, longer. She holds clinic over here every morning, from 8.00 on. It is 9.00 or after before she leaves. I never have outstayed her, even though I am down to soak my finger. It helps wonderfully. She fixes the in-patients up, and gives directions for the day. If anyone is very ill, she comes back to see them in the evening or late afternoon. Just now she is quarantined with Mrs. Hunter, so Doctor himself was over this morning.

With Mrs. Powell so inefficient at caring for the sick, it is going to help a lot to have a real nurse on the job. Mrs. Powell can and could do more if she would not insist on assuring one first that she is incapable of doing the job. She has harped on that so long that we are most convinced that she is. But she does some things well after all her talk. Mr. Menzi has become so imbued with her talk, that he can hardly see the good that does occasionally come out. Her staying over for ten days to be with her daughter did not help her cause. Martha can hardly be civil.

This is a terribly sick letter, but I will write again soon and hope for better news. Mrs. Hunter is already much improved, so said Jim last night. We awfully want the nurse for Lois, who is no better, and I am waiting to have the doctor call and tell us what plan he has been able to devise.

Pardon the errors and I will get this off by the afternoon mail. It is time to be off for class.

Lots of love.

P.S. I bought one of Graces blue bird pins when in with Mr. Goertz. There were only two and he wanted one. I am glad to learn of the new autos. I'll be there for a ride next year, so hope they don't wear out. Your tales of Mr. Wilhelm, sound good. I forgot to put R.F.D. on one of your letters, but hope you are well enough known to get it just the same.

Lovingly

Mary.

Ingtai,
January 27, 1924.

Dear Gould,

Your good letter with all its enclosures came on the American mail for which we all waited and waited- just three days ago. As I was here, I didn't expect my letters to reach me till the next day, but Miss Perkins had sent them on, so Priscilla and I got ours as soon as the others.

This is Feb. 1, so there are several days to write up. I am having a very pleasant visit with the Smiths. I don't get up for breakfast unless I choose, which I did this A.M. for the first time; since I am supposed to be resting. I usually get up for dinner and super. We have been for several walks, for there are lots of perfectly beautiful ones quite near here, and the views are marvelous.

Mr. Farley, who is a very obviously engaged man is here visiting the Smiths and it is lucky, for otherwise Priscilla wouldn't get the long walks she wants. They have gone off this A.M. to the top of some mountain before we go to the pagoda across the river, for lunch. Mr. Farley goes home with the Smiths next May to be married, and he is so set up over it that he talks of it more than two thirds of the time.

Conversation is a strange thing, isn't it? Here it consists largely in reminiscences of Priscilla's or Mr. Farley; in rantings against the mission practices and policies, or in discussions of the surrounding country and the comfort or manner of the trips up taken by all the arrivals for the vacation. As I have recently been using eye-monacle on the "Current Opinion" and other papers that tell of Turkey's new republic, the uprising in Greece a month ago, of the Highway commissioner's essay contest prizes and many other things, I would like to hear talk on that. However, we are having an awfully good time, and if ever there was a dear woman Mrs. Smith is one.

Father has probably put my letter on to you telling of my trip up. It was quite a trip, I'm here to say. After I arrived, arrived a crowd of 2000 people, protesting to the Inghok magistrate against the further building of the horse road from Gak liang to Foochow. I just stayed at the Girls' School with Miss Lanktree till Priscilla came up. Incidentally we had two or three parties, took several walks on the crossroad, - a broad but not smooth highway leading thru confiscated fields and orchards to Foochow- and later I went to graduation. General Song was there, the man who is building the road; and during the exercises he asked Mr. Smith who that little girl was, sitting with Margaret. The "little girl" happened to be me! I wore a long and very up-to-date velvet dress, that came to the ground, and a hat. Now how do you suppose I was to take that sort of remark?

Priscilla is rooming in the same room with me (Feb. 2.) and she tries to see that I sleep as much as I ought. Several nights she found me awake, but night before last she blew out her light before coming to bed, very thoughtfully so as not to awaken me, and I thought I'd set here mind at peace and let her think I was asleep. My breaths came as regularly and gustily as a real sleeper's, so far as I could see and I made good noisy turns. Everything went well till next A.M. when suddenly she turned on me and asked if I were asleep when she came to bed the night before. When I told her no, she reported me at the breakfast table at the Smiths. So there is fun and excitement even in being out of commission.

Yesterday everybody of American citizenship in Ingtai took dinner on the hillside above here. There were the Donaldsons with four children and their guests, the Metcalfs (Franklin B. and wife), the Smiths with Priscilla and me, and Mr. Farley as guests; Lucy Lanktree with Mrs. Bedient and Billy, and Miss Asher of the University as guests. We had a grand meal in the presence of a raft of children spectators.

Today the young people of brawn[?] under Mr. Smith's and Mr. Donaldson's guidance took a long hike up to a silver river near here and on to a monastery in the hills. It was a perfect day and I should so like to have gone. But Margaret and I stayed abed all day. She is trying to bring out a vivid case of measles. We played "Birds", like "Authors", and since we were in separate beds, we strung a string between and exchanged cards by sliding a paper envelope in which they were along a string. I spent the afternoon in bed.

You said something in your letter which I have sent on to Father, about selling things to make money. I think you could sell Chinese parasols- paying $1 silver and selling, as at Vantine's N.Y.C., at $3 or $3.75 gold. Or I can get jade ornaments and carved ivory that the frat men might like for their girls. Tea I shall try to plan with Father, for by all present appearances, I shall not be able to go back to work for a month or two yet. I may stay here for that time- I don't know anything about it. It's a hard lesson to learn but perhaps I'll know next time better how to take care of myself.

As to your operation- I think, judging from all my recent experience, that you'd better do it as soon as possible. Health isn't a thing one can tamper with, and money if you can borrow or plan the amount temporarily, is so much more wisely managed by using it for the most important things first. By delaying your operation now you are simply going on ebbing reserve strength, for which you will pay later- surely!

Feb. 4. Today is lovely! I am sitting on the Smith's lovely veranda railing- one long flat stone,- taking a sunbath and writing to you. Just here some folks came up to plan a walking party to a monastery over one night, and in the excitement I wrote nothing. They started yesterday, Mr. Farley, the Metcalfs, (Mr. and Mrs.) and Mr.

Donaldson, no one of them knowing the way. Mr. Farley was quite mean about not wanting the ladies to go- I presume you can sympathize with him. Finally only one lady went- Mrs. Metcalf, because she wouldn't let her husband go without her.

Yesterday P.M. Mrs. Smith, Priscilla and I walked over to the pagoda and met Miss Waddell's huge family there for tea. And today we've all been just lagging. I expect father up by Friday – today is Wednesday the 6th of Feb. Poor Father spent his birthday yesterday at a retreat of English people to which he was invited last summer.

Since I started this very poor epistle, Father has sent a whole raft of letters from everyone in the family but you and Mother. Since yours both came in the former mail, this simply completes the collection. It was good to hear of Jerry's recovery and comfort at Oberlin, and of the Xmas doings there. Ah! You did have a letter in the bunch too! I'm sorry you didn't go home for any of the vacation; but you did very well by your purse considering the short time you spent. The P.O. work must have been interesting at the Xmas rush season. What were your hours? Were you very tired at the end of the time? How very nice of the Beatties to take you in!

One of the Y.W. ladies at Miss Waddell's now is a Miss Hand. She has beautiful brown eyes, and a very musical speaking voice, but is lame in one foot. I have seldom been so drawn to a woman on only once seeing her. Do you remember that in Mt. Vernon I had a Mr. Hand as principal of the annex in No. 10 when I went to H.S. that first year? I asked her if she knew him; but she doesn't.

Margaret developed a very red case of measles Sunday morning, but has been fading ever since. Now she is planning things for us all to do, and sees us all as often as we will come in. Her mother is anxious for her to have fresh air, so opens the windows; only to have Mr. S., as soon as she goes out, close them again, as he fears she will catch cold. Isn't it the funniest thing to hear a child report the disagreements of its parents- especially right before them? Mr. Smith there when she told us.

I must bring this to a close now, as it is already too rambling. Yesterday was China New Year, and crackers that sounded like guns exploded all day. Some men on horses, or ponies came galloping along the grand horseroad about 3 P.M. It was quite a startling sight for there were no ma fres[?] and the horses were going really fast.

By the time Jerry is teaching again and the rest of you are back in classes. I hope Dot gets a good position and the favor of the "young lord" of Oberlin who was "stalled" in her latest. Very much love to you from your sister Phebe.

N.C.A.S. Jan. 29, 1924.

Dear Home Folk,

This two weeks since my last letter. Meanwhile, I have been giving examinations and correcting them under difficulties, I wrote that I had a sore finger which was better. It was but it got stuck and the last joint kept swollen in spite of efforts to make it go down.

Consequently Dr. Love took the nail off a week ago. It has been a clean cut and is doing well. But I find it awkward to use my left hand only and some times must have the assistance of the right. It is the little finger, so it is possible to get the needed assistance occasionally.

I got the girls to help me take exams off on the duplicator, and put no marks on the papers except the grades. I like that method, and may use it in the future. A careful review in class is better than a lot of red marks.

Miss Burgess and I went in for the week end with Mrs. Galt. We had a nice visit. We were both full up with work, but the rest and change did us good. She still has trouble with her ear, but it grows better.

The infirmary got cleared out last Sunday. Lois left for Tsinan by the early train Saturday and we have had word that she and her father arrived safely. She is in bed for a few days to get over the trip, but is none the worse for it. That blue express is a great boon to comfortable travel. Even the third class is always heated. The other Pneumonia patient got out Sunday afternoon. He is back in school. We have put in two girls who are feeling as though a cold were starting.

The Hunter family is all coming on finely. Maude gave up the nurse a week ago. Jim never did get a rash. Baby got a rash but no bad throat. They are like Jack Sprat and his wife, it needs the whole family to make up a complete case of Scarlet fever.

Every one else is at their usual job, add in usual health. Of course a few colds. Esther Moody has gone to Shansi for her vacation. The two men at Fenchow are free for their vacation. Frank Hutchins has stolen Martha Fenn's heart. I look for the announcement party soon. He is staying at the Menzis and Martha is there most of the time.

Billy is back looking fine, but not allowed to take full work for a while to be sure of no return of his trouble.

Henry was down for the afternoon today. The Fiskens and the Fenns are very thick. Billy is eating there for a while.

I bought a few strings of beads, some earrings and bracelets in town on Monday. When I get time to do them up, I'll send them. Do you know if the beads I sent to Geraldine ever reached her? Miss Burgess mailed them for me and did not register them, so I have been a bit worried about them. I know that Geraldine was ill about the time they were due to arrive, and that her Mother was busy and worried. But I should like to hear. Did you get some earrings, and did they sell? I could match some of the chains as well as not, if people like them.

I received a money order from Mr. McCann this week, for $3.80 gold from Flora. I remember something about it, but will have to look up and see for what it is sent. I have .80 silver collected for some coat hangers which she left and which it is easier to sell than transport. Towels, bedding, etc. I should also recommend selling. How about it?

Your last letter I sent by Mr. Goertz to Will. I am still waiting to hear how the rooster, and eggs traveled. Mr. Goertz wrote Edith that they arrived, but that is all.

It was good to hear that Elizabeth was bit more comfortable. I do hope it continues. Tell Paul Clapp that I am glad every day that he is still with you. I am hoping soon to hear that the candy arrived. I wonder what its state will be, good I hope.

Lot of love.

Mary.

N.C.A.S., Tunghsien, Feb. 10, 1924

Dear Home Folk,

It is hard to name the season, these days. One day is a glorious spring like day, warm and sunny, the next it snowed hard all day. Today is the nice variety, but there is snow where the sun has not hit. One day the children rolled snow balls and made snow men, but the snow has been too small in amount the other days.

Jim Hunter started for Nanking last Monday night, to attend the conference of college and agriculture people. Maude cleaned herself and has had the care of baby. Then Bobby started to peal, after nearly two weeks. Hence the family is not united, except him. On Friday Jeannie started to have swollen glands, and she has kept us anxious, with high fever. But she sat up and played, and was most cheerful most of the time. This morning her fever was down to 101. It had not been lower than 103 since Friday, and mostly 104-105. To make it harder, Doctor had a call to go to Tientsin, and left early Friday. Mrs. Evans had a baby about two weeks old and has not recovered as she should. She wants Dr. Love and no one else.

I have been guardian for Carol these two nights. The babies are dears. Caroline is most shy, but Barbara will smile most winningly at anyone who will take time to talk to her. Junior and Betty are getting to be big children, and are most interesting.

My finger is getting most well. The nail is just starting to show. Still the loosened part below the nail is unattached, so it is not ready to be exposed to the world. I think my nail is coming sooner than Dr. Love's did. The swelling suddenly went down a lot last week, so the finger is only a little more than normal size. It was swollen for so long that the skin is slow about shrinking. It was good to be able to bend it after nearly a month with it straight.

Monday Eve. Flora's letter has just come, Jan. 7- Feb. 11. I do not wonder that you could not find time to write sooner. I wish I were there to help out in these emergencies. I wish you had sent some suggestion as to the way to spend the $25.00. I am trying to think of something that will be permanent, or as near so as possible. Or would you rather it be put into the general fund to help out?

We had a bit of excitement here yesterday at church. The lamp over the platform has been hung for some weeks without any extra wire, because the wire made it too low. Yesterday in the midst of one of the hymns, the lamp fell crash onto the floor. It did not explode, for some reason. The straw mat caught fire and the lamp stood upright burning. Mrs. Smith was near the back door and grabbed the coco mat and handed it to Mr. Lund. The mat was soon all right and the lamp carried out. But then we saw a flame in the hole from which the hook had been pulled. A fire extinguisher in the hands of Billy Fenn, put that out. But we were not sure that it was not smouldering, since the sound is deadened by a filling of saw dust. Hence, Mr. Lund and Capt. Fisker took up a board over the place and made us feel safe. The beam is charred and some of the sawdust, but apparently the extinguisher put it out at once.

Miss Young and Miss Lum gave us a recital last night. They have been having some fine evenings with duets and favored us with the products. They were good. Mariette has come back with some clever new songs. Did I write that Margaret Ann Smith and her sister, Ruth are here? Ruth looks like Margaret, but is very dark, and taller. She is not enamoured of China yet.

Mrs. Fenn was down for the week-end with Martha. She is as nice as ever. Grace Breck was at the Ladies house, so was Laura Cross. All three send regards to Flora. So did Mrs. Galt who was my guest Saturday afternoon.

Miss Dizney is still being a godsend to us, and takes clinic every morning. She is a merry body to have around! She has the annex fitted up prettily, canary colored hangings and two of Margaret Menzi's canaries to complete the picture. The canaries are Safid and Katura.

General Feng has just announced his engagement to a Miss L. who is a Tungchow girl. She graduated from the Girls school here, from Bridgeman, and Yen Cing. Now she is with the Y.W.C.A. Friends are urging a speedy marriage for the childrens sake, but his wife has been dead only about two months. He says wait a year. Mrs. Galt speaks well of her.

Jean Josselyn is having a hard time. She had flu just after Paul Dudley was born. At an aftermath she had caked breasts. Now they are contemplating operating. Dr. Love feels that it must result in that. He saw her yesterday at the hospital. She has been running a fever for two or more weeks. Pauls sister is out. She is a trained nurse and is caring for Marian and baby Paul. She seems very efficient. But she has a job and is due to enter the P.U.M.C. in two weeks.

I have written Mr. McCann for sailings, as soon as possible after June 15. With four rugs for Leolyn and two for Miss Bostwick's brother. I want to get a southern route boat. Otherwise the northern route would be preferable. I'll let you know as soon as the date of sailing is determined.

Mothers birthday, and Father and Mother's wedding day have come and gone. Fathers birthday is soon here, long before this reaches you. This will not arrive before Flora's either. Congratulations to both Father and Flora. Edith, Wells, Marjorie and Dorothy make a month full of noted days.

I thank you for the letters from and about Geraldine. Will has sent me some of his too. I will send on the one Flora sent, for he can not get too much news of home. Phebe has been off to Ing Hok to get a nerve rest. She is a hard worker. I do not like to think of her needing a rest so badly, so early on her career.

I will bring as much as I can, Flora. I am taking toll of the pillows to dress up my couch by day. Is there anything in the line of rugs, you want? I might as well bring a few more, as well as six.

"Cases" are still much in vogue in the N.C.A.S. I wonder if Dan Cupid will have enough valentines to go around? Katie Dodd and Edith Watson have run a regular factory. Miss Dizney alone ordered 30.

We have a new scheme for exercise. A chart is to hang in the reception room. Each girl must "by order" take 5 hours of exercise per week. Every extra 5 hours count a point. A prize will be given to the one who has the most points at the end of the year. The girls keep their own records. But the record sheet is for all to read.

There goes the girls bell for bed. I hope this gets the boat on the 17th, which is the next one out.

I will be on the watch for the box of books etc.

Lots of love

Mary

I shall hope for a good report from Oliver. It is hard to understand why he has so much to suffer.

I do hope the treatment helps Elizabeth. It surely seems to have done no harm.

 February 24, 1924.

Dear Home Folk,

I have had a writing streak and have five letters to show for it. There are about 15 more, so I am not open to congratulations yet.

First a catalogue of the sick, then more cheerful news. All in the compound are well. Jean Hunter has gotten back her fully joy of life since the Doctor opened the abcess, due the Scarlet fever. Bobby is not entirely well but can not understand why he can not go out with "Daddy". "I have no sickness" says he in Chinese. Jim came over today for Sunday School for the first time. Maude will be out of quarantine soon, we hope, but her feet are terribly slow in peeling. My finger is out of its bandage, and doing fine. Elizabeth Burgess does not agree, for it is a bit unsightly with only a tiny new nail started and the flesh at the base still swollen. Doctor consoles me by saying it may be swollen for some months yet. Who cares, since the soreness is gone and the infection.

Jean Josselyn is back in the hospital. She had infected breast and when I called last Sunday she had gone up to the operating room. They removed one breast. The infection was spreading and so they broke their rule and used the Sabbath day. She was doing well when Doctor Love called on Monday. I hope to see her tomorrow.

I enclose the card to Lura Aiken's wedding which came to Flora and me this week. I hope to go in altho it is the day school closes for the spring holidays. Mrs. Corbett and Mrs. Clarke are giving her a miscellaneous shower this week Thursday. I shall not try to go, but will send something. I am thinking of sending some of my Foochow finger bowls for Flora and me as a wedding gift. Sorry I can not ask Flora for her advice. The man is some older than she, I hear.

We had a Holyoke meeting of seven last Monday evening at Mrs. Cook-Willner's. On Sunday Lottie and I discovered a Mrs. Leach, '10 [class of 1910], who it seems has been in town for a short time. Her husband is taking an eye course at the P.U.M.C. They belong in Hu Chow, near Soochow. Lottie came down with me Monday and stayed till Thursday. The whole Leach family, 4, came for Thursday afternoon. It was a blustering day and grew worse all afternoon. I invited in several of the compound people to meet them. Then we had compound tea here this Saturday, so we have fed the folk quite a bit this week.

Our sitting room looks fine with Leolyn's rug down. It is big enough to give a real finish. Evidently the room is more attractive this year, for our compound guests last year used to give the impression of eating and running. Now they stay so we are late for supper sometimes.

General Feng's wedding was last Tuesday. Marriette went. Today he and his bride came down to spend the day with her parents. They are Farmer Li who lives next the "London Mission house" as Flora will know it. They came by auto, with all curtains drawn. He made three stipulations, in choosing his wife; a Christian, a college graduate, and economical woman. Li Te Chang, is the first we know. She thought the wedding would be postponed sometime, so said the papers. But the needs of the five children made him hasten it. She had signed a contract with the Y.W.C.A. for three months just the day before the announcement party. But he said it was not fitting that his bride be seen on the streets between her betrothal and the wedding, so she has not been able to do a thing for the Y.W. Last Friday Feng was dining at the American Legation and was stopped on Legation Street driving with too bright lights and for speeding. Some of the papers are making much to do about it. The Legation reported it, but that was all they did. About three weeks ago one of the lesser officers wanted a car switched from one line to another at Fengtai. Mr. Bessell was in command and sent for the necessary permission. The officer got hot and knocked Mr. B. down and maltreated him. This too is the cause of much talk. The officer is still at large, and the people want him arrested.

I fear that the request for Cora's beads got overlooked, as I do not record sending them. I will get them next time I am in, possibly tomorrow. Also I will look for the turquoise matrix, for Mrs. Goodhue. I got several strings of beads, some bracelets, and earrings last time I was in and will send as soon as I have time to pack them. I will enclose a list now hoping I may pack them this week.

We are feeling very crank with an evening train. It leaves Peking at 7.45 and goes back about 9.00. I planned to attend College Club tomorrow and use it, but the speaker is too busy to give her talk so it is postponed. Mr. Menzi had to give a chapel talk on it last week. It was queer that three children "missed the train" on the first Monday that there was a later one to take.

The street railway in Peking has come to a standstill. It evidently discouraged them to have the store house burn about Christmas time. I say the rails will have gone through to American by the time they are ready to use them. Certain it is, that they cause no jar when one crosses them now.

The chicken experiment of Doctor and Jim was fairly successful. They got a 63% hatch. The improvised brood is interesting. The stove has a huge reflector over it which can be raised or lowered. A second lot of eggs are now in the incubator. I took the guests over Thursday. The man in charge told us to "wait a bit" as we started to leave. He followed us with three eggs, closed the door of the outer room, and fitted an egg into a hole bored there. It was an excellent way to candle an egg. The young embryo was show up beautifully. Why buy expensive apparatus and high power lights when the sun will do the work through a know hole?

My last letter from Mr. McCann said he was engaging passage on the Shinyu Maru sailing June 29th. It is later than I had hoped, but the Taft and Cleveland are being taken off so traffic will be crowded. I came on the Shinyu before. This will be better though, for Miss Young, Mrs. Sheffield, Mr. Stelle, and Miss Buell are booked on her too. I'd come northern route but for the many things I have to leave in and near San Francisco.

Leonard has been trying to get a school carpenter. We could pretty near keep him busy with repairs, and he could make many of the new things between times. Last week two of the servants got to playing with knives in their hands and one got badly hurt. He is in the hospital.

On Lantern Festival night the Senior and Junior girls and I got supper. The boys of those classes served it. Then the whole of them washed the dishes and cleaned up. They did a good job too. We made thick vegetable soup as before. But the desert was ice cream and chocolate cake. Mrs. Powell made the latter. She has been wanting to try out her favorite Receipt [recipe] so as to get her courage up to make it for compound tea. It was successful. She has had difficulty to get hold of the girls. I hoped the good cake would help and think it has a bit. It surely pleases them to have her do it, and the success assured them that she can do something well.

Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Hildreth (Lottie) and I were personally escorted in to see the ice lanterns by Chu Shih Fu. They were good this year, in spite of two years without them. Some of the others scorned our party and failed to find the lanterns too.

On the evening of Washington's birthday the students gave a second appearance of "The Rajah's Revenge" and did very well. Most of the audience had never seen it, as the cast took those who had been here. In the morning the children thought the spoonerism on the day fitting "Birthington's Washday" for Len had them clean off all markings which they had put on desks, walls, etc.

I hope the Dreyer injections continue good, that Father is well, Oliver still improving, and the rest of you all right. Father had a birthday last Monday and Flora has one tomorrow. Dorothy's is the next day.

Phebe's letter of Jan 26th made good time. I have had it two days.

Love to everyone. I think of Paul Clapp and Miss Renoll's as belonging now. It is nice to think of them so. I hope to see them both next August.

With love Mary.

N.C.A.S., Tungchow, March 6, 1924.

Dear Home Folk,

Last week I was on duty. I started well by having Miss Burgess take the Saturday evening so I could attend Mrs. Sheffield's birthday supper. I went in on the early evening train and returned by the late one. Esther Moody came back with me. We had two courses of the dinner, but missed the other and the speeches. All say that those were clever. There were 53 at the tables and places for four more who had expected to be there. The Corbetts and the Bakers were the only ones not American Board. The Bakers have just moved into the compound, taking the house the Stelles had the year Flora and I lived with them for a bit.

Sunday morning I ran off to see Gertrude Menzi have her bath while I would not be needed as the children were in Sunday School. Then I got in on the last of Barbara Loves ebolutions [ablutions- cleansing] also. On Monday I skipped when the letter writing was going on and saw Margaret Wickes bathed. Do not ask which is the best baby!! Margaret has the darkest eyes and the most hair; Gertrude is the fattest, and Barbara kicks the hardest in her bath. All have a ready smile.

Mrs. Hildreth, her husband and the two children came down Monday afternoon and all but the husband are there till they go to PeiTaiHo. I had them all over to supper as Mr. Hildreth was leaving the next morning by the early train. The kiddies are dears. I was over there for supper Wednesday evening. Tuesday was compound supper at the Ladies house. So Lottie and I dined together the first three nights.

We started in Tuesday to rehearse a new version of Pinafore which we faculty are to render for the children the 19th. It will be rapid work, but we would all rather work and get it over than to have it hang on till after vacation.

Fred Balteau has the mumps. Dot Galt is home with symptoms and Margaret McCann in quarantine because she has been exposed, up at Dots. Both the Grubbs are in the infirmary with a form of Flue. Clinic was well attended this morning. I do not keep such close watch now that I am no longer a regular attendant with my finger. My nail is grown out about a third of its length. I even pound the keys of this machine with it sometimes.

The beads are still not done up. I got an extra string, black and red, for 90 cents last week. I think it will take. It is the woven style, like the tiny corals but only glass.

"Pamela Pounce" came from Miss Brewster last week. I have sent on to Will two bundles of Sentinels and receive as many from him. He has forwarded all the letters from and about Geraldine's illness. It was certainly nice for her to have you all helping to pass the time so much. She is appreciative too, of the time and strength it took to visit her so often and of that needed to spare the visitors from the busy home.

I am glad to hear of Floras good position for another year [see note at end of letter]. My sailing is changed. The Shinyo was too full so I am hustling off on the Korea sailing the 14th of June. I am delighted, for that will bring me home nearly as early as Flora must leave for summer school. I'll miss the strawberries but not much else!! Hurrah! Miss Young is on the same steamer, so I have company as far as Honolulu at least. I have so many rugs to take that I am loaning them out. Carol Love is using one of Leolyn's big ones as there is only one room here large enough outside of the infirmary, and I will not put it there. It looks right well in Carols living room. It will get some wear but that is what I want.

The weather seems to have malaria, every other day is a glorious warm sunny spring day and the alternative ones are either snowy or cloudy and windy. Today is the off day. It looks as though we would have the Hunters at close range soon, if one can judge from the display of property on the lawn, porch, window sills, and clothes lines for the last two days. Doctor is not going to fumigate, only sun and air thoroughly.

I hope your good winter continued, thought the papers tell of a bad storm in New York. I did not find that it was of long duration.

In three months and one week I shall start out on the briny deep for home.

Love to every one. You will have to write soon, if there are any errands for me to do.

Mary.

Miss Beard, whose service here began in 1899 and ended in 1926, left her position as teacher of fifth grade in South Orange and from 1906 to 1909 taught in a school for the children of Missionaries in China. Coming back she became principal of First Street School from 1909 to 1914, when she went to China again to establish the North China American School at Tunghsien, twelve miles east of Pekin. On her return she was appointed principal of the Montrose School in 1924. The school in China is a union institution founded by the American Board, the Methodist Episcopal Board, and the Presbyterian Board for the children of missionaries in the provinces of Chihli, Shantung and Shansi, as well as for other American and European children. The course of study, textbooks, supplies and the spirit of the school were all American, and, needless to say, directly in contact with the work done in the schools of South Orange.

On page 284 Flora is listed as being the Principal of Montrose from 1924 -1926.

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

March 25, 1924.

Dear Brother,

By the last mail I sent you the things by which you were to get your Christmas gift---a box of Chinese parasols or umbrellas. As I was incapacitated at Christmas time, I did not get off my presents tho I had many of them already bought. These I got just recently at the shop that is doing quite an American business thru the help of Mr. Munson the Y.M.C.A. secretary here. I thot you could use the money they will bring to better advantage than if I should send you the actual things; and tho you do have to work for your present, so to speak, I thot it would be a really better gift all around. These are sun parasols that can be used in rain. So many fear rain will spoil them!

There are 13 umbrellas in the box:

- 1 short one with horn tip and handle and handle strap
- 8 with tassels
- 4 bamboo handles without tassels.
- (1 is a child's size)

Judging by the prices that others who have sent them home have got for them, I should say that you can get at least $3.50 for the 12 and $4.00 for the horn-tipped one. They actually cost about $1.20 apiece but that does not need to be published. They should get to you in time for the spring buying and with the college crowd there they should sell well. If you want to order for people I can get more provided the order reaches me before June 1st. I don't want to go into the business exactly but will do a bit this year since the fad in the U.S. this spring is all for Chinese stuff and these umbrellas are so easy to send. I hope you can make near $45 on them. There ought to be little or no duty on them so what you get is pure gain. Good luck to you and let me know how things go. You may not want to do a selling business but these ought to be easy to get rid of. If they go hard, I have written to Marjorie and you can send them to her.

In a few days I shall start off a few boxes of the Jasmine tea for you to sell. I didn't want you to get all these bundles on the same mail as you would have them to pay duty. Please let me know how much duty you have to pay if any. This will also go toward your Christmas gift.

We have had quite a bit of excitement recently between Mr. Brand's wedding and a mild revolution. Perhaps Father has already written you of them. Priscilla Holton, our new tutor, has a sweet voice and has made quite a hit on South Side. So she was invited to the wedding. Of course it was in the Little Stone Church. The bride and groom marched up the aisle singing the first hymn with the congregation, and Priscilla said they just pranced up. When the ceremony was progressed to the ring part, Mr. Brand nodded to "Son Willie" to come and hold the bride's bouquet as she had no attendant. Poor Willie is a rather good-looking man, tall and blond, but not very full of life. So he stood there holding the flowers thru the rest of the ceremony. After they had raced out of the church, the bridal party went home in rickshas instead of in a horse carriage or some grander conveyance. Later they took a weeding trip up the river in a houseboat and Willie was invited to go too---but declined decidedly, we heard. The lady is a nice looking lady of Mr. Brand's class in England, has money, and has taught in Miss Lambert's school for the last year. I have an idea that Miss Lambert is not wholly innocent of helping the matter along, for she is a good friend of Mr. Brand's. Miss Perkins met the bridal pair on the street after their return from the trip and that they looked a bit bored already. Willie wasn't very happy about the arrangement--- and I am not sure that I blame him tho in my mind this Mrs. Brand is much better looking and sweeter than the first.

The end of the matter is that I got an invitation to go to the wedding two days after the day it took place. An invitation to their At Home was also included so, as I was not going out then I just had to send my card. The worthy groom I understand, addressed all the invitations himself so he could not get them all done at once. The church was crowded as it was and I couldn't have gone anyway so I got my full quota of fun out of it as it was.

The revolution was like all those of last year. General Song, who was supposed to be in charge here, was paid several thousands of dollars by Uong, one of his underlings, to vacate Foochow in his favor. After having borrowed most of Uong's best soldiers and taken all his ammunition with the ostensible purpose of going to the border of Kiangsi to take the head position there, Song left the city and went to the Upper Bridge. The next morning he came back and drove Uong out, and took the city. It is said that Chinese all over the city knew of the plan of Song of leaving under pretence and then coming back as he did. So Uong must have known of it. Except for the anxiety of the people and the kidnapping and maltreatment of them on the march as they dang the soldier's loads, I find little but amusement in the "revolutions" we have been having. They don't seem to hinder the growth of trade and opulence along our street since last China New Year there have been many new fronts put on and the whole appearance of our district is much improved.

Miss Perkins is putting in a horse road of stone from the corner going into the city to our gate. It is now over half done tho it is rather rough. Some of the business men of the street are cooperating with her tho their names are not in evidence. If they are known, it will lay them open to all kinds of calls for money so they are willing "humbly" to help in the dark.

Last night I was trying to go to sleep when the most awful clatter and bedlam arose out in the street. After a man had run away yelling bloody murder, I heard the Fire gong ring and the shouting increased. Then I looked out and saw smoke coming from a house not far away. They soon got it under control so we didn't have too much excitement.

I am still resting, walking two hours a day and eating as much as I can. This week I am going to Diongloh with Miss Nutting and Miss Ward for a week, and then I hope that I shall be ready for work. Rest feels rather good but so much of it, especially when I cannot read or use my eyes much, is a bit of a bore sometimes. I am discovering a lot of places and things around this part of the city on my walks so that is interesting.

I can write with the typewriter by the touch system so I do not have to use my eyes. The Smiths are to be here for the next few days for mission meeting so with Margaret, we shall have a high time.

I hope you are not working too hard and that your health remains good. I hope you can plan to have your operation as you suggest at least by next September. We got such good pictures from the girls of themselves just after Christmas. They meant a great deal. Aren't they a stylish set of girls?! Well, I must stop now and take my hour's rest and then my walk. Father is working very hard but I think he is well. Much love to yourself and best wishes for the term's work and the summer.

Your loving sister,
Phebe.

Train en route for Paotingfu
March 26, 1924

Dear Home folks,

Vacation is five days old and no letter has started homeward. The last two weeks were very full with a rehearsal of our Operetta every afternoon for 1 ½ hours. The fateful evening was the 19th, the night before school closed-and everything was a huge success. The dinner was a Chinese feast and how the children did eat! Several members of the school do not care for the native food so one table had foreign food. Five preferred to sit there, Mrs. Poncill, Miss Dizney and three students.

Our costumes were easy to get up. I wore my old brocaded white silk skirt, a gay sweater and for the out door scene added my white fur stoll and big black velvet hat. Martha Fenn was the stern, old fashioned school marm; Billy the sedate, sour pedant; Mr. Breakey the gay dashing fellow in sport clothes. Miss Burgess wore knickers and carried a racket and balls. Mrs. Powell dressed as herself. Miss Dizney had on an evening dress of one of the girls, sleeveless and so low we do not allow the girl to wear it. Len was in his gown.

The story was a faculty meeting at which we discuss various items of business (never the same at any two rehearsals) and Bualry (prof) and I plan to go to a movie. Len disapproves of movies and forbids us to go. Then the Prof urges that we go anyway but I am shocked and sing "Refrain, and?? Prof. You ?? from pressing". etc. But he sings a little song ending, "While there you sit, know I'm enjoying it". Here I yield and we are going.

We steal out in the second act but get caught at the foot of the steps by the Boss who has been told of our plans by the Pedant. We are ordered to our rooms but Butterball (Miss Dizney) tells us that the Boss has invited her to go to the show. Here we wind up with a grand chorus of rejoicing. In the first class comes the lines "Hurrah, hurrah, the spit balls fly" and when we were recalled for an encore, we say that and then "wash basin balls" as the children called them.

We cleared the dining room and had the Virginia Reel the length of that. Shades of Mrs. Gordon!!!! It was 10.45 when we broke up and went to bed. The children have a "band" consisting of several violins, a ukulele, a jazz whistle, Chinese cymbals and the piano. They played for the Virginia Reel and for once we all heard the music.

On the 17th we had a Holyoke dinner. It was asked that all Mount Holyoke-ites all over the world plan a get together that day to celebrate the completion of the fund for the Clapp Science Building. It was Dr. Clapp's birthday. We had a grand Chinese feast. Because of the dysentery cases traceable to restaurants we had it at Miss Willner's house. Her cook made everything except the roast duck. Lottie Hildreth, also 1905, Anita Day[?] 1929 and I had to leave a little early to get the 7.50- back to Tungchow.

School closed the 20th. I went to Peking at noon to finish the ticket buying and stayed for Lura Aiken's wedding. It was at the P.U.M.C. auditorium. The decorations were pink and white and the maid of honor and flower girls were in pink and white. Esther Moody was maid-of-honor and Gertrude Martin and Helen Corbett flower girls. The youngest Dobson was ring bearer. He had silver bow and arrow slung over his shoulder. He told his mother he would carry the rings but he wanted to go home as soon as he had done it.

I had dinner that night with Jean Josselyn. She is much better but still has to have her wound dressed twice daily. Mr. Josselyn's sister, a trained nurse, is still with them as she sprained her wrist being thrown from a ricksha so can not go on duty at the hospital. Baby Dudley is growing finely and Marian is a dear.

We had a Pasttime Cub Meeting last Saturday night as a farewell for the Fiskens. The "neophytes" were numerous, Mrs. Lowry, Capt. and Mrs. Fiskens, Henry Fenn and Bill, Miss Dizney, Maryette Fenn, Mrs. Hemingway, Ruth Smith, and Mrs. Hildreth. They could not eat up the refreshments ?? because we started with a compound supper and made sure of them.

I have started my spring sewing and have a dress and blouse at the tailors. My gold dress is being dyed brown after being made over.

The latest from the Korea Maru is that she sails June 17 instead of the 14th. I really like it better as I can use three extra days to advantage. I am thinking how best to get everything home.

I have irregular jade, 30 pieces large and small. They are packed but not posted. I gave 18 cents each for them. About 20 cents would be right, unless you think them worth 25 cents. I could not find the unstrung carved bone beads so sent a string which you can sell to be broken or any way you like. Just calculate the cost per bead if sold separately to make it equal the cost of a chain ?? a pendant.

I mailed some lace and pendants to Miss Brewster this week. I will get the cost of her order Monday. Grace's blue with ?, four (4) also went off. I had had them for some days.

Exchange is good for selling. I got 192.50 for the $25.00 draft. It would have been better to wait but I did not know it. It was 195+ when I was at the bank last.

Politically everything is upset but we go on not-with-standing. The papers say there will be trouble this spring but Chang Tsao Lin says not.

Phebe's last letter said Elizabeth was not quite so well but Oliver better. It is good to hear that Father keeps up the business so well. But I am glad that the milk ?? is sold. The Sentinels have much to say about milk business.

I feel quite proud to see Ben's name in the paper so often and always with sympathy for his position and methods.

Peking is getting very modern. On all corners big white lines have been painted on the pavement to keep autoists to the left. The highest number ?? auto that I have seen is 1200+. I forget the last two figures. The car tracks are all laid throughout the city and poles up but there they have stopped.

I'll write again. Hope you can decipher this.

With love

Mary.

NORTH CHINA AMERICAN SCHOOL
T'UNGHSIEN CHIH LI

April 7, 1924

Dear Home Folk,

My last letter was just before vacation. Edith Goertz and I had a fine time at Paotingfu. Miss Andrews is wonderfully smart, teaches 2 classes a day, inspects the latting[?], takes chapel services and receives Chinese callers. She is 83. Her private Amah sleeps within call and is most faithful. She helps Miss Andrews walk out as she is short and heavy and unable to walk without support on both sides, a cane and a person.

We visited two temples of Tsao Kun's one to the sleeping war god and the other to a private god, Buddhist style. The latter has three wives, a-la Tsao Kun. Two are relegated to a side room and no. three sits in state beside the God. We also visited two of Tsao Kun's play things, a park valued at several million, with a lion, tiger, kangaroo, hyena, monkeys, bear and birds besides considerable space for flowers etc; and an aviation field with five planes. Four were practicing starting and stopping so we watched them for some time. Flora would not recognize Paotingfu. Tsao Kun has spent many thousands and the main streets are big broad thoroughfares well paved. No more bumpy rides over stone roads there!

I spent the last week end with Jean Josselyn. She is much better although still dressing her wound where the breast was removed. She will have to tend that till fall when a second operation removes the extra folds of skin. Baby Dudley is darling and gains his ounce a day regularly. Miss Josselyn is a trained nurse and it was most helpful to Jean to have her there to help with baby then with herself.

The P.U.M.C. is having a hard time. Mrs. Robert McCann went in ill and developed small pox; an English lady developed what was first called Infantile paralysis [polio], then sleepy sickness, then Esphalitis (?)

[encephalitis]. It is something the doctors have never seen and evidently most infectious- as all three nurses developed it inside of a week. A child developed scarlet fever. So 3 wards are under strict quarantine. Hunter Corbett went in Thursday afternoon for a slight operation and got held for two weeks, till the scarlet-fever quarantine was over.

Apr 10. Trudy Martin has the measles- a sad aftermath of her happy times practicing for and being flower girl at Lura Aiken's wedding. It is just getting time for further cases if such there are to be. We hope not as the ?? in the little compound school has been-quarantine for the slightest ailment. Hence Trudy was quarantined four days before her rash appeared.

Mrs. J.S. Burgess and the boys, with occasionally Mr. Burgess, are now occupying the Stelle House. It is an effort to keep the boys away from the dust of the city as visitors cars began to trouble him again and David too had some trouble.

We had a vaccination party last Monday. I attended and have what Doctor calls an immunity take. I think it a pretty strong immunity take since it is red for a circle of three inches diameter and has festered and broken today. But it began the second day and should not so do till the third.

I plan for the typhoid injections this weekend and the two following.

We had compound supper at Fanny Wicke's last Tuesday. I tried to get Jean down but she had dinner guests. I shall try again for the next one I am free for. Last night I had supper with Maude Hunter. She sent over a late note as she was to be all alone. Martha came in late, having been helping Margaret Menzi; who has a relapse from Tonisilitis.

The babies are all growing apace. Margaret Wickes is a sober baby but with an adorable smile when she does indulge. She is most appreciative of attention though and wiggles adorably. Barbara Love quips, laughs aloud and is one broad grin whenever I see her these days. Caroline is getting over her excessive ?? as she improves in health and gets out of doors. Jean and Bobbly Hunter grow more attractive every day. Jean allowed me to hold her for a long time at Compound tea last Saturday when the girls entertained in Maude's home. Magaret Wickes is so far she reminds me of a little squirrel with her pouches. She bubbles happiness every minute, even when hungry.

?? in Paotingfu send regards to Flora., the P?, Hubbards, Galts, Whallers, Miss Anders, Chapin, Buck[?], Phelps. So have the Dr. Smiths, Jean Dickenson, Mrs. Peck (Legation) , Stella Burgess, Mrs. Hemingway and probably those whom I do not recall just now.

Mrs. Hemingway and Winfred were with me two days during the early part of vacation.

Spring is here with a dust blowing up every afternoon. Violets, for??, dandelion, vetch etc are already out. There are no leaves yet but the trees are in bloom.

It is time for the bills[bells?]

Lots of love

Mary.

Have received two packages of papers direct[?] lately and several ?? ??.

Thanks Mary

Hei Sung Tan

Easter Sunday
[April 20, 1924]

Dear Ones at Home,

Sixteen of us, fourteen girls, Miss Young and I, are having a nice quiet Sunday here in camp just outside the front entrance of "The Black Dragon Temple". We left Tungchow Friday morning early, had a little over an hour for shopping, came around the city by train and by train to Tsung Hua. Mr. Danton was the station to greet us and we went over to the college campus and had lunch in the Ting-ze. The Dantons sent over hot and cold water to supplement our biscuits, cookies and fruit.

We were off on donkeys just before 1.10. About 2.00 a man on a bicycle overtook us with a note from Mr. Gibb. Mr. Breakey had telephoned that a telegram had arrived for Faye Hibbard of Taianfu to come home at once. Her little brother and mother have been ill some time with typhoid. She had a letter, gotten from the portman en route to the station, saying her mother was much better but that the doctors gave no hopes for the 3-year-old son. Miss Burgess went back with Faye and we hope they got the Len Ching auto in to Peking so got the 4.00 o'clock train to Tungchen. We thought of Faye as getting home about 12.00 or 1.00 this morning.

There is a lovely large pool about 4 ½ feet deep within the temple. Flora's Juliet Bredon will tell you all about it. We went for a swim in relays yesterday morning and again in the afternoon. We had just returned when the baggage of another party appeared. It proved to be Mr. and Mrs. Grover Clark and Grace Boynton. After supper I introduced myself so that we might arrange for a time for a swim this morning.

We got camp cleaned up and breakfast cleared about 9.00 and then had our Easter Service. We had taken off on the Duplicator 10 favorite Easter hymns and I brought a book Mrs. Sheffield loaned me. "Our Lords Last Week" which gave the story of Easter as told in the Gospels also an excellent "Interpretation of the Resurrection". Miss Young read the Prayer from the Episcopal Prayer Book.

After service we had a dip in the pool. Already a party of three had arrived but the Clark party stood guard and we got our dip. Mr. Clark from the inter court called to the ladies who were in the gallery, [the rest of the letter was written back at N.C.A.S.] (N.C.A.S. Apr 26), "Is there any reason why I shouldn't enjoy the fun, too?" Mrs. Clark called back, "Yes, ten of them and they are all in the water". Only three of us had conventional bathing suits. The extra set of underwear did nicely for the rest and gave them clean clothes every day in the bargain.

I stopped writing where ceased using pencil to extend an invitation to the Clark party to have Easter dinner with us. Their servants guarded camp for us so we all left at once and ate on the edge of the pool.

We had an audience of over 100 all day Saturday and 50-75 all day Sunday. Our departure Monday was made about 9.45, so the crowd had not yet gathered. Like all ?? [curious?] too, the intensive interest and newness was wearing off. Also we kept two strict guards to allow any pilfering, so one incentive was lacking.

The girls took guard duty for 1 ¼ hours each, by twos, from 9.00 P.M. till 6.00 A.M. The first night we lazy folks went to bed by 8.30 so the first watch was a long one. The other two nights we had informal song services lying on our beds.

Coming back we stopped at Hu Tien to say "Thank You" to Mr. Gibb for helping get our baggage looked after and for helping put out good donkeys for the crowd. There was not a bad donkey in the crowd. A most unusual occurrence with so many!

On Thursday I got Phebe's letter telling of Elizabeth's failing condition. I had hoped to see her this summer, but if it means much suffering for her, I can not even pray that it may be so. I shall look for news by each new mail in. [Elizabeth died April 12, 1924 of pulmonary tuberculosis with a duration of 3 years.]

Phebe K. writes on April 6 that she is at Liong Doh [Diong Loh], still resting. She plans to come north for a complete change. I hope she can come early so as to arrive before I leave.

My date of sailing is still June 17th. But I hear that the Korea was four days late in leaving Shanghai this trip. Letters from the two Leolyns, William and ?? give good reports of the Berkeley family. Leolyn will not come home with me, partly for financial reasons as the making over of the home took considerable more than the insurance, partly to save up for the sabbatical year, 1925.

The Holyoke-ites had a picnic on the wall last Monday. I just stayed in till the 7.50 train and went in camp costume. Mrs. Sidney Gamble is our latest arrival. Mrs. Larry Sears comes out next fall. She is sister to Mrs.

Gamble. A Miss Wilder is here waiting for 6 months to pass so she may marry Dr. Hoyt of the C.I.M. She will attend the next meeting, here May 17. The wedding is the 19th. All we Holyoke-ites are invited.

I went in Wednesday afternoon for a committee meeting at Minnie Corbett's. We drafted some resolutions for increasing the athletic facilities especially of the Peking School. They are to be laid before the Mothers Club at the May Meeting.

The Basket Ball team of the Language School is down today to play our girls. It is a horrid windy dusty day, so I fear it will be difficult playing. We have had a dust storm about every other afternoon for two weeks. It is lovely and clear till about 11.00 or 12.00. One of the worst was Friday night when we were out at camp. The pool saved the day.

Everything is late this season. We had the Mother's Club come the first Saturday of May to see the yellow roses and Wisteria. The Lilacs are not yet clear out and no hint of yellow on the roses.

Dr. Love has been trying for three weeks to get to Pei Tai Ho to oversee some repairs. First Trudy had the measles, then Stratt and Ruth got them. At last everybody was fairly well so he got off last night. I slept over at Carol's and am going over this afternoon for the week-end.

Yesterday was "tag day" for the N.C.A. I ordered one copy sent to Flora, hoping it would arrive before I did. Miss Bostwick had asked for one and I sent the usual one to Will so I get a 4 on my tag.

I must close as it is time to ring the bell. I have set a "bad example" and written a letter in Study Hall but I did not want this to hold over another week.

Lots of love

Mary

N.C.A.S. & May, 14, 1924.

Dear Home Folk,

Again I have not lived up to my good intentions. It has been more than two weeks since my last letter.

May 3rd was Mothers Club. The entertainment was a May Day celebration, Marjorie Maxwell and Harriet Irwin had the program planned and the children partly trained before we asked them to save the production for the Mothers Club. Then Miss Young and Miss Fenn helped them polish it and connect the events. "The Queen of the May was lost and the Dust Nymphs had stolen the key that would unlock the secret. One of the fairies found it, so she was produced and crowned". Mrs. Menzi was Queen. The dancing was on the lawn under the big evergreen trees and it was a perfect setting.

Cleora stayed for the week end and I had the Menzies and Loves in for Sunday dinner, also Lottie Hildreth.

Phebe wrote some time ago for me to engage a room for her at Pei Tai Ho, and now she is planning to come as soon as she can get here. The Doctor forbids week before fall so she might as well get all the North she can. The ladies house will put her up till school closes, then I will have her over here till I leave. Maude Hunter is letting her have one of her rooms at Pei Tai Ho. Phebe had asked for a room at Gould Cottage but I decided that was no place for a good rest, and engaged Maude's room. Now comes a letter from Phebe saying that she hopes a room in a private family can be obtained. Our letters crossed.

Lottie Hildreth and I are entertaining the Holyoke group Friday. Miss Wilder has been out here for six months waiting for the C.I.M. to allow her to marry a Dr. Hoyte of Shansi. This is in part for her, so we are having husbands and fiancés. (only one). We are going to have Club Sandwiches, ice cream, cake and coffee. The wedding is Saturday. As a Holyoke girl I am invited and hope to go.

Friday P.M. Phebe's letter of April 16th came this morning. I have been waiting for it and expected to hear that Elizabeth was gone, but it is still hard to realize it is so. I am glad she did not have to suffer but it was hard for you to see her so uncomfortable that the morphine was necessary. I hope that you were able to get rested from the long strain and care. I am sending the letter of to Will today. It is good of you Phebe to write us so fully and often. We do appreciate it, I assure you. [Mary's sister, Elizabeth Beard, died April 12, 1924 of Pulmonary Tuberculosis at the age of 48.]

I will send this on hoping it gets an early boat, and write again soon. It is nearly time for the afternoon session and I have study hall. Then Botany lab till 4.00 and must be dressed and ready to meet the evening train and our Holyoke crowd.

Lots of love. I am counting the days till I start home. One month from tomorrow we sail, from Shanghai.

Mary

Dear Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

The last mail brought your letter telling about Elizabeth's release. And Mary's letter from you was on my desk this morning. The mail must have gone to Peking more quickly than it got down here. I have sent your's to me to Mary. I had thought of Elizabeth as with Mother and Ruth and James and all the other dear ones who have gone on ahead of the rest of us, for some time. Father's letter written April 1 told me that you looked for the end to come any hour. Elizabeth must have had a very strong constitution. I think her sweet nature had something to do with it. I think I wrote in a recent letter of the letter she wrote me for my steamer in 1921. It was so sweet all the way thru. I could not help thinking that she perhaps thought she would not see me again on earth and the whole tone of the letter was impregnated with a spiritual quality. It showed a remarkable faith and trust in God. It is one of the very few letters that I keep in a very special place in my trunk, not to be destroyed.

Two large bundles of Sentinels came by the last mail and I have them ready for the mail to go to Mary tomorrow. It makes me feel homesick to think of Mary going home so soon. I shall not be able to mail any more papers to her.

Phebe K. is getting ready to take the next steamer for Shanghai to go on to Tunghsien to be with Mary for a few days before she leaves. With Phebe I am sending a Mandarin Coat for you. I do not know whether you can use it or not but you may have a kind of nice feeling when you remember that you won one of the things. And you may like to put it on to show others when they come to see you and you want to make them envious. I am sending also two little stools that I bought last summer, - the carved, folding kind that mother liked so much and that I told her to see and I would send more to her. I wish one of these could go to Ruth in Pearl River. The other do as you like with. Keep it if you do not have one in the house, or give to any one that you think would appreciate it or sell it.

I know how tired you and Flora must be and I hope before this reaches you that you will have gotten rested. You have had more than your share to do and to bear during the past year. One of the real crosses of my life has been the thought that at the times when the dear ones have been ill and the burdens of you at home have been increased so much I seemed to be useless. You must not for a moment think that either Mary or I thought that you have been dilatory about writing. You have done marvelously. Now that Mary is home you will have one less to write to.

Last week we had some very hot days. The ther. was playing in the 90's all the time. But on Wednesday it rained and we have had to put on more clothes. I even wore a light overcoat to church on Sunday, with summer clothes on underneath. We had quite a flood this week Tues. and Wed. It is all down now. Yesterday the mission went down to the Fukien Christian University for our Prayer Meeting. Two of our families are teaching in the University and live down there. Two other families are associated with our mission and the other family are Congregationalists. That leaves only one Methodist family and one Episcopal family not a part of us.

Next week I must leave my usual work to attend one of the leaders and Pastor's Conference to be held at the new conference set for Foochow. School is to close June 25.

Lots of love and loving sympathy to all Will.

May 25 [1924]

Dear Home Folk.

A telegram on Friday has put Miss Young and me in a ferment. Our steamer is not going to come to Shanghai at all and is leaving Yokohama the 12th. It means leaving here the 6th and traveling via Korea. The alternative is to wait till the end of July. We prefer to rush now.

I at once packed my Geographics and today have sorted over a lot of stuff. Fortunately I had taken the last things to the tailor last week and am to get them tomorrow. My coat was still to go to the cleaner, also my sport skirt. Going by Korea also necessitates a passport, so I stop at the Legation and fill the papers in the morning.

I am taking in the rugs for Mrs. Fette to get packed and the earlier start will remove the necessity of bringing them back here.

Miss Boring gave us a lecture on "The Beginning of Science" on Friday. Mrs. Burgess elected to get us a weekly speaker. She succeeded in getting two. Flora knows it is one thing to plan and another to carry out the plans. Especially when the elusive third person is concerned.

Flora will appreciate this little fact. Three year old Chauncey Pettus was down with Mrs. Burgess for a week to recuperate in our bracing air. It took two days only to rid him of a fever he had been running for many a day.

Mrs. Burgess's mother arrived this afternoon to spend the summer. The Burgesses find themselves so well that they are taking the Stelle house for next year too.

I am looking any day for Phebe K. She wrote to ask about a room and I replied by return mail. I hope she arrives this week.

It is 10.45 and I am off by the early train so I will send this on with the hope of seeing you a week earlier than I had hoped.

Lots of love
Mary.

P.S. I am to have a birthday celebration of some sort tomorrow. Can tell what when it is over.

No. 142 East Cliff, Pei-tai-ho.
Chihli, China.
June 21, 1924.

Dear Brother-Boy,

Your nice letters have been coming and, I haven't been keeping up at all! And now you are probably at Shelton helping with the farm work, and enjoying it as much as ever and bringing joy with you. You are the only one of the family whose summer address I know, so here goes. I have just received Marjorie's graduation invitation, just three days after the event occurred, so of course I didn't attend. We wonder what Jerry's and Dot's plans for the season are.

Before this reaches you, Aunt Mary will probably have got home and told you that I am summering at Pei-tai-ho. Such a lovely place for a summer would be hard to find, but more of that later. I spent one full happy week with Aunt Mary at Tunghsien, and saw the school working- a good fortune I never had even dreamed of. It was awfully good just to go about among so many foreign children, and at their picnics, plays, graduation, and concert it was relaxingly natural to have the students themselves do things rather than have to do everything yourself, and be all the enthusiasm as one seems to have to with our girls. Aunt Mary was leading lady in a play taken from "Pinafore" and she surely made a hit. As a last scene to the whole thing, the August faculty came in and threw real spit balls at the audience as they sang a chorus. It took like lightening, for we most of us got hit and could prove the reality of the apparent missels. I saw Peking in a flitting journey round with Aunt Mary twice; for I didn't feel equal to "doing" things then.

After a two day's stay with Cleora Wannamaker at the palatial ladies' house a half hour's journey from here, I came over, one beautiful evening just two weeks ago to the Hunter's dear little cottage and started life again as Aunt Phebe to two darling youngsters, Bobby aged 3, and Jean, aged 1 ½. In the first few days we just sat around, played with the youngsters, and watched the new arrivals. As soon as a ricksha appeared at the hilltop, two or three men rushed headlong down across the valley to the opposite hill to get to their house first with a mop, a broom, matches etc. from one or the other of the two rival stores. Mrs. Hunter found after she had been here two days that both stores were supplying her with ice and coke, and both had brought a broom and matches, for which both presented bills!

As Mrs. Hunter sells goat's milk, she has had lots of callers so I have met a good many people. We took one ride over to Rocky Point, where the station is, and got weighed. We had planned on my birthday to go for a donkey ride- my first, but I had and had an eye-ache, so I stayed in bed, and Bobby and Mrs. H. went- and brought me back a box of lovely correspondence cards to use. In the afternoon Cleora and a Miss Nelson came to tea and stayed to supper. It was lovely with ice cream, too! Strawberries, lettuce and push peas are common here, and now Mr. Hunter is sending black-caps from Tunghsien! Yummy! And such milk.

Then Thursday, Miss Nelson and Cleora planned that I should come over for the day, so I started out alone on my first donkey. I wore my knickers, and I tried to cut over [our?] accustomed figure. But the donkey knew of my novitiate. Every time he started to gallop I yanked on the reins, a la merry-go-round horses! So of course he stopped going, and I a-wondering why! And when he slowed down I grabbed frantically for the quilts in front of me which formed my saddle. Fortunately I got my balance that trip, when, at 10:30, I didn't meet many people. After a swim we had a nice dinner topped off with some of Cleora's divinity fudge, and a nap. Then Miss Nelson, Cleora, and I started back to East Cliff on donkeys. I got a fine beast who trotted nicely and galloped divinely. When I got to the top of our hill, he threw back his head, opened his mouth, and hee-hawed for a full-minute. I had been quite crazy to be on a donkey when it brayed; but I was disappointed in not feeling anything like bellows under me. It was all noise- but such a noise! After the girls did some errands I rode back with them to meet Mrs. Hunter and walk back with her. Three two-mile rides in one day and a two-mile walk on top of it was a pretty hard day for a first one, but I finally got to sleep and didn't hear any noises that night.

After a day's rest, Miss Nelson and I went for a morning's ride out to the West End. We went to the beach, and all thru a Russian section where the houses are even more palatial and European and ornate than they are here. I feel as if I were at Atlantic City, the houses are so grand. (You'd know I'd never been to that grand place by that sentence, tho.) I had my no. 24 donkey that I had the day before, and every time we came to any donkey, he brayed as if he'd lost his last friend. I have the hang of it, so I could ride comfortable for a day now if I had the strength. I went bathing again, and had a Chinese meal for lunch, then a rest and in the P.M. bought a diving cap for all of $3.00!!! Now I can go bathing here.

What with bathing, and donkey-riding and tennis, I am not going to have time for many teas or other gaities. I've got to go slow at first, tho, for this week has been pretty strenuous. I had a set of tennis on Friday that tired me as much as the donkey-rides.

Your last letter mentioned my not getting the records you sent for Xmas. I did get them and was very delinquent in saying thank you. They were waiting for me when I got back from Ingtau at China New Year time, and I put them right onto the Victrola. They surely did sound good and they are pretty. When Alice was out for a week-end she put them on and enjoyed them hugely, since they are her college, too. She has gone back to America now, but I am glad to have them. When you send again, better pad them with soft paper more; for these have short cracks in from the edges, tho not enough to hurt the playing of the record much. When I wrote you last I meant to have said thank you for them- and closed the letter within it. I'm glad your parasols are going well, and the tea. Father will see about that when you write him more definitely later.

Will you please send this to the others of the family and send me their addresses if they are to be fairly permanent? Every once in a while I have a strange feeling that I should be at Kuliang taking care of Father, but it's little I could do now. I wish Aunt Mary could see Bobby play with Jeanie. She walks now with one hand but doesn't walk around a chair or alone at all. Such pink cheeks and fat as they are both getting! My best wishes for a lovely summer for you all. I hope you may get brown and strong and ready for fall and any medical attention you have to have. Wish both you and Aunt Mary could be here to enjoy the fun of this summer with me. But you will have Uncle Stanley's children and other fun.

Much, much love to all.

From

Phebe K.

If the rest of the family want duplicates of these photos let me know which and how many and they are theirs. Aunt Mary will have some of her own!

She talks briefly about the alliance between Russia and China. Phebe had an amusing ride by donkey. She had to spend a day in bed because of a headache (one of the symptoms of nephritis). She tells about many people in her letter and is enjoying her time at Pei Tai Ho. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

June 25, 1924.

Dear Father,

Nine days have fled and I have not written you. So you can know that they have been very happy full ones. The letters you forwarded to me were only ads, or a graduation invitation from Marjorie and I suppose that you have one of those yourself. If not let me know and I will send this on to you. It is very pretty. I also got a letter from Miss Caroline Savage a friend of Aunt Flora's in Berlin [CT] that gives really little news. I was sorry to learn of Cousin Helen's misfortune and I do hope Johnson will get over his trouble faster than Ruth Emily did. What a surprise the news of electricity at the farm will be for Aunt Mary! She will probably hear of it at Aunt Leolyn's. Sad that your Rhode Island Red died, but you seem to take it philosophically. I am glad that you feel that she had done her work. Aunt Phebe's letter shows the loneliness she must have felt all these months more than any other she has thus far sent. I am more than ever glad that Aunt Mary has gone to her. Her letter I am sending back to you as I do not know if you want it or not. Where did you get the pretty pink paper to wrap it in?

I am glad to hear that you have rented the left over room to Miss Abel. How inspiring to know that the conference at the Upper Bridge did so much for the pastors. It pays to carry on such meetings. These bombings are getting altogether too common in China. We are following the papers about the alliance between China and Russia. Such foolish talk, and such a tragic outcome for China! Russia seems bent on doing the same great damage to China. What have the Safanoff family done? I do feel so sorry for them all. There are great numbers of Russians in Shanghai and here in business, tho I must say the clerks in the stores in Shanghai are not what you would call efficient in the use of time as we think of it in the U.S.A. Until Mrs. Hunter's cook came, she bought her bread of a Russian bread man who brought it around fresh each day. It was good bread and, as she said, she felt as if she was helping him by getting it. He seemed so honest and self-respecting that it made me wonder about him and the others like him here. At the other end of town there are a lot of houses that belong to the rich Russians in Tientsin, great Middle-Age European structures that we would hardly want even for town houses.

How nice it would be if Cousin Joel could come up to Foochow! Get him if you can. Susan Armstrong will be glad to have another man connected with the college as she feels that so many women as seemed likely to be there would be not so good for the school. I know how hard it has been to get teachers and reminded her of the fact, but I thought you would like to get her reaction.

I hope Mrs. Siek's little girl is doing well. When did Donald leave for America? I hope too that Catherine is going to Kuliang. I suppose she will. Your last letter, the one telling of Catherine's baby, came to me at Peitaiho after Aunt Mary had gone. I surely have missed her but Mrs. Hunter has been so nice to me that I have tried to forget it. She herself needs a rest and I have been trying to help her with the children all I can. Mr. Hunter is still in Tunghsien for work and a conference so does not get here till July 1.

Sunday June 29 Since I wrote you I have had several new experiences. Incidentally it is now Sunday and this letter has sat on my table all this time unfinished. Mrs. Hunter called to me just as I got to this paragraph and reminded me that I had been working all the morning and that I must not get another headache by working too long. So I took her advice and stopped - - - till now! (That's two exclamation points I've used in this letter and Arthur says they are not in good taste in too great numbers! Three.)

Wednesday was the day that I had the headache and was in bed all day. That was also my birthday and as Mrs. Hunter had asked me only a day or two before how old I was, I had also told her when my age would increase. So she had a tea and a supper with Cleora and Esther Nelson who was in Foochow with the nurses in Feb. as guests, and in the A.M. as I could not go to Rocky Point on Donkey-back as planned, she and Bobby went and brought me a box of lovely correspondence cards. So I had a very nice day. The next day I went to Gould cottage by invitation to eat the divinity fudge that Cleora had made and could not bring to me the day before because of no box. I went on a donkey alone and in my knickers for the first time. You really should have been there to get the benefit of my first grace on a donkey. Every time he started to run, I pulled on the reins hard to keep myself in place. That was the way I used to do on the merry-go round and it worked well. But the beast always stopped for some unexplainable reason, until I suddenly thought. Then as he slowed down, he always trotted in a jerky way so I slid onto his neck if I didn't seize the quilts that formed the saddle. But as I went along, my training on Hercules won out and I learned to sit without clinging, to walk and trot without sliding all over and to hold the reins in one hand according to regulation. When I got over to the ladies' house I was as excited as a five year old boy. And to that a swim in the breakers clad in Cleora's bathing suit, with Jean Dickenson as company, a Chinese lunch, a nap and a ride back to East Cliff with Cleora and Esther, and you have a day of it. Then I was feeling so fine that I rode back with the girls to meet Mrs. Hunter and walk back with her. I was more tired than I knew but was not too lame the next day.

On Friday I was quiet till time for tennis when I had a good set with four ladies. Saturday Esther Nelson and I went for an all-morning trip to West End where the Russian settlement is. We rode all over the place, up and down hill and saw fishing and other things. When we got back I went swimming again. This time I walked home.

Last Sunday they had a nice service on one of the big porches here overlooking the sea. The audience was so large that it filled the porch and today they will overflow to the lawn and sit on their little mats. Dr. Scott preached on the Transfiguration, and though he got lost in Fundamentalist discussion a bit he gave us some very beautiful thoughts.

This week I have been rather quiet as my donkey riding didn't just make me feel better. I have played some tennis and have met Mrs. Roy Worley, seen Roy but not had a chance to speak to him, and have made several calls. Cleora is having a Kindergarten at Mrs. Burgess' not far away so I see her in the afternoons. Twice I have walked over to Rocky Point, to call on Mrs. Martin with Mrs. Hunter, and once to call at Gould Cottage. The Love family came Thursday A.M. and Maude had them all to breakfast which gave me a chance to get acquainted with their adorable children. Mrs. Hildreth, Aunt Mary's friend from Swatow came to supper with her two lovely children one night. Yesterday Mrs. Burgess gave a very pleasant tea for a few friends. I met Madame Fenn, Martha's grandmother, a dear spry old lady for her years, Mrs. Lowry who was in Foochow for the M.E. Jubilee last fall, a Miss Crane who has seen Mother in Oberlin, and several others. It was very pleasant.

There are so many P.U.M.C. people here that I am crazy to ask them about that boy who came here for medical work from the F.C.U. last summer. I can't think of his name. Could you ask Mr. Bedient what his Mandarin name is so I can ask if he came into the 35 or 40 that they accept as a class from the 80 odd whom they take as a pre-medical entering class? Thanks.

Cleora and I took a walk around the point yesterday A.M. and called on the Hubbards among others. They have another little girl that looks just like Emma Rose as she came out with us. She is stronger than she was though Mr. Hubbard has built a new stone house down near the water and they are just now christening it. It is a very attractive house and he is as proud of it as he can be. Those children are fine too. All the time I was there yesterday he and they were rough-housing in a gentle way and taking their little sister in too.

They are blasting a well out just in front of our house and Bobby is quite excited about the "Fung pau" as he calls it. Rocks go quite a way into the air when they blast and it is a funny sight to see the men all run before the thing goes off.

On one of the rafters of the porch here a pair of swallows has built their nest. They seem to have hatched their eggs now for both birds are flying about getting the bugs for them to eat. Just these last few days a sparrow has been bothering round trying to steal the nest. They say that often happens but we are going to try to prevent an actual seizure by the sparrow. Another swallow is building a nest on the wall of the back porch and I saw him sticking the little mud balls on this morning for the first time. It is so interesting to see these performances that you hear about so often.

Aunt Mary is probably now about landing at San Francisco. She left Yokahama on the 12th so that would get her into Honolulu on the 22nd. Maybe it will be a day or two yet before she arrives, then she stops over with the Morgans for three or four days and will get home about the 7th or 8th of July probably. I do hope she has had a good voyage.

Thank you for fixing up that mess at the H.S. Bank for me. I have drawn my $48 for my steamer ticket and a $11 check to Hazel Atwood for my stay there since then, so I fear all my July allowance will have to be deposited in that bank to cover the checks already out. You may instruct Arthur to do this if you get further notices from the bank. Your $100 will tied over the month and as I am not going to do much buying till I go to Peking the last of August, I will be O.K. Just in case of necessity I want to ask you if it will be O.K. for me to draw in advance on my fall months allowances if necessary. I don't want to do it, but if I am here and can bring things to a reasonable limit with me wouldn't it be better to buy while I am here than to skimp too much on money.

The bureau scarf please keep as it will be no use here and will only be one more thing to bring back for which I shall have to buy more packing receptacles. If the hair nets for Mrs. Christian have not already got there when this reaches you please give her the $3 as I have ordered them sent to her. Aunt Mary was so busy those days I was there that I could not ask her to take me shopping and I did not have the energy myself to get anyone else to take me even had anyone had the time. So I had to write for them after I had got down here. I have heard nothing from the letter and the lady to whom I wrote is here now so I imagine they have gone. I will see Mrs. Goodrich about them as soon as I can about it. I hope they have gone O.K.

I am so glad you are to have the Tappans with you this summer. It will seem to you like a sort of reunion of the boat again even without Aunt Mary and the rest of us. Cleora and I were just saying that we wished the Tappans had come last year instead of this. Please greet them very cordially for me. I do hope they will have a good recuperating summer and that the baby will gain a lot. Don't charge too much for every pound! Cleora still tells us that the reason she didn't gain more last season was because of your stringent rules as to paying for the gain!!! She is good and fat this year and gaining too. She and I take walks every day after her school is over. She can still talk a lot and she wants to come to Kuliang again!!! She is very much taken with the place. As much so as I am with Peitaiho. But I can't come here another summer right away at $3.00 a day! This cottage is for rent next year and if Mother is here next year you might like to take it. I believe it is $400.00 the season. If you want me to find out more about it I will. There are three bed rooms, one small living room, several small rooms for storing and wash rooms, servants rooms for two men and one woman, and a big porch all round three sides, a part screened with blinds for a sleeping porch, and the other end screened for a dining room. They are furnishing it so that the occupants next year will not need to bring anything. It was an Evans cottage and the Hunters added servants quarters and one side porch. Very comfortable and has a good view somewhat obstructed by houses directly in front but far away, and only about 10 minutes slow walk from the beach.

Roy Worley is here but I have not had a chance to speak to him yet. He looks about the same as ever.

The Loves told me approximately where the cottage is that you and the Aunts had the summer you were up. They were not here but evidently were told. It is over at Rocky Point and so far from the beach!!! One of the houses in front of it was damaged by the whirlwind they had here last summer.

Ah! Here is the thing I was trying to think to write you. I saw in the paper that Foochow had had phenomenal floods two or three days ago. I wondered if it came anywhere near any of our property. They are so in need of rain here that every drop that falls causes everyone to squeal with delight and the refrain of all is "I do wish it would rain!" It is tantalizing for Foochow to have such surplus of water and we up here famishing for it. Do write me of the flood.

You might send this to the girls as I may not have time to write so fully again on this period. I shall have to get some carbon paper so I can make several copies of the same letter to save time and effort. I do want to catch up my correspondence while I have time. I am getting fatter and fatter and I look like a beet for redness and feel stronger than for many a week so I guess I am coming round. I sleep from about 9 P.M. to 7 A.M. and over an hour in the P.M. so I am getting a lot of that too most of the time.

I must stop raving on now for you will not want to read more. My greetings to the Tappans and the LeMays tho they don't know me nor I them. Don't you think this Corona was a pretty good investment!

Lots and lots of love,

Phebe

I hope your graduation went off well.

142 East Cliff, Peitaiho

July 12, 1924.

Dear Aunt Mary,

Night before last your long letter to the Hunters and me came, - just about in time as we have been reckoning your voyage as you go along. From Honolulu on you will not have Miss Young. I am glad the trip has been so comfortable so far. You have certainly done well by your friends in the correspondence line, and we have all been more than glad to hear and very appreciative of the time you must have spent writing. Every time I get a letter from you it reminds me of the letter-writing, orgies can I say, that the whole steamer had on the Golden State just before reaching ports. No paper! No ink, no tables! And then we'd get in before we had all the missives done we had promised ourselves at the last port to do!

By now you are probably at home, after the jolly visit with Aunt Leolyn's family and the tour thru the West and the Grand Canyon. I do hope you found all at the farm well.

I've had a very lovely month and a half here already, and it is slipping away altogether too fast. Already Esther Nelson and I are mourning for more vacation- and here we are specially favored with three full months away and half the time still left! The saying is too true, the more you have the more you want, and, the most privileged are the most discontented.

Two very happy days at Rocky Point with Cleora and Esther Nelson made me almost sorry I wasn't going to be there all summer. But when I got over here and Bobby got used to the new lady whom he tried to take in right off. I was glad I wasn't at Rocky Point. This place here is so much more summery and informal than the cityfied Rocky Point.

At first I did almost nothing but sew, knit, and sit on the porch, and eating and sleeping. At last came a grand day when the ladies asked me over for the day and I donned knickers and trailed over there on donkey-back. A swim and another ride back after dinner and a nap only elated me the more, and I rode right back to meet Maude and came home with her. On the Sat. of that week I went for a trip with Esther, and had a gorgeous time discovering West End. That tired me so I didn't ride or swim again till Dr. Love came up and I had asked him about it.

Yesterday I took my next donkey-ride with five other ladies out to the tiger's den and the Turtle Rock. It is lovely country, and we had a light rain, a good lunch, a fine brunch to set the whole thing off. We were gone from 9 A.M. to 2:15 P.M. with an hour and a half for lunch and rest. I can see a lot of improvement in my endurance, tho I am still shamefully flabby.

I've been swimming twice again before going for the day to Rocky Point twice this week. The water was fine, and I went to the float one day. The Hunters have seen very little as they have either been ill slightly or Jim wasn't here. He came about the first of July, and has been very quiet since. They have played tennis some, but little. When we get started bathing we'll have fun. We've already read quite a bit together and separately and Maude has done a lot of knitting. She is a whiz!

One night before Jim came, Bobby got a kernel of corn up his nose. He told us right off and then a circus started. His mother tried hairpin treatment first, then nose blowing with a cloth held carefully to his nose; then pepper and yarn tickling to make him sneeze, but all to no effect. Poor Bobby got more and more excited, and after every blow, or smell of pepper, he valiantly encouraged his mother by saying "It's coming, it's almost out!" I never shall forget him sitting straight on the edge of a dining room chair, crying hard, his face red with blowing his nose, and trying to prevent another poke of the hair pin by telling his mother it was almost out. After 15 or 20 minutes of effort, Maude took him to Dr. Love. When I met them on the way back, they said Dr. Love took him up and held one nostril and said blow. Out the offending kernel came at first blow.

I am getting quite a bit of satisfaction from your Corona myself. I had a paper to copy, and that with some letters, have gone quickly with the machine. It is very good.

Martha Fenn and Frank Hutchins came to P.T.H. for a week the last of June. They called several times before he left on July 5. They decided I believe, to let the announcement of the engagement go for a while so it is not yet out officially, tho the whole place talks of it. Her brothers are both in Mongolia for the month so she must be having a quiet time.

I've been over to Mrs. Burgess' for supper once, and I am going again tonight. She has just had her roof off as it was not done properly to suit them, and it is just in place again. Friday night Mrs. Chandler gave a dear dinner party to celebrate Madame and Dr. Chandler's wedding anniversary and Mrs. Hubbard's birthday. We got caught in a shower and had great fun wading in the gutters and seeing our way by the light of the lightening flashes. Strange tho, that we didn't get very wet.

The hotel- Oriental Grand Hotel Peitaiho,- has added a second story. I am told since last year, and is nearly done with whitewashing and decorating until four days ago there were no guest and could not have been, for the roomers were not ready. But the "chariot" as Jim calls it, a real coach and one slow bay horse trotted down to the train and back twice every day to meet the trains, and the Delco plant generated electric lights and perfumed the air with kerosene odor for rods around every few nights. Mr. Hubbard's new house down near the flats to the left of Eagle rock (from here) is a beauty. I have only been on the porch but it is a lovely one, and the back looks as well as the front. They are still blasting the well in front of the Hunters, and Bobby enjoys the "feng pau" hugely. It is an inspiration to see the men work. They spend all day draining out the water that the last week's rains put in last night, and send off a blast or two just at dusk. Then they stand around and pass the stones that are pulled out, leisurely, about among themselves, to be finally tossed lazily onto a pile by the last one.

A Finnish boy was drowned on Friday at Rocky Point. He had just been asking money help with an older man at Gould Cottage at 11 A.M. As he had no bathing suit he waited till the crowd had gone, then went in near the rocks, as he couldn't read the sign in English. An old man, Mr. Cannon, I believe, also died that day. He had been in swimming, had a heart attack and died later.

Esther Nelson wants me to go to Korea with her and Cleora for August. So far as expense goes, I don't think it would be out of the question; but I think here I'd be less likely to overdo; and staying in one place is more restful to me anyway than racing round right now.

So far not one word of my visit with you!! As I wrote to Father, I would not have missed that week with you for anything. I enjoyed every minute of it, and I never shall get over my good luck that I could see you at work with the school. I was glad everyone was so taken up with commencement because I could just go with the crowd, and didn't have special engagements that I couldn't have taken then anyway. The rides around Peking I enjoyed too, for it did give me a bit of an idea of the city when I couldn't do more. - By the way, I have ordered my rugs from Mrs. Little, and one large one like the one I didn't get, and one of the round fish bowl rugs are only $72. by her bill. I'm tickled!- You were too generous on the train coming to P.T.H. and now this check as an additional birthday gift- I thot I'd had mine already! I don't know how to say thank you, but it is much, much appreciated, and your train gift did come in very useful. I only hope you didn't rob your self, and you just starting on a trip!

I did feel sort-a' lonesome as the train took you on, but Maude was so nice and we had such good times together and are still having them, that I've tried not to think too much of how nice it could have been to spend the summer with you. It was good to spend those two days with Cleora too. All the trips I've had so far, I have been owing to Esther Nelson whom I came to know then.

Father writes that the Tappans, one of the bride and groom parties on the Golden State, are coming to be with him on Kuliang. Cleora and I wished they had planned it last summer instead of this so we could all have seen them. They have a little baby that from Father's letter, I judged to be ill or not very well.

Well, I must be getting my nap before church. Dr. Scott spoke the first Sunday. I'd like to hear him read Tennysons- he has such a voice, such an intonation and enunciation. An English Baptist spoke the next Sunday and turned his head so much, it gave us the impression of his turning round and round all the while bodily. His talk was good. Last Sunday a Dr. Bronson from Philadelphia, who was at chauqsha[?] last year, and to be in Peking next year, a giant physically, spoke. The singing to me is the most enjoyable part of the service. On that wonderful porch, with only sky and sea, mostly, to see, and all those voices blending in parts with practically no instrumental guidance- only a baby organ- it is marvelous and stately. When they plan a church here, they should have it with open sides so as to give view of sky and sea, an open air church.

I hope you got well rested on your journey, and are enjoying to the full all the farm summer products, and the canning and cake-making and auto rides, etc. The gardens here are wonderful and a surprise, too. My best love to all at the Farm and a special hug and kiss for Nancy and Stephen and Ruth when you see them next. A restful and happy summer to you, and very much love from, Phebe K.

I am sending the snaps of our last summer's family that we took that last day. They are very poor, but you may like to have them. P.K.B.

All the things I found among the papers etc. in that basket when I got here! I didn't realize I was getting so many stamps and other nice things; and I thank you again just heaps for the hand-me-downs. Maude is tickled with her stove, and has used it here. You made lots of people happy, when you gave away or sold your things, but you made an awful big hole when you left Tunghsien! I'm still hearing about it from many quarters.

Kuliang, Foochow, China.
July 14th 1924

Dear Father:-

This letter I am addressing to you altho it is for all. I am enclosing (1) a letter from Phebe K. which I would like to have forwarded to Ellen after Gould and Mary and the rest if you have read it. (2) a Montgomery Ward order for a fountain pen. This I want for Phebe's Christmas present. She lost hers in Shanghai (3) a letter of "Appreciation" from one of my students. [See letter dated August 11, 1924] You might send this on to Ellen. She may raise her estimate of her husband after reading it. It is a very good illustration of the mind of a certain class of Chinese students.

I have just finished reading the Sentinels that came in the last home mail- up to June 4. In one of them I found the notice of Scoville Lyon's death. It is not often that I waste time in reading murder trials. But the Frank murder in Chicago is unique. The first page of the Ansonia Sentinel is well selected- arranged and written. I find news on nearly every first page.

This year two very big floods kept me in Foochow till last Tuesday = July 8. I do not remember that I ever came to Kuliang so late. However the weather was cool- comparatively- in Foochow and I could do as I pleased most of the time and I got a good rest for ten days before coming up. Mr. and Mrs. LeMay and three small children are with me. I rented my extra room to Dr. Stewart of Shaowu then some of the people up there thought it would be nicer if the Shaowu families could be in different houses while here on Kuliang- so I sent Dr. Stewart to another house. Then Miss Abel of the Meth. Mission took the room. The day after this was settled came a letter from a Mrs. Tappan of Hainan, an island South East of Hong Kong. So I got rid of Miss Abel and wrote the Tappan's to come day before yesterday. Mrs. Tappan wrote that a missionary of their mission (Am. Presbyterian) living in a station alone with his wife and four small children had been killed by bandits. Mr. Tappan must stay to settle. So my room is empty now.

Mission meeting began last Wednesday. It may close next Wed. Yesterday I preached at the Union Service here. The church was nearly full- in spite of a very heavy shower that stopped just as people were starting for church.

Phebe's letter will show that she must be improving. Mary's letter from Honolulu came today. I'm glad she had a good rest on board after leaving Yokohama. Tunghsien will miss her immensely. Dr. Goertz and Beaches and Newells do not say much more about sending their children to Tunghsien- "Now that Miss Beard is not there." They even suggest that Phebe stay there and teach so they can feel that their children can have a Beard to take care of them.

You are right in the midst of haying- how I'd like to get on the machine and the rake and the load. There will be less ground to mow now that the land across the road is sold.

Have you forgotten that you sent me a fine large thick wash cloth last Christmas? I have sort of used it for best until now. I have brought it to Kuliang and use it every morning with great pleasure- But one question comes to my mind every time I use it= What shall I do when this is worn out? Must I go back to the thin Chinese cloths again?

I am putting up a small new building on the College grounds to be used by the Y.M.C.A. and to make two recitation rooms. I wanted to go down to see it tomorrow. First I must wait till Wed. Mission meeting drags.

I hope Mary is with you before this. I have thought of her and you all much during these days. She will almost look for Mother and Elizabeth- and she will take days to accustom herself to the changes but she will bring sunshine and comfort and real help in every way to you all.

I received Gould's letter about tea in the last mail. I shall not send more till I receive a definite order. I want to know specially how the little oblong tins sold. It looks to me from his letter as if the round tins went the best. I think of you all the time in reference to your operation dear Boy.- Where are mother and the girls this summer. May the loving Father keep you and us always giving out good will so as to help Him make this world better.

With oceans of love to all Will.

Kuliang Foochow
August 3- 1924

Dear Ben and Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

August 2 and 3 always brings to my mind a picture of our old buggy with its slanting back behind the seat, drawn by old Fan going down the lane. Just showing above the back of the seat were the heads of you two. You were starting to White Hills to visit Grandpa and Grandma Nichols, from whom you were both named. You must have been about 9 and 11 years old. Congratulations- and many happy birthdays of usefulness to follow these of 1924.

I am enclosing a letter from Phebe K. which came last night. I think Gould will still be with you or in the vicinity when this reaches you, and Geraldine may be somewhere about. Please let others read Phebe's letter and then get it into the hands of some one of my immediate family so Ellen and the children will all see it. Phebe must be much improved or Dr. Love would not advise her to go to Korea.

Here in my own home or rather house on Kuliang I am living a very quiet life this summer- quite in contrast to a year ago. Mr. and Mrs. LeMay, David 5 years today. Miriam and Rebecca 6 mos. are with me and Miss Margie V. Phillips is to arrive Tuesday from the Philippines. She comes to teach in Foochow College, and will have a room in my cottage until school opens.

Since coming to Kuliang July 9th I have been down once a week to Foochow. We are putting up a small addition to the College buildings and painting all the buildings this summer and it pays to be around once in a while. Then with a faculty of forty members there are always changes to be made. Yesterday I engaged one man and a week ago two men.

Word came from some place that you had a new car- a Rolls Royce- was it? and Oliver had a new car, and the last mail brought news that Elbert drove a new Chandler out of the factory in Cleveland and took it East full of Kinneys, Humes and Beards. If new cars are any criterion of your business prosperity, you fellows must be getting along fairly well. My best conveyance is a pair of 60 year old legs. Yesterday I rode down the mountain on the backs of four men- walked across the plain and took a ricksha at the city gate. A ricksha took me 1/3 the way to the mountain foot. A chair with two men the rest of the way and I walked up the mountain. It cost me $1.10 to ride about 3 mi. How would you like to carry passengers at that rate?

Phebe's last letter brought one from Mary written at sea and mailed at Honolulu. I am very glad she could go back to Santa Barbara and also that she could see the Grand Canyon. I did not get entranced with the Sante Fe route when I came out in 1912. The chief impressions the trip left on my mind were mountain sides covered sparsely with stubby firs, skeletons of Texas long horned steers and great plateaus of grass with flocks of sheep grazing. Each of the other routes is much more interesting. But the Grand Canyon will make up in interest for Mary.

The next two weeks here will be interesting for those who have work in Evangelistic or Education lines. This week the Convention and the Evangelistic Conference comes. Next week the Annual Meeting or Conference of the Education Association. The Tennis Tournament begins this week. I have promised to act as Chairman of the Evangelistic Conference.

Never have I seen so much wet weather in July as this year. We have not had three nice pleasant days in succession. Last Tuesday evening and night over 3 ½ inches of rain fell. I hope it means no typhoon this summer.

You are all finished with getting hay in Newtown and Father is thru with his haying. It must make a deal of difference with his work not to have the Blackman farm. I hope you, Phebe are getting some rest. With Mary at home I hope to see you fold your hands occasionally, or take a vacation and go to Putnam and Pearl River,- run about and see your nieces put their pupils thru their liver squeezing stunts.

For whom will you vote Ben- Calvin seems to be pretty wise. He knows how to keep his mouth closed at any rate. As some one put it "his 'fecundity of ideas and frugality of expression' commend him to the people." Do you remember Dr. Pierce who preached in Newtown thirty years ago? He preached my ordination sermon in the Huntington Church Sept. 11, 1894. His son Jason Noble Pierce is pastor of the First Congregational Church in Washington D.C. He preaches to Calvin Coolidge, the Sec'y of the Navy, the Attorney General and will (?) preach to the Vice President when Dawes goes to Washington (!) Pray that he may keep his feet on the ground, from all I hear Davis is a good man- but I'm afraid Mrs. Davis will not be the first lady of the land next year.

What is Wells doing? I have not heard from him in a long time. I think of Daniel as in High School and of Edith as a sweet girl getting to be about 16. And Mrs. Mayor Beard presides over the whole household with her usual sweet dignity.

The Sentinel has many good words to say about Mr. Wilhelm and his good work in the Shelton Church. I judge he is helping things to move there.

Gould wrote that he was likely to have his operation for hernia in New Haven. I think of him as perhaps getting over it now. It is one of the hardest things I have to hear- to be on the other side of the world when my own are passing thru those serious times. I have to make an effort to realize that Mother and Elizabeth are not going and coming with you as formerly. And it was hard to think that I could not be of any comfort to Geraldine last November.- But it is not quite so bad, for in spirit I am with each of you every day, and I have a talk with God about each of you every day. So I know that in whatever need you are today I have talked with God about you on that very day and have asked Him to give you whatever you needed for that days successful living.

With love to you

Will.

Pearl River N.Y.

August 14, 1924.

Dearest Mother mine;

I have waited for a letter from you but it didn't come so I am writing again. Have you decided to send me to Northfield or not? Have you written to see if I can get in? I would like to know also when school starts up there. I hope not very early for it will take some time to get ready. If you decide to send me remember to pack all my things up that I have there. If I leave here two weeks early I will go to Putnam in a little over a week. The summer seems so short so I look back upon it but it seemed awfully long at the beginning.

Aunt Myra and Uncle Stanley went out to dinner tonight so Ruth, Nancy and I ate alone. I put the children to bed fairly early so as to write you.

You probably heard about the great calamity in Putnam. The New York papers are full of it so evidently it was a pretty serious matter. I don't exactly understand about how it happened but I have a faint inkling. It must have been an awful blow to Putnam and especially to the Gilpatric family. I feel very sorry for them and for Mr. Gilpatric having to spend the rest of his life blind and probably in prison. [G. Harold Gilpatric was cashier of the wrecked First National Bank of Putnam and former State Treasurer. He was charged with embezzling $100,000.]

Do try to get to Putnam as soon as you can and write me so soon as you go. I long to get away from here. It is so dull I can hardly stand it but I live on in expectation and even that isn't very definite.

Aunt Flora is coming here to spend the week end this Saturday. She has been at New York all summer studying and she finishes this week. I don't think Aunt Myra anticipates the visit very much but she is coming so that is all there is to it.

Don't send this letter along to anyone because it is only for your eyes.

I am out of news and paper now so will have to stop. Very lovingly

Kathleen

Dorothy gets a job in Saginaw working as girls' physical education teacher at North Intermediate. It is here where she meets Harold C. "Whitey" Newberg, a blonde headed math teacher from Galesburg, Illinois at the same school.

August 17th 1924

Dear Phebe:-

This means all at Century Farm and all who look to it as home. By the time this reaches you the summer will be over and teachers, students and visitors will have gone and you will be just the family. I cannot help thinking how different from last year. Mother and Elizabeth will not be there to say good bye to those who leave this year. I take a lot of comfort in the thought that Mary is there. Her last card was the one showing the Grand Canyon. The few sentences that these scenic postals allow looked as if she was enjoying the trip- and had pleasant companions.

Last evening a good letter came from Marjorie. She seemed to be enjoying her summer. I have not heard from the other members of the family since they left Oberlin after the reunion. I can place all but Ellen and Geraldine. Ellen did not write what she planned to do. Geraldine I thought had rather a heavy schedule, but if she took it easy she could get rest. I liked Dorothys bobbed hair very much. Several have done it here on Kuliang this summer. Mrs. Le May among others, and Margaret Bissonnette. I approve.

The Bathing Pool is very fine and popular this year from the beginning of the season until last Wed. Aug. 13. We did not have three consecutive pleasant days. Some days over 4 in. of water fell. - Last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday terrific showers came that threatened to wash the mountain into the sea. The Chinese say that three days- and there are always three days- of showers like these bring a spell of good weather. It is true this time.

Last evening we gave the "Crucifixion" by Stainer. Mr. O'dell came up from Foochow to sing the tenor. Mr. Morgan took the bass- Mrs. Cartwright played very acceptable. Mr. Blakeney led. I think it was the best Cantata we have ever given. Both Friday and Saturday evenings were clear and the moon was full and Kuliang- Chinese and foreigners were uplifted by the services. There is a feeling= you know it- that something good has been done.

Monday evening:- I wish you could be here with me. Ask Mary to tell you how a Kuliang evening seems- one so quiet and calm that an ordinary lamp stands on the table on my veranda with scarcely a flicker. - The sky aglow with stars, - the moon about to peep up over the eastern horizon- and I must add one other condition that she will hardly recognize from any of her experiences here- I am all alone- supper eaten and writing on the veranda. It is the first such evening this year since I came up.

A week ago last Tuesday, in a typhoon wind Miss Phillips arrived here- direct from Manila. She is to teach in Foochow College this coming year. Her introduction to Kuliang was rather strenuous- a typhoon wind to come up the mountain in and three days of rain with no sun after that and four days following with very hard showers, before she saw good weather.

I have been down to Foochow four times since I came up July 9. And the only riding I have done has been a chair down to the foot once and up the mountain once, with a few stretches on the plain. I am building a small addition to Smith Hall= our recitation hall 27 X 41 feet 2 stories and I like to see it occasionally. Then the problem of faculty is always up- the engaging of teachers is termly= each term.

Swimming is fine this season with lots of pleasant companions. Miss Sawyer who went to Hong Kong with you Mary last year is among them. She asked after you Mary, - if your arms were well. Tennis tournament is on. Dr. Montgomery leads as yet. Hykes [hikes] are popular- several ladies walked to the Tea Gardens today, starting at 5 a.m. eating breakfast on the way. I should have gone if it had not been for the Council Meeting. We are to build a new Club house this year. I am on the building committee. Did I write that we have the same cook this year that we had in 1915 when Flora and Mary were here? I think I did for I remember writing about the depredation of his little son- with Mary's National Geographic.

Phebe wrote last from Seoul, Korea, where she seemed to be enjoying herself, - altho she wrote that she was resting while the others were running about sight seeing.

I am thinking daily of Gould and wondering if he is just about now having his operation. I am also wondering if he comes in for a share in the Soldier's Bonus and for how much. If he does get some it will come in handy for him. By the way some time when you write will you tell me the state of my Liberty Bonds. When must they be taken up? I think I have already written that I would like them put into the Derby Savings Bank or the Bridgeport Savings Bank. I mean of course the value of them.

How you must enjoy the electric lights. No more cleaning of lamps- no more waiting for the sitting room lamps to "come up". "Turn on the light" and it is done. I congratulate you. I suppose you have lights in the barns and the garage also. And now you will have an electric washer and lots of other things. Father will be getting an electric milker. You'll put electricity into the hen roost to keep the hens laying nights as well as days.

Two weeks ago I was out for dinner at the London Mission house. I went over by the Belcher house- where Miss Armstrong lived last summer. When I came back my lantern blew out just back of the Belcher house. I never before knew what it was to be out on a rough hill alone in the dark. There was a real typhoon wind blowing and it rained in sheets. I felt my way along, thinking how fortunate it was that I had built that road and that I was I and not some man or woman strange to the hill. I crept or rather shuffled along, fell into the potatoe fields two or three times, but kept one hand or foot on the stone road. A flash of lightening revealed a stretch of path before me with steps. I thought they were the steps leading from my well to Miss Peters house and I made the most of the light. But in the darkness I found myself up against the Belcher house typhoon wall again. I had turned around in the wind and rain and dark without knowing it and had gone back. Then I gathered my thoughts and decided that I must take the wind for my guide and keep my face to the N.E. wind. I crept very slowly- not taking a foot off the ground. Mary will remember that the path runs in a semi circle around or along a terris just above my well,- a misstep would send me down ten feet= at one place right into the well. I never realized how sinuous that path was or how many cross ditches for the water to run across there were. I was wearing rubber boots and carrying a pair of shoes- one of these fell from under my arm. In one of my falls I broke the handle of my umbrella. The rain had wet me to the skin. But I had at last reached home.- I was just one hour going home- a ten minute walk. The next morning I put on my bathing suit and walked over and picked up the lost shoe. One leg got well sprained, so it is just now almost well after almost two weeks.

I think of all you dear people very often. It is lonely here with none of my own people with me. But I have much to do and little time to think of my loneliness. God has been very good to us all and is good still. Mother and Elizabeth and James and Ruth are very precious in memory. It is very pleasant to think of wife and children and father and brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces- all helpers in making the world a happier place for people to live in.

Very lovingly yours

Willard

I see I have presumed much on Mary's knowledge of Kuliang to help you understand this.

[This letter, dated August 24, 1924, was written from Kuliang, Foochow, China by Willard to Mary. Kuliang has a record number of residents this summer. He has gone on some beautiful hikes and picnics on the mountain. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Kuliang, Foochow, China
August 24- 1924.

Dear Mary:-

Day before yesterday brought your good letter. Gould's with one from Ellen to Kathleen came in the same mail, also one from Mr. Aton of Sioux City- whose baby I baptized last summer- you remember.

I enclose the card for the Bank as you request and thank you and Father for the trouble of doing the business. I wrote Phebe only a few days ago- so there is not much new to write.

Last Thursday Aug. 12 I went to Foochow and came back Friday. I saw several men- teachers, pastors, carpenters, masons, etc., rode in rickshas, but heard no news. Before I got to my house here- along by the Club, I heard there was a battle in Foochow and the war was to begin in a few days up river- so if you read about all these things in the papers do not get scared for perhaps they did not occur.

Thursday, Aug. 28-

This is my vacation week on Kuliang- Monday morning we went over to Raven Rock and ate breakfast- a delightful morning and very pleasant time. You will recall the place. Tuesday afternoon we went to Moon Temple. No slow one a long this time. Just as we reached the temple a shower began- way over across the river. Below were the angry black clouds, then above them the white fleecy clouds and resting on these the most beautiful bank of rainbow colors that I ever saw. We sat down way out on the point and ate lunch. Just before we were finished, the shower came so close that we had to go inside and finish. We went way thru to a shed or porch just built on this year. Then it began to hail. I never saw hail in such quantities. The stones were nearly ½ in. in diameter and they fell in such quantities as I never saw before. They fell on the sloping rocks and bounded all over- shooting in to the place where we were. The rainbow and these hail stones were unique in my experience. The rain stopped just as we wanted it to and we left for home, and a nice cool walk home- arriving just at dark. To day we went over to Ox Head fort for breakfast- about a dozen.

Kuliang has a record number of residents this year. 263 adults, 147 children. I never enjoyed the bathing more, and very many people are of the same mind. August 30th you see for yourself that this is my vacation week-this is the third whack at this letter. Yesterday 13 of us went to the Monastery. The day was perfect- not as hot as when we went in 1915. We left at 7 a.m. and got back at 7 p.m. Miss Nutting sprained her ankle just before she began to come down the steep bad road= a few rods above the place where Flora came so near keeling over in 1915. We had three chairs with us. Two were ahead- the one with us broke one of its poles a little time before the ankle turned, and the coolies could not carry her anyway. I helped her down and the other chairs were waiting at the foot of this steep, bad place so she got home all right.

Day after tomorrow I plan to go down for three days. We have the first Faculty meeting of the term Monday, Sept. 1 and examine new students on Wednesday. Then I want to come back Wed. p.m. or Thurs. a.m. and stay till Sept 8 (School starts Sept. 11). Monday when I go down for good= take my chickens down. That rooster that you gave me has about 50 sons and daughters that I know of. There are nearly 30 here on the mountain.

Edith Goertz and Francis Beach go to Shanghai School this term. Dwight Newell goes to Tunghsien. Miss Funk engaged to a widower with five children= the manager or registrar of the C.L.M. school at Chefoo. The Bedients are glad over the birth of a daughter last Sunday evening. Did I write you that the Wiants adopted a little boy at home two years ago and now they are too happy to keep still about the prospect of one of their own about Christmas. The St. Clairs are looking for another in January. I must close this and do some work today. I hope Gould is all right from his operation, that you are all well and happy. With love to all Will

Dear Aunt Mary,

Last night I brought my writing case down planning to write you after dinner. Then the Legers were in a talkative mood so I exercised my jaws instead of my fingers last night. I am waiting till time to go to church at the Anglican place now, so this won't be finished at one sitting.

Your letters and cards have come so delightfully often, they have been a joy thru the summer. Your last one reached me at Teng Shih K'ou, the one written at the farm when Aunt Phebe was in Putnam. So many people have asked me if you were coming back, and so many have asked for you in general.

I wrote you about the middle of July how I was enjoying the Hunters, the bathing, the donkey riding etc. I took several donkey trips with Esther Nelson, finishing up the last week in July with a ride to the Sand Dunes. We two went alone, and at Eagle Rock the donkey men begged off, so we had the fun of running our own beasts. We got into two rotten places but got out, then tied our donkeys and walked over the dunes. We had a fine ride back and readied the shallow of Eagle Rock again, when Esther's beast went into a mudhole all over. I shouted to her to get off, and then after two or three futile efforts to get out, the poor donkey settled back as if it were a bad job. Two men happened to be fishing in the creek nearby, so we called to them to help us. I was rather pleased that my crude Mandarin made them move. They picked the donkey's feet out one by one, then boosted him from behind, and got him up. After discovering a way across the stream that was solid they led my donkey across. It was quite an adventure, and we were thankful to deliver both beasts to the men alive, if muddy. It was their own fault that the accident happened so they had no business to be as angry as they were.

About the last week of July, Esther and Cleora asked me to go to Korea for that camping trip with them. I held off for a while because of strength and finances, but Dr. Love finally said I was O.K. and I fixed the other up with Fondina[?], so I got my emergency passport in five days from first proceeding and went. As floods at Antung had cut the rails, and as Esther was determined to start on Saturday, we took train to Tientsin and boat to Dairen. Cleora and I went second class to Tientsin at night, and we had some funny passengers. I sat with a young German who seemed to think I was his pillow; so I took some punch bag practice with my elbow on him. A tall Chinese who looked a red Indian amused us by sleeping with his mouth open, by buying apples and varnished chickens, and handling them all over with caressing motions. It was sickening.

Cleora got us around Dairen very easily. We found the Y.M. after quite a search, and finding their rooms unsuitable for ladies, we were sent to an American Hotel- run by Russians. The experience was rare! A tall dope-fiend porter gave us one room between the four of us, as it was safer in this men's boarding house. All the linen had to be changed, a cot and one of ours added to the furniture; and all - "Eata, drinka, sleepa, everything four dollars one day". Our food was excellent and plentiful and they served us obsequiously.

Twenty-four hours have passed since I have written the above, but I'll catch my thread and go on. As there was no boat connection as we hoped, from Dairen to Wensan, we found the trains turning again, and took the Muckden-Seoul route, with just enough time in Muckden for us to be glad we had no more. At Seoul we stayed with a M.E. doctor, Van Buskirk and his wife for two days. They were courteous, and that's about all; but we saw something of the town- a beautifully situated one, and most interesting; and got our supplies for the month. Mr. Yun had told us that only potatoes, rice, and eggs could be got there at Onseiri, so we had five cases of food. The night that we moved on we picked up four more Peking ladies who were on their way to Onseiri. They were going to the Van Buskirks, but we urged them to join us, and that meant eight people and their baggage for Cleora to see thru. Tho Esther Nelson was supposed to be well, she didn't run her party.

So the next A.M. we landed at Wensan breakfastless, Finding a Chinese-speaking porter, Cleora left all baggage with him to get to the boat that left at 6 P.M., and we took two Fords and spent the day at the kadi[?]. On the way out, the other Ford ran over a dog and killed it and our breakfast was a series of deluges, beginning with eggs in all stages of freshness, and going thru cereal for 10, coffee and tea for more than 8 etc. I never hope to eat such a meal again.

When we got settled on the little coast steamer with two cot beds out and our ratons[?] fixed for beds, and our provisions piled near, Esther took a picture of us and our things. Later the other girls did too, and just as the boat started the officer, having heard of our infringement of rules in a Jap. port, came and demanded our films. After much talk, one of the other four tore her film in bits, gave it to the officer, and he threw it overboard. Too much trouble to get ours so we have some nice pictures off them.

Our trip was fine, except that it ended at 3 A.M. instead of 6 as we thot. After we were waked by the whistle a porter informed us "You must get off. Onseiri near." So in the dark we packed ratons and beds, counted our sixteen pieces and finally got off into the scows that took us over the calm back water to shore. After our hour or more of talking thru a fine Korean boy who could speak a bit of English, we got two Fords to take us to the camp eight miles in the mountains and an ox cart for all our luggage. Just as the sun rose we started at a real Japanese pace, over good roads, and the ride was lovely in the fresh morning. We woke Mr. Yun in his courtyard at five, and before seven he had got us a fire, in a kerosene oil tin, got hot water, and eggs, and we had breakfasted and washed in the stream that rushed by the house.

We settled that day in two tiny Japanese-like rooms, and all summer, we cooked our own food on the kerosene oil tin stove, ate on a low Japanese table, washed clothes, hair, bodies in the soft stream water, and just rested. Esther and Mabel Silsby the other girl, a stenographer in the A.B.C.F.M. office in Tientsin took the round trip, tramping eight days in the Diamond Mountains, the New Kongo trip. They came back dead tired but elated; and Cleora cooked waffles or hot cakes enough for seven people eight each, that evening they got in. From about ten till four we were feeding and re-settling that tramping crowd, and getting our own dinner.

I did very little cooking as Cleora and Esther enjoyed it so that I hated to deprive them of the privilege of doing it! We had very good food and I gained so fast that Cleora threatens to charge Father at the rate of $10 per pound as he did her last summer.

I took a few trips but stayed pretty still. Parties were going thru all the time for the long trips, so we saw many people. We were able to get some fresh vegetables and fruits, too, so got along very nicely, especially with three Korean meals.

Cleora and I came home early as I was hoping to go home with Priscilla. I saw the Altar and Temple of Heaven, the Observatory, the Summer and Winter Palaces, and the Confucian and Llama temples. Cleora gave me a ticket that Mr. Exuer[?] gave her to the Confucian worship at which Wellington too officiated or substituted for the President, so it was a great privilege to go besides seeing the temple. The people I went with were very pleasant, and the places were just too beautiful to describe. I am so overwhelmed by them that I really don't remember them well, and want to go back some time and see more and again. They overreached my expectations and gave me a new conception and appreciation of the Chinese. Cleora was a very efficient thotful hostess, and I am glad to have spent my time in Peking with her. I had to take things slowly because I wasn't awfully strong when there.

Then came the war at Shanghai, and I foolishly stayed on till I had to come by Nanking train, and on to Shanghai by boat. As our boat was taken the first day for soldiers, we were delayed a day, and not knowing it, waited all day and missed seeing the city! I got there to find the McClures, the Legers, Miss Thomas and many others waiting for a boat back to Foochow so I have company tomorrow when I go. They came on the Pres. Cleveland which I passed in the river coming in and saluted as an old friend. Mrs. Newell passed thru on her way to the N.C.A.S. as matron to the girls, a very recent plan and she takes both her children and two others up. Edith Goertz comes here, and I brought her trunk down with me. Her father is here settling her and she has just had a cold, poor kid. My paper is giving out, so I'll have to write more later. I am going to supper with the Legers to Daisy Brown's tonight. As Priscilla couldn't buy your Corona, I used it, and left it for Jim to sell at P.T.H. I got $65 for it so that is the history of your Corona. I was glad to have it for two months. I am crazy to see my Peking rugs on my room floor. I am strong and nothing physically the matter, but seem to have a mental habit of being ill that I shall overcome this winter. I'm glad to get back. Lots of love to all.

Phebe K.

Wish you had been here for the camping trip and the P.T.H. time.

September 29th. 1924.

Dear Folks at Home:-

It is 8:00 a.m. Monday. I want to get this off today so I'll begin it now and finish it sometime before the mail goes.

The business that I want to get into this is (1) I am enclosing an order for $100 on the Derby Savings Bank. I think I must have that amount there by this time, and I would like you to get it and send a check to Gould (M. Gould Beard, 508 Hill St. Ann Arbor, Mich.) for that amount. His birthday is Nov. 13 and I would like the check to reach him for that date if possible. Since he left for the army in 1918 I have not helped him a cent and I know he is very desirous to graduate next June and it will take more than he can see now in money to do it. To my mind he has done pretty well to pull along as far as this. (I must leave now for the Faculty Meeting)

3:15 p.m. The second piece of business is that I am enclosing a $2.00 bill for part payment for the pen you so kindly ordered from Montgomery Ward's. I have received a postal that the order has been received.

The summer is over and every one is at least on the road back to his work. At Kuliang the season was very peculiar. During July we had a lot of rain. Not more than two consecutive days of pleasant weather. This went into August for about five days. Then we had three weeks of perfect weather, - not a drop of rain. This is the time when most of the Amoy people come up and they had a grand time. Tennis flourished, so did Kushan parties and other hikes. Then the rain came again and it has not stopped yet. Today is rainy. The war between Somebody and Somebody caused some trepidation but nothing happened. The people who go up river were delayed a few days but as far as we hear they are going up without any experiences. Boats are very high and they are scarce. Many were divested of all oars and such and sunk rather than have the army get them. One Shaowu party had to wait while the boat men raised their boats and put in the oars etc. Foochow itself has been quiet and it is prosperous. There are more old stores being torn down and rebuilt than usual. And the new ones are very nice. Many of the roads have been newly macadamized this summer.

School has opened very quietly with about 50 less students than usual. This we intended for we had more than we could care for last term. Most of the schools have been giving the boys a holiday on Confucius' birthday. This year the heads of mission schools, decided it was not a good thing. The boys held idolitrous services. All the schools but one had classes as usual. Our boys did not like the order and they have offered a mute objection by refusing to sing in chapel. Thus far I have said nothing.

A week ago Thursday I engaged two motor launches and one house boat and went down to meet 6 McClures, 5 Legers, 2 Farleys, Misses Thomas, Neeley, Messrs. Goertz, Thelin and Mrs. Beach and Phebe. Quite a party went down to meet the returning and new ones. It was some job to get them and their baggage all up. I finished the day's work at about 10:30 p.m.

Phebe is looking much better and is now taking full work in the school, but not any of the thousand things outside. She has had a very interesting summer. Cleora Wannamaker was with her all the time in Korea. While in Peking she met Mr. and Mrs. Tappan who were to have the other room in my house on Kuliang. They have engaged the room for next summer. And Cleora is talking of coming down. We were very sedate in our house this summer.

I have not yet had letters telling of the disposal of my family for the fall term. Gould is at Ann Arbor. Marjorie at Oberlin, a Freshman, Geraldine at South River, N.J. Where Ellen, Dorothy and Kathleen are I have not heard.

Mr. Raymond Hightower should have reached Shanghai yesterday. He is coming to teach in Foochow College. The College has to pay all his salary and travelling expenses. It may bankrupt us but with the two Christians gone I was the only man among these 500 boys and the teaching is more than I can carry with all the committee work that falls to me. Miss Margie V. Phillips who came over from Manila is working in finely. She is one of the kind that sees the best of every thing and does not complain. Mr. Neff got back from the Philippines last Friday. He is in Diong Loh.

I want to again thank you for the Sentinels. They keep me in touch with a big area in Connecticut. And that first page is a good world news page. I rather miss the folding them up again and sending them on to Mary in North China. They also form a connecting link with you, for every mail I think that you have thought of me, and it makes a pleasant thought.

Mary has gotten into the life of the home again- not used to it but accommodating herself to it. I cannot picture the home without mother and Elizabeth there. But these changes were expected, they are right and we would not have them otherwise. At the same time they make us pause and think and readjust ourselves. God spared Mother to us thru a long and active and very profitable life and He spared Elizabeth much longer than we thought possible some years ago. I like to think of Phebe and Mary in the home and enjoying themselves, with enough to do but not overworking. I hope this is a true picture.

Very lovingly

Will

That washcloth you sent last Christmas is a dandy. I use it for best-- if that means anything to you. I hope you repeat this present next Christmas.

Wen Shan Girls School
Foochow, China

Oct. 5, 1924.

Dear Gould,

Here it is nearly your birthday again, and I head under heels in work as usual, so that letters go only about one a week. But this year is different from last fall; - Eunice Thomas is here to be a balance wheel, and there are four of us to carry our school and heavy social duties. Also, I am freer of work, only having two grammar classes, one in Chinese Bible, two in singing and 22 music (organ and piano) pupils.

There- how's that for telling all the important news in one breath? Now I can wish you many successful years after this one which you celebrate on Nov. 13, and much happiness now and thru the years. Your letters that are forwarded by the family have been a great joy and an assistance in keeping up with you in all your social activity with the family, and your work. I do hope the parasols were a real financial assistance to you, and that the price I suggested hasn't lost your face. Of course they cost here only about a dollar silver- 79 cents or 80 cents gold. Your last letter to Father about the farm, I read this morning lying on my rattan day bed in my pretty room where I am now writing this. In the middle of the floor is my new Peking rug covered with butterflies swarming about a peach tree. If you get married when I come home two years from now, perhaps I might be willing to part with it to you in honor of that event. I had such fun and anxiety about getting it down from Peking. But it is here safe now. It is not large only 5' X 7'.

My last letter home, I fear was from Korea, a month ago. Cleora and I came down alone, leaving Esther and Mabel Silsby to come alone. At Peking I had ten days to see the beautiful, spacious palaces and buildings which have given me a new love, appreciation and hope in the Chinese. Their Altar of Heaven is the most beautiful and significant thing in the world to me.

Newspapers are a species all their own here. While I was in Peking the war between Chili and Chekiang started. As we got news three days old at best I didn't know if it was safe to go or not. To begin with, our Foochow wars have never hindered us from travel, so I just never dreamed that I couldn't go when I got ready. From Monday to Wednesday I enjoyed myself; then suddenly learned that no trains were going to Shanghai. By Thursday I got tickets to Nanking, and left Saturday morning with postals bestowed at the last minute by the anxious ladies, so that they might here [hear] from me at strategic points along the way. At Nanking I expected to be met by Miss Steele-Brooke who was moving there from Foochow. As she hadn't arrived, I called all my Mandarin (quite an imposing littleness, I assure you!) to use, telephoned the Y.W., made the coolies contract my baggage from two carriages into one, and went to the Bridge House Hotel where we had to stay two nights. All day Monday we waited for a China

Merchants Boat that we later learned had been commandeered for soldiers. But at 6 the next morning the girl who was going with me and I were waked and informed that the boat was in, the soldiers were getting off at Nanking, and that we could go and board at once. This we did.

I never was gladder in my life to get out of a place. My money was running short, and my bank was in Shanghai; I had no friends there – and really you find even acquaintances are a real comfort when you are deprived of them. I was lucky to have picked up this long, lank, bobbed haired girl, who was going around the world alone by the Dollar Line boats, to travel with. She annexed a big-headed young Texan who was six months old in China, and knew it all, and was telling her some marvelous things about the dear old country. Well, if we missionaries never rubbed elbows with any but missionaries, we'd grow awful queer; and I really was glad of a change in companions for a while. It is interesting tho to see how thick men and women of the modern type can be while thrown together and, how easily they drop each other on getting way to Shanghai. She went to the Astor House at $12 per day. I to the Missionary House at $3. Some dif!

There I met the Legers, the McClures, Mr. Goertz, and others, notably Mr. Thelin our new single man, coming to Foochow. After several long days of waiting the Sign Shi with four coolies and beds for 12 people started down with a passenger list of 23 foreigners. We slept on cots and in the dining saloon and hugely enjoyed our escapade. Our reception at Foochow was grander than usual with half the population to meet us, and two private launches under Father's supervision to bring us up river.

After a summer of travel it surely felt good to settle down for a season. I've got to find a place here yet, in spite of having a schedule, that things are working around very well. I am practicing some, so I hope to be able to play a bit when I come home. We started right in on dinners with Lucy Lanktree's birthday as our first excuse. As specially unusual guests we had Mr. Thelin and George Ratliffe, a young English business man who is fond of Priscilla Holton. Mr. Thelin was put by me, and from his actions then and since on the tennis court my family have found much promise and material for teasing me. Really it is rather fun since he is quite evidently not eligible. He is very nice, a growing man and fun, but people don't love to order.

When I left Foochow I told Father not to be surprised if I cut my hair before returning. Tho I had plenty of invitations to have it done I still have it all, and can't yet get the courage to say good bye to the ends. Dot's is very pretty and I do think Marjorie ought to cut hers just while it's the style. If she wants it long when she graduates there's lots of time for it to grow before four years are done. I'd do it in a minute if I were in college. Lots of people have done it here.

Father is well, but is working awfully hard. He has Miss Phillips from the Phillipines and a new man, Mr. Hightower, is coming as tutors. So soon he will be free of some things. Strange how the younger men of the mission don't catch onto things, and are happy to let the older ones keep on with them. I'm glad Father can, and he keeps wonderfully young in spirit and sympathy as well as in ability to carry physical strain. But I'd like to see some things taken off his shoulders. To me it is a satisfaction to see Father in Mission Meeting and other councils. He waits till all have blown their blow, then comes out quietly with something so evidently appropriate and right that all seem to agree at once. From many things he has let drop, I know this stage of success and service, is the result of long years of hard discipline, work under trying conditions and much experience. This last is hard to live by and trying conditions don't really make you wild with delight.

I'm glad you could see both the families last summer, and be such a help at the Farm. I hope by now you have entirely got over the effects of your operation and are feeling as fit as you ever did before it needed doing. Having so much time to recuperate was fine before school.

I am hoping muchly that Mother can come within the next school year. Father really needs her, and the whole mission has been waiting for her to come. Of course I know Kathleen needs her too; but I hope she can be put some where with one of you older children before another year is out. I can stay with her when I come home two years from now- and learn to dance!- but then she won't need anybody.

My summer did a lot for me, but I seem not to have entirely got my strength back. My eyes are on the blink, and I am overcome with sleepiness most of the time. But that will be over shortly I hope. Just now we are in the whirl of preparation for Annual Meeting just a month off, and our school's 70th anniversary.

I hope this year will get you well along toward your diploma without too much strain on your health. You'll have to take a trip around the world to celebrate your graduation when it finally comes. I hope you will give Mother some more good times, too.

Very much love,
Phebe

Please send this round the family.

The stamp is worth saving or selling. It is some memorial edition. I'll find out what.

The Kuliang Council
1923-24

Sunday morning Nov 23- 1924

Dear Folks at Century Farm and the others that used to be there:-

The last mail brought Phebe M's good letter telling about you all, and the visits you make to the old home. These bright spots are dependent on those in the home and also on the rest who have gone out and can come back from time to time. It does me good to read about them. I can visualize them for I have been a part of them so often- the autos parked in front of the house- the front porch full of old and middle aged and young, - one or two quietly slipping away unnoticed and before any but the initiated realize- plates and paper napkins glide around to each then come sandwiches, salad, cake etc. and everyone somehow feels better. Questions that the universe depends upon to keep its forces together and running efficiently are discussed = never settled, for when things are settled progress ceases= and then Abbie looks at Ben and Ben looks at Daniel and Daniel goes toward the auto and soon the doors are closed and lights are lit and Father takes up the Bible and God speaks and then the prayer is said and all go to nod-land = and no one says so but another strand has been added to the strong tie that binds this family together and makes them one altho thousands of miles divide them physically. They are one in the realm that space much divides. We had radio transmitting and receiving stations long before the word "radio" was understood by any number of people and our instruments were all tuned to the number= "family ties" called Love.

I am writing in my bedroom. This sheet is the last but one of this kind that have been lying on my dressing table, so rather than go down stairs to get "proper" paper I use this. About five feet from me are two large packages that came in the last mail. The tags tell me they came from O.G. Beard, Shelton. Father's handwriting is on one of them and I can tell what is in them Phebe knows one of them is here. The other came since I have had a chance to tell her. We agree to wait till Christmas to see the things. I thank you for them. May this find you all well and able to enjoy the Christmas time. We are already planning for it here. I am much pleased that there are left of your last years gift some to hitch on to this years gift and make a continuous chain. The delicious biscuit or crackers you sent, I ate in July= I mean I finished them in July. I kept them very carefully wrapped and used to share one with Phebe when she was here. The shaving cream I have used pretty sparingly and there is still enough for a dozen shaves. The washcloth is a joy forever. The soap makes me feel like a millionaire.

The last mail brought the duplicate Deposit receipt from the Deposit Dep't of the Birmingham National Bank for $75.00. This is the semi annual interest on the mortgage. I must work out an automatic division of this amount as I have the figures. They are recorded in the enclosed slip. I will write Dorothy, Marjorie and Kathleen and ask them to write you direct what to do with their semi annual interest or to write to consult you about the manner of payment to them. I do not see how we can help bothering you a little in this. If you have any suggestions to make it easy send them on.

Have I written you that a month ago I got on another dysentery bug. Dr. Kinnear put 10 injections of senetine[?] and 16 big ipecac pills into me. The dysentery stopped in three or four days, and I lost only one and a half days in bed, and have done the routine work since and all essential work in the Chinese Annual Meeting and work on committees but I have not done much tennis and other outside stunts. I eat and sleep all right but my legs are wobbly. Mary probably knows how I feel. Yet "Every day in every way I'm getting better and better." Friday I attended a long Committee meeting at Ned Munson's= our YMCA house that we built and lived in 1907, 1908- 1909,- stayed there to supper and then went to Anti Cob at Consul Prices - to listen to the second paper of the Fukien Province Hand Book ??= Social and Religious Life of Fukien Province. - Home at 11:45 p.m. Yesterday I left home at 9 a.m. after teaching one class, went down to the University, lunched with Mr. and Mrs. Blakeney, seated as "judge at the finish" in all the races of the Foochow Christian Schools Field Day, took afternoon tea with Mr. and Mrs. Bedient- came home for a 7 p.m. supper- got to bed at 10:05 and slept till 7 this a.m. got up and made gems for breakfast and then fed my 23 chickens and ate breakfast- so I am not so badly off. Phebe seems to be doing her work and enjoying it and keeps well.

A week ago a big fire right at the South Gate burned over the ?? ground that was burned over just three years ago. Ten or more Christians were burned out.

Political news you get on the front pages now I see the Sentinel gives prominence to China news. Gen'l Feng's coup was a surprise to all. The Chinese here call him a traitor- because he did not first tell what he was going to do.

The Y.M.C.A. in China is in serious financial difficulty because funds in the U.S. are insufficient to support all the Secretaries now in China. There is a strong probability that they will close out in Foochow and leave the work here.

I think of you all often as I read the Sentinels for the first few days of Sept. I was almost startled as the dates looked so much like those of 1923 and took me back there. God has spoken to us frequently during the past year- but He has been kind and good.

Very lovingly Will.

Black Rock Hill
Foochow, China

Nov. 30, 1924.

Dear Aunt Mary,

On the last mail, came another of your good letters telling of Aunt Phebe's second visit to Pearl River, and of your going to town with Grandpa with apples. It won't be long before you are telling us of your Thanksgiving.

Ours came last Thursday and we gathered at the city compound, the Reumann's house and sat at three tables of about ten each. Of course the dinner was fine, and it was set off by some very nice table decorations, corn-cob pipes made from Father's chicken-corn cobs by Mr. Hightower, our new Foochow College tutor from Virginia; and place cards each with a silhouette from the Woman's House Companion and a verse by Mr. Hightower. The toasts were very good, and all was settled afterward by some games on the lawn, and volley ball.

The evening was most entertaining. Father and I ventured forth to a 9:15 minstrel show on South Side, where the American Association entertained the community with a very negro production by a band of minstrels supposed to have been wrecked on their way from Shanghai to Hongkong. Messrs. Carmon, McConnell and Polk besides a new man Mr. Willett of the M.E. Mission, carried the thing and it was very good. Father and I didn't get to bed till after one, and I have only just begun to get rested again.

Don't you like my paper? I am spending the day with the Y.W. girls on Black Rock Hill, and Charlotte Neely the tall one, gave me this paper as a sign of hospitality. It is very restful here, and the McConnell children have been amusing us quite some.

On the 11th of Nov. came the day for which we have worked all the term, the celebration of our school's 70th anniversary. Priscilla Holton gave a sacred concert in the evening and the afternoon was full with a pageant arranged by Eunice Thomas and carried out by the Chinese teachers and Grade girls, illustrating our history. Crowds came and stood or sat in the sun for the pantomime explained thru a megaphone, and then several men spoke. I had the thrill of meeting the Governor at the head of the steps and taking him to his seat. The morning was full of an alumnae meeting where the teachers entertained with songs, stunts and music. It was really a fine day. I was sorry about the concert in the evening, for we had issued too many tickets, so several tens had to stand outside, and that caused a good deal of feeling. The program went perfectly and I think even the foreigners received a real uplift from it. The University boys came in a body and took more seats than we had sent them tickets. I had the fun of being accompanist and we did things like Handel's Largo, Cavalleria Rusticaria, and the Pilgrim's Chorus. It meant a lot of practising, but that has been a real joy to me, and I want to continue it.

My schedule is full tho not hard. Twenty-one organ and piano pupils take nearly all the school period for lessons, and then I teach one class in Chinese Bible, and two in English Grammar. Just now I am playing for the New Year's Day physical Ed. Exhibition dances that our Shanghai trained Chinese teacher is getting up.

One of the big things of the fall was the flag raising at the Consulate which is just being opened since the hose[?] for our old one is up. The ceremonies were very simple but impressive, with the bugle call, the procession of the flag carried by all the South Side American kiddies, the raising while the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung, and then the address by Mr. Price, the responses by a Japanese for the Consular body and by a Chinese for the Foochow Government the inspection of the buildings and tea. Father missed this because of illness.

Anti-Cob has been energetic, and we are looking forward now to our Christmas meeting. Several papers for our handbook of Fukien have been read, Father's on the History of Fukien being the first. Father is having rather a hard pull getting rested from his illness, but keeps right at work. I find myself growing stronger all the while; tho I can't do anything very taxing nor keep at a thing too long. Dr. Kinnear has examined my eyes and I am soon to have new glasses from which I expect quite a lot of benefit. Long walks on Saturday afternoons and occasional trips with the school are breaks that are pleasant. I surprised myself during Annual Meeting by playing the pipe organ and using the pedals. I would like to study that instrument some time.

I hope you are all well, and that Aunt Phebe will continue to get rested and strong. Father says your Xmas packages have come, but we are keeping them for the day. My Xmas greetings are brought to you by this letter, but that's not all. Much love to you all,

Phebe K.

Did you know Martha's engagement was announced? She had a party some time in Oct. and Cleora sent a gift from her and me.

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

December 14th 1924

Dear Mary:-

It must be your turn for the letter this week. Altho it seems to me I wrote you shortly ago. The bundle of Sentinels with the Bridgeport paper came yesterday. I opened at once and looked for Nov. 5th to see how Ben came out. He is swell- as I see the ticket in general was elected with a plurality of toward 900. He lost by only 348. I write from memory.

Christmas is approaching very fast. Invitations are already coming in for the various Christmas exercises in the churches. I have decided to go out to Chiong Ha- a church near the mouth of the Ing Tai river. I plan to leave after lunch Saturday and get back Monday morning. After I had decided to do this and had written, an invitation came for Phebe and me to lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Skerrett-Rogers and in the afternoon attend with them a play given by the children of the foreign community- Red Riding Hood. We had to decline. I must back off now and get to bed.

Monday Evening:-

I wish I could send over to you some of our superb weather- for three weeks every day bright, sunny, clear, crisp- every evening starlight or moonlight. Two mornings with white frost- the ther. around 50 degrees each morning. I wish you could share our exquisite roses, sweet corn from our own garden lettuce, beets, carrots and turnips.- Sweet peas also= not good to eat tho. O yes and green peas. I planted them about two months ago with my own little hands and picked them with my own hands. To day I planted about a quart of peas and some beet seed. We are now eating the yellow corn that I raised last summer. I planted some that you brought down or I guess you sent that particular corn down by Mr. Goertz. I put it in during April and harvested it in July. It is very nice corn but it disappointed me in the yield of kernels. The cobs are large and the kernels short. If you want something to do sometime I wish you would put up a pound or thereabouts and send me- of fathers good yellow flint corn. Mr. St. Clair plans to go on furlough in June or July. He has been the gardner since I left in 1920 and his knouette[?] will fall on me. I hope to have all the yellow corn we shall need for meal and I hope to have green corn to eat from July or June till January. This evening we had delicious evergreen corn for supper. It can be planted all the time from March 20 to Sept. 10th. That planted latest will mature much more slowly. The seed for this I can get from Burpee, but the yellow flint field corn I should like from home for old time associations. [Added later in pencil: I have just sent in an order to Burpee of Philadelphia.]

Phebe holds her own doing full work and putting in some extra for concerts. She is helping in a concert for next Sat. evening and is having a concert of her own for her music pupils about Jan. 10.

If you send this to Stanley he may remember that a few years ago a man named Frank Eckerson of Amoy, China called one day at his Laboratory in Pearl River. He had sores in his mouth. They bothered him much and Stanley gave him medicine or injected some and he left and was troubled no more. Eckerson was up from Amoy to attend our Annual Meeting in Nov. and could not find words to adequately express his appreciation of what Stanley did for him. He has just sent me 18 fine Amoy pumeloos. I bought 546 pumeloos in Oct. and have 100 still on hand. But I look forward to the Amoy fruit for it is usually better than any of the Foochow fruit.

Too large boxes are waiting in my room for Christmas to come so Phebe and I can open. They are from you, and the last mail brought a package from Pearl River.

We as a mission are to have our Christmas at the Union Kindergarten. I am to be Santa. The unmarried people (I among them) have clubbed together and bought red cloth for Santa's coat and trousers and hood. A few weeks ago we drew, each of us, two names- one of an adult and one of a child, and so each will receive a Christmas gift and each will give a gift. The children are practicing Christmas songs and so are the grown ups. Miss Thomas came back with a set of colored slides of many famous old paintings and a book of songs- Christmas melodies of several nations. These we all are to see and sing Christmas eve.

I am still wearing one of those four-in-hand ties that Elizabeth worked little flowers on and sent out to me. It is a gray silk- One side is worn thru but the other side is all right.

Day after tomorrow= Sat. p.m. I plan to go to Chiong Ha for Xmas Sunday. The next three weeks will be very full with Christmas, New Years and exams and Commencement. Mr. Christian has been here to take half the entertaining of the faculty and the graduates. But with him at home, the whole thing falls on me this year. About 55 on the faculty to feed at an evening dinner- foreign style, and 40 graduates to whom to give a Chinese feast. This is in addition to the graduation feast to faculty and graduates.

I have written this with the pen that you ordered from Mt. Ward and Co. I do not forget that I owe you about $1.00 for it. My good friend in Kansas City who sends me greenbacks has not been very flush recently and he has not sent many during the past months.

In a few days your letters telling about Thanksgiving will be coming. Have I written of Miss Grace Funk's engagements to a Mr. Andrews of Chefoo?- a widower with five children. He, his former wife and Miss Funk were classmates in Chicago and they have kept up correspondence. His wife when she knew she could not live asked her husband to marry Miss Funk. They are to be married at Ponasang. The ladies there are giving the wedding.

This carries lots of love to each of you. Tell father it raises me in the esteem of the Chinese as I tell them my father is still in business at the age of 83. For here we add a year to the age we give to ourselves in U.S.A. I have been 60 all the year. Will

Umbrellas

An industry which has in the last few years become very important to the export trade of the province is that of making paper umbrellas. Because its growing popularity there have been added many new and attractive designs. The sober grandfather umbrella has been here for many years, very often large enough to shelter the whole family, and durable enough, it is claimed by some Chinese, to serve for three generations. In ancient times, it is told, the umbrella was derived from the ancient farmer's still ancient rainhat; of bamboo but the delicately tinted, beflowered umbrellas of to-day lift their heads high above such plebian progenitors.

There are between two and three hundred shops which have a part in this industry. Some make only handles, of bamboo, or lacquered wood, or bone, while others make the frames, and still others decorate and export them. The making of the frame is briefly this: The ribs are made of carefully cut flat strips of bamboo, tied to the supporting ribs with strong twine, and all fastened tightly to the handle. When the ribs are spread out they are covered with three pasted layers of narrow strips of paper and these first are allowed to dry with persimmon oil and once more allowed to dry. The umbrella is ready to be decorated with colored bands, flowers, scenes, or quaint figures. One of the largest decorating and exporting firms is that of Ma Guong Kee. This shop keeps ten decorators busy and exports many hundreds of cases annually to other ports in China, to England, America and Australia.

Woven-Paper Scrolls

Yung Chun ought also to be mentioned for another distinctive industry- the woven-paper scrolls. These were first made more than two hundred years ago by the Dang clan which kept the secret for many years, but later allowed others to learn. The weaving is done on a table over another picture with fine strips of paper not more than an eighth of an inch in width. The horizontal strips are white, but their vertical strips carry the color and produce the picture. The threads of paper are carried in a fine bamboo needle. They make the old, well-loved picture of mountains, woods, and winding streams, pictures of the four seasons, and character scrolls for different occasions. The demand for these scrolls seems to be mostly from officials who send them away to their friends. But these quaintly conceived and delicately wrought pictures deserve a far-wider fame than they seem to have.

Incense

Though there are but few shops making incense, they do a thriving business, for hundreds of dollars; worth must be burned in Foochow alone every week, in temples, and in superstitious rites in the homes. Among the many different styles carried there is variety enough to match every taste. There are the cheaper sorts, made of red or black incense or black flecked with bits of gold leaf; the more expensive kinds, made in solid lengths of incense, red, black, light brown; the same made in tak, or pagoda circles, and in different sizes of the long styles. There are different scents, gong-nang-hiong, must, aloes, sandalwood, fine cassia, and Barros camphor. These are mixed with wood dust finer than sawdust, and for the "thread incense", that made without sticks, the paste is forced through holes of the desired size made in a board, dried, cut into proper lengths, and wrapped very attractively, often boxed, for sale.

The Foochow incense is said to surpass that of other places in quality. All the shops visited export quantities to other parts of China, Korea, and even to Japan. Japan buys mostly the cheap stick variety and a better blackthread kind, scented with aloes and called Haik-ting. For the Fifth Month Festival, small favors are made of a fine wood-dust paste scented with pure musk and are pressed into wooden moulds in the shape of ancient symbols, fruits, mythological characters, shells and so on. These are given to friends.

Lacquer Making

This has a romantic story. Lacquer articles were made as early as 1387 in North China. The process must have been a long one, for the lacquer was very thick, made with many coats. The process was handed down till five centuries ago one of the many families who knew the secret invented or discovered an improved formula. From that time until now the Sing family of Foochow claims to be the only one that knows how to make the best grade of gold lacquer.

The raw lac, a thick brown fluid obtained from the lac tree in North China, comes in large tubs like the butter tubs of America, covered with paper. Before using, the fluid must be strained two or three times through cotton and cloth. The lacquer finish is then made by secret receipts [recipes?], colored, and the gold is then added in that branch of the trade.

The wooden shapes to be lacquered are always made of nang-muk, a fine grained soft wood, and then a foundation of green putty-like mixture is applied, after the complete drying of which the lacquer mixture is put on with a brush, one coat at a time. The articles are dried thoroughly in a dark, damp room after which the next coat is given. It is the drying which takes the time in making lacquer ware, but it prevents cracking, streaking, or ruffling up into ridges. The decorations are put on by a hired artist who works free-hand. The gold, or “number one” lacquer” and “silk lacquer” are often mistakenly used as synonyms. The figures for the latter are first made of clay, this being wrapped in strong silk which is then given several coats of lacquer and dried well. The clay is washed out with water and the lacquering finished on the silk alone.

In spite of the increasing foreign demand for small things in gold lacquer, the important trade is that of officials and rich Chinese who buy quantities to give to their friends on important occasions. They are used to decorate the owners' houses at festive times and are put away between whites in the padded boxes in which they come. Until very recently there has been no effort to seek outport trade, lacquer is the prize beauty product of Foochow. It is unique, though strangers to it do not at once appreciate its value since it is often confused, by them, with the cheaper and better-known Japanese lacquer.

[This report, dated February 1, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to Rev. Wm. E. Strong, D.D. It is his report of Foochow College for 1924. Report from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Foochow, China
February 1, 1925.

Rev. Wm. E. Strong, D.D.
14 Beacon Street,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Dr. Strong:

I am sending you the report of Foochow College for 1924. Foochow College was established in the year 1853. One small room then held all the pupils. Seventy-two years have witnessed a steady growth as this report shows. There are several times as many now on the faculty as there were in the student body then.

1. Courses.

Foochow College consists of the High School Course of three years, the Preparatory Course of the Middle School of three years, and the Higher Primary of four years.

2. Faculty.

The faculty of Foochow College consists of 45 members; Middle school 29 Chinese and 5 foreigners; Higher Primary 9 Chinese and 2 foreigners. Mr. and Mrs. L.J. Christian returned to America on furlough in July and Mr. Siek Ding-muo, instructor in English and Education, went to America for higher education this summer. Mr. Ling Heng Eu, instructor in English and Mr. Diu Dai Siok, instructor in Chinese, left us this summer and have been in the employment of other organizations. Newly appointed teachers the second semester are Miss Maizie V. Phillips, graduate of Pennsylvania State University, instructor in English literature; and Mr. Raymond Hightower, B.A. Richmond University, Virginia, instructor in Modern History and English; Mr. Ling Hau Muk, B.A. Fukien Christian University, instructor in English and education; Mr. Guok Hong Gi, instructor in Chinese literature; Mr. Uong Ngia Kong, drawing teacher. Mr. Iong Kai Ting, our graduate of this year, takes charge of the laboratory, and Mr. Uong Siu-duang, our graduate this year, is assistant in Physical Education.

The faculty meet every Monday morning. Each year sees a pleasing growth in the ability of this group to unitedly discuss and transact the business of the institution. The members of the faculty also meet every Monday evening at 4:30 for prayer meeting.

3. Buildings.

There are now in use for college purposes six foreign and two Chinese buildings: (1) The Administration building, containing the President's Office, faculty assembly room, and registrar's office, and two more rooms, one for selling books and one for a waiting room; (2) Cowan Hall, containing the Library, Laboratory, one recitation room on second floor and dormitory on first floor. The Y.M.C.A. business department, and the scouts also have a room each in the building.; (3) Lincoln Hall (dormitory) containing 57 rooms for 168 students. On the first floor there are a large dining hall, a coolies' room, and store room; (4) Smith Hall, containing a Chapel, ten class-rooms, one teachers' room and barber shop. (5) The Higher Primary building has three stories, with the dining hall on the first floor. The topmost story is used for dormitory with 13 rooms for 91 students, and one faculty room. (6) The Y.M.C.A. building, just finished this summer, is adjoining Smith Hall. It contains one large assembly room, four student rooms and two large recitation rooms. The other two Chinese buildings are used, one for the first four classes of the Higher Primary class rooms and dormitory, and one for the class room of the Preparatory students.

4. Library.

The college library is open throughout the term every weekday from 10:30 to 12:00, and from 12:45 to 1:30, and from 3:6 p.m. and again from 7-10 at night. The library is newly furnished with new chairs and tables, is newly painted and white-washed. It contains something above 1000 bound volumes and about 30 different kinds of magazines and newspapers. Besides there are more than 100 pictures and maps. Mr. Lek Hiong Nguk and two assistants are taking charge now. Under the efficient direction of Miss Armstrong, this is increasingly used by the students.

5. Laboratory.

The old laboratory has been torn down. The new one is on the topmost floor of Cowan Hall. It is well lighted and aired. New apparatus, the gift of the Flatbush Church, Brooklyn, has just come from America. Three graduates of Fukien Christian University are in charge of Biology, Chemistry, and Physics, and good work is done in each department.

6. Enrollment and Graduates of this year.

The total enrollment of this year is 620. The students in each department are shown in the following chart:

7. Deaths.

Mr. Daing Dung Ciu, the drawing teacher, died in the 1st semester. Two of the graduates Mr. Dong. Dai Cung and Mr. Uong Soi Gi, died in this year. Eight students died during the year.

8. Religious Activities.

It has always been the aim of this college to build leaders upon the foundation of Christian Truth. Therefore the religious activities are one of the most important events of this report. (1) The faculty take turns in the daily chapel prayers and in an address on Christianity every Tuesday. Every Friday at chapel the President, himself, gives an address. (2) The attendance of church service, of Sunday School, and of Christian Endeavor is compulsory. (3) There is a Sunday School at 2:00 P.M. every Sunday. Mr. Uong Li-gong and Mr. Ling Iu Bing take charge. Though it is compulsory, yet there students show interesting discussing the great problems of Christianity as related to life. On Sunday evening there are four Christian Endeavor societies. (4) There are 182 Christian students this year. M.S., and the Prep. 120, and the H.P. 62. (5) Every Monday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 about 60 students meet in three classes for Bible study. (6) Student Volunteer Band. This band consists of 23 members and they meet once a week on Sunday night. Every month they plan a meeting of all Christian students.

9. Student Activities.

(1) Fifty-six of our students were running 16 day schools during the summer under the guidance of Mr. Iu Soi Ling and with the help of Mr. Iong Dung Ling. There were 367 boys and 97 girls in these schools. The total contribution toward this Daily Vacation Bible School work from the students of this college was $80.75. (2) The students of the H.P. are running a Sunday School for the neighborhood children at three p.m. under the guidance of Mr. Uong Do Chuang. About 150 boys and girls are gathered in the Church every Sunday. 25 students were elected to be the students, and the College Sunday School helps financially. (3) The College Y.M.C.A. is maintained by the student body. A meeting is held every Friday night and attendance is voluntary. (4) A free night school for all the coolies and other employees of the college is maintained by the association. It meets four times every week with an average number of 15 in attendance. They study the "Five Hundred Characters" and learn how to use the abacus.

10. Physical Training.

Before breakfast, every morning of the week except Sunday, all the students of the College take morning exercises for 15 minutes. Two teachers give full time to supervising the physical exercise of the students. Every student is required not only to take the setting up drill before breakfast, but he must also take some part in supervised games during the day. There are 7 playgrounds in use now. The largest one is capable of seating four or five thousands. Two of them are just added this year, one for volley and one for basketball.

An historical play was put on by the students one evening during the fall term, which five thousand people - - relatives and friends of the students - attended.

11. Gifts.

The college wants to acknowledge the gift of $500. for the Congregational Church of Flatbush, Brooklyn, for the Science Laboratory. Much new apparatus has been bought from America and is now in use.

One of the graduates who does not want his name know sent us $6. for prizes for a contest in English Composition and in Modern Chinese. The contest was held during the fall term.

Mr. Lau Cu Huang, a graduate of 1910, presented to the library, three charts of the Nestorian tablet and they now decorate the library.

12. Wenshan Higher Primary.

At the beginning of the year the Financial Board of the Congregational Church in Foochow could not finance the Higher Primary at Wen Shan. The faculty and board of managers of Foochow College voted to take this primary under its care. There have been 65 students there. In Jan. 1925, the first class graduated. There were seven graduates.

Respectfully submitted.

[This letter, dated Feb. 8, 1925, was written from Ann Arbor, Michigan by Gould to his mother. His grades are good but he will not be able to graduate until September. He tells Ellen that he has asked Vivienne Ross of Hiram, Ohio to marry him. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

508 Hill St.

Ann Arbor, Mich.

Feb. 8, 1925.

Dear Mother:-

Everything is ready to begin the new semester. I got the marks I went after- 2As- 2Bs and 2 Cs. I am rather tickled, because I had to work so hard for the As and Bs.

My classification is not satisfactory. I cannot graduate in June. I have one course which I must take in summer school. It conflicted every way I tried to schedule it. I will get out in September.

Last week end I went up to see Dot. We had a lot of fun together. I went up to Chesaning to watch one of her girls teams play and we went skating and we had a little bridge party. It made a dandy break in the tenseness of exams.

I have taken a dishwashing job temporarily. My schedule will not allow me to work afternoons since every afternoon is filled up. I may keep it if the chap who asked me to take it dos'nt want it back.

Now Mother dear- I want to tell you that I love Vivienne Ross. She is the sweetest, dearest girl I have ever met. She is beautiful and pure throughout and Mother I love her as I never dreamed I could love any girl. She loves me as I love her. Vivienne is a girl I am proud to bring to you and father and all the sisters. She will do honor to the family name, we are all so careful of.

I have asked her to take my hand for life and she has accepted and with gladness. Mother Ross has not yet announced the engagement and I don't know when she intends to, but she has written me that she is very happy to have me as her son. I'm sure it would make Vivienne very happy if you would write her. Her address is just Hiram, Ohio. Box 334.

Mother I never was so happy in all my life as I am now. It gives me a great incentive to do more and better work that I may be more worthy of and give the girl of my choise the best in life I possibly can.

I have written Father and Phebe and told both all about it. I know you are all glad and happy with me.

Lovingly your son,

Gould.

This is probably Vivienne with Gould about 1925.

Foochow China
 February 18th 1925

Dear Father:-

This is a congratulatory letter written on your eighty third birthday. In the last letter from Mary or Phebe which came two days ago were photos of you that look as if you were at least ten years younger. You look better than when I last saw you in 1921. As I am writing at 9:30 p.m. you are beginning the day. I hope it will be to you a happy one,- as happy as was my sixtieth two weeks ago tomorrow.

The last letters told of the going home of Aunt Ella and of May Beard. I was glad to see that Stephen and Johnson were improving. I hope they are both well by this time. [Ella Hawley Nichols died January 1925 at the age of 73 years according to the Bridgeport Telegram, January 10, 1925.] [May Beard, wife of Willard's cousin, Zina Chatfield Beard, died January 13, 1925.]

Last Monday= day before yesterday we laid away Mrs. George H. Hubbard. On Saturday morning Feb. 14th she with Mr. Hubbard and Miss Hartwell started for Sharp Peak where the Christians were planning a farewell service for Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard who were to leave China for good on Mar. 5. Before they reached their boat Mrs. Hubbard began to feel unwell. She had felt so before and she and Mr. Hubbard did not think much about it. She said she would go back home and rest a bit- he would go on to the farewell with Miss Hartwell. She went back to the house and lay down for half an hour. (They started at first at 4:30 a.m. without breakfast). After resting half an hour she called the servant and he helped her upstairs. She lay down on the bed till 6:45. As she did not feel better, and as her breathing was different, she sent for Miss Ward and Miss Nutting, and they called the Doctor. At 9 a.m. she fell asleep. It was a great shock to everyone= it was so sudden. She was in Foochow only three days before and seemed well and happy.

School has opened again with crowds refused entrance because of lack of room I hope we can be careful and wise enough to avoid disaster and keep school thru the term. The life of a President and of a real true student in any school in Foochow and in most parts of China is not lived on a bed of roses these days. Anglo Chinese College is opening with about half its usual number of students. All gates are locked and a special guard is on duty each night to keep the disaffected students from carrying out their threats of killing any boys who dare go back to school there.

Phebe is well and enjoying her work. She is a joy forever to me- I thought of you Jan. 20 on your sixty first wedding anniversary- I also thought of mother on Jan. 30 – the 82nd birthday. Tell Flora I shall think of her Feb. 25.

God has been very good to you and yours. Blessings have followed you all the days of your long life. May they continue.

Very lovingly your son
Will

You should see me in my new spiffy overcoat- remodeled from the Prince Albert you sent. I shall try to get Phebe to snap me in it and send a photo to you. W.

[This letter, dated March 30, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to the folks at Century Farm. He refers to an eclipse seen in Shelton. Willard is suffering from a sore foot. His chickens and garden vegetables are doing well. The student situation in Foochow remains the same. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Foochow China
March 30- 1925

Dear Folks at Century Farm:-

That was a good letter from Mary that the last mail brought and every mail brings the Sentinels. The eclipse must have been perfect at Shelton. All the papers are very interesting on the subject. Next year people will be running to E. Africa and some of the islands to see an eclipse. I am glad that you had a good look and that conditions with you were so perfect. I am glad also that Geraldine could see it. To me it is a very noteworthy and wonderful part that before the eclipse scientists could tell where it could be seen and at what time- even to the second and that their computations were only 4 seconds off.

Yesterday was Ellen's birthday. I celebrated it by staying very quietly at home nursing a sore foot. A week ago last Thursday my right foot was a little sore or lame right on the top half way between the toes and the ankle. I did not think anything of it. Friday it was about the same. I went on with all my work as usual. Sat. it got worse so much so that in the afternoon I saw Doctor Kinnear. Sunday it was much worse- swollen and quite sore. Doctor bound it up with a poultice. I kept quiet. Monday it was better. Tuesday better and Wednesday we thought it was ready for work again. Thursday, I did all my usual work and Friday the same. Sat. it got worse and I held up. Yesterday I kept quiet- cancelled all engagements. It is better this morning. What is the cause no one knows. Doctor says it must be infection or sprain. But I cannot recall any reason. I'll be careful now for a few days and hope to get all right. Mr. Neff has had an infected toe for a month. The doctors do not seem able to conquer it. Dr. Dyer has her left foot paralysed- so she limps. Two others have been under doctor's care for foot ailments- the understanding of missionaries in Foochow just now is faulty.

Last Thursday afternoon and all day Friday we had a Mission Meeting. I was asked to be Mission Treasurer. It seems like a force. But no one else would consider taking it and I consented. It means from June 1 to about Sept. 1- Mrs. Christian is asked to take it when she returns in the fall. Miss Hieb the stenographer will have to do most of the work.

My chickens are doing well thus far. The hens, 11, lay 200 eggs this month. Two hens on 22 eggs brought 18 chickens. These are from pullets hatched from eggs laid by hens that were ½ R.I Red and ½ Wh. Leghorn. (The fruit of the R.I.R. rooster that Mary sent down to me.) These 18 chickens are from the above mentioned pullets and the same Wh. Leghorn Rooster that I used two years ago. He is now 3 years old,- a very fine bird. Every one of the 18 is pure white altho they are nearly ½ R.I. Red.

I am glad to hear that Stephen is getting better. Whooping cough here in the compound is nearly gone- The Donaldson's in Ing Hok now are in the full swing of it. My garden is coming on nicely. Corn and beans are up. I am waiting for a little warmer weather to plant more. We have had two weeks of very cold rainy weather, - not too good for either corn or beans. Thank you for sending the field corn. It will likely come by next week. I should not have asked for it if I had known your condition- the testing out. All my seeds for fall planting are here.

The St. Clairs, Reumanns, Misses Nutting, Waddell are going on furlough in June. Christians and Smiths expected back in the Fall. I was much interested in the Sentinels account of Dr. Coole's address in Derby- Methodist. He is a great Irishman. I have been on the Kuliang Council with him. He is aggressive all right, but on a committee things should go his way. But he is a good fellow- a great money getter. He is now after $100,000 gold for a hospital in Foochow. We do not yet know whether a union hospital or a Methodist hospital.

The student situation changes little. The latest news is that the new school opened in opposition to the A.C. College put on the list of teachers in its announcement the name of one of our teachers- of Physics. He did not accept. Last week some of the students called on him and intimated that if he did not accept they would beat him. He is staying at home. The spirit of Foochow College is good. The Christian life of the Christian boys very good.

How I miss mother and Elizabeth's letters. I preserve their last letters. Gould is very happy. I am in sympathy with him and wish I could see the "best girl alive".

With Love to all

[This letter, date March 31, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Mr. Chen to the editor of a paper. Willard writes a note explaining that Mr. Chen was beaten by some students and this letter is the response by Mr. Chen to them. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

[Note by Willard:]

Mr. Chen was a teacher in Anglo Chinese Coll. He now teaches in Hua Nang= Meth. Woman's Coll.

He is sending 2 sons to A.C. instead of the opposing Coll. The students of the opposing Coll. threatened him then beat him for this crime. His reply was this letter. He sent the letter to the Dean of the opposing Coll. The Dean refused to receive it and returned it in person and urged Mr. Chen to destroy it. Will

These are strenuous days- plenty of happenings,- not much worth reporting,- I do not know what day we may have to close.

Encl. No. 1 in Despatch No. 221 to Legation, dated Mar. 31, 1925.

Letter of Mr. Ch'en Hsing-ts'un a Teacher, written after the attack made upon him by four students, when returning from Church, March 22nd. 1925.

(Published in Kung Tao Pao, March 30, 1925.

(Trans: LPP).

The following letter was written by Mr. Ch'en Hsing-ts'un with the desire of admonishing said students. Having no means of forwarding it to them he sends it to us for publication. (The Editor)

To my formerly dear Students.

Sirs:-

Yesterday four of you stopped and attacked me at the lodge of the Cheng family. As to how I was wounded, there is no need of speaking as the matter is now a by-gone. I am ashamed of myself because my moral excellence has been so weak that I have not been able to imitate the love of my Lord Jesus and so help my fellow men. Having sustained minor injuries, how would I dare for such a small matter to join issue with you. But I estimate that perhaps your idea may not be fully met with just this one attack and so I cannot but unfold my ideas before you with the hopes that I may be fortunate enough to secure a sincere settlement.

During the first moon Kuo Hsuan-lin and others came to my house (Ch'en in the paper of the 31st published a correction, to the effect that Kuo did not come to his house but three others did) and I expressed one or two ideas to them in substance that they should not abandon their educational work but certainly should establish a suitable place where they might continue their efforts (to secure an education). Afterwards I heard that the establishment of the Ming Chiang Middle School was an accomplished fact and it seemed that the various problems had been thus solved. You are not satisfied with the Anglo-Chinese College, perhaps because your view do not correspond with those of the teachers and officers or perhaps because some of the methods of teachings are unsuitable. Now as you have severed your connection with these and have promoted your independence and have again obtained a suitable place for continuing your studies, it would seem as if you had already realized your desire.

In regard to the difficulty in the Anglo-Chinese College last winter, I was not present at the meeting when the matter was considered and consequently I do not care to recklessly pass judgment in regard to what transpired at that time, much less would I dare to concern myself with the character of your opposition. Furthermore every man is entitled to freedom of action and what authority have I to interfere in other people's matters.

Now there are two reasons why I sent my two sons to study in the Anglo-Chinese College:

- (1) To educate sons and younger brothers is the responsibility of fathers and brothers and
- (2) Those who are disciples of Christ should send their sons and younger brothers to Christian schools for an education.

If it is contended that this difficulty concerned the whole body of students, the speaking from my own standpoint (I would say) that the act of sacrificing to the martyrs is truly inconsistent with the rites of Christianity and is not as good (a method) as to have a memorial service in the College itself, as to what was the position taken by the faculty and teachers of the Anglo-Chinese College in regard to this matter, I was not present when the subject was discussed but after they had made known by sending out a notice, I truly was not opposed to their unwillingness to grant permission to the whole body of students to go to the temple to sacrifice. As to your orders, they are like the edicts of the autocratic Emperor which must be submitted to by every Chinese. If this is true, then you are robbing others of their right to liberty. If I submit to your orders then I am prostrating myself as a suppliant, under a dictatorial force. "Where there is dictatorial force, there is no justice". The flesh of the weak is eaten by the strong." You all are intelligent beings, you consider the humanities of great importance and would uphold the rights of men. Are you willing to have the ugly reputation of engaging in reckless deeds attached to you? Of course I am weak and unable to contend with you but my purpose to maintain the right and uphold right principles is very strong. Three armies may seize the Chief Commander but they cannot take away the purpose of a single man" "It is better to die than to be without liberty." If you wish me to submit, you must cause me to submit (lit. bond me) by the use of reason. You must not coerce me by the use of your pomp. The man who submits under coercion has no standing as a man. If I lose my standing as a man, though I may be alive, I am as one dead, and of what use to you would my submission be? At the present time our country has too many of such men- men who regard life and glory as gain and death and insult as injury and do not regard as important righteousness, temperance and virtue. They live from day to day in an indifferent manner without the least self-determination. Alas! Why do not you, enthusiastic souls, think up some method for making the people of our country all understand righteousness, be governed by righteousness and be willing to die for righteousness. I speak thus, not in reproof of you because yesterday you attacked me, but to cause you to understand me and that you may not again attack. I hold no brief for the faculty and teachers of the Anglo-Chinese college, much less am I seeking by flattery the favor of the foreigners. Jesus is the one I serve and the truth is what I submit to. Where there are right principles, there is life, where there are no right principles, there is death. To take away my right principles, is to rob me of life as well as take away my standing as a man. If I at this time call home my two sons because I would avoid insult and death to my body, my standing as man would be extinguished and my life from this time would be cut off, and what would you get? Alas! You have wrongly interpreted me as a man. In your treatment of me you have adopted the wrong method. If you wish me to follow (your directions) you must not use compulsion. If you kill me it will only the extinction of one human life and in that way you will not attain the end for which you are striving in regard to me. Anything that should be done, I do not need to wait for you to call me to do. I can do it myself. If not thus, though I may be beaten to death. I at the last will not be willing to do it. You plan to bring death and trouble upon me, but on the contrary there will arouse the spirit of more (to my support) who will look upon your act as wrong.

My formerly beloved students, the death of my body is not worthy of regret. I hope you can be aroused to a sense of your wrong. I am praying to God in your behalf. Much more do I desire to see your face that we may pray together before the benevolent and merciful God.

[This letter, dated April 5, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to Flora. The Students' Union has a reign of terror over those marked by them. The Student Union demanded that Foochow College students provide them with food. Willard stopped this just before rice was ready to be taken to them. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

April 5th 1925.

Dear Flora:-

In my mind I class you with the "Dear Folks at Home" and you do not get many all-your-own letter, and likely as not you'll send this letter up to Shelton to be read by the family.

For three months the student situation has per force occupied the foreigner's mind to the extension[?] of all other matters- or rather, compelling all other matters to take secondary place.

You have heard of the situation in A.C. College. Now they have about 150 students-teachers and students live in the college and the gates are kept closed and the place is guarded constantly- night and day. You have also heard that the Student's Union tried to keep Brewster and Co. from selling a $250,000 shipment of fish from Seattle and that teachers and students and fathers of students of A.C. have been beaten and one of the head Chinese in Brewster and Co. was stabbed nine times. It is really reign of terror for those who are the mark of the Students' Union. The students who compose the Union are from Gov't. schools and from one or two private schools and from two schools made up of students not allowed to return to the mission schools. So you see the sort of young men we have to deal with.

Yesterday morning I was aroused by the ringing of the college bell at 4:00 o'clock. I hustled into a few clothes fearing a fire. But I found instead 20 buckets of soft boiled rice in the kitchen which the boys had ordered prepared for 200 or 300 of the students from the schools controlled by the Union. The cause was this. On Tuesday evening two students had been arrested for complicity in an affair in the fish market in which several fish sellers had been stabbed by the students. The Students Union had ordered all students to assemble at the police headquarters and demand the release of these two men. They went from all but mission schools, and stayed all day, - all Thursday night and Friday night and got hungry and told our boys they must feed them. Fortunately I was down in time to stop the rice from going out. I had to watch it until 6:30. The boys ate it themselves all day yesterday. Yesterday afternoon 4 members of the Union called on Mr. Cio Lik Daik, President of the Y.M.C.A. School and demanded that he let his students go to the police with the others. He refused. They threatened him (you know he was stabbed in the back a year ago last fall). He told them they must leave the building. As they started a plain clothes man who had been watching the affair drew a pistol and disclosed his officers badge and arrested them. They were put with the other two.

At dark last night the students- boys and girls- 200 girls and they say 700 or 800 boys were still in the Police head quarters- pretty sick of their job- hungry and miserable. The police promised them to release one of the men as a compromise- if the students would disperse. They left on the strength of this promise. But this p.m. none of the six had been released.

After I had seen how near our boys had come to implicating me in our attempt to help the students who were trying to thwart the police in their attempt to administer justice, and what a power the Student Union had over the students here I told them that they must break all connection with the Union. I do not know what effect this will have. It may mean that we shall have to close. Last Monday in a meeting of the Union, four motions were passed. 1. The officials must remove the seat from the house they had used as their headquarters. This house the police had closed and sealed some weeks ago. 2. The police must give them permission to do just what they pleased in Foochow. Threaten, beat, stab, kill. 3. They would close A.C. Coll. 4. Close all mission schools. - Some program I should say.

But there are still some men in Foochow who are not bowing to them. Cio Lik Daik is firm in his stand not to give in to them. A teacher in the Meth. Woman's College Ding Guang Deu, has two boys in A.C. A new College has been organized of boys expelled from A.C. last summer and one or two disaffiliated teachers. Students from this school under the Student's Union told Mr. Ding that he must take his two boys out of A.C. and send them to the new school. He did not do it. One night he was caught and beaten. We wrote a letter to the Union which was published printed in the daily papers. The substance was that he was free to send his boys where he pleased. He was a Christian and was trying to live on principle as Jesus lived on principle. It took Jesus to his death and it might take him to his death. But that would be much better than to become afraid of such men as those of the Student's Union and obey them from fear. He would not be worthy to be called a man if he should thus sell out to them. They were the enemies of their country and were doing their best to destroy patriotism. I hope I can get a translation of this and send it home. It is one of the best documents I have seen in a long time in any language.

Well this all up to date. Perhaps you will share it with the others of the family.

I judge your work is going well and that you are happy in it. I cannot make out just how far you are from Geraldine. I judge the distance would be written in terms of the time it takes to go rather than in miles.

Letters from home say that father keeps young and well. I miss letters from Mother and Elizabeth, and I have not forgotten the good letters Ruth used to write. I cannot visualize the changes that I shall face the next time I go home.

The very last mail brought from Mary some Century Farm field corn.

With love to you and all

Dear Mary and all the Peoples-

Before other items I must get the business of this letter off my mind. Will you please send checks to the children for the interest due each on that note or mortgage. I cannot reckon the full amounts for I do not know just when it began. But for each six months since interest began each child= Phebe K., Dorothy, Marjorie, Kathleen should have $7.95. This is the interest on $265 for six months at 6% per annum. I have an idea that each child should have about $3 \times $7.95 = \23.85 . But I will do no more figuring. Will you adjust it and after this divide the interest to each child. You know Marjorie's and Kathleen's address= 197 W. Lorain St. Oberlin, Ohio. Dorothy's is 1826 N. Michigan Ave., Saginaw, Mich. I will see that you know what to do with Phebe's.

The last three weeks have been very hectic with me. What will you say to my being up on six different nights till nearly 1 a.m. the next morning,- sometimes it was business- sometimes social occasions. Mr. Brand asked his friends to see movies on the Netherlands. They were given way over South Side and began at 9:30 p.m.!! But it was the best movie that I ever saw. Why are there not more? Is it because people do not want that kind? When the film was finished we had a very good idea of the country, its dependencies, its geography, its people in their occupations, their play- their education etc- Bicycling, and skating are everywhere. The products of the country and the manufacturing were shown the Queen and the peasant. The tourists were supposed to be taken from one place to another on a train. As we went from one city to another the map was shown with the name of the new city coming out one letter at a time and then the train started. It went by jerks- like a centipede and did not always follow the track and at times fell off the track but always righted itself and arrived at its destination right side up. This was the funny part of the movie. I reached home just before 10 a.m. the next day. It was well worth the effort.

Two weeks ago Admiral Washington of our China American fleet came into Pagoda. He is an old friend of Admiral Washington and his captains and Lieutenants and Doctors to a dinner at his Yamen and I was included- this was a late affair. I have been down to the University twice or three times on business and to preach and this is a late job. But this last week I have been making up by taking a long after dinner nap.

A week ago today while Miss Eunice Thomas was at our Sang Bo Church the roof fell in and broke her right arm and cut her head so 19 stitches had to be taken. Two boys had legs broken and some twenty others were slightly injured The roof was supported by two large beams running the whole length of the church like this.

supported by two beams. 1-2= one beam, 3-4= another beam. All the ends were decayed where they were in the wall. Beam 1-2 fell first. Point "1" gone way entirely. Miss Thomas was sitting at the organ = 0. All others were standing singing. She was injured worse than anyone else's. They had to dig her out of the debris. Word was sent at once to Miss Perkins at Geu Cio Dong= the church nearest Ponasang Girls School. She got word to Dr. Dyer who was playing the pipe organ in the city church. Mr. Leger and Mr. Reumann were in churches in the suburbs not far from Sang Bo and were on the scene soon after the accident and helped get her on a cot bed used as a stretcher and went with her direct to the new woman's hospital here in the city- Dr. Kinnear set the arm and stretched her head. Yesterday half the stitches were removed and the splints taken off the arm for the first time. She is doing very well.

Two boys had legs broken and about twenty others were slightly injured,- more seriously. It is marvelous that no one was worse injured.

Last Tuesday evening while I was at the University Mr. Scott received a letter from Dr. Gowdy. Mr. Kellogg was allowed to see him for the first time since he was taken ill. I wrote that one leg had been amputated. Gowdy remained with him only 5 minutes. He raised a glass of water to his lips for the first time. He is still running a temperature.

Another late night was a week ago yesterday the University Glee Club held their first Concert at Hua Nang= Meth ?? College Chapel. It was a grand success. Just as the audience had assembled before the singing began a very fierce thunder storm burst and it burst suddenly. The south windows were open and the wind blew the rain clear across the room and it struck me as I sat against the opposite wall. The young men sang just as college boys would sing at home. There were 16 in the Glee Club- all Chinese. Three of them were Foochow College boys. Last Thursday the Glee Club with the Volley Ball team left for Amoy- to sing and play in and near Amoy. Mr. and Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Beach and Mr. Farley went with them. At the concert Mrs. Scott stood behind a screen draped with vines so she could hardly be seen. It was very effective.

The Anti-Cob continues to listen to a chapter on its Hand Book of Fukien. Last Fri. Consul Price read a paper on transportation. The papers are generally good and interest is sustained.

This summer a Mr. and Mrs. Tappan= you remember them as fellow passengers on our way out in 1921= are to be with us on Kuliang and Miss Hieb our stenographer. We will be a guest household. The Tappans' have two children. The new club house is up above the windows on the front. The weather has been impossible. I never saw so much rainy weather in the spring.

You may remember Mr. Nga Geng Guong, Dean of Foochow College. His father died yesterday- he was 76. He has been a staunch Buddhist or Confucianist or Taoist. He forbode Geng Guong to unite with the church. Told him he could be a Christian but on no account could he be baptized. Geng Guong has said that as long as his father lived he could not be baptized. People are asking already what he will now do,- (the sun has shone all day. It is now thundering and lightening and raining hard.)

The St. Clairs, Reumann's, Bedients, Blakeney's, and Miss Nutting and Miss Waddell are getting off for the U.S. in June.

The Sentinels come with every mail. The first page is one of the best places to read world news. What is the matter between Mr. Wilhelm and the church? His resignation as the Sentinel gives it gives slight clue as to the trouble. I was a bit surprised for I had thought he was doing good work. I wish I could have heard Mary at the Lenten Foreign Missionary Meeting.

The spring work is begun. You are preparing the ground for corn. Oats are up and potatoes are in. The young stock want to get out and taste the young grass. I suppose you have only two horses now- how many cows?- My chicks are all here- 18 growing nicely. I have planted sweet corn twice and am ready to plant again. The corn you sent came all right. The cool weather has made cabbage, turnips, beets, swiss chard and even lettuce continues good.

Last week Sunday I preached in Chinese here in the city in the morning- lunched with Phebe and took the 2:30 p.m. launch for the University to preach and admit three of the students to the church, and baptize two others. I have spoken before the University students three times recently. I must hold up for a while lest they tire of me. How is Stephen? The last news was good news so we will hope he is all right,- and the same for Johnson ??.

With love to father Phebe and yourself and all the rest.

Will.

May 17th. 1925.

Dear Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

Your good letter came the 12th. Phebe and I enjoy all the letters from home as much as your letters say that you enjoy ours. The typewriter has not been working well for several months and a few weeks ago it stuck. I think the only trouble was that I had not properly cleaned it. So I sent it over to the cleaner's and it is a pleasure now to work it. Mary's letter was in with yours. Together they throw light on several points that were hazy from the accounts one gets in the papers. I suppose it is well and altogether for the best that the papers do not and cannot print all the inside working so such episodes as the muss with the Shelton pastor. But its enlightening all the same to get from your letters some of the reasons for actions that the papers give us. Now for general observation. I wonder at the long suffering of congregations often. The actions of some ministers are almost beyond belief. I am at times ashamed to be on the list. But then I remember that Jesus selected one of his disciples who was not a man to represent him and ever since the ministry has had some such men in it and it has had to share with all other professions the stigma of some of its unwise and some of its unworthy members. We get such on the mission field at times and such efforts as the best Board Secretaries, with all their experience, can and do put forth do not sift them all out. I suppose this helps keep the ministry humble and sympathetic with the other professions.

The most unusual spring that we have had continues to be unusual. We have had only one hot day this spring. That was last Thursday. I chose that day to go to Kuliang. I taught two classes and started at 10:30. I got to the mountain foot at noon. The sun was shining his hottest. I had a lunch at the foot before starting the climb, but by the time I reached the summit I was all in. The contractor who is building the Club got a bowl of very good rice and four fresh boiled eggs and some nice fish. It was good and I did it all justice. Then I looked at my house, then at Mr. Leger's on the top of our hill, then I went over to the Amoy house, over the other side of the big rocks, and then back to the Club and looked it over rather carefully, then the man who is watching Mr. McClure's house (the house way down in the valley.) I think you were with me two years ago when they asked us to dinner with the Cannons. Those steps never looked so long and so steep. But I made them and then was off for home with a chair as far as to the first village this side of the foot of the mountain. I reached home at 6:30. Kuliang was as beautiful as ever. This summer our house-hold is to be Mr. and Mrs. Tappan and two children from Hainan, HongKong, Miss Hieb (our stenographer) and us two. Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair are going home in June. I have engaged their servants and shall keep house in this house till Ellen comes. I hope she will be here this fall. The last letter from Geraldine said she had decided to go to Oberlin for further study in the fall. She would live with Kathleen. This would release Ellen. So I have high hopes that I shall not have to keep house for myself in the fall.

A week ago yesterday I went to Diong Loh. Phebe went down the day before. Miss Armstrong and Miss Phillips went down with me. Dr. and Mrs. Gillette were there in their private launch. The occasion was to say good bye to Miss Nutting who is leaving on furlough. Mr. Neff and Mr. Thelin are in that station now. They and with Miss Ward made up the dinner party. We had a right good time. Phebe and I were coming home the next morning. The launch was advertised to start at 10:30. We were at the starting place at 9:30 and the old tub was about twenty rods away steaming for Foochow. We went back and took a good rest all day free from all kinds of care. I purposely went to church late so as not to be asked to speak, - shirker. But when the pastor had finished and had gotten the people to singing, he came ways down the aisle to the last seat and asked me to "say a few words". I did.

Foochow College is still going. The heads of mission schools had two long meetings week before last over the action that we ought to take regarding the students of our schools joining the parade on China's Day of Humiliation, May 9th. We have always thought it right for our students to go on this parade and they have gone every year since it began. Every other school voted not to allow its students to go. We had two long faculty meetings over the matter and decided unanimously that we could not unite with the other mission schools in this decision. Our boys went as usual. I do not perceive that any harm has come to us in any way. We all felt that if we joined the other schools and tried to keep the boys home it would mean the busting up of the school. One other school has had to close because of the attempt to stop the boys from parading that day. Thus far this term there has been very good harmony between faculty and students here and between the students themselves. We have student government. A regularly organized student Republic. It has functioned and done good work this term.

I am rejoiced to hear the good news about Stephen, to think of staying at grandfather's six weeks. One week was the most I ever could stay at grandfather's. I can take some comfort that Theodore and Harold took the pains to bring my letter to them down for you to see. It must have had some value or they would not have taken that trouble.

I wish I could get home for a fortnight to help put in the corn. I am planting every inch of ground I can find here with sweet corn or with field corn. Yesterday I bought a bag of phosphate of ammonia for fertilizer here - - even night soil. And it costs heavily. I gave $15.30 for 200 pounds. I expect to use it for two years.

Chickens are doing very well. 18 are still growing, getting too crowded in their wire cage. I am beginning to think of not taking them to the mountain this summer. Last summer I left half of them down here and they did better than those I took to the mountain. I shall not have the care of them at the mountain if I leave them down here with the gardner.

Phebe had better pick up and come out with Ellen in the fall for a vacation of a few months, and to see China. She may be able to go home in an air flivver next winter. And you can likely "pick her up" or "tune in" if you get stuck on how to make a special kind of cake or how to start the auto.

Thank you again for the Sentinels. I was much interested in the account of the 28th anniversary of Ben and Abbie's wedding. It was sad that father could not get there. Last night I ate a feast to the 80th birthday of a man and his wife- both 80 years within a month of each other. Tell Oliver to remember me to Jim Drew.

Love to all

Will.

Foochow, China

June 10th 1925

Dear Father and all the folks:-

To day I am a prisoner at Ponasang. You have read in the papers of the trouble in Shanghai. A workman in Shanghai in a Japanese cotton mill was killed. The students of Shanghai made demonstrations at the funeral- distributed hand bills and made speeches. The Shanghai police= controlled by foreigners arrested some students and locked them up. The students gathered and with the people some 2000 demanded the release of those shut up. There was a struggle between students and police for 2 or 3 hours. The Chief of Police and one other officer- both foreigners- were backed down but rescued. The police were pushed inside the jail yard. They then succeeded in pushing the students back and down the street for a block or so. The students then took a stand and pushed the police again to the jail gates. The Chief of Police thought it necessary at this stage to give the order to his police to fire into the mob. Four students were killed and six wounded. Three of them died soon after they reached the hospital. The mob dispersed. The Shanghai volunteers= foreign men- business men and missionaries who offer their services in times of danger were called out. This was May 30. The students got arms and another battle took place a day or two afterward. The last reports received here said that in all 14 had been killed, - not all students. Marines from the American, British, Japanese, Italian and French ships have been landed. Representatives of seven nations met last Saturday and asked two representatives of the Student's Union to meet with them to consider a settlement. As to the right and wrong of the case, I must not speak now. There are two statements however which I think may be made. 1st This affair is unifying China and it has touched all the principal nations of the world. The British are the center of attack by the Chinese. 2nd Bolshevism is playing a very important part in the proceedings. There has been a Bolshevik College in Shanghai for sometime with Chinese Students in attendance. The tactics used thus far by the students are in line with Bolshevism. Many ask where the money comes from to finance the propaganda that is going on. It seems evident that Russian Bolshevism could tell.

Now for Foochow news. Tuesday June 2nd. Telegrams from Shanghai has caused the Foochow Students Union to declare a strike for all Foochow students. No mission school obeyed. In the government schools the students control. These students at once demanded that examinations be held immediately. These were completed Saturday June 6th. A parade, in sympathy with the Shanghai students who had been killed and imprisoned, was staged for Sunday June 7th with threats for any students who refused to parade. Foochow College is right near the home of the Student's Union. Until Saturday morning both our students and the faculty thought we could complete the term by holiday examinations this week. But on Saturday morning all but one teacher- a young man- were convinced that there would be grave danger if we were in session on Sunday. At noon Saturday we decided to close immediately. Most of the other mission schools closed before midnight Saturday. The parade took place Sunday morning- 13 groups- less than 200 in all, not a large parade. The streets were placarded with posters calling on the people to rise and destroy imperialism. Monday and yesterday fresh posters with pictures of police shooting students and various other cartoons and language of a highly inflammable character continued to be posted. On Monday a monster parade was ordered for today Wed. All shops were ordered closed tight all day. No work of any kind was to be allowed. Most of the mission girls schools closed yesterday. Wenshan noted to disband at 10:30 a.m. There were 15 girls here from Diong Loh= 15 miles down the river. The Chinese teachers said some foreigner must go home with them. The Diong Loh launch left at 1:00 p.m. Phebe was asked to go with them. By dark some 175 girls had left- each under the care of some one from her home or from the school. I had planned to go out for supper with Phebe and had sent word. About 4:30 p.m. I heard she had gone to Diong Loh and also heard that Miss Perkins and Miss Holton were alone at Ponasang and that they, especially Miss Holton, would feel better if a man were in the compound, so instead of coming out to take supper with Phebe, I came out to take supper and spend the night and today and probably tonight here at Wenshan where I am writing this. We practically agreed that it would not be necessary on anyone, with a big parade on, with posters calling on the populace to use guns, bombs or anything to kill imperialism (Imperialism is the word used for the authority which opposed the students in Shanghai). We thought it wise to keep quiet to day, so I am here- just to be a man's presence here.

I had rather not give opinions or make remarks or tell what I think of the future. Some must breathe deeply and keep calm and think coolly and straight, when most men are hot headed. There are a lot of Chinese who are doing this now. Another general remark may be made- gathered not from the present affair from my observations of the past four or five years. The method of dealing with China which the powerful nations use- has greatly changed from what it was ten years and longer ago. Britain and America think long and carefully now before they make a demand or do anything drastic. A few rifle shots in Shanghai resulting in the killing of 7 young men- all on the order of one man has set the biggest nation on earth on fire and involved 7/8 of the world.

The weather this year has been surprisingly cool. We have had a single unendurable day and I have had a blanket over me every night thus far. To come out here last evening [I] put on a woolen coat and am wearing it today. There has been an unusual amount of rain but no flood. I picked four ears of sweet corn and brought them out with me. We had them for dinner last night. They will be larger and better next week but it was corn. Chickens are still doing well. I have 1 fine Wh. Leghorn rooster 3 yrs. old, one not very good R. Island Red rooster 1 yr. old, 2 R.I.R. hens 7 7/8 R.I.R. 1/8 Wh. Leghorn hens and two native hens that I have used for hatching and the 18 chickens. I must reduce the number. I plan to take the old fowls to the mountain and leave the young ones in Foochow with the gardner. I can eat or sell the old ones- as I wanted to on the mountain and it is very nice to have fresh eggs- as Mary may perhaps bear witness. I have already planted corn four times. The corn you sent has come up all right. I have planted all the ground I could find here and given seed to Chinese to plant for two weeks we have all had all the string beans we could eat every day. Beets have been delicious.

Day before yesterday June 8th I went to Kuliang, - took a ricksha half way across the plain and walked the rest of the way. The new club house had most of the roof boards on and some of the tiles- all on by this time. I went specially to see Ned Smiths house which must have the roof changed. The day was not hot and I took just three hours from my city house to the Kuliang club. The village that we pass thru in going from the club to the tennis courts has been practically rebuilt. The houses are two story and five large ones- stores, with nice counters covered with galvanized sheet iron, and with good glass doors. We need a cable or cog rail road up the mountain, a telephone and electric lights,- all of which we are discussing. I suppose you have had electricity so long that you cannot remember how it seemed to be without it. Do you use it for power or for cooking or heating at all? The last letter told us that Daniel was already on the job- good for him. The last mail brought two large bundles of Sentinels. I have read only two of them- the last week has been too hectic to do much reading. The last mail also brought the appointment for me as Mission Treasurer until Mrs. Christian's return in September. Miss Thomas is getting better as fast as possible. She sits up and dangles her feet off the bed. Her back is very sore- some of the ribs must have been cracked and the broken arm does not straighten, but I understand this is always the hardest part of getting a broken arm back to normal. I have not yet heard what the girls are doing this summer- some of them planned to help Myra. I hope you will see Vivienne before the summer is over. I know how it will please Gould to bring her.

I see in writing about things here I write with Mary in mind- almost unconsciously for she has been here and knows.- God is still our loving, caring Father and does all things well. With love to all Will Let others see this please.

Hiram, Ohio.
June 11, 1925.

Dear Mother:-

Your last letter was a fine one. I realize fully all that you said. It was a good coobuation[?] of what I have observed while travelling up and down thru the world. I have not had the experience yet, but the many families I have been acquainted with have each given me something as to knowledge about married life, its joys and sorrows, and I am not entering into this wedlock expecting a feathery path to glide on all the time.

I do, however have the faith in Vivienne and in myself to believe that we are determined enough to make this act the best of our lives and to make it a happy one for each other "till death do us part". I have thought much about how to avoid all the little misunderstandings that creep in to undermine the foundation of love that begins every couples break up. I am beginning by having nothing to be taken for granted, to keep no secrets- I have nothing in my life to hide and she has nothing in hers either.

Are Uncle Elbert and Aunt Emma to be there after the 15th. If they are we (Mrs. Ross, Viv. and I) would like them to drive you all up for a visit. Mrs. Ross says there would be plenty of room to keep you over night after the 15th and they want to see all of you very much. I was rather planning on bringing Vivienne down to Oberlin on my way thru to A. That will be the 19th thru 20th. Of course this is if it is convenient for you.

I finished what work I had laid out to do in Ann Arbor Monday night; caught the 8 o'clock car to Detroit; got the 11.30 boat for Cleveland and caught the 7:00 a.m. buss for Hiram; and at 9:30 a.m. I had my own dear sweetheart clasped to my heart.

This morning I am taking a couple of hours off while Vivienne does something for herself. I am staying at a Karl ??'s who is engaged to Vivienne's chum. This little college is merely a hotbed for engagements. Two were announced last night. They are giving Vivienne a shower tonight and I am to keep her occupied away from home till they get ready. It is rather funny to walk about here and know that everyone (girls especially) are peeking around the trees and whispering about Vivienne's beau. That's what I get for taking the [page torn] girl in the college and a small college too. They all have me spotted already.

I will write particulars about visits when you tell me how it will be most convenient for you.

Love to all,

Your only son,
Gould.

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

June 14- 1925

Dear Stanley, Myra, Nancy, Stephen and Ruth:-

Nearly every mail during recent months has brought news about you or letters from you to the folks that have been inclosed. Phebe and I are very glad that Stephen has made such a good recovery from the whooping cough. Just as we heard of your having it all the children in this compound except two very young babies were "whooping her up" in great shape. All have recovered. There have been eight= 3 Reumanns, 3 Legers and two St. Clairs who are able to run and get into all manner of mischief- fighting with Chinese paper umbrellas as weapons, poking my chickens with sticks thru the wire cage, or coop, throwing stones at a large water jar, made of clay and baked, in which I kept water for the garden, etc., etc. - Beside these there were Francis St. Clair and Ruth Leger born in February. The St. Clairs left yesterday afternoon for furlough and the Reumanns leave in a few days. But the Goertz's will come in from Gek Siong Sang= near Wenshan where Phebe is, in Sept. They have two small children.

It seems very quiet here today. The last few days have been pretty lively with packing etc. and then St. Clair was Mission Treas. and that job falls to me. I have told the mission that I will try to sell Boston drafts and write checks for them so they can get along until Sept. Mrs. Christian comes then to take the Treasurer ship. But I will not do much at posting and keeping the books. It is going to be an everlasting or rather constant nuisance to me. To morrow I had promised to go down to the University to see about the purchase of some land that we need for one of the buildings. To days mail brought two letters- one for a hurry up deposit to be made from selling gold drafts for the Shaowu mission- one for a check to go to Pagoda tomorrow. I should leave here about 7 a.m.

Whatever one may be doing or writing or saying, in the back of his mind these days is the student situation. The Chinese students have certainly put China on the map. I shall be interested in seeing what the home papers print. It is impossible for us here in Foochow to get facts enough to make up our minds about the affair in Shanghai May 30th. It seems pretty clear that the students challenged the authority of the Shanghai Municipal Police- the students wished to parade, to make street speeches to crowds and to distribute handbills which had anti foreign sentiments in them. These were all against the regulations. There was a conflict after some students had been arrested and put in jail; - the mob of 1 or 2 thousand demanded the release of the imprisoned students. The Police fired into the mob and killed four and wounded six - three of whom died shortly. This was the beginning. In Shanghai some 14 have been killed in the various conflicts and a few days ago more were killed in Hankow. A telegram received at 9 this morning says that all those imprisoned in Shanghai have been released.

The reaction in Foochow has resulted in all schools closing about two or three weeks earlier than they had planned. A week ago today there was a parade in protest of the shooting and imprisoning of students in Shanghai- not a large number- less than 200. But on Wednesday last a monster parade took place. 190+ different units 10000+- students- merchants- workmen- Chamber of Commerce- Education Board- guilds -etc., etc. They said it took two hours for the parade to pass a given point. Phebe's school decided to disband at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday. 15 of the girls came from Diong Loh= 15 miles down the river. She went down with them. Miss Perkins and Miss Holton were at Wenshan alone. The rumors were rather disquieting for a girl who had been here only a short time and Priscilla Holton wanted a man around. I am a detached male, so I went out Tuesday evening and staid with them till Thursday morning. I told the foreigners and we all agreed that it would be wise to curb our curiosity on Wednesday and forego the pleasure of seeing the parade. Some foreigners did go on the streets and one- a peculiar Australian rode a bicycle and passed most of the parade in the city here and he held a preaching service in front of one of the churches in the afternoon. The students came in and drove the audience out once or twice but they all returned and nothing happened. Foochow College disbanded a week ago yesterday. The Student Union entered our church near Wenshan and berated the people for attending church when they should have been parading. Fortunately only 16 Wenshan girls were present. Delegates from the Union came to see if Foochow College was really closed. If they had found 500 boys at church I should not like to be responsible for what might have occurred.

Tuesday June 16-

To day we hear thru a telegram that students in Kiu Kiang = up the Yangtse above Nanking= burned the Japanese Tai Won Bank, then wrecked the British Consulate and attacked the British Consul. I will not write of Hankow. You have read of it. East and West are meeting all right- but with all the force on one side. We see more clearly than ever the difference in attitude regarding obedience,- respect for authority. There is very little in China. The student class specially has always held- and the other classes have backed them up- they were privileged to do about as they pleased. We wonder at what we call their stupidity in gathering in mobs and facing men who are armed with rifles that are ready to mow them down. But their own people and their own official allow them [to] go about the streets of any city and take any goods out of any store, claim they are Japanese, and pile them up in the street and burn them. These same students can beat up any peaceable citizen or stab with knives any peaceable citizen as they please and no one even remonstrates.- Now put this attitude of mind against the attitude of mind of the westerner, who has been from earliest childhood and for generations taught to respect law and to desire order- and there must be a clash.

Last Saturday there was a meeting of some 150 Christians in Foochow to discuss the situation in Shanghai. They agreed on the following as fact in the Shanghai affair. 1. A defenseless body of students doing nothing to injure anyone was fired into by a strongly armed police force. 2. Only 10 seconds elapsed between the telling the students they would be fired on and the actual firing. 3. Forty shots were fired into the crowd. 4. All the students were shot in the back.- Well our servants were to be told today that they must strike. Last Friday the three or four stores that sell most of what the foreigners eat were guarded by students and no provisions were allowed to be delivered. (Each of these assertions is of course quite a stronger to the truth.) This is enough to let you see a little of our life here. It will be good for Christianity for the students are dragging in their anti foreign and anti Christian propaganda, and the Christians are realizing as never before that they must be able to tell what and why they believe. I never saw anything that pulled the Christians together as this crisis has. The one word on all lips is Bieu Se= express. The Gospel grows at such times.

I wish you [could] come drop in and dine with Hightower and me. We are "Batching" it. This evening we had sweet corn, string beans and strawberries from our own garden and omelet from our own hen fruit. We have carrots and cabbage and beets and swiss chard. My 18 chickens are doing finely. I have a prime Wh. Leghorn rooster 3 yrs. old= the father of the chickens and a full blooded Rh. Island Red rooster and three hens. I have in all 9 blooded hens. In March they laid 204 eggs. Phebe has does a heavy terms work and has grown strong all the time. She is glad of a rest now tho. The Shaowu people are not coming to Foochow this year.

I am enclosing a photo of a man clad in an overcoat made of a Prince Albert coat that came as a Christmas present last December. His gloves are a Christmas present also. It = the coat came in just the right time for he had no light overcoat.

How long will it be before we will be talking with each other? Does Ruth pick up Chicago [by radio]- and Sousa's Band and does she listen to the world[?] dashing at Golden Gate? How very small the world is! All are now neighbors. I wish they could realize it and learn to be neighborly. God has prepared so many nice things for us and He has showed us how to use so many nice things- the air- electricity- mines- water- and lots of things. And He has trained our minds to think thoughts that have been in His mind,- thoughts of love and mercy and patience and helpfulness and so many of us keep our minds down in the poison of selfishness and envy and hatred. But if the present seems to portend an ill future, we must remember that the darkest time of the night is just before the sun peeps over the horizon with her first morning rays. God has been very good to all of us. I hope He'll send Ellen out in the fall.

With lots of love to all Will.

Can you let the others of the family see this.

A Letter from Peking Government University
The Anti-Religion Union.

We have taken an oath to root out the poison and the harms of religion for the sake of mankind and society. We intensely hate and are deeply grieved by the poison religion is disseminating among mankind which tends to bring society to a million fold worse than the worst anarchy of ancient times. If you have religion you can't have mankind; if you have mankind you should have no religion; the two can't exist together. Mankind is by nature evolutionary, religion falsely says man and all things were made and placed on the earth by Heave (God); men are free and equal, but religion would fetter thinking and deform individuality by worship of idols; mankind is by nature fond of peace, is good and fond of righteousness, but religion entices by means of promises of heaven and frightens by talking about hell. Religion naturally lacks the authority of awe-inspiring virtue, so they must produce man-made superstitions. Religion being naturally hypothetical they dress up the false so that it will seem to be true and harm men the more. In short since god himself is not the product of physical and chemical forces, then what sort of thing is he? If the life of a saviour is nothing our consciousness can imagine, then what is it? If there is Creator why didn't he make electric lights and aeroplanes in the first place? If he has power to reward and punish why doesn't he make all people be good? The absurdities of religion are utterly incompatible with the truth of science; despicable religion is absolutely contrary to humanitarianism.

China as compare with other countries is fairly clean in that it has no government religion, but in recent decades Christianity has been day by day inoculating and infecting the country, and within recent months there is talk of some sort of Christian students federation planning to come to Peking and hold meetings in the national capital in broad day light. On consideration mankind has received more poison and harm from Christianity than all other religions because their methods of propagation are more subtle than that of others. Their hateful poison is used with all their power to tempt young students. The students are naturally pure and clean but easily tempted, so they use money secured in questionable ways to build large showy buildings which they call Christian associations. They tell the young students that they do not need to believe Christianity to become members, but once enter and you are led step by step into Christianity. The Y.M.C.A. is the preparatory school of Christianity- the place where Christians are made. Billiards [Billiards?], alas! Athletic meets alas! Moving pictures alas! Famous lectures, alas! Scholarship aid alas! Ushering, alas! Social meetings, alas! Captains of membership teams, alas! These are the chloroform, the hypnotism, which they use to distribute poison, alas! The pity of the terrible harm done to youth of unlimited possibilities, alas! The detestible Christians bring the personalities of our young students to what a state! Words fail to tell the crimes of religion! Ordinarily most people either pay no attention or do not understand the poison, but when you once carefully consider the matter and how sad the situation is, flesh and blood can stand no more but at once springs up to oppose religion and protect the truth.

We have formed the great Anti-Religion Union, and our one object is to oppose religion, without regard to party and absolutely no other aim. There are no restrictions of race, nationality, sex or age. There is no middle ground between believing a religion and opposing it. All who are not superstitious, and all who want to do away with the poison of religion are at one with us. This is the proclamation of the Anti-Religion Union.

Wen Shan Girl's School

Foochow, Fukien
June 21, 1925.

Dear Aunt Phebe,

The last few weeks, as well as being very busy, have been full of excitement. We being a girls' school hear of it only thru the heads of boys schools or in other ways by hearsay, but more recently we have been taken into the councils that talk over conditions and try to help decide a general policy of action for the body of mission schools of Foochow City.

One of the finest things that has happened for some time is the organization of a Christian Middle School Teachers' Association in Foochow. There have been three meetings so far and the one held on June 6 was attended by nearly all the teachers, men and women, of nearly all the Christian schools in Foochow. It took them from a bit after three till about six to elect their officers, and I enjoyed watching the development of the "group mind". Do you ever hear of that in America? The president of the Association is the head Chinese secretary of the Y.M.C.A. and Principal of the Y.M.C.A. school. The women were taken in as cordially and normally as if it had always been done in China, and while the nominating committee was out at work, each one present introduced himself or herself and told from what school he came. I hope that there may grow out of this association a new idea of what teachers and their work may be, and an enlargement of the teachers' view of educational problems. There are some very fine and outstanding people in the group as well as some interesting examples of the first step away from the old-style

Chinese “teacher”. As I sat watching the Chinese do their own talking and organizing yesterday afternoon, I felt very modern in realizing that this war like many organizations of the same sort of the U.S.A. We really aren’t far behind, and in some things we are ahead of you!

A few weeks ago one of the finest graduates of Foochow College, the A.B.C.F.M. boys’ school in the walled city, who is teaching in a Chinese school in Amoy, brought twenty or more of his boys, High School Seniors, up to the Provincial Capital to see the sights and visit the Parliament and the prisons. We felt honored that the only girls’ school he included in his list of places to visit was ours, and the morning on which they came to chapel was a pleasure alike to teachers and students. The boys conducted themselves most admirably, and like most Amoy people, looked bright. After Mr. Go their guide had told our girls about the school he was representing we asked the boys to sing. Mr. Go is quite a musician, and he accompanied them in singing their school song. Then our girls sang their school song in return.

Last week a similar group of Amoy boys was here from another school, a government school (for the other was one run and endowed by a private citizen.) They were being entertained at the government Normal School in the City. One night the wall of an adjoining lot fell and as some of the boys were sleeping in the courtyard just under it to keep cool, it killed seven or eight of them. One of them was the brother of a girl in the Methodist Girls’ College and it was a sad day for her when she had to go and identify the body of the only son in her family and both of them away from home. For to die away from home is a real disaster in China.

By this time you have all heard of the Yunnan earthquake and of the need of that section. Is it lack of power to advertise on the part of the Chinese, or the fact that the affected area is sparsely settled, or that it is far away from the rest of the world, or is it just lack of communication which made the news so long in reaching us, as compared to the news of the Yokahama disaster two years ago. They say that this one is second only to that in its severity.

When the University students hear of it they came to Foochow from the University site half way down the river and printed tickets for a relief entertainment they planned to give. Then they walled a meeting of the representatives of all the schools of Foochow and told of their plan asking each school to take tickets and pledge themselves either to see or stand back of all they took so that the fund would not lose by failure to sell tickets. The place was to be the Y.M.C.A. building. Our representative was a rather level-headed senior. Knowing that girls in a boarding school have little freedom for going on the streets, she refused to take as many tickets as the University boys tried to make her take, and on the way home while her coolie-chaperone was changing money at the money exchange, she sold six tickets to some of the shop keepers nearby.

Just before the play was to take place we heard suddenly that because of the trouble with students in Shanghai, they thot the Y.M.C.A. unsafe for the relief function, so asked if they could have it here. We were glad to have them, and the boys came and made their own arrangements, hiring a stage from a local theater company, and scenery, and borrowing costumes of our teachers etc. Seats were brought from the church across the way, and our grounds were brightly lighted by ascetaine lights hung in trees and before the stage. We had a large audience that was quiet and the most responsive of any audience I have seen in China.

You may be interested in a resume of the plot of the play they gave. It was taken from a magazine story, Chinese of course, and quite modern. Incidentally we were pleased with it as a wholesome and rather apropos influence at this time.

The daughter and only child of a Chinese couple who are well-off and careful of Chinese etiquette, typical modern parents, are sending their daughter to a mission school where she is imbibing in Western knowledge and a disconcerting amount of Western ideas about the freedom of the younger generation and of women in particular. The opening scene shows her very ill, and after a most realistic and amusing scene where two Chinese doctors try to prescribe for her by reading their prescriptions from a newspaper, and then urging the father to buy 7 lbs. of dried fruit, 2 of squirrel fur and other things equally absurd, expensive and ineffective, and after the father drives them both out in distrust and anger, he sent for a young Chinese who has studied Western medicine abroad. He comes quietly in, takes her temperature and leaves a bottle of medicine to be taken a dose every hour and promises to return to see her later. He also prescribes exercise- tennis and walking. She quickly recovers and then develops quite a friendship between them. The parents are a bit uncomfortable about the ways the lady takes things into her own hands in her relations with the young doctor, tho they like him. They scold her for being forward and she takes the opportunity to air her newly gained ideas of freedom in marriage choice. After two or three calls where the two of them try to talk to the subject of love and marriage, he comes straight to the point and asks her if she could love him. She dismissed him abruptly giving no satisfactory reason and leaving him as much devoted to her as ever. She then takes up with a very attractive young man of whom she knows nothing, and very much against her father’s wishes becomes engaged to him. The doctor comes to warn her that he is a most useless sireable character, but she remains stubborn. A furious and finely acted scene then takes place where the father goes into a real Chinese fury in his efforts to scold his daughter out of her foolishness. Another scene shows the agony of the love-lorn doctor very realistic when one considers that all this idea is practically new to them as yet. The wedding day comes, the gaily decked bride enters with the usual Western ceremonies, and they are just to be pronounced man and wife when in rushes an untidy wench who seizes the groom and drags him to the door asking who told him he might do that. Didn't he remember marrying her only two years ago? Well, he was coming right home with me! And home he went, meek as a lamb. The poor bride suffers an agony of remorse and sorrow, to find that all she has refused to believe is true and the maid takes her to her room only to return in a few minutes to tell her ???that she went to get the girl some tea and returned to find her stretched at full length on the floor. The young doctor is sent for and as he enters a letter is thrust into his hand. After he reads it he promptly faints and the curtain falls on the last of the play. The lady's 1st ???then hung outside the curtain written on a scroll and confessed her wrongs in trying to marry the bad man, and stating that she finds ?? really in love with the doctor all along. But she has lost too much face to live so has killed herself. (I thought the poison worked rather quickly or it might have been a hanging.)

The acting was very spirited and even from our point of view I thought it a good interpretation. The Father of the girl and the young doctor were very fine, the lover throwing himself into his part so realistically that I should think he would have been a rag by the end. The many fine things said about the young people's having a voice in their own marriage arrangements and the fine sentiments expressed by the agonized doctor when he dementedly determined to kill the rival because he had no right to deceive an innocent young girl were loudly clapped by the audience which followed very quietly and eagerly. Most plays in China are unintelligible as far as hearing goes, and this new privilege of having the action explained by words kept the listeners so quiet that we didn't notice their presence except when they applauded. Such is young China in three or four aspects.

About June second, we heard that because of some unpleasantness at the customs in Shanghai the students had made a demonstration. Also because of the accidental death of a worker (Chinese) in a Japanese factory the students had simply smashed up the interior of that factory completely. When the volunteer foreign police of Shanghai came to settle things the students had not been amenable to reason and after a long struggle with them, the police fired, killing six we heard. In another battle a few days later, eight more were killed and the Shanghai students telegraphed to Foochow that all business and schools must close. For several days everything was closed in Shanghai, but is practically all right now, except for the stevedores on the water front. There was a parade on June seventh when several students rushed in to the church across the way where our girls go, and made a rather frightening commotion. They said they had told people not to have services till the trouble was fixed up. The people rushed to the front of the church away from the doors but as soon as the students went, they resigned their seats and the service was finished. No other church so far as we have heard had any trouble and we think this one was entered only because it was on the direct route of march and they saw a service going on as they passed which acted as a red rag to a bull. I heard that the officials were not pleased with the idea of a demonstration, but as Government now had little to say as to what people shall or shall not do, the parade took place just the same.

From June 7 to 14, much happened. On Monday night the 8th, Miss Perkins and Miss Ding our head Chinese teacher, made the rounds of the South Side schools to see what they were planning to do. All were going to keep till their schedules finished, except the M.E. Girls' College, Hwa Nan, which was closing Tuesday because the University had closed. When our girls heard that, though before they wished to keep till the 24th, they sent us a petition saying 1) they did not want to be the first school to close, nor the last to close; 2) that since Hwa Nan was closed, they did not wish to wait for the Anglican Middle School, (a tactful hint that they wished to close immediately) and 3) that they asked us, the faculty, to let their term daily average stand as the term mark, and the fourth month exam as the final exam. On Tuesday morning our University graduate science teacher came in very early, saying that he had received a letter telling him, if he was to continue coming to school he had best go at a different time than usual - - - which he took to be a threat against his safety to say the least. As a fact this is hardly a treat at all, in this day of pirates' knives, crossbones, guns, red spots etc., on letters that say you will be killed if you do such and such things. But the Chinese are very open to suggestion.

After a brief chapel service that morning, the faculty met for an hour and a half trying to come to gether on some agreement that would allow patriotism for both sides. We finally had to vote to close. Vacations of one or two days to sympathize with the students in mourning for the death of those killed in Shanghai was forbidden as unpatriotic by our consul, and the teachers as well as the girls feared an attack and violence on Wednesday when there was to be a parade past our gates, if we did not close. That would make our girls strike they feared when they felt the mob spirit of the parade so we felt that closing was the wisest way. The girls were very long faced when they heard it, but their spirit had been quiet, thoughtful, and friendly all along. It was really a question of international relations, and it was the only course. Things like that somehow take on significance and grow in importance in the light of later developments. The faculty finally voted that in the interest of education exams would have to be taken in the fall.

We have fifteen Diongloh girls here in school and as there was a launch at 1 P.M. that day they had to rush to get packed and ready to take it, as we hoped to get as many girls out of school before Wednesday as possible. Letters were sent to the parents to come that afternoon and get their girls as the Chinese teachers feared to go on the launch, I escorted the girls down. It was a lovely day and we had a pleasant ride. One girl tried to go home with the sister of the boy to who she is engaged, but luckily, I didn't allow it, for the betrothed ones might have met --- which in China would have been most unseemly!!!! When I got back on Thursday I found that there was practically no excitement on Wednesday. The students paraded, and the foreigners all stayed at home. All schools that had not closed before did so perforce of circumstances on those two days, so now every one is having a few weeks of unexpected rest and time to get ready for Kuliang easily. The University boys have been in a days conference with the Student Union discussing their position toward Christianity. The University boys contend that since China is pledged to the principle of religious freedom and toleration, they cannot single out Christianity to oppose more than any other religion. It is unfortunate that the Anti-Christian Movement of the last two years should come to a head at this time when it gets mixed with the Anti-foreign Movement and feeling engendered by this particular event.

The Chinese Christians had a mass meeting at the Y.M.C.A. last week to discuss their position on the situation. After hearing both sides, and getting as much information as possible, they voted to send telegrams to Peking and Shanghai asking for justice, regardless of nationality, and for as speedy and peaceful a settlement as possible. They also wrote a letter to the members of the three missions working here asking them for an expression of their feeling. In accordance with this request, there was a very full and representative gathering of missionaries last Wednesday night when several outlines were read and the general feeling of the group was taken. A committee was then appointed to draft the letter to this Chinese group and I think it is now sent. It is interesting to see how conservative the British are in admitting that their policy of foreign relations has not been entirely conducive to a complete and friendly understanding and faith in them on the part of the Chinese. But we got together on the main points that we regretted the occurrence in Shanghai and wished for a speedy, thorough and impartial settlement based on Christian principles. This will reassure our Chinese friends as to our feeling on the matter.

The servants on South Side had a meeting to see what they would do. They declared a strike to begin last Wednesday, June 17th, but it has not come off and probably will not now. Things here are very much the same as usual and people are going to the mountain fast. We are able now to get food from the foreign shops if we send by a Chinese messenger for it, as we were unable to do a few days ago. Meat is still hard to get because the butchers are killing only one or two animals a day and the cuts are very soon sold. That condition will probably soon pass. At no time during the disturbance have I felt any anxiety for the foreigners, for the Chinese are good talkers but well controlled. The feeling against Japan and England is still quite strong due I imagine mostly to past history. It is interesting to ride on the launches or hear the people talking on the streets, the illiterate common people and hear their version of the situation. They confide themselves mostly to facts tho they often throw in remarks and comments that show the direction of their thots on the subject. I was asked yesterday if I were a Japanese!! I can't imagine why my being able to speak the language was any reason to make the old gentleman think I was a Japanese, for I was wearing a hat, and I am not yet tanned for the summer!!!!

The Y.W.C.A. in Foochow is closing up for good so as to release its very charming and able secretaries for more responsive places. The Foochow women have never taken hold of the organization as they should, and other places are so needy for workers that our fine ladies are being transferred to those places, much to our sorrow. Last week their Association and house furniture was on sale and at the end of this month they go.

On June 4th the ladies at the Union Kindergarten Training School gave a farewell party for all those leaving on furlough this June. From the Methodist and A.B.C.F.M. missions there were twelve or more leaving and as the Y.W.C.A. is closing there were also some Chinese workers. We first provided some necessary articles for the departing ones by tearing them out of paper. They were judged by two men, and they chose a prophylactic tooth brush, an umbrella, a child's dress and a steamer and a suitcase, as being most appropriate and the best executed. Then we wrote telegrams to them using the words Good Wishes as an acrostic, and they wrote telegrams to us using the words Fine Voyage. The telegrams were rare. As a last bit of fun the furlough people all fished for gifts from the highest point in the lovely rockery they have at the Kindergarten while people below hooked the "fish" on their hooks.

For eight weeks now Miss Thomas who was hurt very seriously by the falling of the church roof on her while playing the organ for morning service, has been gaining slowly. We were not able to see her for two or three days, then only her family here at Wen Shan, but now she has as many callers find time to drop in. Some of the friends in Foochow have done such sweet things as to send a new variety of rose with a verse or letter to introduce it every day. These hot days are very trying as she still lies almost all the time on her back, sitting up now for two weeks only half an hour twice a day. She is not able to raise herself and to walk alone for some distance, does crossword puzzles, and reads a great deal. An electric fan has helped a deal to make the heat endurable. Fortunately at the time of the accident only two others were badly hurt that we heard of, two children whose legs were broken. They are both recovering nicely, one in the same hospital with Miss Thomas, one at home under a Chinese doctor's care.

The flowers in the house have been my care since Miss Thomas' absence, and it has been a pleasure. Gladiolas are beautiful now and huge and plentiful. Snap-dragons have been in for a long time, Easter lilies, dahlias and very fragrant white native flower are what we now have. Our own nasturtiums are doing pretty well tho they are now past their prime, and the dainty pink fairy lily reminds me of Wordsworth's "Daffodils" every time I see their bright little patch on the lawn.

And now in less than three weeks we shall be gone to Kuliang, with summer ahead of us. I hope your summer will be restful and happy.

[The rest of the letter is handwritten.]

This is the 9th of July, and such a rainy day we didn't have during the whole summer Aunt Mary was here. A little typhoon has been raging for three days and so we may have nine this summer. By the Chinese proverb if we have a typhoon in the seventh month it will have nine children; an eighth month typhoon has no children.

The package that brought your gift of cloth for a dress was such a happy surprise; and the material is lovely! Everyone else is quite jealous; which of course, womanlike ?? my appreciation of it, or more properly, my joy in it. I have it here and am going to have it made up by the same tailor that made Aunt Mary's dresses here.

Kuliang is almost strange after one summer away. The hills and sunsets are the same, and as I came up that first bright day and saw them, they gave me a sense of rest and satisfaction just to be here. But at least half the people are strange and I need as much introducing almost as our secretary-stenographer, Helen Hieb, whom I am hostess-ing. Our other people, the Tappans with their two children haven't come yet, and may not, as Hongkong is closed up and we have heard nothing from them. I miss the children, but it is restful to be quiet. People are leaving us pretty much alone, and I am beginning to fear it is intentional, so I can rest- for Susan Armstrong never fails to tell me she hopes the Tappans won't come, when she sees me. I am resting grandly. Cook, washerman, house boy, amah- these are the servants for four people. Mr. Thelin boards here but only 3 live here. I didn't go to mission meeting today as the wind is too hard to walk against.

The new Club House is very attractive and nearly done now. Our Fourth of July entertainment was held there, and the new chairs and the big room of stone are fine. The entertainment consisted of nine tableaux illustrating the life of the Pilgrims and they were very pretty and very well done. It seemed so good to see big High School children once more, for in Foochow we see almost none.

Today my furlough was voted for next year at this time; so it will not now be long before I come home. It does sound good and I am beginning to look forward to it. I am planning soon to send Aunt Mary a much belated package soon with bamboo paper knives, jade pendants and some little cards in it. Other things will come soon. The other morning I bought over $10 worth of embroideries, choice old ones, like those we used to get years ago, and almost never see now. The pedlars have begun to take the up-river districts for these things now.

You will be having a birthday yourself before I can get this to you. I hope it may be very happy, and that it may "lead on" many others after it, as we used to translate in Latin, just as happy.

My warm love and good wishes for a happy summer to all at Century Farm, and a special lot for you on your birthday from

Phebe K.

Foochow China
June 28, 1925

Dear Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

It looks from my correspondence register as if it might be your turn for a letter. A good one from you came last evening at 10 o'clock.- The one written at Lake Mohawk House [probably Lake Mohawk in N.J.]. I'm glad you had such a pleasant quiet place for a rest. How would it seem to get into such a place for a few days? For nearly three years now we have been living in such unrest and uncertainty here that one nearly forgets what quiet and peace and certainty are. Life has been full of interest- too full at times. Thus far my policy has been to keep as calm and level headed as possible and keep on the even tenor of my way until it seems wise to others as well as myself to change,- an instance is in keeping on with school until June 6th, when Faculty and students were a unit in voting to close. Before midnight of that day nearly every mission school was closed. Since that day you have read- I do know what in the papers. Chinese and foreigners have special printers, ink by the keg on paper and spent much money in postage to tell others what they ought to do about it. Last evenings mail brought pronouncements from Canton and from Peking and from several points between- some covering pages, some brief- all having rather pronounced views and opinions about the "Shanghai matter of May 30th". I am not going to write my ideas- except to say that it was a clash between the East and West in the matter of their attitude toward authority, law, order and justice. The printed leaves nearly all call for "justice"- but "justice" is defined differently by the East and the West. Some missionaries have fallen over backwards and bumped their heads in trying to meet the demands of the Chinese for sympathy and justice in the Shanghai affair,- others have gone just as far the other way. Ten days ago I was one of a committee of eight to draft a letter to the Chinese Evangelistic Association of Foochow, expressing our sympathy etc.- You may be sure that eight people from 28 years to 60 years old, men and women, Episcopalian, Methodist, Congregationalist engaged in educational evangelistic and Y.M.C.A. work- a Meth. Bishop- having lived and worked in China from five to thirty years- (The Bishop only ten months) would be fairly conservative in drawing up such a letter. One of the C.M.S. missionaries thought we were far too sympathetic and of his own accord sent them his private letter which called them down, took them to task for meeting without the missionaries being present- and virtually told them that they did not know their business. So I am trying to keep a level head and get a bit of rest.

While resting I have been trying to catch on to the work of Mission treasurer. Mr. St. Clair left two weeks ago yesterday. He closed the books June 8 and balanced them and left June 13. I will try to sell gold bills and keep the people in money. I'll not guarantee to keep the Journal and Leger posted to date and everything in shape to show an inspector any time he may happen around. I have [been] working at auditing every minute I could find during the past week. This is helping me to understand the keeping of the books.

June 13th Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair and three children left Foochow and went to Pagoda, spent the night with Dr. and Mrs. Gillette and took steamer for Hong Kong Sunday. They were afraid that conditions in Shanghai would make it very inconvenient- if not dangerous to try to change ships in Shanghai. As it turned out Shanghai was quiet at the time. The next day= Sunday, I rose at 4:15 a.m. and escorted his trunks over to the launch at Jardines and sent his coolie down with them, and got back for breakfast. On Thursday morning Phebe, Misses Armstrong, Hieb, Holton, Mr. Hightower, and four Chinese teachers of the College and myself took a motor boat to see Miss Margie V. Phillips off on the Hong Kong Steamer. She has been teaching here during the year, and goes back to Manila for teaching. Last Wednesday the Reumann family left. They too a North German Lloyd S.S. via India and Suez. Fortunately the ship stopped here so they need not change at Hong Kong. This makes all leaving for furlough. Miss Thomas is not making the recovery the doctors want her to and she's to go to America. I have asked for sailing for her Aug. 10, on Empress of Australia.

To day is rather warm 92 degrees +. Many people are on Kuliang. Phebe plans to go Wednesday. I will get off Thursday or Friday.- Preach there next Sunday and come down to Foochow the next Tuesday for a meeting. Hightower and I are now keeping bachelor hall. He plans to stay here during the summer. How the hatred of man against his brother must grieve the heart of the Father.

Very lovingly Will.

My garden has supplied all the Am. B'd. missionaries still in Foochow with all the delicious sweet corn they could eat for three weeks now. The second planting is getting rather ripe to be real good. I am now picking the greenest ears. The third planting will be ready to eat in another week. The fourth planting is nearly two feet high. The last planting about 4 in. The first planting of field corn looks fine- hip high. I could not get all the ground ready at once. The second planting I put the Amonia Sulphate directly under the corn and let the gardner cover the sulphate. He did not put enough earth over it and it burned the corn, so this planting is late.

I am still eating Swiss chard, carrots, string beans and beets and cabbage.

How I should enjoy being the boy on the farm for the next month- riding the mowing machines and rake and doing a little of all kinds of work.

I sincerely hope some of the girls will help Myra out this summer. It's fine that Daniel is to be with you.

Will

[Following is the letter written by the committee Willard refers to in the above letter:]

June 18th, 1925.

To The Chinese Christian Association,
Foochow, Fukien.

Dear Fellow-Christians:

We, elected to express the views of a largely attended meeting of American and British missionaries held on Wednesday evening, June 17th, to consider the situation arising from the regrettable events in Shanghai on May 30th, wish to place ourselves on record as follows:

1. We confess with shame that the policies and actions of our respective governments, and the attitude of ourselves and our fellow-countrymen, toward China and her people have been, and are, too often out of harmony with the principles of Christ.
2. We recognize our duty, as opportunity arises, to do what we can toward removing the injustices which mar the relations of China with other countries, and are always ready to cooperate with you in creating the spiritual atmosphere in which peace and good will among all the children of our One Father will prevail.
3. At the present moment telegrams and newspaper reports of the events in Shanghai are so much at variance that we see almost no possibility of forming here any clear conviction as to the rights and wrongs of the case, therefore we urge all parties to refrain from judging until the facts are established.
4. We, with you, earnestly desire that the authorities in Shanghai, the Diplomatic Corp in Peking, and the Chinese Government, working in true cooperation, will immediately establish an impartial tribunal to investigate not only the Shanghai situation, but also the causes leading up to that outbreak. It is assumed that upon this body there will be both Chinese and foreign representatives of unimpeachable integrity. When they shall have heard all of the evidence we trust (1) that they will give the widest possible publicity to the facts as established to dispel rumors and remove misunderstandings, and (2) that justice will be impartially administered.
5. We profoundly regret the unhappy events of the past few weeks and our deepest sympathy goes out to all to whom sorrow has come as the result of this tragedy.
6. We recall the counsels of China's Sage along the lines of moderation and gentleness. We remember the example and commands of Jesus Christ to serve and to love. Therefore we pledge ourselves anew to lives of moderation, gentleness, service, and love, and we pray that all Christians in China may become "living epistles of Christ" in these difficult days. Further it is our prayer that the sorrows and troubles through which we are passing may lead to a closer fellowship with God, and with one another.

He has heard that his grandfather is in the hospital having a growth removed from his leg. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]*

[Before July 6, 1925]

Dear Mother:

The razor strap came O.K. Thanks very much for it. I thought probably I left it in Oberlin.

Things have not gone at all as I had planned them. I caught the grip soon after getting here and Friday I was on my back in bed. I felt pretty well Monday and went to class and did a lot of things and went to bed in a hurry about 4:00 in the afternoon with pains in my back and legs. Could'nt locate any spot in particular that they came from and no place was sore.

I had the doctor called and he has made four visits. Today I am up for the first time since Monday and not doing anything but sitting on the porch getting strong. I am weaker than I was after two weeks in the hospital last summer. The Dr. calls the pains a purely nervous reaction. Guess I will have to go alone for a couple of weeks. I have a pile of wash waiting to be done and will have to make up work in six classes and two lab. periods.

A letter from Aunt Phebe says grandfather is in New Haven hospital having a growth cut out of his leg. He is getting on nicely.

Today I mailed orders to the Derby, Putnam and Bridgeport Banks drawing out all the money in each.

Do you think the Chinese situation will have any bearing on your going to China next fall? How are you getting along with your packing?

With love to my own Mother,
Your loving son,
Gould.

[This letter, dated July 6, 1925, was written from Ann Arbor, Michigan by Gould to his mother. Ellen added onto the letter prior to forwarding it on to Kathleen. Gould thanks Ellen for some money. He would like his engagement to be only a year rather than two years. Ellen adds a note asking Kathleen which house she would prefer them to rent for the summer in Oberlin. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Monday- July 6, 1925

Dear Mother:

Your letter with check came today. I am very grateful for the money, but I surely cannot pay it back this year.

I was rather surprised to hear that Uncle Elbert came back to help buy the Hewe's[?] house. That is a big step in that familie's life. I believe they did the right thing in buying. It is cheaper in the end than paying out rent and the property always has value.

I am afraid I cannot afford to live strictly to your diet. It offers nothing to sustain strength on and I am under necessity of doing a man's work. I am living very simply though. Shredded wheat and bran in the morning- a round dinner of eggs and vegetables at noon- and salad and fruit cocktail in the evening. I got up Saturday for the first time in the week. I am much weaker than I was after two weeks in bed last summer after the operation. I am trying to get plenty of sleep.

I saw Lloyd Benveson this afternoon and he took me around in his Dodge coupe while I did a few errands.

Vivienne writes that her hope chest is full and she needs another to pack the things into which are still coming. I wish I knew how to make our engagement only a year long rather than two. Now that I actually have her I can hardly wait two years to have her completely. But I must wait till my salary is such that I can give her a good home and I would like to have $1000 ahead.

Don't look for any further trouble from this source for I am O.K. and will be from now on.

Hoping you will get your packing done easily,
Your loving son,
Gould.

[The following is written by Ellen:]

Thursday July 9.

Dear Kathleen,

I am sending on Gould's letters as he may not get a chance to write to us all while he is making up what he has lost during his illness.

We are having plenty of thunder showers today and rain enough to please the farmers, I guess. This afternoon about 4:30 a shower came up and prevented my going to look at a house across the street from Aunt Etta's. I thot it had cleared and went to prayer meeting at 7 without an umbrella. I was sauntering home as slowly as I could for I had not been out all day when as I was by the men's bldg. down came the rain again out of the most innocent looking clouds, right on my spick and span pongee which I had washed and ironed today. After raining gently a few minutes, a real thunder shower started to come up in the west. It rained hard and thundered long and sharply as it rolled over us till it gradually softened down with increased distance off in the east. Suddenly I realized the (carried to G's other letter) thunder was beginning to grow louder again. Could it be that same old shower coming back again? No, it was a brand new one brewing off in the south-west and promising to be lively,-which it was,- worse than the last or the first one today and I have been sitting with my feet in a chair writing this while the flash and roar and downpour continued for nearly a half hour. It has been a hot day, - a hot week here.

Ask Marjorie how she would like to live in the apartment where Miss Washburn lived last year on N. Prof. St. I went to see it a few days ago. How would you like to live in the house with the Drake girl who is in your (?) class in H.S.? Her mother and father and sister and herself are the people of whom we would rent. Or would you rather have a ground floor apartment on the south side of the house below the gas station on S. Pleasant corner, Miss Rowley's house, where I looked at an upper north apartment 2 yrs. ago. It is rather nice there in many respects, good attic to store trunks in and dry clothes in, in winter, good cellar to wash in and good heat; is south exposure; could get our piano in; is near to everything, and reasonable rent. But it is a ground floor; second floors are lighter and airier. Send this on to Geraldine for her opinion. And all of you write your sentiments. The Drake apartment is way up on N. Prof. Not many houses beyond, rather meagerly furnished, all cots, for which we must furnish bedding, which is a big problem for winter. A double bed would take 1/8 less, and make less washing. This house has good cellar to wash but no set tubs. Attic for storage I think is upstairs. Southern exposure. Rather old house. Think could get piano in.

3rd House proposition. On W. College St. in 1st block west of S. Prof. St. on N. side, faces south, can have E. or W. suite; east one faces V. Porters house. Ought to be able to get piano in if owner is willing. Either suite with small kitchenette $30. gas and elect. included also heat and water. With large kitchenette $35. Best financial proposition of the 3, I think. But, Mrs. Andrews owns it and she is sister to Theodore Wood. Isn't he a college student in Mary's class? If he is to be there as he is now, you couldn't be there according to college rule- no college boys and college girls in same house. Moreover one has to go thru his room to go to the store-room. A double bed here I think.

Write me, each of you which proposition you like best.

[This letter, dated August 16, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to his sister, Phebe. He likes the photos and stories about Gould's fiancé, Vivienne. He talks about a romance on Kuliang between his stenographer and a business man. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Foochow, China
August 16, 1925.

Dear Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

Last Thursday I received Vivienne's photo, and the same mail brought a letter from Ellen saying that she was planning to come to Foochow in the Fall- Oct. or Nov. I have written our "new" daughter and sent the letter in your care. It is a conundrum every year for us to know how to address letters to our own family. They do not get their summer plans made till the last of June. When they write, the letters reach us after August 1st with full directions as to how to address letters etc. But if we follow the directions the letters have a hard time in finding the folks, at last in their old places some time in Sept. So I am not trying to write any one in the summer camps. I'm sending to you or to Putnam.

I hope Ellen and Dorothy are East this summer. Geraldine, Marjorie and Kathleen we know are. I hope also that Gould and Vivienne get East, altho I do not see exactly how they can. I suppose he must be about getting his diploma now, and his mind will be on finding a job.

Phebe and I are both in love with Vivienne,- from her pictures- both snap shots, Gould has sent us, and the photo, but especially from the excellent and full description Ellen sent in her last letter.

Mary will help you realize our "interesting" experience of this summer in our one roomer- She will remember Miss Preston and Mr. (?) in 1915. This summer our Mission Stenographer Miss Hieb is with us. Mr. and Mrs. Tappan (Mary will remember them) could not come. In charge of Brummer, Mund and Co. Foochow is a young man. George Ratcliffe- His father (deceased) was a Britisher, his mother a Chinese. He is boarding with Mr. T.M. Wilkinson= Wilkinson and Co. He has been up from Foochow and spent three or four days of every week on Kuliang. He has been here morning, afternoon and evening. I think he was here for one lunch last week when I was in Foochow. He and Miss Hieb have spent part of the time on our veranda but most of it off on the hills. They have shunned society. He is not accepted in the community within Foochow. He has been in Foochow only three or four years,- is 22 and seems to be a success in business. She has been the aggressive one as was the case in our 1915 flirtations. Last Monday a.m. she went to Foochow with him, ostensibly to meet her brother Stephen Hieb who is on his way to Ceylon as an Am. Board Missionary. You will find his photo in the July or Aug. Miss'y Herald. He has not yet arrived- unless he has come to day. Last Wed. a party was held at Mrs. Wilkinsons in Foochow at which the announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Hieb and Mr. Ratcliffe.

The report is that Vernon Peet is after her- that he is coming from Shanghai on the same steamer with Stephen Hieb, to see her,- well that is about all the story to date. It is hard to believe that she would really marry

Ratcliffe. He is not fitted to make her happy- uneducated and knows little of refined society. We hope much from her brother when he comes.

I have addressed the Kuliang Register each week to Mary thinking her address was sure and asking her to sent it to Ellen.

Aug 18-

The mails yesterday and day before brought the latest news of father- all good news, and with the best of hopes for its continuance. How fortunate that some- and so many of his own folks can see him every day. When the air service gets a little more dependable I'll run in to chat with him some day!!! By the time this reaches you he will be home.

My but you folks were fortunate in that auto accident. It nearly took away my breath as I read it. It shows that a careless driver is a menace, and danger lies in the path of the most careful. You will give more details in your next and tell us how the things ended- you and Mary are very good to write so frequently about father.

On Ben's birthday I wrote him a letter and hoped to get one off to you on your birthday but there were too many things "to do". Some time possibly we shall cease to be so cluttered up with doing things and have time to really be somebody.

From the last letters, I judge all the family are in the East- except Gould. Good letters come from Kathleen and Marjorie from Eaglesmere.

Our summer is going much as others have gone- more quiet perhaps. We have been to Ox Head Fort for supper once and for breakfast once and up on the rocks for supper once, - to Moon Temple and to Kushan Monastery. I want to go to the Monastery again next week if possible. I have been down five times since coming up July 3 and have walked except the last two times.

The next to the last time I had sent down a letter with 3 crossed checks to be deposited in the Bank and another for $10, uncrossed to be used in buying some groceries. The reply came back at night that the three crossed checks were not to be found in the letter. This was Fri. night so I was off Sat. a.m. to find those checks or to notify the Banks. Of course I let every one about the house and office know of my loss. I did not worry for the checks were crossed and I could intercept them at the Banks anyway. I went up stairs to change my clothes and in coming down was delayed a few minutes by a caller. As I went into my study for the brief case you gave me in 1921, there the three checks lay on my desk in front of the case. I simply told people that I had found them. When I was down again the next Thurs.= last Thurs. I was talking with one of the Foochow College teachers, and my gardner came in. The teacher said to him, "You are telling around that I opened that letter the other day. You know it was open when you brought it to me." The gardner simply replied, "It was most fortunate that the checks were found. It would have been too bad if they had been lost."

Have I written that on August 1st all the old students had to register and pay rent for the term if they wanted to get in. 15 more than we have room for are registered. Foochow is normal- except that the British owned steamers find it hard to run or rather to more cargo.

God is always good- He has been very good to us all. The news that Ellen plans to come in the fall is very good. May His blessings continue because we use them unselfishly.

Very Lovingly

Will.

Phillipsburg, N.J.
[September 7, 1925]

Dear Phebe:

Now I am East again and probably will be for a year or more. Many things have happened since I wrote Father last. I can't remember just what I was doing at the date of the last letter, but I think it was at the close of Summer School.

For two weeks I painted house for Dad Rosey. I gave the whole house two coats of paint. It looks very nice and white now, but I am afraid one winter of soft coal will make it all dusky again. However the protection will all be there for about five years.

On the 25th of Aug. Vivienne, her sister Voda and Mother Ross went up to Union Lake near Pontiac to visit Mrs. Whiteman. Mrs. W. invited them up especially for Viv and my benefit. She and Mr. W. are surely wonderful people. The kind the country needs more of.

On the evening of the 27th the painting was finished at 8:00 p.m. I took a quick bath and packed my grip and went down to Bud Heidt's flivver [slang for car] which he had left and which I was to use while in Ann Arbor. I found a flat tire. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rosey tried to discourage my going so late, but Vivienne was in Pontiac at the lake and nothing could keep me. I got a spare tube out and had the tire fixed in 15 min. I got to Union Lake at 10:30. Vivienne had been expecting me for four hours and didn't know what to think of it.

Well I stayed at the Lake for four days till Monday. The evenings were perfect. Moonlight on the water with a glossy surface and no mosquitos, what more could a pair ask for? The swimming was fine all the time. I rose at 6:00 each morning and had my swim along since the girls thought it would be too cold. John Kelker, Voda's fiancé came up Sunday and Monday morning the whole bunch came out for the early swim with me, and then how they hopped on me for not getting them out before.

Mrs. Ross went in to Detroit Monday morning with Mr. Whiteman and Dorothy W. In the afternoon Madeline W. Voda, Vivienne, John and I drove in Bud's fliv. To the Whitemans house in Detroit. I took supper with them there then at 10:00 started for Ann Arbor arriving at 12:00 p.m.

The next morning the Rosses and John Kelker went to Cleveland on the 10:30 boat. I had my hands full to pack everything, but I got it done and at 9:00 p.m. I was all packed up. My junk filled the large steamer trunk, my army locker, the small army case, a lock box, a small box about the size of the large cracker boxes we used to get graham crackers in, my Wear Ever Salerman[?] kit, a small hand bag, and five parcels to ship via parcels post. I took all but the four large pieces with me. Those will go by freight when I get settled.

Wed. morning I pulled out of Ann Arbor for the last time at 10:30. Mrs. Rosey had all she could do to contain herself. Four years almost makes me a member of the family in any place. I drove hard to get to Hiram before supper. I told Vivienne not to expect me before 8:00 and not to be surprised if I didn't arrive till 11:00 or 12:00. Just outside of Freemont, O. a cop stopped me and all but pinched me for driving a car I didn't own. If I hadn't have had Bud's letter asking me to drive it East for him I would have been in the jug for a day till I could have gotten telegraphic confirmation from him. At Norwalk I stopped for gas and oil then pushed thru Oberlin, Wellington, Akron, Ravenna and Hiram. It seemed queer to go straight thru Oberlin with no place to stop at there. Mother is in Cleveland. I got to Hiram at 6:30 just in time for supper with them and surprised them all.

After supper we played 500 till 10:30 then Vivienne and I took our last little walk till the next time I can get west- probably Xmas time. It will be long to wait.

Thursday morning I got off late. Just didn't have any inspiration to start. I had plenty of engine trouble Thursday. Just little odds and ends that needed tightening and adjusting. I cut off the Buffalo, Albany route at Westfield. I have been that route four times now and decided to find another prettier one. My course went down Chautaugua Lake to Jamestown. There I spent the night. Friday I went thru Salamanca, Olean, Wellsville, Hornell, Watkins (where the famous Watkins Glen is), Ithica, Cortland, Cazenovia and Utica. The road was excellent all the way. It was new concrete most of the way. It would in among high hills, over and along high ridges, up steep sides, and down steep slopes. I am sorry I haven't taken that route before. It is a little longer due to the winding of the road and the hills and some people might think it harder driving, but not here.

While entering Utica the happy thought struck me to inquire for the street I wanted before going into town. It was just two blocks away. That afternoon (Saturday- for I stopped over night in Cazenovia) Bud and I mailed all the packages I had brought and repositioned the trunk. For supper Buds Uncle, Aunt and Cousin drove us out in their big Pea[?] to a country b?? where we had a camp supper and sat and talked about the fire till about 10:00.

Sunday the uncle- an osteopath- got up with us and cooked us some delicious pancakes. Bud took me down to catch a 10:45 train. I changed at Binghamton and Stroudsburgh. At 7: a.m. I arrived, took a room in a hotel where I am still and will be till I get settled.

Today being Labor Day I couldn't do any business with the Ingersoll-Rand Co. Tomorrow I will be on hand at 7:00 a.m. in washing clothes to do whatever work they have for me to do. I don't know what is expected of me other than to learn all that I can about every part of machinery they make, how they make it and make enough of it to pay for my salary. I will be more intelligent about it in my next letter.

This morning I walked out to the plant. It is way out in the woods- not woods but open fields. I wont be able to get a room within ½ mile of there anyway.

In Father's last letter he wants to know more of the family. That I don't know much about just now. One thing I do know, Mother will be starting for China before Dec. 1st. She wrote me deffinitely she would. Geraldine, Kathleen, and Monny are to have an apartment by themselves. Monny and Kathleen are still at Eaglesmere, Pa. Geraldine's feet are hopping wildly about in Conn. and N.Y. enjoying themselves. Mother wouldn't go East but is staying somewhere in Cleveland I think at the Y.W.C.A. but have not made connections with her yet by letter. All in all the family is losing its coherency. Dot and I will be the outlying prodigals [prodigals?] next winter. With you, Father and Mother in Foochow, and Punk, Monny, and Gerry in Oberlin there will be two groups that could be called headquarters.

Now this has been a long letter. Perhaps there are a few odds and ends I haven't touched on. One is that I have not yet gotten my diploma. I have still a design to hand in. I dropped the course and took an incomplete in it to take up the State work. I have not had time yet to finish it. I will do so evenings here. It will take me about three months. I couldn't stand it to stick around another semester. In my summer school work I stood record in both classes and got straight A's, that while washing 12 hrs. a day for the State.

Mrs. Ross has not said anything more about the linen drawn work. I want a good signet ring for Vivienne. I will send the cash for it as soon as I can spare it. I want the Beard character on it. Size 7 1/2. I also want some dope[?] on the rice China. Do they have cups and saucers in it and do they have plates or only bowls?

My love to you and Father and Vivienne sends hers each time too. Have you written to her yet?

Your loving brother-

Gould.

American Board Mission

Foochow, China

Sept. 20- 1925

Dear Phebe [Phebe M.]:-

It is a beautiful, calm, clear, fairly cool Sabbath morning. Chickens have been fed, countenance scraped-breakfast eaten- a little conference had with the Father and now for a Sunday chat with dear ones far away as to miles of space but very near in reality.

Your letters and Mary's letters have come in every mail. I thank you for them. It is marvelous how well Father has come up from his operations. Almost by the time I learned of the first one he was home. The letter yesterday written Aug. 17 said you thought of bringing him home in a few days. Give him my congratulations, and best wishes for years of happy usefulness. How glad I am that Mary went home when she did. It has been a great service she has given during the past year. I think sometimes some of us get cloudy minds about "service"- we talk of missionary work as if it was in a class by itself and no other work was to be compared with it. I have always held that to care for those God has given us was our first duty. Nothing else would have reconciled me to the long separations of our family. But I judge Ellen can quite well be spared now and I am very happy that Ellen is coming out. She has been home so long that it will be harder for her to come out now than it was the first time. And there is nothing romantic to help this time and for the first time she must make all her own arrangements.

I hope you have succeeded in persuading the taxi owner to do what he ought to do without going to law. Of course I do not have all the data here. But I judge he was 100% in the wrong. I judge also that you were very fortunate in having reputable eyewitnesses to the accident. I almost shiver every time I read of the miraculous escape of you all.

The Sentinels come with every mail and I read every one. I find the first page a very interesting one. The editors have a good sense of the relative importance of world doings. Of course the next in importance is the "City of Shelton."

The last mail brought a good letter from Stanley. I hope he and Myra are out of the woods and that they will be free from children's illnesses and from their own too. Nearly every family seems to have to go thru one such siege. It came with the measles in our Century Farm family. I came down first and every member of the family - Father and Mother and all had them. Grandma Beard was there to help. You were very sick. In my own family it was whooping cough and you folks at home- Mother, Elizabeth and Ruth had the brunt. Ellen and I- especially- were not in it much,- altho Ellen had the nursing job,- I mean we were not sick.

In my bed room are three pictures that I take a lot of pleasure in looking at Stanley's trio with their mother and daddy. Fred and Helen's [?] pair and the two Jewett children. They are near the same age and all bright, pretty, sweet children. I have one also of Nancy and Stephen, both laughing that fits with the other two- making three pairs.

I am greatly interested and pleased to read of Daniel's interest and success on the farm work this summer and in hearing of his visits to Father to talk over the work. I can realize how much pleasure it gave Father to have him come in and do this. Sometime tell me to whom you are selling the milk now and how much you get for it, - how much you are producing- Is Prince- or was it Duke- the lively white horse still on the job? You wrote that you had traded off the other one.

Marjorie and Kathleen seem to have had very pleasant summer at Eaglesmere and I judge Dorothy and Geraldine had enjoyed the rather fun life they have had this summer. Geraldine surely enjoyed her stay at the farm. It was enough to split me to read Dorothy's proud statement that she had milked two and a half cows (2 ½) – How long have you been dealing in half cows – which half?

The biggest problem of all I have left till last- What of the schools? Aug. 1 285 boys paid room rent and registered.- This was 20 more than we wanted, and did not include 220 for the Higher Primary. On Sept. 7, 215 of the 285 came to review and take exams. On Tues. Sept. 8 all was going quietly, altho the outside students were writing letters, putting up posters and threatening by word all students and teachers of mission schools. I was pretty tired and asked to go to Kuliang and come down Friday a.m. 1. I went up Tues. p.m.- On Wed. p.m. just as I was in a good nap a messenger arrived with a letter from Foochow saying that some one had poured kerosene into the College well. I must come down at once so I left at once. The next morning the faculty decided to allow the boys to go home if they wanted to, or to remain in the school. Instead of reviewing and taking examinations we would give them an average for the terms work= last term from daily marks and monthly tests- and open school for the Fall on Sept. 29. Then we held a faculty meeting to consider ! Voluntary Church attendance 2. optional or elective Bible study 3. Registrations with the Chinese Government. These three changes were approved by the faculty. The Board of Managers must now consider them and the mission may want to discuss them. I look to see some of the older and some of the conservative members of the mission oppose specially, making Bible study optional. I approve of the three propositions. Christianity has become too formal here specially about our boys schools. The boys unite with the church not because they really believe- but for various reasons. A teacher teaches Bible not because he loves it but because he gets so much a month. We have one teacher tho who is all right- except that he does not know anything about teaching!!! However the boys say of him, "He does not know how to teach but he is a real Christian and his life testifies so truly to the Bible teaching that we can find no fault with him."

The situation is now that the outside students are placarding the streets telling all students not to attend mission schools and calling on all teachers to leave Christian schools. Half the mission schools are open with a few less students than usual. The situation has brought together the teachers of the mission schools into a close compact. At the almost compulsion of this body I spent the day yesterday interviewing the officials. The students of mission schools are meeting tomorrow. I look for all schools to open.

Please let other see this. God is good and we must try to be good.

Very lovingly Will.

[This letter, date October 5, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Phebe K. to her Aunt Mary. Her girls school has opened without trouble from outside students, but the boys school has had some disruption. She had a restful time on Kuliang and looks forward to next year when she goes to the U.S. on furlough and she will be able to see some doctors who may help her with her condition. She and Willard look forward to Ellen's arrival in Foochow. This may be the last letter written by Phebe that we have. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Foochow, China.

October 5, 1925.

Dear Aunt Mary,

This is a quiet Sunday afternoon, the third Sunday of our new term. The girls all went to their respective churches for the service this day as usual and we have heard no word of trouble or of unpleasant occurrences. You see when school opened this fall there was a sort of pall of apprehension over us because of the way that school closed last spring, and we did fear a bit that the Student Union would make it hard for us to open this fall. But apparently their efforts were all reserved for the boys' schools as we have gone on entirely unnoticed by them except for a letter on the first day suggesting to them, the girls that they not attend the classes taught by foreign teachers. Our numbers are about normal for the second term and the spirit of the girls justifies us in feeling that they really want to come here rather than any where else.

Time flies very fast. Today is the 6th, and we have had a long faculty meeting on the pro's and con's of allowing a girl who has failed her algebra for a term or two to have a tutor and make the work up. She happens to be a very bright girl and could do the work if she would try. The faculty was kind and allowed her to have the chance.

During the last week the girls' and boys' schools of the other two missions have been opening and we have heard that they all have somewhere in the neighborhood of 200 or more students. As this is their first time opening this fall we feel very much encouraged that no trouble from student union or from discontent in their own student body is preventing. As a background for this statement let me tell you the history of our A.B.C.F.M. boys' school for the last month.

Father came to Kuliang to bring me down just after the school opened last September. On the afternoon after he came a letter called him down in a hurry as the student union boys were threatening the school and causing the boys to go home after treating all the wells with oil. No violence but inconvenience. The faculty then voted for no evident reason to close till the 26th of Sept. and all that time they had faculty meetings and meetings of the heads of schools every day so they all worked just as hard as if they had had school. On the day that school was to open, no boys gave in their money, but were about the grounds. The faculty then presented to the Bd. of Managers a revised schedule, making nearly all religious education and service elective. It was not passed. The treasury was empty as that school is nearly supported by the Chinese, and the faculty tried it again. This time the station talked on it, and the two foreign members on the Bd. of Managers voted against and the Chinese all for, so the measure was carried. Late the Mission ratified their action by accepting it as an emergency measure.

The boys' schools have been talking about this plan for the last two years so it did not come as a real surprise, and all the other denominations in Foochow are making very much the same change working together with our school. We are only sorry that the change from "compulsory religious education" to "elective" had to come at a time when the boys were actively asking, almost striking for it. The school of the British Anglican Mission has been afraid that it could not open at all because of the feeling against the British, but it too is having about as many as our school. We are all mutually thankful and anxious. The British girls' school has by their latest report 227, for which we are very glad. Isn't it wonderful how we all stand together when there is anything impending? There is a wonderful feeling of comradeship among all nationalities and mission groups here this fall.

The last two weeks have been for our school and household very momentous and happy for three new teachers have come to help us. Miss Elizabeth Cushman is to study the language which she has already begun and made good headway in. Her sister, Mary is a tutor for three years, and is also studying and doing well in the language too. They are a great addition and joy to us as well as the girls. They are so enthusiastic and fine. Miss Maud Hutson is a graduate of the Chefoo China Inland School and has lived all her life in China. She has come for a year to help with tutoring and drill work before she goes home to England for regular normal training. It is something new to have an international family here tho Miss Armstrong of our mission had such a family for her summer this last season. We are enjoying the broadening and entertainment of having a Britisher with us. We all are benefited thereby, and doubtless also the girls. Last night after giving the newcomers a week for settling and another of study and work to get acclimated in, we had a big tea to welcome them and introduce them to our friends. A great shower came just at the time appointed and we did not have the "big" crowd that we expected, but we enjoyed the friends that did come.

In a few weeks there will be two doctors and their wives arrive with Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Ingtau, for Shaowu and Foochow; the doctors I mean. Then some more joyful greetings!

My summer was very restful and happy. We took a few trips, and enjoyed a few of our friends for small parties. Our household was just Father and Miss Hieb our stenographer and me, with Mr. Thelin coming in for meals. Later in the season Miss Hieb's brother came to visit her on the way to India or Ceylon to teach in a mission college. We had a spare room for the first time since I have been there as family from Hongkong did not come, so we had some week-end guests. As part of the yearly excitement, we had two engagements announced, one Miss Hieb's to an English Business man in port, one that of two of the finest British young people in the port. Everyone was so happy about it and even now we are still thrilled to pieces when we see them together. I do enjoy the British people very much here. We have a large number of fine Irish from near Dublin, the finely educated one and their wit surely is rare. There are also some Scots near Amoy who are interestingly impulsive.

Mother is planning to come out this fall in time for Christmas we hope and perhaps for Thanksgiving. After this very wearing and trying fall, it will be a blessing and a joy to Father to have her here to take care of him. Now he is valiantly keeping house for himself, with Mr. Hightower who is tutor in Father's school and is almost a son to him. It is great fun and very amusing to go in and take a meal with them. It is real Baching it. But they have a good cook and have enough good things to eat, so I don't worry.

This letter has been waiting for three days, and there is some news in it that you know already. Your last letter came to Father on the last mail before the one yesterday and we were glad to hear that Nancy seemed not to have any evident trouble. Uncle Stanley has had his share of trouble this year! And this summer has brought you at the Farm quite a bit too. It is good to hear of your having a car again, and I hope by the time another letter comes you will have brought Grandpa out from the hospital. It is wonderful how he has come thru this illness.

We haven't had for a long time so many people writing to the Farm as this summer with the girls there and all. It has been good to hear. Your letter written in May and only now being answered sounded so good, telling of canning and cleaning etc. What a coincidence that you should have met Helen Carter Brinsmaid! What did you think of her? I rather liked her, but always had the feeling of never getting really into her consciousness. She is evidently a brilliant girl and has married as brilliantly. I do hope she is happy and well. Did Cleora tell you that she gave Martha Fenn a Lacquer vase for a shower gift and included my name as part giver? Wasn't that nice? She has been not very well all summer and was with the Newells in at Shansi to go round by Europe with me if her mother can come East to Michigan - - - EAST to Michigan!! - - - to meet her. I do so hope she can do so for we could have such a good time. Second class French line they say is very comfortable and cheap, and the Christians did the trip rather fully and comfortably on about 8 hundred dollars more than the Board gives for travelling home anyway. We'll have to see tho. Mrs. Christian is now our Mission Treasurer. They are both looking very well and are in as good spirits as ever.

We, Father and I did so much reminiscing about that summer when you were with us that I fear it was burdensome to the people who were with us. But our family was sort of funny and disjointed this summer. We always seem to be able to get the ends of the community, and this year we had our stenographer who is a Y.M.C.A. sec'y's daughter from Ceylon, but you'd never know it. She said many times before we went to Kuliang that she just couldn't talk to Mr. Thelin who was a boarder with us, and she did treat him rather rudely at times. She seemed afraid of Father for some reason as she was treasurer in the part of posting the books, and screamed everything she had to say to any of us all the time. Then she was getting engaged to this Eurasian man of the community set which went against all the feelings of the mission and we were all upset feeling our responsibility for her yet having no power or influence to help her change things. At last her brother came on his way to Ceylon and she announced her betrothal. He seemed to feel there was no benefit in hindering matters, so it is going to completion in November. People are so interesting and so funny!!!

This fall I came down a day before I planned to as Elizabeth was coming back from the North so late she couldn't get the school and the house fixed before the 17. So I had the fun and satisfaction of doing that which has always been done by Eunice Thomas or Miss Perkins before. It was rather arduous work but so pleasant to feel that I could be useful about the house. I have kept that part of the work and arrange the flowers too so am having a very satisfying year with domestic duties too. Our Pawtucket contingent is very charming, musical, enthusiastic and willing. I fear it is a bit hard on Elizabeth because the rest of us are younger and she feels it more than most people would. My strength left me completely during the second week down from the hill, the week that school was opening and that the girls came from Shanghai. But by careful resting and early retiring I am now back to where I can do normal work and still keep going. I shall be so glad to get to America where I can see some doctors and find out what I can do to set me right.

I have sent you the things you asked for some time ago. I am sorry they were so late, but I could not get the man who sells bamboo knives tho I sent many times for him. If he does not happen to be in town it is impossible to get him as he lives out on the plain. Here is a list of the things and prices:

I am sorry there was so much bad planning that I could not bring it out as neatly as you did my bill for the beads!!!. Don't mind this. Can I bring anything home for you? I am having lots of sport getting parasols and sending them to Eunice Smith this year four dozen of them before XMAS.

Eunice Thomas is having treatments for her paralyzed arm by an osteopath, supplemented by soaking in very hot water for long periods and then baking in the sun. Her back had two vertebrae crushed so she is having a brace made by a German doctor which she will have to wear for several months before she can come back tho she wants to come by next February. We shall have to wait and see. She has been very cheerful and brave but the long time is rather discouraging to look forward to.

I am reading Two Years Before the Mast now and am enjoying it hugely. They style is a bit even and soothing as compare to the prancing jerky novels of the present, but it is good reading and so interesting to see what the coast looked like so many years ago. This summer I enjoyed Miss Follette's The New State the first part. Mr. Beach had to have it for the University this fall and I could not finish it so that pleasure waits me. I like her idea but I think it is far in the future for actual working out even on the mission field to say nothing of putting it into practice among all the citizens of any other country.

We are eagerly looking for Mother for the girls seem now to feel well protected with Jerry and Aunt Etta there.

Bath time and bed time so good night. Best wishes for a good year and better health to all of you. Tell Aunt Phebe my dress is a stunner, and I have a hat to go with it that the tailor made and one lady has copied it already. I am swollen [the rest of the letter is handwritten] with pride. People seemed to like my clothes this summer so well they remarked about them and nearly all were old, at least I'd had the goods for years. Very much love to all,

Phebe K.

[This letter, dated Oct. 18, 1925, was possibly written from Easton, Pennsylvania by Gould to his mother. He thanks Ellen for being so loving when she met Vivienne. He has ordered Vivienne's ring. He wishes Ellen a smooth ride to China on a large boat. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Sunday Oct. 18, 1925

Dear Mother Mine:

Your new sweet daughter to be has just made you a visit and Geraldine has told me that you were all very happily taken to her. Vivienne wrote me a long letter telling just how glad she was to be the sister of so many dear sisters and the daughter of such a loving Mother. I wish I could have been there to enjoy the gathering also.

Mr. MacCormack has sent me a sample of just the ring that Vivienne wants, the setting and the design are as near what she has pointed out to me as I could hope to find. The best thing about it is that it is all first quality from the metal to the diamond and emeralds. She wanted her birthstone incorporated also.

To date I have been trying to get together sufficient clothes and get my old ones repaired to a wearable state so that I hav'nt saved much money. I have just changed boarding houses at a saving of $2 a week and more food and if anything better food. The only difference is that there are paper napkins instead of linen napkins and we each do not have our assigned seats.

I am packing a box to send to China for Father's and Phebe's Xmas presents. What would you suggest that Father might need? I have thought of several things, but had an idea that you might think of more.

You will plan to spend one night at least with me won't you? Come any time for I can arrange to take time off without any inconvenience whatever.

Is the vessel you are going on a large one? I hope it is so that you won't have a rough voyage. Really there isn't much excuse in getting seasick and worn out on the little tubs nowadays when the larger ships are so much steadier.

My love to you Mother and a heartfelt hug and kiss for taking my Sweetheart into your heart so warmly,

Your loving son,

Gould.

[This letter, dated October 13, 1925, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to his father. It is optional for the boys to go to Sunday School or Bible study. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

Oct. 13, 1925.

Dear Father:-

This is only a brief letter. The main business in it is to ask some of you to phone Fred Peck so he may send a pair of glasses to Ellen or to some place for her so she can bring them to me. I do not know where she may be when this gets there so I have written Fred that you would let him know. It may be you will just tell him to send them to you and you will get them to her,- any way so long as she gets them.

It is most too good to be true- as some people used to say- that Ellen is really planning, and enthusiastically, to come out this fall. Her last letter assured me she would get my vest pocket diary here in time to use Jan. 1, 1926.

School has opened and for six days has been running quietly. Last week Tuesday night kerosene was again poured into the well. Thursday morning just before the boys had finished breakfast six outside boys came to the door. Two stood in the door while four pushed by the gateman, kicking him and breaking the skin on his back, went into the dining room pushed over three tables, breaking the dishes and turning the food on the floor. Then they made their escape.

I'm getting disgusted with both teachers and students of the mission schools. When these boys came in every body runs to hide as young partridges when a hawk is sighted. I told some of the teachers that if 6 boys rough housed like that in America the 100+ boys inside would have pounded them till every square inch on their bodies was black and blue. To make it more disgusting, no one wants to find out who they are, lest the police arrest them.

This has been a unique evening to me. Mr. Hightower was out for supper, so I was alone, and I have been alone all the evening- except for the postman. I would not have it so always tho. It is best to feel that people want you- that they want to see you and want your help. The past month has been a little too stiff tho for me. There have been several committee meetings and meetings of Board's of Managers and some of them have been long. I did not get home till after midnight and most of them were in Chinese and I was chairman of most of them. This made it doubly hard work. But school has been running now for a week. We have 325 boys,- more than any other school, and the spirit is good as far as I can see. We have added a course in ethics to parallel the course in Bible, and we have a lecture Sunday morning at the same time as church service. The boys may go to either as they prefer. Sunday school and C.E. are optional. We have changed the program for daily chapel. In my opinion the effect of the changes will bring better results for the Kingdom than the old method of everything compulsory. Yet four or five of the members of the mission feel very badly. The expression they use is, "These poor heathen boys are not to have an opportunity to hear the Gospel or to study the Bible." I have not looked into all the classes. But the seniors have largely elected Bible- the same course as I have been giving for 6 or 7 years. The parallel course is given by Mr. Leger in "The Philosophy of Life"- One is as much Christian as the other. A very sad occurrence is that Mr. and Mrs. Christian are just back from furlough. He has been in charge of the Higher Primary- the first four years of Foochow College. I fully expected him to take his former position, and so told the Deans. But when they made up the schedule his name was not among the teachers. I spoke of the omission and they simply said, "No." They have not yet told me why. Both Mr. and Mrs. Christian are very conservative in theology and very autocratic in administration. If Mr. Christian had been on the teaching staff and the elective Bible Study and S.S. and Y.P.S.E. had been adopted just the same he would have resigned. The whole thing is sad. All the mission except the Christians, Kinnears and Miss Worley and Hartwell are bound to have the new plan. I have had to stand against its adoption for a long time. I heartily approve of it now.

A new pair of fine suspenders and 12 new semi-stiff collars arrived today from Gould. I know he is in Phillipsburg, Pa. in some manufacturing plant.

I want to send most hearty congratulations to you on the success of your operation. The Chinese listen with open eyes when I tell them of it and then tell them your age.

With lots of love to all

Will

[to Marjorie]

[Late Oct., 1925]

...down with incessant screeching and jumping and gesticulating as some girls do whom I have seen. An occasional enthusiastic cheer or shout, well-timed and well-placed means so much more, and recommends the performer as possessing so much more common sense and poise than does that continuous, idiotic, uncontrolled squealing! Be very careful in crossing those traffic congested streets, watch out; and take time to go safely. Watch the signals and obey them, and always. Don't every take any risk; especially watch for coming vehicles when passing in front of or behind a trolley or auto which hides your view of what's coming. A very happy day to you! Is Kathleen going too? If so share this with her, please. But I never need to tell my generous Marjorie to do that! I hope you'll have a good clear day too. What fine warm days we are having now!

Yesterday we all went to Monson to see Cousins Bertha Corbin Webster [Ellen's first cousin] and her husband Robert and adopted daughter Marguerite. Starting at 8:45, we made a call on an old couple we used to know in Union; they used to sit right in front of us at church from my earliest remembrance of attending church and their children were in our S.S. Class, but went to another school in the town so we did not meet them often during the week. They had six children, 4 girls and 2 boys, and all are gone, years ago, none of them having ever married. Mrs. Booth said they passed their 59th wedding anniversary last Friday Oct. 21st; she is 80 and her husband is 82 yrs old. They are very vigorous and well preserved and live alone and take care of themselves. Mr. Booth has a malignant growth on his nose and is a little deaf but otherwise they do not look over 70. We arrived at Bertha's at about eleven o'clock and found her entertaining a friend whom Emma and I have heard spoken of ever since we could remember but had never met and whose old home we rode by only last week on one of our drives thru Union. Wednesday was Marguerite's afternoon off so we had the pleasure of seeing her. She is a dentist's assistant. Bertha said that they were sorry not to attend the wedding but it seemed a long journey. On our way home we called on Elizabeth Barnes but did not see her husband or daughter as both were out for the evening, the former to select men's meeting of which he is chairman, and the latter to play cards with a group of friends. - The drive thru the country was beautiful altho the foliage is a little past its prime and was not so fine this year, at its best, as it is sometimes.

You will be surprised to hear that Ella Corbin Arnold [Ellen's first cousin] whom you and Kathleen visited at Providence on your visit her last summer, is very near close of her life here. She has an internal cancer for which she has been treating for about a year. About a month ago she went to the hospital to have the abdomen opened and the radiation "seeds" put directly into the growth, a treatment we understand, which has never before been tried on a human being but has been tried on animals. They were left in the growth and the abdomen left open from Friday to Monday, then they were removed and the abdomen sewed up. A few days after that when we were on our way home from the Brocton (Mass.) Fair, we stopped at the hospital at about 9 o'clock in the evening to see her. We had made an appointment with Howard and Martha on our way thru Providence that morning at 7 o'clock, to call on our way back at about 8 o'clock. But we were a little later than we expected and altho it still lacked 7 minutes of nine the nurse in charge did not want to admit us. We came up the walk with two ladies who told us we could go in if our friend was on the danger list; they were going to see the baby of one of the two who was on the danger list. So they told us to walk right in with them and ask at the desk where our friend was then take the elevator to that floor and walk right in. This procedure all went smoothly till we reached the fifth floor and were looking for the room when her nurse met us in the hall and on being told of our errand, said it was too late, - they did not admit visitors after 9 o'clock. Elbert said "But we have driven 30 miles to see her and she is on the danger list." The nurse then consulted with another nurse and they decided to let us in if we would not stay but a few minutes. She went ahead of us and turned on the light. Ella was awake and was glad to see us. We had been talking with her about two minutes when the nurse came in and said "I shall have to turn off this light for the superintendent (lady nurse) is on this floor and if she sees this light on she may find you're in here and that will be bad for me for letting you in. And please, don't talk loudly. "I'll come for you when she's gone." So she turned the light out and went out and shut the door leaving us all in darkness and quiet. It was a strange and sneaky situation which I did not like and sincerely hoped would come out all right for us as well as Ella and the nurse. But we visited in whispers about 8 or 9 minutes, then the nurse came in and turned on the light and said the superintendent had gone and we could go out which we did at once, thankfully, having been inside just 12 minutes.

Ella tho't she was improving then, but four or five days ago we heard she was not as well, the nausea had returned, could not retain food, one kidney had ceased functioning resulting in urinic poisoning. She had come home from the hospital at one hour's notice (to Howard and Martha) at her own request; yesterday we received a letter from Martha saying they have a trained nurse caring for her (her cousin, one of Hattie Hache's daughters) is failing rapidly, seems only partly conscious at times, suffers almost no pain, is very weak; the Dr. says she will hold out only a month at most and may slip away at any time. Little Mary, her grand daughter was 2 years old yesterday. Please let Etta read this part of the letter as she'll be interested.

Very, very much love to both you and Kathleen with whom you'll share this letter. Mother remembers you prayerfully many times a day altho she writes none too often. Another soon. Affectionately, Mother.

Oct. 25- 1925

Dear Mary:-

It was very nice to get Father's good, long, newsy, optimistic letter Oct. 17. Perhaps I should thank his operations for the letter, for if he had been about his usual tasks he surely would not have had time to write. The photos were most interesting- that came- of Dan and Dorothy. Dot does not grow thin and Dan is a regular husky. Those muscles stand out in fine style. The new car is spiffy.

We are enjoying very fine weather- cool- very cool mornings and evenings- but warm in the middle of the day. This morning ther. at 60 degrees. It is not good for gardens tho. The sun every day bakes the ground too hard for the young plants. My brag this year is on my poultry. I raised 18 chickens from 22 eggs- 18 hatched and all grew up. I have said since July. One Rhode Island Red rooster $3.00 three young roosters $4.50- three that the dogs killed $3.00 three old hens $6.00. 1 hen $1.00. I have promised 2 more old hens and 2 pullets $8.00 and 1 young rooster $1.50. That makes $27- enough to feed them for a long time. I shall then have left 1 fine 4 year old Wh. Leghorn rooster, 4 old hens and eight pullets. The pullets have just begun to lay. I cannot get a rooster for that Tungcho man. I am seriously considering asking Ellen to bring out a setting of Rh. I. Red eggs. It's bed time so good night.

Monday morning:

I am enclosing two orders on the Derby Savings Bank for $50.00 each. I think I must have at least $50.00 there. If so please send or give Ellen the money. She may need it. I should have done this before. It may be too late- if so please tear up the orders. I send two $52.00. If there is not $100, just get $50.00.

Just after I wrote the above a letter came from Dr. Strong of Boston in which he says Ellen has written asking for a sailing about Nov. 15. If she starts then you will surely tear up the orders- I hope you do.

Is it the $10,000.00 for the Huntington parsonage fire. I do not know who Mr. Russ is but he must have some good in him. The National Council of Congregational Churches in Washington closes tomorrow. I hope the Congregationalists had their hopes for the meeting fulfilled. Tell Father I think his comments of the probability of less receipts for missions in foreign lands are well taken. I have been looking for this. The attitude of Chinese students will certainly lead many to turn their gifts elsewhere. But the fact remains that China never needed the right kind of missionaries as much as she needs them today- the kind that live Christian lives in which they express Jesus as they live. And again the Chinese Christians are able to take care of their own work and they will do it as soon as the missionaries will allow them to take the responsibility for the work.

I must not write more- I'll get to bed. Again I want to thank you and Phebe M. for writing in every mail while Father was in the hospital.

Very Lovingly
Will

Easton, Pa.
Nov. 9, 1925.

Dearest Mother:

The time has gone so rapidly and I have been so busy these past weeks that I hardly realize this it is so near your sailing date.

The visit you made me was just as I would have wanted it. We had the privacy and the time to talk over the things close to our hearts. You will be able to give Father and Phebe first hand information of Vivienne and me.

Mother, although I hate to have you so far away, I am glad you are going, for if Father wants you close to him as I want Vivienne close to me, then it will make him supremely happy. I am glad it will be as an Xmas present to him.

Mr. McCormack has written me that Vivienne's ring is ready. He evidently has put much personal effort into it to make it a good one. He had it made special and has put the very best diamond procurable in it for the price. He says it is a very pretty ring with the six emeralds in it.

You must have had a very pleasant trip up thru Conn. to see all the people once more. I hope you will find time either on the steamer or before to tell me all about it. I bought Father's Xmas present yesterday. I got him a wool ???, two pr. socks and a necktie like that I wore when you were here but of a different pattern. Vivienne also wanted to give toward it so that is why it is so big. She is also going in with me on all of the presents for the family. We thought it better to go in together and get something good than to get two small things no so serviceable.

Hoping that Friday the 13th will not bring you any but the best of weather to start off on –

Your only son sends you all his love- Gould

Foochow Nov. 12, 1925

Dear Children:-

This is Thursday evening, 9 o'clock. Phebe has had another good day. I have spent a good bit of time with her- an hour this afternoon at one stretch. I was just over to see her to kiss her good night. The nurse said she was asleep. So I stood there and was just turning to go she turned partly over and I went up and kissed her and she was not fast asleep. She talked all right today. She asked me this morning how long she has been here in the hospital and how she came to be here, and how she did = what happened to her. You see it's all a blank to her from the time she went into the first convulsion till she found herself in bed in the hospital. She finds it hard to keep track of the days.

You will let Aunt Etta and her family know all about Phebe. I will write Shelton and Aunt Emma and Uncle Elbert tomorrow if possible. The last three days have been very full for me and I have not been up to par myself physically so I have only written you children thus far and I cannot write dear Mama. I am glad she will not know it till she reaches Shanghai for it would be a burden for her to carry all across the ocean. Good night with love- Father

Saturday a.m. Nov. 14 9 O'clock

I did not write yesterday. Phebe showed no change. I got a chance to sit a whole hour with her and read to her. In the evening I saw her twice and just before going to bed I asked her to choose a Bible passage she would like me to read. She said that she had recently liked to 84th Psalm. It chanced that I had just finished committing that Ps. So after this we had a prayer and said good night. I have been down twice this a.m. At 6:30 she was asleep but I found her awake at 8:00 about the same.

9:45 p.m. Phebe is about as she has been for three days. She says her vision is a little improved. I had a wedding this afternoon that I had promised nearly two weeks ago to officiate at. It was at 5 p.m. on the invitation. The Am. Consul and his wife were there and Mr. and Mrs. Munson of the Y.W.C.A. and a lot of big business men. The bridegroom is one of the leading men in the Electric Light Co. and American returned student. But it was 4:30 before they were ready for the wedding. I simply had to wait altho I felt it was almost stealing my time from Phebe. I had only a few minutes with her before supper-just as I came away I met Mr. Hightower and Dr. Neil Lewis coming in from their hike to the flower village with their hands full of chrysanthemums and marigolds. How delighted Phebe was!!

Last Tuesday night we all feared she would not last the night thru. The doctor told me today there was very little doubt that she would live to see Mama and probably live a few years but would not be able to do any more work. I am almost scared to write such words. But I know how I want to hear all the truth when any of my own are ill at home. This evening I have spent with her and I read to her a long time. It is touching to see how everyone- Chinese and foreigners are solicitous for her welfare- The clock has struck ten so I must say good night. I had another good prayer with Phebe after the 19th Ps. And then I gave her a good rubbing- neck, arms, back and breast and kissed her good night.- God will do all things well.

Lovingly Father

Sunday 8 p.m. I have spent much time with Phebe today- reading and talking and rubbing her. She gets very tired lying in bed and it eases her much to be rubbed. How thankful I am that I am here with her. I'll pause and say good night to her now. 9 p.m. I have just been over and given Phebe a rub, had a prayer with her and heard her say,-

"My head is much clearer tonight." She has not slept well the last two nights- slept too much in the day perhaps. I hope she will rest better tonight.

I have written Shelton and Putnam and am depending on you to keep Aunt Etta informed. Once or twice today Phebe has remarked, "How nice it will be to have Mama here." We suppose she left San Francisco yesterday Nov. 14 on the President Taft. Good night- with love, Father.

Monday Nov. 16-

2 p.m. Phebe did not rest well last night but other things are more encouraging. She is sleeping nicely now- I will mail this and begin another diary.

Very lovingly Father

[This letter dated Nov. 14, 1925 was written just out of Toledo, Ohio by Ellen to her dearest Girlies (Marjorie and Kathleen). She talks about her trip so far and gives Marjorie and Kathleen a list of tasks that need to be taken care of. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

2:20 A.M.

Just out of Toledo

[Nov 14, 1925]

My dearest Girlies,

Always shall I carry in mind the three faces that looked up at me from the station platform (and especially my "baby's") and the voice that I heard over the phone that I could not embrace, or kiss, or see.

So tense was I from the physical and mental strain of the day and from the restraint due to the outsiders in our family group that the tears that were aching to come, couldn't get out. When I was relaxed, and let down a bit, they "let down" too. I've had my tears all by myself in several installments. The real sensing of the separation is coming with the leisure to think about it. As Marjorie expressed it in other words and from her own viewpoint, my children will never need me again, as children. The great break which most girls make gradually, M. and K. have now made suddenly as the older children did nine years ago. I shall have to think of all my children now as independent man and women, and that I have no child dependent on me with a child's dependence. That is some change for a mother, and it doesn't make me any happier. But in that state of affairs, Papa and I will have to reverse the course of age and set ourselves to growing younger by devoting ourselves to each other and practicing honey moon days again, not to become "old fools", but young people. There are some things that I want you to do and write me about at once, numbering your answers by my notation.

1st Pay Hope, Severy and Sage

2nd Did Geraldine pay for the pears?

3. Pay my taxi and trunk bill. (It should not be over $1.50)

4. Pay the express on trunk to Putnam.

5. Pay the freight on boxes to Boston.

6. Pay the church pledge, Marjorie. Did you lose that $5.00 bill?

7. Pay next months rent. Did you?

8. Return keys to Miss Little as soon as you can get those things in place.

9. Careful don't fall on those stairs and don't drop keys behind stairs. Always take time to be careful in that barn.

10. I think there are two pkgs. of cans of fruit (small) in the large box under Kathleen's trunk. These, and the cans up stairs should be moved over to your cellar before freezing weather or they will spoil. Get Myron to help you lift the trunk around and Stewart to draw them home on his cart. Take the cans out one by one up stairs and pass them down to some one. One up stairs, one down by side of stairs on floor- one on the stairs will make the passing chain that will work safer than one or two people trying to do it on those stairs. Do, do be careful on those stairs. Don't ever try to carry heavy things down those stairs. Don't try to get that heavy box of jars down bodily. It sits on the floor with my things up stairs. Eat the fruit all up this year. For breakfasts when you take nothing but fruit or for supper with cake only or a simple soup with it; but keep combinations straight. By the way, when Gould and Vivienne are up for Christmas ask them if they will not take Gould's service flag that Putnam church gave us down to Vivienne's to keep for him till they are married. It is rolled up in newspaper upstairs in the barn. Should have clean paper on if they take it.

11. There should be some mothballs put in the trunk in which Geraldine's nice brown suit coat is and newspapers spread on top before the cover is shut down. The fur coat is in that trunk.
12. I left a few things in the bottom of the cupboard in the cellar of Miss Wright's house as I had no basket to take them in. All the things on the second and third shelves from the bottom are mine. None of the stuff above is mine. The can of maple syrup is yours.
13. Marjorie won't you take a market basket and go over after them as soon as you get this. The enameled saucer belongs at 263 Elm St. up stairs. I left my galvanized iron mop pail there when I left, and intended to take the saucer back when I went for the pail. Can you go to the back door there and ask Mrs. DeGraff if you may go up stairs and look for a pail your mother left there and incidentally you can return the saucer. Tell her first who you are and that you used to live there. Put the saucer on the kitchen dish shelves. Wash it first.

The square maple syrup can on the shelves of the cupboard in Miss Wright's cellar you can put on top of the barrel of old cans under our formerly cellar stairs if you don't want it.

Now I want to tell you about the radio. I did not take that to barn as I thought it best not to move it twice. In picking up the things in Miss Wright's attic I placed the radio on the floor, just to the left as you go up the stairs about 5 ft. away from the head of the stairs. Most of it is in the tall slender carton; the wire is in the flat round parcel and the rest of it is in that small square box in Tank barn up stairs, that I told Marjorie about. If you decide to put up the radio have it done right away so as to get all the use of it you can. The work will cost $3.00 if Mr. Perryman on So. Cedar St. does the work. You may have to buy new batteries which cost 60 cents each and it needs four. But let Mr. Perryman test them (old ones) out before you buy new ones. The square box (small) of it contains the bulbs must be handled carefully. It must not be dropped. I put two corrugated pasteboard boxes together with the radio which I thought might prove useful in sending things by mail. Also there were 4 or five others which I threw out in the center of the attic about 4 or 5 feet away from the radio. If you want them saved for possible use, ask Miss Wright if you may stack them up in a corner of her attic. Put papers under and over them as they will get awfully dusty. And when you take them out, don't get them against your coats unless you wipe them carefully as they will be somewhat dusty. Anything you do not use of the boxes burn up in (our side) Miss Wright's furnace. Her side (furnace) is too full to open easily. Please just look thru the pile of newspapers that is farthest to the north and see if there is anything in it that we want to save. I did not have time to look them over but looked over all the rest of the papers in the attic and told Miss Wright that she might have her boy take them down stairs for her on the next collection day.= 1st Tuesday in Dec. but in the North pile I did not know but there might be some thing in it that we would want to save. Alas to have to throw away all those good things in the Ladies Home Journal and the Christian Herald! Marjorie, do you remember that piece in the Ladies Home Jour. some months ago about "Has the Holy Grail really been found?" If you come across that number of the L.H.J. while you are up in Miss Wright's attic, will you save it? That will be of lasting interest.

Now before I close, I must tell you a little of my travels thus far. Nothing particular happened on the journey from Oberlin to Chicago. I changed at Toledo and got a Chicago train.

I slept some and had plenty of room. When I reached Chicago, I went out to breakfast then to the Board rooms and saw Mr. English our Board secretary; and then to Montgomery Ward's but found nothing I wanted; and O, how it rained, all day! I put my rubbers in my trunk by mistake instead of my suitcase so I bought another pair. It took so long to get around in the rain on the cars to find places that I accomplished almost nothing of what I had planned in Chicago. So I went back to the station, bought my ticket for Geneseo, rechecked my baggage, took up my bag from parcel room and made my train. It was a bit crowded in the day coach but I slept from sheer wearing (during my ride) and loss of sleep the night before. Reaching Geneseo at 8 P.M. I called up Addie. Carl answered and I told him I would come up in a taxi at 50 cents to which he consented. So I found them well and glad to see me about 20 minutes later.

I will write you again after I leave Addie's. I have to take the whole morning service in the Presbyterian church tomorrow morning and the evening service in Mr. Brewer's church. Some day for me! Will write you about it.

Muchest love,
Ellen.

[According to the Oberlin archives the provenance of their Beard holdings is as such:

"The papers of Willard Livingstone Beard were discovered in Tank Hall by the matron, Mrs. Packard, who gave them to Mrs. Katrine M. Baxley, the matron of Keep Cottage. Mrs. Baxley donated the papers to the College Archives on June 22, 1973." These papers are described as follows: "The Willard Livingstone Beard Papers consists primarily of letters (1910-1925) between the Willard and Ellen Beard and their children. Of special interest are the twenty letters written by Willard L. Beard and his daughter, Phebe, from Foochow, China (1921-23), some of which tell of the struggle between factions of the Chinese to gain control of the area. A letter from Myron Gould Beard to "Dearest Sister Dot" (Dorothy), dated June 29, 1920, is an account of his visit to Bahia Blanca, Argentina while on board the ship Mt. Baker. In addition to correspondence, there are photographs of the family, Japan and China, as well as some printed and homemade materials regarding the Beard children's high school days and church activities in Oberlin."

In the above letter dated November 14, 1925 written by Ellen, she refers to taking items to "Tank barn". I believe the papers of Willard Livingstone Beard were some of those items and that is how Oberlin came into possession of them.]

American Board Mission
Foochow, China
November, 14th. 1925.

Dear Folks in Shelton and in Putnam,-

You will I know forgive me for writing you in this way. I can do it and get a letter direct to you both.

I might not be able to get two letters written in time for the mail.

For nearly a year now we have known that Phebe had Nephritis. The doctor said that she might go on with her work for many years, if she was careful. She understood and has been very careful in diet and in not getting wet and (not as careful in not overdoing). She has seemed to have an exaggerated sense of responsibility for making up that six months that she lost a year ago last summer when she had to give up for a term. I think she has carried more work than she ought to have done. Three weeks ago she began to puff up about the face and feet. Then her eyes were affected and she was unable to see to do her work. But she was determined to keep at it and some of her teaching she did not have to depend entirely on her eyes. Last Tuesday she did not get up in the morning, and about nine o'clock she sent word that she could not take her classes. After lunch Miss Holton went in and sat on the bed and chatted with her for a time and Phebe said she did not feel very well. Shortly after Miss Holton left, Phebe called and Miss Perkins went in just in time to see her go into a convulsion. They at once sent for Dr. Dyer. She was there in less than 45 min. Phebe had another convulsion while Dr. Dyer was there. Dr. Dyer at once said take her to the Woman's Hospital in the city, right next to our compound here. I heard of it in time to meet them about one third of the way in. Phebe recognized me as I came beside the cot on which she was being borne by four men.. I knew she recognized me by the sweet smile she gave me. I held her hand all the way in. Very fortunately she had no convulsion on the way. Dr. Dyer walked by her also fearing another, but after we had her in bed, she had three before 9 p.m. She has had no more.

I am spending all the time I am not definitely on some work, with Phebe. The next day, Wednesday she recognized me and spoke to me, while I was talking with Miss Atwood the nurse, way the other side of the room, we thought she was asleep. She is of course very sore from the strain of the convulsions. She is very tired also. She talks rationally but not normally for she cannot remember what came before she was taken so suddenly. She enjoys having me read to her. I expect to improve my ability to read aloud. This morning I have just read her the picture of Washington D.C. that was written for the Congregationalist for the National Council Number. She enjoyed it much.

What of the future? The doctors say that her active missionary work is over. She will likely rally from this attack and may live as an invalid for some years. I am so glad that Ellen is on her way out. It may be that we will live together here enjoying her while God lends her to us.

How thankful I am that I am here to be with her. We have been such a great help to each other these four years. She does not know anything about the convulsions and does not know why she is so lame. She is comfortable and not in pain - - only weak and tired. She sleeps much. She has three girls that were her pupils in Wenshan as nurses. One is with her all the time. She enjoys them and they are proud to be trusted with her. Sunday Nov. 9 p.m. I have been with Phebe nearly all day – read the last Congregationalist all thru to her = The Nat'l Council Number Oct. 8. She is brighter to night and gaps as if she would sleep well. God will do all things well- Lovingly Will.

Nov. 21, 1925

Dear Geraldine, Marjorie and Kathleen,

It has been some four or five days since I have written. But there has been no mail out. It is a very great pleasure to write that Phebe has improved steadily, howbeit slowly since I wrote last. To her diet of 5 glasses of milk she has ordered 2 glasses of grape juice a day, which makes her very proud. At 7:55 p.m. she is just taking her supper of a full glass of milk. She takes it thru a glass tube. Last night she had her best nights rest yet, - from 11 p.m. to 8:30 a.m. Her sight is improving some, yesterday afternoon I was over South Side and bo't a new felt hat. I wore it up stairs and into Phebe's room and standing at the foot of her bed she told me I had a new hat. She also read the mark on her pillow case MOHAWK letters about that size day before yesterday. The albumin in her urine is very much decreased and her blood pressure is down- all these are good symptoms and make the doctor and myself feel very good- not to mention Phebe herself.

Phebe's room is a bower of flowers- chrysanthemums predominate- some dahlias- (Phebe had to tell me how to spell it)- marigolds, roses and poinsettias.- I am writing this in her room. She has just finished dictating a letter to mama which she lay on, some days ago. I find it possible to get up to see her four times a day- and she saw Miss Perkins for 10 minutes- the first visitor since she has been here.

It is too soon to say much of the future, but Phebe has just asked me for the 11th time and I have told her that we hope she will be able to be moved over to our home when mama arrives and live with us there. We will not plan further now.

Life is a little strenuous now with Annual Meeting on- trying to meet my classes- attend extra comm. meetings and see Phebe 4 times a day. This evening is the C.E. meeting. I am skipping it to be with Phebe.

We have had a very nice sky but copious rain for four days. It has been good for gardens and the wheat.

I am sending this in duplicate to Dorothy and Gould in Putnam and Shelton.

You will forgive me for not writing more. The great big good news of Phebe's improvement is the important thing.

The letter from Mama sent fr. Washington via Air Service simply said she hoped to start yesterday Nov 21 on the Pres. Van Buren- so you see we cannot send a letter to meet her yet.

Very lovingly
Father

Phebe having finished her supper, sat up alone and is brushing her teeth alone.

[Probably written to Marjorie and Kathleen]

.....with some new ones every day. There are at least two other missionaries on board besides myself. I have written of the Episcopal nurse. The other is at the head of day school work in India, a Methodist Lady. Look at the marks all over these two pages where I have fallen asleep while writing. Think I'll go to bed as it is 9:30. We have to set our watches back from 17 to 24 min. a day according to distance run till we reach the 180 degree meridian when we drop a day.- There is also a Minister Rev. Hutton and wife and little girl on board, missionaries to India. There may be others but I have not found them yet. - We have radio report bulletins for our morning newspaper every day and read all about the burial of Queen Mother Alexandra yesterday and the fall of the French cabinet with Painleve's resignation today. Even get that disgraceful Rhinelander trial in brief; and the Mitchel trial today. We had no service on Sunday as the Capt. had so much business incident to the initial moves of the voyage he did not have time to plan for it. Some of us are going to try to plan for a Thanksgiving service for Thursday. I hope you go to the one in Oberlin, even tho I am not there to urge you to go. That sort of thing will be one test of whether you are ready to get along without me. I think you rather failed that test once or twice already according to your letters when you slept till 10 min. of 9 and did not try to get to that very important service of very great privilege, at all, and then missed seeing a hundreds + people join the church among whom were your own relatives, in order to make up for what you had missed by your inertia. I know you were tired but you could have taken naps after dinner to make up lost sleep and pulled yourselves out by will power in the morning. If you are going to miss out, on these most important things of life now, when you have only yourself to look out for how much easier it will be to drop your church school attendance, church attendance, and attendance on worthwhile lectures, institutes and conventions when you get a husband, a home and a family to care for. Please, girlies dear, keep that end of life up; don't let it sag. It is hard enough even with our best efforts to do even moderately well at it; while it is our bounden duty to ourselves, to the church, to society and to God to do our level best at it. If you let it go with only the fagged ends of your attention and effort now encumbered, it will be entirely lost in the maze and whirl of multifarious demands of maturer responsible years. You ought to set your alarm clock every Saturday night for 8:15 so that you can get all the rest possible with out the danger or anxiety of oversleeping and being late for S.S. I left the clock for you for that very purpose. And you ought to always set it for 7 o'cl every morning that you do not need to get up earlier to study; so that you will never oversleep.

Please write me every Sunday, at least one of you, and as many more of you as will (or Papa or to Phebe) telling me all the things I want to know; whether Kathleen has come again; whether Marjorie has come again yet; how Geraldine is as to her head, and how she is getting along with her French her reading and her thesis; how does the house-keeping go; don't let that canned fruit freeze in the barn; it is in one box up stairs, -take it out one by one to hand it down stairs, don't try to take the box down bodily; and the other is in the big box down stairs under Kathleen's trunk unless you have moved either it or the trunk. Eat the large cans of fruit first as I may plan to send for some of the smallest ½ pt. cans yet I think not but will let you know before Mar. 1st so you can eat it before the spring fruit comes in. Always two go to the barn together and always take time to be careful on those stairs and in shutting down the door. How long after I went did you return the keys? Did you lose them? Did Marjorie lose that $5 bill I gave her to pay Mrs. Hart my pledge to the church for the rest of the year? Is it paid? How much was it?

Send all my letters except these last two pages of personal talk to Dorothy and Dorothy to Gould promptly as you can, jotting down in a note book anything you want to answer.

...and it is a mistake. I infer some one tried to send me a pair of binoculars or something and the addresses got mixed up. To page 10.

En Route
San Francisco to Honolulu,
Nov. 25", '25.

Dear Etta,

Your good letter was awaiting me as I came aboard the steamer an hour before sailing.

The auto you saw us entering was Mr. Lobingier's who very kindly offered to take us to the station in his car. Mrs. Harding was also at the station to see us off.

That was a very difficult parting and one that I would fair have deferred indefinitely. It meant to us all far more than it is possible to express in language. Our feature, in the way of compensation, connected with this home-leaving was that it was also a home-going. This is seldom an attendant circumstance of breaking the immediate family outside missionary circles and not very frequent in them.

I found a very rainy day in which to transact business in Chicago and after visiting our Board offices and a few stores. I gave up the unpleasant task and took the train for Geneseo arriving about 8 P.M. A taxi brought me to Addie's in a few minutes over a good state road which they have been enjoying for about three years. Evidently, they do greatly appreciate it especially since they got their car; for both Addie and Carl spoke of it several times. It used to be so muddy in spring and so rough in wet, frozen condition. Addie is even more fearful of auto riding than I and seldom goes out in the car except on the most urgent business that requires her attention in person. One thing she does enjoy whole-heartedly is her radio. She has a Freshman set and it certainly does keep them in touch with the world and its progress and keeps them up-to-date in some things if not in those lines where personal contact with the world is necessary for results. Carl enjoys both the radio and the auto as well as the Victrola and uses them all much. He can go out in cold and damp weather, if necessary, as he could not if it were required to harness a horse and ride in an open carriage. He is not able to do any work except the chores and so has much time on his hands to use indoors especially in fall and winter. They have three cows, three heifers and three small calves; two horses and 20 hens. Addie is stouter than she used to be, has lost all her teeth and has plates, and is getting a bit deaf. She does very little cooking buying all her bread, cake, pies, doughnuts etc. and eating prepared cereals. Vegetables, meats and stewed fruits comprises her cooking. Washing and ironing is put out and she hired a woman to help her all the time I was there. She does not know what she is going to do when Carl goes if that is before she herself goes and I don't know what Carl would do if Addie were taken first. He is often in need of her ministrations for he still has asthma, sometimes so badly as to need a Dr. to administer a hypodermic. But he is in better flesh this fall than he has been since he came from Dr. Tilden's, and he told me he has been better and had asthma the least during the 2 ½ weeks before I arrived and while I was there than he had in a long time before.

From Geneseo I took a tourist sleeper to San Francisco, thereby saving the Board eleven dollars over what it would have been for Pullman fare. The cost of ticket is the same; the difference is in the sleeper fare. It took only 3 ½ days from Geneseo to San F. and that gave me 3 ½ hours in Los Angeles where I changed trains to get an express to S.F. I met an interesting man on the train from El Paso to Los A. He had lived in Mexico much of the time since boyhood and knows its history and people well, past and present. The son of a Quaker missionary to Mexico, he was born there and returned there after college, fought in Mexico's revolution and is pretty close to the gov't. He has a sister in China under the Christian Alliance mission. He told me he agreed with his wife before they married that he was to have the privilege of fighting and discussing all he chose, - not exactly a Quaker spirit! But he certainly was a walking encyclopedia on Mexico.

In San F. I visited James Beard's widow's [Leolyn] present home and saw her four youngest children; the father, mother, and James' daughter being in Paris this year studying. Dr. Morgan's sister and brother are caring for his home and children.

Such beautiful homes as they have in Berkeley and Oakland! Many of them small, one story, bungalow style, some larger and two story, many of stucco in various shades which I have not seen used here(!) or in Eastern America rather, and S.F., Berkeley and Oakland are all such hilly cities with streets running right straight up at almost 45 degrees. It is very pretty when you get up there but rather difficult to climb. I also took lunch with Mrs. Hinman and sister, Mr. H. being away in Cal. on a tour of the churches in that state. Mr. and Mrs. H. were once missionaries in Shaowu, up in the country from Foochow. I got my passport vised by both Japanese and Chinese consuls and went to Hotel Larnie to stay. Then the rest of my time was spent in the shops.

Saturday P.M. at four o'clock the steamer sailed and the friends I had visited, from both houses came across the bay from Berkeley to see me off. They called at my hotel and when I was ready I took them all in my taxi to the pier; the custom seems to be here to pay 75 cents for your taxi and fill it up to capacity with your friends. Five of us ladies occupied the rear part of the 7-seater while my luggage and the chauffer occupied the front part. Both Mrs. Hinman and Mrs. Davis brought baskets of fruit to me, and as we stood looking over the rail, numerous boxes of flowers and baskets of fruit came on for passengers. Shortly after 8:30 the "all-off" gong was sounded along the decks and then the social hall, smoking-room and cabin passage-way and the friends who were not sailing began to pass off once the gang-plank to the pier. Then the steward bearing the big tray of coils of paper streamers passed along the decks and passengers filled their hands and pockets with them. Going to the rail they began throwing them down to their friends who stood on the pier far below, holding one end securely in their hands as they threw them. The friends below caught them and held the other ends and in a few minutes the passengers on the deck were connected with their friends on the pier by hundreds of vari-colored slender strands quivering in the breeze. The deep, low-toned whistle blew a long blast, the anchor was drawn up, the gang-plank was lifted and almost imperceptibly the huge boat began to move out of her berth. One by one as we moved slowly out the strands broke and hung in swaying curls from the steamer's rail, and lay in tangled variegated masses on the pier and on the swirling water. Still they continued to be thrown and caught, the holders below walking along as the ship moved till the end of the pier was reached when the last strands separated; and so were severed the last material bonds that bound us to our friends and the shores of our native land. A pretty custom, and one that camouflages with cheerfulness the crucial moment which pulls hardest at the heartstrings of those outward bound and those that remain. And yet there is a deeper significance whose pathos is rather accentuated than concealed by this feature of gaiety, in the afterthought of both groups. Slowly out there the Golden Gate, not very Golden either today, and yet not sunless and gray, alternately looking out forward and watching the retreating shores with nightfall finds us on the open Pacific fairly calm but with the long, low swell, just enough to remind you that your abiding –place rests on a yielding medium. [The construction of the Golden Gate Bridge did not begin until 1931.]

Having purposely missed my lunch at noon, I did not go out to dinner that first night believing that fasting before and during the initial stages of the voyage will prevent any gastronomic inconvenience usually incident to the change from land to sea traveling. I wished to prove it; and my experiment was a success. Since then, every time the beautifully harmonic gong has rung the summons to a bountifully laden board I have cheerfully responded to the call. At first the cosine [cuisine] did not impress me as being even mediocre but after a few trials I have learned what to avoid and am able to make a happy selection of really good, well-cooked food.

Our passenger list is small, including only eighty people many of whom have expressed their disappointment that the boat itself is so small. It certainly is smaller than I thought and I feared it would not ride so steadily, on that account; but it has not felt the motion of the waves as much as I feared. For about thirty-six hours we have been riding thru a storm with very strong wind, most of the time a head wind but some of the time on our starboard side. Last night at eleven o'clock it rose to an eighty mile gale and the sea was very rough; but I have seen it worse. Our portholes have to be closed as we are on the starboard side from which direction the storm comes. The decks are narrow only about 8 ft. wide, and very much slanted for a floor, in order to shed water, and are hard to walk on for exercise, especially when rough seas make the ship unsteady. On the upper deck we have a large portion of it on both sides and the forward end closed in by large compared with portholes plate glass windows, about 1 ½ X 2 ft. in size. Here the children play on one side and shuffle board is played on the other side.

Fri. Nov. 27th. Everybody is writing desperately this morning to get their letters ready to go on the U.S. transport which sails from Honolulu tomorrow morning. No other opportunity to start letters eastward comes with three days later when the regular mail goes.

The weather has not warmed up on this trip as soon after leaving S.F. as it usually does on this course, on account of our storm which came from the north-west and kept it very cool. But this morning, one day from Honolulu, white wool and linen trousers are appearing, and thin silk and white wool dresses, altho it is not at all hot.

Last evening we had our Thanksgiving dinner of roast turkey, cranberry sauce (1 tiny teaspoonful) English plum pudding, strawberry shortcake, Neapolitan ice cream and a good many other things not strictly thanksgiving in association; but no onions, sweet potatoes, squash, pumpkin pie or dressing and thickened gravy. The dining saloon was elaborately decorated in honor of the occasion but as I told a friend this morning, judging from the decorations (put up by the Chinese stewards) one would not have been able to determine whether the occasion celebrated was Thanksgiving, Armistice Day, Decoration Day, Christmas or the Fourth of July; for there were the regulations symbolic paraphernalia of all those days, including U.S. flags, red, white and blue streamers, flags of all nations, Japanese lanterns, Christmas bells, chrysanthemums and greenery. However, it was festive and imagination supplied the rest. In the morning we had a make shift of a Thanksgiving service which I think all who attended appreciated as being the best we could do under the circumstances, and it was much better than to let the day pass unobserved religiously, altho it might have been a great deal more of an inspirational service than it was. The only minister that we know on board was ill, and has been most of the time. A lady missionary from India was asked to take it and would have done much better I am sure but she felt a man should do it and asked a Dr. from So. Manchester, Conn. to take it and he did the best he could. Three hymns appropriately chosen were sung, "Blest be the tie", Hymn for those in peril on the sea and America. Four prayers also appropriately chosen were read from the English or American Episcopal Prayer book. A collection of $5.82 was taken for the "Seaman's Friend Society" and a very few closing remarks but no attempt at an address. I think the lady missionary chose the hymns and prayers too. Only about 25 attended.

I thought of you all assembled for the Thanksgiving dinner and was glad the girls had some family connections to meet with on this family feast day especially as it came so soon after my departure from the home. It was very good of you all to take them in and make it so pleasant for them. On account of our remote westward position and the difference of time thus involved, it was between 9 and 10 o'clock in the morning when I tho't of you all as seated at the festive board at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in Oberlin.

We have a bride-to-be on board, going out to Manila to marry a dentist, and she is the pet of everybody, especially the officers and young men on board. They say she is in the care of the stewardess but she doesn't seem to get much motherly care. I should not want a daughter of mine to travel alone like that if she were of the same temperament, training and ideals this young girl seems to be. She looks about 18 but some say she is 24 or 5.

I have seen only three real young children on board altho there are two or three girls that are just on the border between childhood and young womanhood. A majority of the passengers are middle-aged or elderly- one man is 78 and he said he laid out Manila harbor. He goes by the name of General Utter.

Last evening we had a lecture on the American Indian by a scientist on the passenger-list, from Washington, D.C. The subject was chosen as appropriate to Thanksgiving Day since the Indians furnished to the colonies their first Thanksgiving dinner.

Everyday at lunch and dinner we have music by an orchestra of four young men, playing piano, flute, guitar, saxophone but they are not very good musicians; we infer that they are boys who wanted a trip and are playing their way around the world. Many adverse comments are made by the passengers regarding the poor music. They also play from nine to eleven in the deck tea-room for dancing.

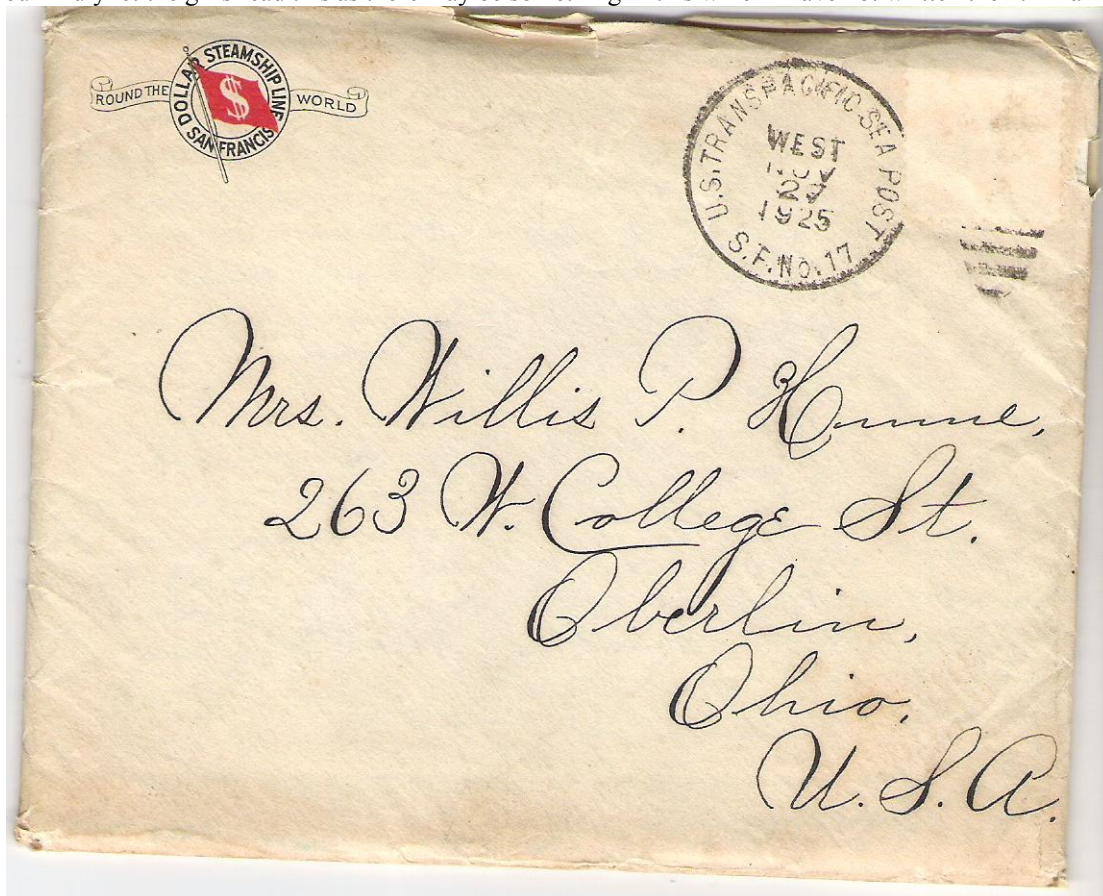

We have just met the Pres. Lincoln of this line bound for San F. She probably left Honolulu about 9 o'clock last night. It is now 12 M. with us. Our radio operator is probably talking with theirs and we may get some news. For some reason our radio bulletin failed to operate this morning.

Everyone is planning what trip they will take ashore tomorrow. I understand they cost from $5. to $7. each for a party of five and the party must number five or they will not go. So I see where I spend the time visiting the ship.

Well, four sheets is the limit so I must draw to a conclusion.

It is a real comfort and satisfaction to know you are so near the girls if they need any council, advice or care that they cannot themselves supply and it was pleasant to think of them with you on Thanksgiving Day. Donald wrote me a post card to meet me on the steamer and I received yours at the same time. I shall write him later. With love to all the family, Affectionately yours, Ellen

Will you kindly let the girls read this as there may be something in this which I have not written them. Thank you.

Foochow China,
November, 29th. 1925

Dear Gould, Geraldine, Marjorie, Kathleen, Folks in Shelton and in Putnam:-

While in Phebe's room I wrote a letter by hand to Dorothy and am now making carbon copies for you all.

I am writing in Phebe's room in the hospital with one end of the paper resting on her bed and the other on my knee. She sat up this noon and ate her dinner, - soft boiled rice. She fed herself and got tired enough so she lay down at once and took a nap. The past three nights in succession she has slept and rested well and has greeted me as I came into her room in the morning with a bright, "Good morning Father." I can see her get strong a little every day. She is trying to get strong enough to be moved over to our home when Mama comes. We do very much hope she started a week ago yesterday on the President VanBuren. That should get her here for Christmas.

Thanksgiving was a beautiful day here. We met as mission in our old home, - where Mama, Monnie, Kathleen and I lived 1916-1920. There were 60 of us at six tables. The Wenshan folks and Mr. Hightower and I supplied one table. The viands were prepared in our kitchen. I'll try to give the menu altho detailed menu and description of a bride's dress are not courses in which I majored in college.

Roasted goose—candied sweet potatoes—boiled celery, China pickles—peanuts—rolls and butter—sang cha jelly—pumpkin pie—coffee. The dinner was enlivened by songs gotten up by different persons at the time and supposed to fit the occasion. Mr. Keplar from Shanghai was with us, for the Chinese Annual Meeting. One song was "A fine man from Shanghai has just come to town. *Keplar". tune The Blind man of Borneo Has Just Come To Town. After the dinner we all went into the yard and had our picture taken. Then back into the house to see an Am. Indian enter with blanket, paint and feathers and talk to the children. Then Elizabeth Cushman read the Courtship of Miles Standish. Dr. Campbell as Miles Standish and Mr. Hightower as John Alden and Pricilla Holton as Pricilla did the acting- all in pantomime. It was very effective. Then came the Kitchen Orchestra, - indescribably with Mr. Newell as director.

Of course my thoughts were scattered, -many of them were with Phebe who could not be there, others with Mama whom I wanted to think of as at Honolulu, - and still others with you and in Oberlin, Easton, with Vivienne and in Putnam and in Shelton.

Phebe had a great day. During the morning many flowers with notes came to her and her room was a complete bower. Two big American turkeys, almost life size strutted on her walls. A visitor, Maude Hutson from her family in the morning, and Mrs. Newell in the afternoon. In the morning Miss Chittenden was brought in with a fever, a sore throat and a cough. She is in a room just like Phebe's with a bath room between. Then in the afternoon late I brought in some of the songs and other written expressions of love and regard from the diners and read them to her. I was a little anxious lest she had had too much but she slept and rested well that night and has since.

Phebe says, - "I had some orange juice this afternoon at 3 p.m. It tasted awfully good. The oranges were a gift from Mrs. Ling secretary of Wenshan School". The nurse has just come in and stuck a thermometer into her mouth and she stopped dictating. "Vernon Parker, Y.M.C.A. secretary (Oberlin 1916) came in yesterday and Dr. Lewis took out his tonsils". He is doing very well. I saw him this morning. "I am enjoying my alcohol rubs, one of which I am having just now,- something I've never had before. Dr. Dyer and Dr. Lewis say it is possible to build up my resistance so I shall not have to eat rice all the time."

At this point it got too dark to write more so I stopped and left Phebe till after Y.P.S.C.E. meeting. Then I went over as usual and we had some of God's promise and a prayer together and I said good night. I read all of the above to her. I cannot yet tell what the future has for her. In the mission meeting yesterday Dr. Dyer told the mission that she could not do any more work before next summer. She hopes Phebe may be able to live with us in our home and be comfortable.

The last two weeks have been very full with the Annual meeting with the Congregational churches and the Mission meeting tucked in as it was possible and various committee meetings. I have given Phebe all of my moments except in some meeting where duty called. We are getting to be quite cronies. It seems to do her a lot of good to be rubbed,- specially near sleepy time.

It is very touching to see the regard in which she is held by every body and how solicitous they all are for her. Letters come from the country from people of other missions.

It is after ten p.m. and I must close and get to bed. God is a very loving Father and He will do all things well. I ask Him to show me all of us what He means by it all. And I want Him to make me patient and better able to express Jesus to any one who comes in my path. May He come to each of you with sustaining grace as you hear the news and follow the letters about Phebe.

Very lovingly and tenderly,
Father.

Tell Flora that I found some of those daily proverbs or quotations from various writers that she prepared and sent out many years ago and I have been reading them to Phebe. She greatly enjoys them.

*[This letter dated December 6, 1925 was written from Foochow, China by Willard to the Folks at Home. Foochow, China.
December, 6th. 1925.

Dear Folks at Home Everywhere:-

Today I have not written to anyone so this is not a copy. But I am still sending a copy to each center.

Phebe has gradually pulled up a little each day. She has for three days eaten a little solid food. But today she had to stop it. Her stomach could not take care of it quite so fast. She rests well each night. Yesterday she sat up to eat her breakfast and once or twice after that. Nearly every time I go to see her she speaks of Mama's coming and talks about how many days she has been on the way. If she started Nov. 21, she is on the last half of the journey. I have written the letter to send to her at Shanghai, but have not mailed it.

Phebe is eating oranges and farina and postum and grape juice and milk. I believe that is all she has had as yet. Doctor said she might have some pumelo and she said she might have some apple. Phebe has kept at me nearly every day to be sure that I asked Mama to bring down a box of apples from Shanghai with her.

No mail has come since I wrote last week so we do not know any more about mama's sailing than we did a week ago. We are however counting on her having taken the Pres. Van Buren Nov. 21st. I hope the beautiful weather that we have had for two months keeps up till Mama gets here. We have not had frost but one morning and only a little,- not to hurt even tomatoes. My hens gave me six eggs today. This is the second time that I have had six in [one] day. There are eleven hens to do it, with one moulting, and eight are pullets. How I wish Phebe could eat eggs.

We have not yet had papers from Washington telling about the Meeting of the National Council of Congregational Churches. The steamers must have run just wrong to bring the papers. Two problems are in the mind of missionaries in China, perhaps to the exclusion of most other problems just now. One is Tariff Autonomy for China and the giving up of Territoriality (the word -Extra should have been written before that long word) and the giving up of anything in the treaties that gives missionaries special privileges. Many of us have sent to our Consul and to the Board our desire to give Extraterritoriality and all special privileges and as our government to revise all unfair treaties. Personally I wish all concessions would be given up.

The other question is about the registration of mission schools with the Chinese government. This involves many questions about which there is a diversity of opinion,- voluntary Bible study, and attendance on religious service etc. The anti-Christian movement comes for a good bit of discussion but it does not effect the work of the church much. In fact it seems as if the church in some ways was forging ahead more than usual.

I think of you as in winter clothes and sitting by fires. Mr. Hightower and I have not yet had a fire. I put on my winter clothes a few days ago. I see some one in the compound had just bought half a ton of coal. When mama gets here we will have a fire to eat by and to sit by in the evening.

I must close now and go to bed. Phebe asks me to read from 1 John every night. We read the 4th, chap. Tonight.

Will.

I have asked a Mrs. Barker of Brooklyn to send Mary $16.80 for some tea I sent her. Please let me know if it comes O.K. Put it in the Bank- Derby Savings. Will.

[December 13, 1925]

Dear "All the peoples"-

This is Dorothy's name for all the Folks when she was a little chick and we were at home on our first furlough.

I am writing Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in Phebe's room and will copy it for the five centers as I have done since Phebe was brought to the hospital. During the week Phebe has been about the same- except that she is taking more food. Yesterday she announced with much enthusiasm that she had just eaten a baked potatoe and it tasted good and it had digested all right. Today she repeated the feat with good results. This afternoon the nurse brought in a soda biscuit and a dish of syrup. Phebe ate about half of it and said it tasted good. She is better than she was a week ago and she says she is stronger. She sleeps well at night and much during the day.

Two days ago another mail came from home and in it a letter from Ellen which said she was taking the Pres. Van Buren fr. San F. Nov. 21. That ship is scheduled to reach Shanghai day after tomorrow- that sounds earlier than to say Dec. 15. It makes our, i.e. Phebe's and mine- breath come shorter and our hearts beat quicker to think of it. I wrote her to reach her at Shanghai a week ago. We pray every night that God will speed the good ship along safely as fast as possible, and I have already arranged in my mind to take a private motor down to meet her. It is hard for all three of us that Phebe will not be on the launch to meet her.

The weather has been superb,- the ther. hangs about 60. I sit in the open door in Phebe's room and look out at the outline of the mountains ten miles away- thru the haze. Nearer are a few tallow trees red like brick in foliage and banyans everywhere in deep green.

Yesterday I saw the cross-country run between some ten schools in Foochow. This year it was for the first time managed entirely by the Chinese. Then I attended a meeting of the North Fukien Christian Council to say good bye to Mr. Cio Lik Daik our chairman, who goes to Singapore for a month to collect money for the Y.M.C.A. for China. I cannot help a wee, tiny, bit of good feeling over this for it is a responsible job they have given to him, and he is the man I found and started in the U.M. work here twenty years ago. He has stuck to it right here ever since. He is going to Singapore and the Straights Settlements with hopes of raising money. The price of rubber a year ago down there was about $10.00 a picul (130 lbs.) Now it is over $200.00, twenty times as much. A rubber king from Amoy bought up a lot of it at $10 and the report is that he has already cleared some $6,000.00. He is the man who has built the Amoy University. The North F. Christian Council also welcomed two Secretaries of the National Council. Miss Haas an American and Mr. Meng a Chinese. They are Industrial Secretaries.

The big annual concert of the University took place at the same hour but I felt it my duty to attend the Council meeting. You see there were three big Union events yesterday afternoon,- track meet, council meeting and University Concert and social.

Yesterday morning the Salt Commissioner for Fukien province spoke at our chapel. I wrote last week about attending a dinner at his home and before that about his attending the dedication of the church. It was good to the eyes to see this man, nearly six feet tall- and large in proportion come to speak to a body of students at a time when there is so much in the air against Christianity, with a large leather bound Bible in his hand and tell them that that book is one he is reading and that they must study it, and to hear him tell them Confucius and Mencius spoke reverently of God and that he prays to God. He went from us down to the University to spend the rest of the day. He had previously asked me to accompany him in his private launch. But as I have written above I thought duty lay for me in attending the Council meeting.

The last mail brought Mary's good letter telling off father's slow but sure recovery. Just before I began this Miss Holton from Wen Shan came in to bring your Christmas package sent to Phebe - - from Shelton. We opened the box but not the packages in it, - will leave them for Christmas.

Phebe and I had planned presents for you all but her illness has delayed the getting of them off. The presents for the feminine portions of the families are all ready and those for the men nearly so. They will be late.

We both wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Very lovingly,
Will

Mary your method of deciding the interest on the house is right. I want each of the children to have his share. I was negligent not to ask you to divide at first.

Oliver G. Beard of Long Hill avenue received a telephone call today from relatives in New York saying that a dispatch was received that his son, Dr. Willard Beard, connected with the college of Fu-Chow, Fu-Chow, China, narrowly escaped death when the college was bombarded. It is also reported that Dr. Beard's daughter, Miss Phoebe Beard, is seriously ill at Fu-Chow with nephritis.

Phebe's condition has worsened and Willard expects she will die within several weeks. Ellen was not able to get the first steamer from Shanghai to Foochow and she was not aware of Phebe's illness. He finishes the letter on the 23rd of December. Ellen arrived and Phebe died within the day. He tells about the funeral. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

Foochow China,
December 22nd. 1925.

Dear Ones in the Home Land;-

It is 4:30 p.m. I am waiting for Mama. The launch went down after her this morning about 9:00. She must be here in another hour or so. I may have to stop this to greet her. Sunday morning I wrote another letter in Phebe's room to be copied but I have not been able to do any copying until now. Below is the letter.

Again on Sunday morning I am in Phebe's room writing you all. The sun shines brightly outside. Inside a bright wood fire crackles in the fire place. Phebe has not improved during the week. She has not been able to take nourishment enough to feed her body and this of course makes her grown thin. There has been a perceptible change in the last three days, - not for the better. My letters have from the first told you everything I knew, and I am convinced that the doctors have told me everything they knew. They did not look for the sudden collapse six weeks ago, and they were all hopeful after Phebe had rallied that she might pull up and live for several years. That now seems impossible. Ellen is in Shanghai. One steamer came from Shanghai- arrived yesterday. It was full of missionaries children coming home for Christmas. Ellen sent a letter by it saying she would take the next one three days later. For some reason she had not received my letter telling her of Phebe's condition. It is dissapointing. Phebe keeps asking when mama will come. Everything possible will be done to keep her till Ellen arrives. We do not look for anything so sudden, but it [is] very serious, and you will be ready for any news. It may be several weeks before she leaves us.

God has been very gracious to let me have these six weeks of blessed companionship with her. He has given her to all of us and to a host of friends in America and in China for thirty years. Her life has been one continuous outgoing of cheer and faithfulness and an example of a very high conscientiousness in every detail of duty. This morning I have read to her letters from Kensington, Conn., Chicago, Ill., Peking, Changsha and Funing, Fukien. This in one mail, it has been a source of very deep joy to learn of the host of girl friends she has made in four short years in China, and of the high esteem they all hold her. Her life has been a constant source of joy to us all.

This last week one of the classes in school tried to combine to force the whole class to leave school. It was a failure and we got rid of some undesirables. Day before yesterday the officials arrested three teachers and fifteen students of a private school started last fall. Seven of the younger students were released on bail this morning. Two of the teachers arrested were graduates of Foochow, who had taught in one of our mission schools until they were found to be untrue. One was [a] graduate of Trinity College, of the British mission here and of the Fukien Christian University. He was register [registrar?] of the University until he was found to be untrue.

The students union were planning to have a parade and demonstration for three days at Christmas. Some of the pastors were apprehensive lest meetings would be disturbed, but this arrest will have a quieting effect.

My hens are doing well, for five days they have laid six eggs a day. They laid seven yesterday and six again today. Dr. Dyer has just told me the doctors today (Kinnear, Matthews and herself) had decided to give Phebe two eggs a day now. I am glad I have some fresh ones for her.

The last five weeks I am afraid my letters have been all about things here. I have not written much about my interest in things in the U.S. I mean things at home. But your letters are full of interest. I shall find it hard not to think of the land across the road from Father's as part of the farm. Dan's letter said he wanted to make the present farm keep their two cows. I suppose it could be done all right. Is Uncle Dan still selling milk? Tell him I think of him every day. Huntington has electricity, White Hills also. Does uncle Dan have it? The papers you send speak well of Mr. A.E. Look. I like the way they speak of him and the way your letters speak of him. I judge Mr. Wilhelm may be better fitted for a lecturer than for a pastor.

I was much interested in the obituary of C.E. Nettleton. We used to call him Gas Nettleton. Did you know that the day after my graduation from the Derby High School he called me into his office to offer me a position? I listened to his offer and told him I had decided to go to College and to become a minister. He said: - "Go ahead." I have often wondered what I now would be doing and where I would be if I had accepted his offer. I am satisfied with the choice I then made- and I have always honored him for the help he gave me in holding to my decision to study.

This is all the letter I wrote on Sunday. I am typing this on Wednesday Dec. 23rd. O, my dear Children and folks, what long days these have been. Monday Phebe talked with me some but she was not clear. She thought we should be starting for Pagoda to meet mama. She thought she must go out to Ponasang. Tuesday at 9 a.m. a telegram came saying that mama was on the Japanese steamer getting in that day, yesterday. Mr. Christian and Mr. Thelin and Miss Perkins went down to meet mama. The day seemed never to end. With the fastest motor boat and auto, mama arrived at six in the evening. Phebe was still here and when mama spoke to her she tried to answer but the words would not come distinctly. That night we staid in the hospital to be near the dear child. We were not called. It was an awful shock to mama and it seemed that she could not realize it. There was no way to let her know. Mr. Christian and Mr. Thelin and Miss Perkins were down to meet her but they could not tell her how serious it was. And Mama dare not ask. Everything was being done that was possible to get her to her dear one. This morning Phebe was perceptible nearer the end. We waiting all day till 5:10 when the breathing stopped and we knew she [was] home. Mama was there. I reached her about five minutes later. I can never cease to thank God that mama reached her in time. How I wish she could have been here two days earlier to see Phebe in her own natural mind and talk with her.

Christmas morning: - We shall never forget this Christmas. We have given back to Our Heavenly Father the precious gift He gave to us thirty years ago. He has given us to each other in a new and deeper sense than ever before. We have a new avenue to Heaven. Another precious loved one is there and Heaven is so much nearer.

Yesterday, the day before Christmas we said "Goodbye" to all we could see of our dear first born. It was a beautiful day, bright, warm, calm. There were three services. One at 1:30 p.m. here in our home. Mr. Leger lead it. It was in English, except one prayer in Chinese by the Monitor of Foochow College. The house was filled with Chinese and foreigners. This service was for the people who lived in the city and wished to attend. We had photos taken of the casket and of the people. The one of the people was taken just as we had gone out of the gate of our city compound. We were ready to start for Wenshan, Phebe's home and the place of her work, at 3:15 we were in the Wenshan chapel. It was packed. Here we had asked that the service be in Chinese and in charge of the Chinese entirely. It was the most impressive service I ever attended. The preacher of the church she had attended this year and which she attended the Sunday before she was taken ill, was in charge. He began the service with a prayer of thanksgiving. If you could have heard him you would have known what he was talking about, - not the words he was uttering- but the content and the spiritual meaning from the beautiful modulated, sympathetic voice he used. The address was by a pastor who had had much to do with the school and who has served with Phebe on committees. The girls sang two songs in Chinese and one in English. One girl student and one girl teacher spoke briefly. I shall try to get these talks for I never heard such testimony. There was no sentimental talk about "beautiful Christian Character" and "Wonderful faith in God". That was all taken for granted and was the background of all that was said. But they spoke of her helpfulness in many lines. It was evident that Phebe got very near to the Chinese. She had not confined her work to the class room, on a walk with some of the girls had pointed out the beauties of nature as God's work, she was interested in their language so much so that she mastered it so as to be able to write the questions for their examinations on the blackboard with her own hands instead of asking a Chinese to do it, she used the classical language, at times so much in her talk that even they found it difficult to follow her, thus adding dignity to their language, she talked with them as one of them. Pastor Ling said that her going at this time was not a mistake of God, it was like a well trained gardner going into his garden to pick flowers. He never picked a flower until it was just right for the use to which he wished to put it.

A photo was taken of the casket and the flowers about it, and another as we came out of the chapel, with the girls lines up on each side of the walk. This shows only a few of the girls, the rest are around the corner, extending for 200 feet or more. We reached the cemetery at 4:45 p.m. Here Mr. Goertz read the service and prayers were offered by Rev. Long Iu Cu and Bishop Hind of the English mission. There was [a] very large crowd and a large quantity of flowers. I had asked Mr. Christian to take general charge of all arrangements and he did it perfectly. It seemed to me almost like Phebe's triumphal entry into her new work.

The streets were guarded with armed soldiers and armed police to keep the students of the union from forming processions and molesting Christian services in schools and chapels. Here was a big procession of 200 or more. Chauffers took off their hats as they met us, men in rickshas did the same. There was no hitch in the whole afternoon. The atmosphere was charged with sympathy and love. Mama and I together dropped a wreath of red roses and white cysanthumums on the casket as it lay in the grave and friends led us away, while they remained to see the mound covered with a mass of most beautiful flowers. Mama and I went over to see it the next day.

I must not write more. May God give to each of you His own sustaining presence and may you realize that Heaven is very near.

Dear Father and Brothers and Sister:-

This experience is full of sadness, but it is tempered with so much of loving ?? [perfectly?] expressed in spoken and written words that all the awfulness is taken away. Phebe's hold on the ?? of a great host was just what you would have had it. She is now with Mother and the uncles and aunts and cousins.

Phebe's grave with headstone in China

John C. Caldwell describes the cemetery in his book, China Coast Family as follows:

“High on an island hill in the Min River facing Foochow, China, there is a cemetery. Sheltered under two groves of ancient olive trees, here is the resting place of scores of white men and women who have lived and died on the China coast far from their native land. The history of the collision between East and West is written on the tombstones. The earliest grave, dated May 25, 1848, holds the remains of Mrs. Moses White, native of up-state New York, wife of the first Methodist Missionary in all Asia. Not only Americans lie here, but English as well; not only missionaries, but seamen, adventurers, traders. A red Italian marble shaft stands at the burial place of pioneer Methodist Bishop Isaac Wiley, M.D., his wife and child; nearby is an imposing white marble angel, its wings spread above a cluster of simple stone markers, commemorating the Hwa-sang [or Hwa Shan] Massacres of British men, women and children in 1895.”

Phebe Kinney Beard
Born Sharp Peak June 18, 1895 Died Foochow City December 23, 1925

Using computer magnification, I was able to see that two stones to the left of Phebe's is buried an "Alice Hall". According to the Missionary Herald, Miss Alice U. Hall died October 18, 1909. This may be the Miss Hall who Flora traveled with in 1908.

[Photos donated to Yale by family in 2006. Copies are in the collection of John and Nancy Butte.]

Sadly, this is probably all we will see of Phebe Kinney Beard's grave. According to the book, No Foreign Bones in China by Peter Stursberg, foreign graves were destroyed in the 1950's. Stursberg, Peter. No Foreign Bones in China. Edmonton, Alberta, Canada: The University of Alberta Press, 2002.

Nancy Butte, wife of Monnie's son John, traveled to Foochow, in 1988 with Monnie and Kathy. When asked if they visited Phebe's grave while there, Nancy said that they did not and did not even mention it. I suspect Monnie and Kathleen may have been aware of the desecrations that took place in the past.

[Early January 1926]

Phebe's will I think is in Boston with the Board. I have written them to send it to me. I have also written them to apply for her life insurance, because she left it with them to pay her premiums each year. I tell you this so you will know all I have done. The money Phebe had in the mortgage, I think is in my name, that is the mortgage is in my name. I do not think this will need probating. What do you think?

Dollar Steamship Line
S.S. President Van Buren

Please forward to Dorothy and Gould promptly.

[January 1926]

My dearest Children, - Gould, Geraldine, Dorothy, Marjorie and Kathleen,

I will continue the letter I began to write about Phebe. I was telling about that first night after my arrival. We staid at the hospital where they offered us a room and Papa went to bed about 9 o'clock, for he had been under the strain for six weeks; but I wanted to stay up with her altho Dr. Dyer and Miss Atwood the nurse were going to divide the night between them and two Chinese nurses were going to take turns. They gave the intervenous salt-water injection at 10 o'clock and again in the night and again in the morning hoping to arouse her consciousness; but as these produced no marked effect they stopped giving them. In the night they also gave her a lumbar pack which was a hot compress over the kidneys to stimulate them to action to throw off the uremic poison; for the kidneys had ceased to function before I arrived; and because they were not throwing off the poison thru urine, the lungs, and skin were doing that work and this gave her a peculiar odor.

At a little after eleven, Dr. Dyer suggested that as her pulse and respiration indicated no immediate possibility of failure to act, I would better go to bed and get some rest while I could, so as to be ready for what might come later. So I finally went to bed leaving her and a Chinese nurse to do what little could be done, with the understanding that they would call us if there was any change. But I did not sleep one wink; my mind and my heart were too full. Before leaving for breakfast in the morning we went in to see her, and found little change. I returned right after breakfast and staid till lunch time, returning immediately after lunch. Papa was in and out all day as he had leisure from his work. Returning after lunch I noticed that her breathing was not as loud and strong, and not long after that I noticed that she was not making any motions with foot or hand or turning her head. About 3:30 I noticed that she did not open her half-closed eyes wider occasionally as she had been doing; also that her breathing, altho still quite audible all over the room had softened down perceptibly within an hour. At five o'clock Dr. Dyer and I were alone with her. Her bed had been changed and freshly remade about two hours before, the room had been swept and dusted; there was nothing to do for Phebe except to keep her mouth moistened by swabbing and I was doing that every five minutes as we sat there softly talking, - I asking questions about Phebe's illness, and Dr. answering and telling me anything that came to her mind regarding it that she tho't I would like to know. Suddenly as the ticking of a clock in a quiet room ceases, her regular breathing stopped short. I spoke of it at once and Dr. got her instrument and listened to her heart. "The heart is fluttering a little and there will probably be a gasp or two more", she said. After what seemed a minute and a half she did draw another long breath; another minute and another breath; until she had drawn about a dozen breaths like that, then all was still. Gradually the ashen hue began to creep over her features after the regular breathing stopped. And the overwhelming realization came to me that our dear Phebe had gone from this world, to be with us here no more. It seemed as tho I could hardly bear it. I could not sense it; I felt stunned. It was 5:05 when the regular breathing stopped and 5:10 when all was over. As soon as the regular breathing stopped I ran down stairs and asked some one to go and call Papa and he got there just after the last breath. There was not at any time any pain or suffering that I can learn of, certainly none after I came except her being too hot as I know she was, and the dryness of her throat and mouth from breathing thru it so much. The convulsions were bad to behold, Papa says but, presumably she knew nothing about them and felt no pain at the time altho her muscles and joints were sore and lame afterward from such extreme and forcible contraction. Presumably she never knew that she had them.

Papa told her she sort of fainted. She said, "I fell, didn't I?" Just 23 hrs. from the time I arrived our dear girlie left us. It was Wednesday the 23rd; Friday would be Christmas and to keep the body over the holiday would throw a pall over Christmas for every body both foreigners and Chinese and of all missions as well as some of the community for Phebe was so well known and so generally loved. And yet you know of my great objection to speedy interment. Papa had taken that into consideration in his first conference with the Dr.'s and nurse just after her death. Then he came back to me and asked if I would be willing to consent to the burial the following day, Thursday, if the Dr.'s would embalm the body. There seemed no other way and after talking with the Dr. myself and learning that it was an absolute guarantee, I consented. It happened that the prayer-meeting was held in the city at Mr. Christian's home that day and was just closing as Phebe passed on. So before the whole company left the compound, the arrangements were in the main, completed. Mr. Newell composed the express which was to be printed and circulated announcing the funeral and took the responsibility of getting it printed and circulated. Mr. Christian took charge of preparing the grave, selecting the site (after conference with us) of getting Mr. Brand to make the casket, of securing the services of the bearers; of buying flowers, and helping Mrs. Christian and Miss Armstrong to arrange them and make the floral pieces. Of course, the house had to have much done to it for no woman's hand had been in charge since the St. Clair's left in June. So there was much cleaning and rearranging to do. I directed, and helped here and there as I had time, three College boys did the sweeping washing of paint and floors, and helping to move things; Papa superintended the moving of things out of his study and all about the house and helped to direct the boys; Miss Armstrong supplemented my efforts in directing the boys what and where and how to wash and sweep and beat rugs. She also did most of the dusting and tidying up shelves, bookcases, newspaper stands, etc. She, Mrs. Christian, Mr. Christian and Miss Chittenden planned the decoration and arranged the flowers and made flower-pieces (several). Dr. Dyer and Miss Atwood laid out and dressed the body. Papa and I went over to Phebe's home after supper that night and with Pricilla Holton's and Miss Perkins help selected the clothes. We chose the white Baronette satin (wash-satin) dress that she wrote us she had had made for this last summer from the piece of silk I gave her for a skirt before she left America. You know how she said she herself liked it; Papa liked it too, so much and Pricilla liked it the best of all her dresses and said so many people also had liked it on her so much. So there wasn't any question as to which dress we should use; we didn't even open her wardrobe that night. Priscilla had taken out the dress when she got home from prayer-meeting and laid it out on Phebe's couch in her room so we just took it without considering any other. We made one mistake; I did not take her white kid shoes out with us thinking the casket would be opened only at the head-down to about the waist; but either because of the extremely short time for preparation or for some other reason the cover was left in one piece and all had to come off showing her feet in white silk stockings only. I should have thought those who arranged her in the casket would have placed ferns, flowers and ivy over the feet sufficiently to cover them but perhaps they did not have enough at hand and the casket did not get in anyway until quite a few people had arrived at the house for the service. I saw almost no one at the service as Papa and I sat on the stair landing, but they said the study, parlor and dining-room were full. At my request Miss Cushman played the piano softly (appropriate hymns) for ten minutes before the service began while the people were coming in. Then when the people were passing around to look into the casket she played again, also at my suggestion. Papa asked Mr. Ledger to take the service at the house. I was a bit disappointed that he did not make any personal tribute of obituary at all. He just read scripture, twice and made two prayers, one of which was read from a prayer-book. The monitor of the college offered a prayer too at the beginning of the service. I had asked that if anyone could find one, that one of those beautiful selections presenting the beautiful hopeful side of death be read as a part of the service. But evidently no one found one, for none was read, or else that request was forgotten. I was so sorry then, that I had not collected some that I have heard read at funerals at home. If you ever find any send me a copy. I shall try to find some now. After the people passed out, Papa and I came down and behind closed doors, bade farewell to the dear, dear, form and face of our darling daughter whom we shall never see again in this world. O, those were hard moments, and I cannot realize that we can never have her with us again. We have seen other families broken into by death and it did not seem so very strange. But when it came right into our own home, it just didn't seem possible, - we have been an unbroken family for so long, thirty-one years. Well, we will all know better how to sympathize with others in their bereavements, now.

After the people moved out of the house they grouped themselves in the yard just at the left of the walk as you come out of the St. Clair house (you remember, Marjorie and Kathleen) and as far from the house as the level ground goes, before it begins to slope up toward the rocks. There they stood and waited till Mr. Christian and Mr. Brand as undertakers, came out leading, followed by the casket which was placed on a white two-wheeled bier by eight bearers who walked four on each side rolling it along between them. They were as far as I can remember their names, Harry Worley, Mr. Gold of the Y.M.C.A., Mr. Hightower, Mr. Thelin, Li Gong. Papa and I followed the casket. Miss Perkins and Priscilla next. Dr. Dyer and Miss Atwood next, and I guess the Cushman sisters next after which the others nearly all fell in, mostly on foot. Just outside the hospital gate they took the first picture. No, the second, for the first was taken after all the people were out of the house before the casket was removed.

After the second picture, I took Miss Perkin's private ricksha with two men one behind and one in front, following the casket immediately and Papa walked beside me. Mr. Brand is an old man and he walked very slowly; as he was at the head of the procession with Mr. Christian, all had to go slowly and it seemed very long. When we reached Ponasang, the casket was lifted off the wheeled bier and carried by the bearers up the long flight of steps between the two glorious rows of poinsettias bending high over our heads, Mr. Brand's private uniformed coolie helping materially behind. The school chapel was filled to capacity with Chinese mostly, and the casket was placed in front among profuse decorations and we were seated in the front seats near it.

The platform has been placed in the rear of the room and the seats now face the other way from which M. and K. knew it. The school-girls sat on either side in rows facing it and at right angles with the seats of the audience.

"P" stands for Miss Perkins. "E" stands for myself. "W" stands for Papa. Three Chinese men sat on the platform. One led in prayer; Sing Gang gave the address; the other read the scripture and pronounced the benediction. One girl spoke representing the higher primary; one, the college. The higher primary girls sung one hymn, the college girls one and either the teachers or the graduating class one. The girls were all dressed in black skirts, white upper garments and a black band around their arms and a white aster pinned on their dresses in front. The girls marched out first and formed two rows one each side of the walk facing each other. Between these lines the casket and procession filed and another photo was taken just as we started down the line.

Casket and bearers magnified

Then followed the long slow walk over to the cemetery across the long bridge, and around up that steep pitch that winds around between walls turning such sharp corners. Mr. Brand's private coolie had to push the bier from behind up that hill. This particular pitch was what my extra man was for. As we moved thru the streets, I noticed the people stood back to give way as we approached and altho there was curiosity on the faces of many, yet there was absolutely no loud talking or laughing, hardly any smiles but serious faces seeming to realize what it meant and as all of them have been thru this experience themselves they knew a little how to sympathize, and their attitude and manner was almost reverence; so much so that I remarked to Papa that reverence like mirth is contagious. Literally thousands of people stopped in their tracks and stood still and looked as we passed, or turned in their rickshas to look sympathetically as the casket passed covered with the American flag and flowers. I saw one man in a ricksha, Chinese, I think, but in foreign hat, at least, if not clothes too, lift his hat and pass the bier and us with bared head. I thought that a very fine tribute of respect in a Chinese in these times of anti-foreign feeling. Some one else saw the driver of a bus also remove his hat as he passed. - When we reached the cemetery I thot as I glanced toward the new grave as we pulled up the hill, that no one was there waiting for us. But as we moved inside the gate there against the wall stood a large crowd of people some of whom I had never seen. I did not look in their direction but saw them in form only by indirect vision and it touched me deeply to see how many many friends Phebe and Papa have made. With that very short notice of the services, sent by telegraph to Ding Loh, all the people there and most of those at the University were present at the cemetery service and intended to get to the Ponasang service but the tide did not serve them just right to make that in time. They got stuck on a mud bar in the very low tide, and had to wait till the turn of the tide floated them off again so missed the Ponasang service. There was a little hitch in the service at the grave, for usually the casket is lowered into the grave before the service is begun. When the bearers came up to place the casket on the poles over the grave they (the poles) were not there in place as they usually are so they had to place it on the ground beside it (the grave) and wait. There was some low talking regarding the where-about of the poles, then they decided to proceed with the burial service while they were being brought. By the time it was finished, they were at hand and after the casket was lowered, Papa and I dropped a wreath of three red roses, one to symbolize mother's love, one father's love and one, (because we could get no more) to symbolize the love of brother and sisters; five white chrysanthemums to symbolize her own purity, and the green to symbolize our purpose to keep her dear memory ever green and fresh. A long white ribbon bow was tied to one side of it. Then we (Papa and I) walked slowly back thru the gate, escorted by Mr. Christian, to my rickisha and one was there for Papa then too, and we rode away down the hill leaving the large company of people standing by the grave. Many flowers were sent to the cemetery by people over that side who did not get out to either the city or the Ponasang service. The day was not exactly a blue day for thin clouds veiled the sun and made it really more comfortable (especially for the bearers who wheeled the bier, and the school girls who walked all the way to the cemetery and back) as to temperature for the journey over South Side than if the sun had been bright in a clear sky, for the general temperature that day was warm for the season. All doors and windows but two or three were open and we had no fires. Also the glare was not so bad for our eyes. The next day, Christmas day Papa and I went over to the cemetery again to visit the resting places of our dear one and take a little bouquet of the sweet Chinese narcissus. We found the new earth mound completely covered with flowers so that not even a tiny spot of freshly turned earth showed between the green and flowers. And they had kept remarkably fresh for 24 hours. It was almost dark when we reached the cemetery and when we left the moon was high and throwing a flood of lovely moonlight over the quiet spot. [According to Phebe's death record, she was buried in the American Cemetery, Nantai, Foochow, China.]

On New Year's day we went over again and I intended to take over some of the poinsettias to place on the grave for that day but it was such a busy day and we got started so late that we went empty-handed. However, we were surprised to find all the flowers fairly fresh except the camellias; they had turned brown. But the cross of English daisies was almost as fresh as it was when placed there eight days before. But all conditions had favored their keeping; --the weather had been cloudy continually, -some rain had fallen too, and it had been very cool; the atmosphere had been rather damp; the wall and trees had shaded them; and the caretaker had watered them every night I guess. Next time I go over I shall completely cover the grave with poinsettias.

Saturday, the day after Christmas we went over to Ponasang to Phebe's room and picked up as many of her things as we had time to and packed them up in her trunks; the next Monday and Tuesday we went over for a few hours each day and worked and on Saturday Jan 2, Papa went over and arranged with coolies to bring out her two trunks, 3 coreys[covers?], wardrobe, clothes hamper, 2 boxes, etc. I left her pictures, bricabrack, rugs, and most of the things that show usually in the room to have some pictures taken of the room to send you girls so that you might see what a neat, cozy, beautiful room she has had to live in these 4 ½ years. Mr. Thelin and Miss Cushman took several views each yesterday Jan 2. Saturday P.M. I made an appointment to meet him there at four o'clock and they took pictures in different positions till the sun went down at 5:10. I will send you some as soon as they are finished. Papa thinks the rule is in the Board that if a missionary is out less than one term of five years, the furniture which was her outfit reverts to the Board; so he thinks we could not take away her bed, bureau, dresser, table, chairs, stove, etc. but her Pekin rugs and curios are ours and her clothes. I am going to send her clothes to you girls just as soon as I can get to pack them. I will send the winter dresses first hoping you can get some wear out of the wool ones in Feb. and Mar. Then the summer clothes I will send later. The person I address them to does not necessarily have to take the things sent to her for I don't know at all which will fit whom, or what styles will be most becoming to which or who needs them most. So you can divide them as suites yourselves when they arrive. Dorothy will probably be with you on Easter and she can make her selections from what is there, at that time. Later I will send the summer clothes and such personal effects as seem best to send you before we come home. Phebe had some beautiful pictures and I want Gould and Vivienne to have one or two for their new home as one of Phebe's gifts to them. If I send home the two silk blouses and the checked brown and gray silk shirt I brought out to her will any of you wear them this spring and summer and next fall or will they be too old fashioned? I don't need them. Dorothy can't wear them but Kathleen surely can and perhaps Mary [Marjorie?] or Gerry could. If you will wear them, answer this question right off and tell who will wear them if you can so I can have the skirt fixed for that one. Tell me her waist measure and the length desired for skirt. Answer at once.

I did not, when I was writing on that subject, tell you what was done, as the guarantee of my peace of mind; they told me at first that Dr. Neal Lewis would embalm the body; but a few hours before the funeral, Papa and I went down to the hospital to see how things were getting along and asked Dr. Dyer, who was then there, combing her hair, what had been done. She said Dr. Lewis said he had never done it so she had to do it. She said she injected into the vein in the neck ___ oz. of ___ which is a deadly poison and would stop heart action at once if there was life; she put it in, sending it down straight toward the heart. She told me that there was not the slightest doubt whatsoever in the minds of the 3 doctors that she was absolutely and finally lifeless; that rigidity mortis (is that right, Latin scholars?) the roots are the ones she used anyhow if the endings are incorrect.) as the legal proof of death. But that is not always certain I know, from four cases. But from the way her kidneys ceased to function and from the gradual way in which life went out, a gradual sinking a slow ebbing of vitality; the failure one by one of the physical and mental powers, first sight, then memory, then digestion, then control of nature's necessities, then the functioning of the kidneys, then consciousness, then motion, then swallowing, and finally breathing, and last the heart-beat itself, I myself had (to tell the truth) very little doubt that it was genuine death. But- I could not persuade myself to let it go otherwise than a certainty and that I secured, if- the Dr.'s statement can be trusted and I do not think she would deceive me and I think she ought to know what the effect of that drug is. So I am at peace in my mind with regard to the matter.

As Papa has written you we both have been amazed at the number of letters of sympathy that have come to us from all around, from nearly every household in the mission body of Foochow; and from Shanghai, Amoy, Ming Chiang, Hing Hua, KuCheng, Bangkok, and other cities south of Foochow; sometimes a dozen at one mail; and three deliveries a day for weeks after the 23rd never failed to bring at least one. I never realized before how much these messages of sympathy mean to the bereaved ones and I shall be more careful to write such letters to my friends hereafter as occasion suggests.

Feb. 15th- This letter was intended to be mailed about a week after my first one but it got laid away somewhere and I could not find it; moreover I have been so busy that I have not had the time to make a genuine hunt for it. We thought of you two weeks ago last Saturday as just receiving the sad news and prayed much for you all then. I shall be interested to see how nearly we estimated the date of the arrival of the news.

I have written another letter to Dorothy about another important event which will be mailed with this and she will forward to you. I am just up from the Anchorage for one night, and shall return to Dr. Gillett's tomorrow. Mr. Goddard is here; he and I are alone in the house tonight. Several are away for China New Year's vacation and the compound is quiet. Much love to you all.

Mother.

Please send to Dorothy at once and she to Gould. Dorothy will send hers to you. Papa is doing nicely after his operation for the removal of a cyst, at Dr. Gillett's Hospital. Dorothy's letter tells about it all. Do follow the proper diet and safe-guard your healths.

Dear Jerra- B:-

Back on de job again! How I did miss you girls and the little house. I do believe this is the best Christmas we've had in Oberlin almost.

Harold and I reached here about 12:30 Sun. night. He left his suit-case at our house and walked all the way home- about two and a half miles. The little car stood in front of the house before I had finished dressing the next morning. It is fixed so that it runs beautifully now.

I found another Christmas awaiting me here- two more gifts and 14 cards. The gifts were a lovely white hand towel from Ish, and three cute tea towels from Gertrude Layman. I got cards from all those people that you girls heard from- Rigneys, a letter from Mitty-Mat, etc.; one from Dan, Stuart MacMillan, Betty Garland, the Coutts girls, and lots of others. I haven't started on my Christmas "thank yous". Every body to whom I show my gifts admires greatly the table crumber. It certainly is a beauty.

I found my green pencil!!!!- in one of the folds of my hand-bag. Great rejoicing!

I wonder how the poor girlies got along with the house. They surely deserve a lot of credit- getting the house, and cleaning up after all the good time. We have had so many and such grand times together as a family that sometimes I hate to think of not having so many of such get-togethers in the future, and then again I get so exuberant over thinking of a home of our own and a family. How I do wish that you were getting married- not instead of me, but along with me. You certainly are "far and away" the house-wife and Mother than I am! I feel as tho' I have such oodles to learn when I disregard it theoretically and look at it practically, but I suppose it will all come to me gradually.

The teachers that you knew here all asked about you and the girls. Evidently you made quite an impression here. Alice and Hazel got their tea just yesterday (Mon.) afternoon. They were both very pleased with it.

I'm writing during my free period and the bell is about to ring so I must stop.

I'll send the money I owe you just as soon as I get my next check which is Fri. of this week. I wrote checks to the girls and for my dresses yesterday and that had to come out of my savings. I'm going to replace it as soon as possible tho!

Lots of love, and do write soon!

Dot.

Dear Folks All:-

Again I will write five letters in one and send to the five centers. When possible I will tuck in a word of personal relation that will make the letter seem a little less like a newspaper article. The mail has gone already this time but the Foochow children are going down tomorrow to take the steamer so I can get this off.

Mama and I went over to Sie Puo to spend the night with Mr. and Mrs. Newell last Sat. It is the first night I have spent out of my own bed since coming from Kuliang I believe. I had promised to marry a former student on Sat. afternoon. He said the ceremony would be at 3:00 p.m. It took place at 5:30 so we were very late getting over to the Newell's. But it was good to relax and just be company. The Newells make you feel as if you could put your feet on the table if you wanted to and feel at home, so you see it is an ideal place to rest. On Sunday we went to a little church on the island in the river above the bridge. Mama has not been there for over four years. I have not been there for two years. We kept the place going while we were at home in New York, and it seems sort of like our work. The teacher-preacher is an old student of ours. Last May he lost his wife and a few weeks later his only little boy died. He married again and now his little four year old daughter is very ill. He feels very sad. His expenses are greater than he can meet and his sorrow is deep.

Good letters came from most of you in the last mail. We got the news of Thanksgiving. I was very glad that Gould could get up for a glimpse of you and to let you have a glimpse of him. The Oberlin Thanksgiving was a gala one with too much to eat I see. Mama is all the time talking temperance or abstinence in eating, but she fixes and sets before Mr. Hightower and me such a lot of good things that we are in danger of getting sick from too much food. She has made two pumpkin pies from some real summer pumpkins that I raised from home seed, and they were just like home pies.

Letters of sympathy keep coming in every day. I am more and more humble as I see how far reaching Phebe's friendship was, and how deep it was. We have had printed cards to acknowledge these and the floral tributes.

This is the Week of Prayer and we are having two meetings a day in two parts of Foochow, to accommodate all. The meetings are union in all senses, Chinese, foreign, Meth., Anglican, Congregational, Y.M.C.A.

The photos of the funeral are fairly good. I shall hope to mail them soon. I will tuck in a copy of the last photo Phebe had taken for her passport home.

With lots of love that is made more precious with the going home of each loved one. What a blessing thing the family love is.

Will

Will you please send this on to each member of the family as listed below

Dear Mary and All the Others:-

Yesterday the Consul sent me a copy of his official report of Phebe's death. I am sending a copy to you and also one to Boston to Mr. Belcher as her will is registered there, and as they were paying her Life Insurance Premiums yearly. Her insurance is with the MUTUAL BENEFIT LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF NEWARK N.J. Policy No. 763,891, for $1000.00. The names of John F. Johnston, District Manager, 4 Olivia St. Derby, Conn. and Arthur J. Birdseye, State Agent, 71-2-3-4 First National Bank Building, Hartford, Conn. are on the papers.

I really do not know whether I should apply thru you or Mr. Belcher, so I am really applying thru both. You may need to get into communication with each other. You remember that Mr. Belcher was here as a member of our mission for five years and I feel pretty well acquainted with him. I do not know whether I should send on the policy or not. I shall wait till the request is made before I send it.

The will is to be probated here in Shanghai. I have sent to Boston for it. After the estate here is settled, we will see about what Phebe had at home. I do not know as she had much at home. I think there is a little in the Derby Savings Bank tho I am not sure. And I think there is a little in Putnam. I do not find her bank books here. They may be in Boston. The only other money that I know anything about is the part of the note on the Shelton house. I do not know whether we need to do anything about that or not I believe it is all in my name. Write your ideas.

You are just now hearing of her serious illness. We shall bear you all up in prayer for it will be harder for you at home than for us or must I say "me" here. Those were to me six weeks of very deep life. They were very full of the sweet fragrance of a life well lived and about to be restored to the God who gave it. How often Phebe said as I sat beside her "It is good just to have you here." And her cheery "Good morning Father", will remain in my ears as long as I live. She suffered no pain but she was often uncomfortable and it was a great relief to her for me to rub her, and she was so grateful for it. Her thoughts were for others all the time rather than for herself. We did not talk about death nor about heaven but we did talk about God and about the way in which He wants men to live.

To day I have spent the whole day attending the funeral of one of the first graduates of the old Theological School of the Am. Board Mission here, which I started in 1896, not of the graduate but of his wife. I married them and have been very close to them ever since. She leaves one married son, one married daughter and two little boys and one little girl, the youngest 6 years old. It was a big funeral. 180 ate dinner after the one hour and a half service, and in the procession there must have been 300.

On father's and mother's wedding anniversary I am to marry a fine young man, the son a very earnest Bible Woman, a graduate of the University and now a teacher of Foochow College. Here are congratulations for Father's 84th birthday.

Very lovingly to all
Will

For the sincere expressions of sympathy, comfort and appreciation; for the beautiful floral tributes; and for the kindly ministrations and assistance rendered on the occasion of the illness and decease of our daughter, Phebe, we take this opportunity to thank all our friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard L. Beard.

Dear Phebe-

We think much of you folks out in China now days with Mother's long letters about her trip and Father's frequent letters about your steady gain in health. The last letter told of your increase in diet. I suppose that Mother is now putting all of you on the Tilden [This refers to Dr. John Tilden's diet of moderate eating.] diet as she did us. We are still going quite closely by it and like it very much.

This past week there has been very good skating. I have been out twice in the evening for an hour or so and it was grand fun. The only trouble is that we do not have a big enough place to skate. A tennis-court flooded now serves the purpose of a skating rink since Gater's rink is not open this year. The rink is always crowded with numerous little boys dashing around, playing tag and cracking the whip, so there is not much room left for other skaters. I just get to going well and have to turn around and go back but just the same the ice is good and I can learn a little on the small rink. We have heard several sleighing parties pass the house with their bells jingling and their laughing and shouting. None of us have been on any sleigh rides yet this season but I surely want to.

Last week Oberlin actually had a little excitement but at the expense of Haylor's Book Store. The store caught fire one morning in the basement and it spread to the oil in the oil furnace. The floor of the store broke through before the fire was discovered so the fire company could do little. Smoke poured out of the front of the store all morning but they kept it from spreading very much although the stores on either side and the office above were slightly damaged. Many college and High school students cut classes to watch it and there was a large crowd around there all day. I didn't see it until noon when the smoke was still coming out and the front of the building was non est. I think that almost nothing was saved but some of the stock was covered by insurance. The fire was not entirely out until 3 P.M.

I have up my application in for college for next fall. That brings college a little nearer to me although it seems queer to think of myself actually being in college. On the application blank it asked for names of family who had studied in Oberlin. I put down the whole family from Father to Marjorie and under relatives I gave the names of the three Humes and Harold. I guess they will have to let me in just from my family representation here. I will not know until April whether or not I am accepted but I am counting on entering. So far I am planning on taking music as my major with perhaps a minor like French or Latin. I am very much interested in my music and get more so the more I take of it. I am taking lessons of a different teacher from the one I had last year, since she is away. At first I didn't like the new one at all. She used to discourage me so that I seriously thought of dropping music but I am used to that now and even like her quite well. I just wish that I had more time for practice for I could get along so much faster if I did. I will have to take three years of theory for a music major which Marjorie is having quite a struggle with this year. But I can't think of anything else which I am sufficiently interested in to major in it.

Evidences of our graduation are coming thick and fast now. Our senior rings and pins, ordered about Thanksgiving time, came soon after Christmas. I got a pin with a little guard, attached to it by a tiny chain, in the form of 26. Also we are beginning work on our annual O-High and have to have our pictures taken for it next week. I dread to have mine taken for I never take a good one but I guess I'll have to. If it happens to be good I'll send you one.

Jan. 24. A whole week has gone by and I have not found time to finish this letter. Exams have begun for the first semester and Gerry and Marjorie spend much time studying. In high school we don't have any real exams but just numerous tests instead. In American History we are reviewing the whole semesters work in portions and every day for the next four days we will write on one or two questions. That is nearly as bad as an exam I think. Our other teachers are only giving us tests.

Last Tuesday something very new in the way of entertainment came here. It was called the Clavilux and was presented by Thomas Wilfred. We were very curious to see what it was so all of us went to it and were not in the least disappointed. It was a play of lights on a screen which was managed by a keyboard something like an organ. Mr. Wilfred first told us something of the origin of "light as a fine art" and how he had become interested in it and had developed it to what it is now. His selections were like musical selections each having a name and a subject. He first showed us the primary colors with which he worked as blue, yellow, red, and how combinations of these colors make other shades and altogether they made white. They were the most beautiful colors and he made them shade into one another so prettily. One of his selections was the ocean. He made an almost perfect one, rippling the water and everything. He also made queer figures, moving them around on the screen, throwing different colors on them and making them large and small. It was wonderful to watch all these weird patterns ever changing but the lights were so strong and bright that they were tiring to the eye. Gerry's eyes troubled her so that she had to shut them but it didn't trouble M. and me much. The clavilux just gave a glimpse of what could be done along that line and I wish you all could have seen it.

Lots and lots of love to you and Father and Mother,
Kathleen

Dear Father and Brothers and Sisters:-

Just one month ago today we looked at Phebe's face for the last time. It seems a long [time] ago. I knew that she and I had grown very close to each other, but it was closer than I realized. As letters of sympathy keep coming with nearly every mail, I realize anew how deeply she impressed people. Mama says that the number is nearing the hundred mark. It is a new experience for us, and it is a very precious experience. It gives us a new valuation of Christian fellowship. It also puts a new value on life and what our life may mean to others. You people at home are just hearing of her homegoing this week. We are praying for you that you may be given grace and comfort and strength to endure the sorrow that it must bring. The plans of us all have been entirely changed. It is hard to keep receiving letters with plans in them for Phebe's furlough, all of which must now be changed. The letters from the Lacy families are specially near in their sympathy, for Alice was near Phebe's age and her life had run in parallel channels. She died here about two years ago. Then last summer both Dr. and Mrs. Lacy died. They were very close to me in many points of life.

You see I am still writing to you one letter. I hope it is all right. If you prefer the other way just say so. In this way I can get a letter to each one oftener. And I will endeavor to put in a few words of personal thought to each one. For this letter I am saving the thank yous for the Christmas gifts.

For a week now the weather has been very cold. Last Sunday Mama (in this kind of a letter I hardly know whether to write Mama or Ellen) and I pulled out of Foochow and went down to the University. We went down Saturday afternoon and came back Sunday evening. It is the first time I ever went down there without definite work to do. It was a delightful rest. The day was a perfect one, bright, warm and cheerful. The cold snap came after we got back. We were with Roderick and Mrs. Scott and his father and mother. In the afternoon at 4:30 Bishop Hind came down and conducted the Vesper service for the students and faculty. This past week has been filled with meetings of the Congregational church of Foochow, - committees planning the work for this year. Last Tuesday evening Ellen and I were over at Hua Nang, the Woman's College of the Meth. Mission for dinner with Misses Ehly and McClurg, they were in our house on Kuliang when Marjorie and Kathleen were there, in about 1917. They are just leaving on furlough.

The last mail brought your letters in reply to my first about Phebe's illness. And your reference to the paper statements that a bomb had burst in Foochow College and President Beard barely escaped with his life. This made good copy. The fact that it was based on is this. At about that time one morning some mischievous boy put a firecracker in the drawer of the table on the platform of the College Chapel. It happened that on that day I led chapel prayers and they were very short. The Student Council met at the close of chapel and it was during this meeting that the firecracker went off. The table top was made of quarter inch boards and it was broken. No one was injured. The boys got rather upset, naturally, and some of them jumped out of the window and one hurt his back but it is all right now.

Have I written that about a month ago one class decided to bolt at the demand of three or four boys who saw that they could not pass their term's work? These few compelled the whole class to sign a paper to go out. Three boys stood out. But even these went home, on leave of absence. The Faculty expelled the whole class and then allowed the ones who were not bad to return. Some of those who were leaders in getting the others to leave stood near the school gate one morning and struck some of those who were coming to school. These boys who were struck came right into the school and told the whole story. I went at once and reported to the police and two boys were arrested. They have since been released on bail. But we have had a very quiet school, since.

Commencement comes next Wednesday. We go on to complete examinations until Feb. 4th. Then there are some things that must be done to finish up the year. On Feb. 8th Mr. Carpenter of the C.M.S. College and Miss Phillips of the Union Kindergarten are to be married. On the same day in the same place I am to marry Ieu Suio Ling and the daughter of the school monitor. Then I must go to the hospital for a slight operation. And after that I have not planned. Ned Smith and Grace want us to come up to Ing Tai.

I must close this and leave a little space for the personals.

Dear father:

It is a very great pleasure to see your hand writing, and I do appreciate it. The Christmas gifts came all right. I opened them with Phebe while she was in bed. The wash cloths remind me of you folks every morning and when I feel like it I perfume up with the toilet accessories. The "cakes" are as delicious as ever. I eat them very slowly- the last about May or June.

I am glad for Oliver and Grace that Jeanie Drew remembered him. I judge Oliver was pretty good to him during the past few years.

I sent to you a set of photos of Phebe's funeral and also a handbook on Fukien, a chapter of which I wrote. In a short time I will send other photos showing the grave.

We think of you often. The notes from Stanley and Myra are very interesting. They give us a glimpse into the home.

Very lovingly

Will.

Dearest Sisters:-

I suppose you got the China letter yesterday, too. Poor dear Phebe, I wonder if she knew Mother when she arrived. God spared her just long enough to let them have a few words together anyway. What a terrible shock to mother, after having anticipated being with Father and Phebe at the end of the voyage. And what a terrible struggle for Father waiting for Mother and wondering whether or not Phebe would last. Wasn't his letter wonderful in spirit and sentiment? Phebe certainly won her way into many hearts and lives, and will be missed wherever she made friends.

At times I simply can't make it seem possible yet. After not having seen her for five years, and having her so far away, and happening so long ago- its very hard to realize. Just think of what Mother and father were going through while we were having such a jolly Christmas day! - and vacation. It seems almost irreverent to think of all of the fun and jollity I've had since way back before Christmas when mother and father were in such sorrow, and I would have been, had I only known.

If we only could have all been together. We can be thankful that Mother got over there when she did, and that mother and father have each other to find comfort in.

Would that we five could be together. You poor girls received the news at a bad time- right in the midst of exams. I went up to school today, but didn't do much actual teaching- let my leaders do most of it. Tomorrow (Fri.) we have no school, but we teachers have to take inventory and make out reports.

Tonight I was to go to "No, No Nanette" with Russell Christie but Mrs. Croley called him up to explain and to cancel the date. Just now I was called to the door and received a box of ten lovely pink rose-buds with a little card of sympathy from Russell. It touched me deeply. I wish I could place the roses myself on dear Phebe's grave. We may never be able to do that. Here again, we are so far away and so helpless as far as doing anything is concerned. Do you suppose we five could get together and get, or at least help get a stone or marker or some kind. Maybe they'll have it all done before we can get any word to them. What do you girls think? If not that what could we do?

I sent the letter that I got, on to Aunt Molly asking her to send it back. Father asked me to do that.

Mrs. Croley was very much pleased with Jerry's letter- also with Monnies. I think she appreciates your tho't of her more than she really shows, and she shows a great deal of appreciation.

I'm still awaiting spring vacation with great joy for I'm so anxious to see you all again.

Monnie see if you can't find more words in the papers every day, if they give you such a sudden writing inspiration.

The radio is still holding it's place as a novelty, and we have had lots of people in to hear it.

Margaret Curtis started for Oberlin today. I wish I were in her shoes.

What did you think of poor Hazel's letter?

Write soon,

Very lovingly,
Dotty.

Dear Sisters:-

Fathers sad but beautiful letter came tonight. I wish I could be with you tonight in communion with our Heavenly Father, thanking him for having given us the sweet and fervent example of our oldest sister, for her sisterly love, for the happy years he gave us with her. My heart is full of thanks to God for her even though he did take her from us in this world.

I think the simple metaphor the Chinese pastor at Wenshan gave about the gardner picking the flowers at the best time was the most beautiful one I have ever heard to compare to God's taking his children to heaven. Phebe must have lived her reward, she must have been perpetually rewarded in her works by the happiness and love she called forth about her.

I am more glad than words can express that Mother got there before the last. I thanked God on my knees for that among many other things. But how too bad that she could not have been there before.

If it would do any good, and if I had the money I could come to you for a day of family worship. It seems best though, and I am helpless to do otherwise, that I stay right on the job and continue my work. I am writing Dot, the Farm, Aunt Mollie and Putnam besides my regular letter to Vivienne.

God be with you my sisters in our sorrow. But let us be glad that he gave us these many sweet years of intimate and loving companionship with our oldest and dearly loved sister.

My love is with you all,
Your brother,
Gould.

Feb. 18, 1926.

Dear Father:-

All day I have promised myself the pleasure of a chat with you some time during the day. Eighty four years ago you began to cry- or do something else to announce your arrival, and you have been doing something ever since. It is given to very few men to live as long as you have, to fewer to live as long and as well and to still fewer to live as long and as well and to reap to the satisfaction from their life as you are now reaping. You have seen all your children make good and your grandchildren making good, and all of them rise up and call you blessed. I congratulate you for it all.

On Feb. 10th I came down here to be operated on. For 11 years my left testicle has been enlarging. I have had a doctor look at it from time to time and they told me it was nothing to worry over. Last summer it grew large fast till it got to be as big as my two fists- no pain, no bother but at times embarrassing. I showed it to doctor Gillette in Sept. and he told me it was nothing to worry over- come down during vacation and have an operation. So Ellen and I came down a week ago yesterday. We arrived at noon. At 2:15 I was breathing the chloroform. At 3:30 I was on my bed. At 4:45 I began to talk- was sea sick. But the inconvenience and pain have been much less than I anticipated. Doctor says I can go home day after tomorrow. Dr. Campbell a young man who came out last Nov did the cutting. He tells me the testicle consists of 7 layers. He cut thru 5 of these. The fluid that collects and causes the enlargement is between the 6th and 7th layers. He dissected the 6th layer and emptied the fluid- in my case about 2/3 of a cup and takes the lining of the 6th layer out. Then the fluid will not recollect. The incision was about 3 in. long. (Hydrocele is the name of my ailment.) The stitches were all removed on the 5th day. The enlargement is not all gone but it will take some time for it all to absorb.

Ellen went to Foochow last Monday, and returned this afternoon with the mail- a big one, with letters from you, Phebe, Mary, Stanley and Myra and Flora to you folks- Geraldine, Dorothy, Gould, Vivienne, Emma, Raymond Jewett and several others.

That bomb is getting to be a big joke. A firecracker placed in a table drawer went off during a meeting of students. In ten minutes the meeting continued and little more was thought of it. Papers in the U.S., Eng. and France and Belgium made copy of it.

It is sad- but at the same time brings a sense of pride that so many and such good letters keep coming to Phebe. I remember when Ruth went that Elizabeth wrote that she dreaded to think of the time when people would stop speaking of her and writing about her.

I must not write more now- the doctor does not know I am in my slippers and dressing gown writing. He has promised me I could dress tomorrow. Ellen read home letters to me from 6:30 -9 p.m.

I'll plan to add some to this tomorrow to catch a steamer out. The first one since Feb. 10.

Lovingly your son
Will.

Feb. 20. 9 p.m.

Ellen and I came home this morning. I am eating and sleeping and getting about all right, but I have no spunk. I suppose that will come gradually.

In your next to last letter you asked if I knew that my mother gave me to God for the ministry when I was born. When I was in Cornwall that three months Ned Seymour used to lecture me regularly every Sun. afternoon on becoming a minister. I laughed at him. About the middle of the term Ella Wooster wrote me asking if I knew Mother dedicated me to the Gospel ministry at my birth. I had never dreamed or heard of anything of the kind. This was rather staggering to me. I had never considered the ministry as even a remote possibility. I had fully decided to call my education complete with that three months at Cornwall. Then I would look about for a good farm and a wife and settle down for life. Within a few days of the coming of Ella Wooster's letter you wrote me, - not alluding to what calling I should choose, but offering to help me as you were able if I wanted to take a college course. This brought me all up standing, and I was sensible enough to decide that any young man was a fool not to take a college course if the way was open to him. I was honest enough also to decide that if I took a college course I must fit for the ministry. I never knew whether you were of one mind with mother in wanting me to be a minister or not till your letter came the other day. It did me a world of good to know that you are pleased with my choice and with my career.

Signs of Spring are everywhere- the apricot trees are putting out leaves, grass is getting green, violets are in bloom, gardens are starting to grow, - We have had two meals of sweet corn this past week. I planted it last October. We have not had any destructive frosts this past winter and it has kept on growing very slowly all winter. I am saving eggs to hatch or rather set.

My but I would like some of your surplus milk and butter. My hens give us all the eggs we want- and they are quite different from the Chinese eggs bought in the stores. I ate these down at the hospital at Pagoda for a week. Then I got some of my own down from Foochow. My pullets began to lay in Nov. and they have been at it ever since. (A big magpie is breaking a twig from the tree just outside to build a spring nest.)

I hope Phebe had a good time at Stanley's, and that the change brought to her rest. I wonder has [she] gotten that 200 lbs. out of her kitchen yet. Sometime when you are in Bridgeport and have lots of time, drop in at the Old Bridgeport Savings Bank and ask the amount of my account there, or ask Oliver to do it. I think I have some there. The interest on Phebe's note on the Shelton mortgage you may just put in the Bank in my name, - in my account. Your last letter tells of the receipt of the $16.00 from Mr. Barker of Brooklyn. I think I told you to send the $100. that Ellen did not get to Geraldine.

I must close to get this into the mail.

With lots of love to all
Will

Dear Children:- and "Grown Ups":

This week I am writing another general letter, with a few personal words in my own inimitable hand at the end.

Night before last came your letters in reply to the news of Phebe's going home. These letters mark a stage in my life and I must keep them. They are with the last letters of Ruth and Mother and Elizabeth and the first letters of Kathleen and other very select letters that I want to look at occasionally. I knew that what you have expressed was there before the occasion had not come to bring it out. As I have read your letters (a letter has come from each of you) there came to me a satisfaction deeper than I ever experienced before. You have the right attitude toward life and toward God and toward death.

More than one hundred letters have come to us expressing sympathy and speaking in the highest terms of Phebe's life and work. But your letters are to me more valuable. May God keep you always able to recognize true worth when you see it. I am not sure that any of us fully recognized the value of Phebe's life. I think I have had a richer opportunity to know her during the past four years than any of the rest of the family. We have been more like brother and sister than Father and daughter. We depended much on each other. She was always so self-effacing that I found myself trying to get her to think more highly of herself. Letters still come from people in China and the mail today Mar. 9th, brought many from the U.S. - all speaking of her wonderful unselfish, helpful character.

School has opened normally with all the students that we want, - about 400. Bible study is elective but nearly the whole bunch have elected Bible.

We expect Dr. and Mrs. Strong, Am. Board Secretary the last of this month. We are planning to entertain them.

I set two hens last Saturday. One sits on eggs from hens that are mostly Rh. Red with Leghorn mixture, that have been with a Wh. Leg. Rooster, the other from hens half Wh. Leg. that have been with a Red. Rooster. They all have only the three strains, i.e. the Reds I brought out in 1921. The Wh. Leg. I bought in 1922 (he is still on the job, is the one referred to above) and the Red, Mary sent from Pekin. (he is the one referred to above).

For myself I am getting back most to normal. I cannot yet do quite as much as before I went to the hospital but I'm improving all the time. To day the Life Insurance Co. sent the blanks to be filled out for Phebe's insurance. It looks as if there was no trouble in getting it.

Mr. Goddard left for Shanghai and the U.S. a week ago today.

Lovingly

Will

[He includes a handwritten note:]

Dear folks:

This last mail brought good letters from Father, Phebe, Stanley and Grace, - and lots of other people as they heard of Phebe's going. What a wonderful thing sympathy is. How it strengthens and gives heart, and how it binds persons together.

Foochow is rather quiet these days- or is it that I have been unusually quiet since going to the hospital- four weeks ago today. The wound is still a little tender but getting normal, and I am getting normal, - have been up at 6:30 a.m. to feed my hens for four or five days now. Sat. last I set two hens on 11 eggs each. It is later than I wanted to do it but the hospital is to blame.

I think of Father as watching the hay now. He used to say March was the longest month for the hay mows- it had 31 days and the stock ate all the time.

I received from the Life Insurance Co. the blanks to be filled out. They are in the works and I will mail them soon.

May God be good to you all and always keep us on the side of His helpers.

Father is mighty good to write so frequently.

Lovingly to all

Will

Dear Mary:-

Below is a copy of a letter which I sent by the last mail.

March 15, 1926.

402-404 Phoenix Nat'l Bank Bldg.

Hartford, Conn. U.S.A.

Mr. Wm. H. Griswold

Dear Sir:-

I am sending to you PROOFS OF LOSS on life of Phebe Kinney Beard. These, Certificate of Claimant, Physician's Certificate, Undertaker's Certificate. These have all been duly signed in the presence of Mr. E.B. Price the American Consul at Foochow, China. I trust that you will find them all in order and that when you have received them, with the policy which I am enclosing you will be able to make the settlement.

Will you please send the $1000.00 to Miss Mary L. Beard, Shelton Conn. I hereby authorize her to receipt for the payment of the $1000.00.

Enclosures 1. Proofs of loss on life of Phebe Kinney Beard.

(1) Certificate of Claimant.

(2) Physician's Certificate.

(3) Undertaker's Certificate.

2. Policy No. 763,891.

Very Sincerely yours,

If for any reason the Insurance Co. does not want to accept your receipt, I am enclosing a receipt which may answer. I do this for I do not want the money sent out here, if it can be avoided.

News is scarce. The term opened normally and every thing has been running very quietly. The teachers are on their job and the students are on their jobs. We were pretty drastic in expelling boys at the end of last term. It looks to me as if some of the boys are now afraid of being connected with the Student Government lest they should appear to be agitators, for the students have not yet organized a government this term.

Dr. Wm. E. Strong telegraphed from Hong Kong yesterday that they would be in Foochow next Wed. March 24th.

My eyes have been giving me head aches for nearly a month. I asked Dr. Kinnear to examine them the other day with the result that I must get new glasses. The ones that Fred send do not work. It is not at all his fault. I sent Helen an embroidered tea cloth and six napkins the other day.

The cold wet rains have come at last. It has poured for the past four days, and altho last Sunday was a beautiful day that made us all take off clothes- we had to put them back on Monday and now we wear overcoats as in winter. I do not see any use in saying anything about Phebe's share in the mortgage. I shall use the interest to help the ?? in school. Just add it to my mortgage. Then mine will be $$1440 + 265 = \1705 - with G.H.[?] Love to all Will.

Dear Geraldine:-

The mail last night brought Phebe's will from Boston. She makes you her beneficiary. Uncle Elbert was her administrator, but as the will is to probated here, he has been to Boston and has re-signed and asked me to administer the estate. There will be about $400 mex. here now in the bank. There are $20 in War Saving Stamps. This Certificate came with the will, last night. I am writing to the Secretary of the Treasury to see what is to be done. These Stamps were due Jan. 1st. 1925. Then there is $12.50 in gold coin that I found in one of her trunks. The watch that she took from home she did not use for more than a year before she died. She bought a cheap one to use till she went home. I cannot find either one. She had a lot of good dresses that Mama talked of sending on to you girls, but she has not got about it. She had a good outfit of underclothes and bed linen and towels. There are some curios that she had not sent home. These do not have great value. Only a short time before she was taken ill she bought two beautiful pieces of jade. She showed them to me and said she paid $12 for them. They are beauties. She has some piece goods not made up. Her furniture will go back to the Board, under the rule that if a missionary does not give five years of service the furniture purchased with the outfit money reverts to the Board. There are two beautiful Peking rugs, one about five feet by eight, one round about 2 ½ feet in diameter. Do you want us to bring these home when we come or do you want them sooner? She had a Corona typewriter, it is not in no. 1 condition now. But with a little outlay it could be made a good machine. Mr. Belcher writes of a savings account at home (total about $193.00). I do not remember that she spoke to me of it. Where or how much it is I do not know. Her share of Grandma Beard's estate is invested in a mortgage on a house in Shelton, with several of the rest of us. This amounts to $265 I think. Aunt Mary is taking care of it. I will ask her to just change Phebe's name and write yours, and send you the interest each six months. It will be at least six months before I can do anything about settling the estate for the Consul must give that much time after the administrator has been appointed before the property can be disposed of. You can write any wishes you have, tho, anytime and I will try to carry them out. You had better write Mama about the clothing and linens etc. She also has a set of Japanese cups and saucers and a few plates. There are also some rather nice pictures in frames. There are also some silver spoons. She had a gold ring made for Aunt Ruth out of the bows of her great grandmother Nichols' glasses. This she took off a week before she died and asked me to take charge of it lest it drop off her finger and be lost. What do you want done with it? You will realize that this is not an exhaustive list of her things but the most of them.

I enclose a check for $50. given me Dwight Goddard. This will help on the expenses of you girls. The Life Insurance ought to come in time to save you from Bankruptcy. I have filled out all blanks and sent them on asking that the money be sent to Aunt Mary, and I have asked her to bank it for me. This I plan to use to help you girls thru school.

I must not write more tonight. My eyes are troubling me. I have had them examined by Dr. Kinnear and [edge paper torn] new glasses are ordered. God keep you all unselfish.

Lovingly, Father.

March 21st. 1926.

Dear Mary:-

In my last letter I suggested that you transfer Phebe's share of the mortgage in the Shelton house to me. This was too previous, for the mail last Friday evening brought her will which makes Geraldine her beneficiary. So please change Phebe's name to Geraldine, and send the interest to Geraldine. Last week I sent the blanks that the Insurance Co. sent to me back to them all made out properly (I hope) and with them the Policy. I sent you a copy of the letter I wrote the Co. In this I asked them to accept your signature on the receipt and to send you the $1000.00. I will ask Geraldine to let you know what she and the girls will need to get them thru the year, and will you send them out of this $1000.00 that amount she names and put the rest in the Derby Savings Bank, in my name.

In this letter I am returning that check for $20.00 which you sent to Phebe last year. Pardon me for not doing it before. I will try to get some of the things you want and send them on. The truth is I have had my time pretty well filled for the past five months.

We are expecting Dr. Strong and his party i.e. Mrs. Strong and a Mrs. Decater next Wednesday. They will stay with us if plans carry.

I have the ground all ready for corn but it is too cold yet to plant. Last year I planted at this time and again three weeks later. The later planting was ripe as soon as the earlier.

We are just getting the news of the settlement of the coal strike. I judge that Frank Grant is some man. He knows how to keep still and how to wait, two very important factors in dealing with the animal MAN. I am glad to be able to think the scarcity of coal has not troubled you at all for strikes do not stop the growth of wood on the farm.

I will enclose a receipt for the life insurance in case they are not willing to accept your name. I must have sent this in the last letter.

Tonight the Y.M.C.A. of the school is putting on The Thief of Bagdad. They will likely clear some $20, selling the tickets at 13 cents each and paying $50.00 for the film.

I hope Phebe and Flora will not get jealous of you and Father the last few letters have had so much business in them that you had to do with that I have addressed them to you.

The tie for my birthday has just arrived. It is a beauty, Thank you all for it. One of those that Elizabeth worked stars in is still in existence. I washed it in gasoline and wore it for ten years. It is past usefulness now.

With love to all,

Will.

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

April 22nd. 1926

Dear Folks in the Home Land:-

Here begins another general letter. I think I started the last one while Dr. and Mrs. Strong were here. We enjoyed them greatly. They are very easy to entertain and both are jolly. He does not bring shop to the parlor or to the table. Our mission did not serious trouble him with knotty problems. I think he had a fairly pleasant time with us. He had an acute attack of nephritis when in India and the doctor told him to cut out all addresses and be careful of cold and wet. He made no address while here. He attended mission meeting three days and had a reception with the Chinese and one with the foreigners. They sort of boarded around while here but that was not strenuous. Twice the doctor examined and found no trace of nephritis. The weather was delightful all the time they were here till the night they left. Mrs. Strong is a painter and she found plenty to keep her busy. She did the white pagoda. I wrote that the Salt Commissioner sent his launch down to Pagoda after them. We called on him to thank him for his kindness. He received us very graciously and gave both Dr. Strong and myself his photo with his autograph on it. He said that Wu Pei Fu was going to send him to the U.S. two years from now as his Ambassador. He would surely go to Boston and call on Dr. Strong at the Board Rooms. The latest news from Peking looks as if Wu might do it. Then he sent word that he wanted to return the call. So we fixed a date and received him. His guard ran all over the house. He asked for Mrs. Strong. Dr. Strong and I invited the ladies in and showed them off. His wife often goes with him, and receives with him on social occasions when they entertain. She can do it in fine style too.

The Strong's liked Chinese food and they had it three times at least. They did not want anything to eat after coming home. It is interesting that often foreigners often eat a meal after going to a Chinese feast. And the reverse is as true. Only the other day one of the students of the graduating class here was invited to a foreign table. He said "I felt as if I had had nothing to eat."

Ellen, Miss Perkins and I went down to Pagoda with Dr. and Mrs. Strong and Mrs. Decatur. We left here at 3:30 p.m., got to the river at 4:00 and were in our little motor boat in about ten minutes and off. We stopped at Dr. Gillettes and put the ladies ashore to go direct to Dr. Gillettes and Dr. and Mrs. Campbell's. Dr. Strong and I went across the bay to put the baggage on the Ning Shin. It was dark by the time we got back to Dr. Gillettes. It was raining and cold, we refused an invitation to supper and over night. It was a cold ride up river, but a cosy motor boat kept us fairly comfortable and we reached home ten minutes before ten. Mr. Hightower was up and he built a good fire and we got good and warm before going to bed and were all right.

A week ago last Friday we were at dinner with Civil Governor Sah. These officials know how to entertain all right. They do it so naturally. Governor Sah rented two big Brussels carpets and had his reception room very cheery. The colors were very bright. As we arrived he asked us to be seated in the large reception room at a round table, very informally. Each of us was given a liquer glass with some kind of a custard beancurd, little cubes of sangcha jelly and other fruit in a sweet liquid. We ate it with a spoon. Two graduates of Foochow College were there. One is teaching some boys in Go. Sah's yamen and the other was Mr. Sing Ce Dung, the leading Y.M.C.A. Secretary now. He was the man whom Gov. Sah depended upon to see that all went properly. As we went into the dining room and as the Gov'r was seating the guests, Ce Dung said to me. "I hope it is all right for I arranged the seats." If Ellen were writing this she would give you the menu. I remember that we had some delicious fish and turkey, apples, and navel oranges from California. The Governor is very democratic. He talks and does not seem afraid of telling things. In conversation that evening he remarked, with a twinkle in his eye, something like this, Military Governor Ciu wanted to flood Foochow with paper currency, as Chang Tso Ling did the north. But I would not put my name to the scheme, and he could not do it. Politically Foochow is quiet and some of the cause is due to Governor Sah.

We have had two and a half days of vacation for the boys to "Take a trip." They went in all directions and had a good time I judge. Each class went in different direction. Ellen and I did not go with any of them. I took the occasion to go to Kuliang on Friday. I have not been up since we moved down last Sept. I do not remember to have staid away so long before, since we have been in Foochow. The cottage has stood the elements well. It will take perhaps $30 to fix it up. I rented the two west rooms to ladies from the Meth. mission in Hing Hua.

This here is the month of roses. Ellen picks some half dozen bouquets every morning. When I come down stairs each morning, the dining room floor is a carpet of rose petals that have fallen off during the night. Friday I picked some azalias from the mountain. These make a change. We remarked how we wished we could send some of our superfluous roses over to you.

I have actually begun to send the pins and cuff buttons. Thus far I have sent Apr. 12 to Stanley and Myra. 16th to Elbert and Emma, and Oliver and Grace, 19, to Phebe and Mary, 20 to Flora and Willis and Etta. 12 also to Dot. In a day or two I shall mail to Kathleen and Millicent. These all are sent in boxes of jasimine tea. I do hope the pins and buttons will be acceptable and usable. Phebe and I worked out the idea of the buttons together, and she was delighted with the pins. You may have to get the pins changed. This is the best I have been able to do here. I think you can have a brass pin put on with little expense. I have been wearing the cuff buttons for some time and they work perfectly with me. I have not been able to get all the cuff buttons made yet. All the things are pure jade, not the most expensive kind, but real jade. It is impossible to get every pin and button alike. I hope you will not get jealous of each other. I am remembering Ruth's birthday May 12. And here's congratulation for Mary on May 26th.

Dear Phebe and all the Beards:

I want specially to tell Mary that she did right to destroy the orders I sent for Ellen on the Derby Savings Bank. I wrote her some time ago to send from Phebe's insurance, to Geraldine enough to see them thru the year. I am enclosing an order on the Derby Savings Bank for $50.00. This is for Kathleen. Will you send it to her please. We could not well get along without you home folks to do our business for us. I'd like to show you my 28 fine chicks, 6 in. high corn, 10 in. high beans, peas in bloom. I'd like you to taste my 5 in. in diam. beets, eat some lettuce, radishes, cabbage, swiss chard, turnips and celery. I would like to be home and help fix the corn ground. I hope you have found a good man to buy the milk.

It pleases me much that Dan is coming to the farm- all success to you and him in the work this summer. Father will keep things steady.

Lots of love to all
Will

Dear Folks in the Home Land:-

This is a beautiful day, just right for the 9th of June in Connecticut. We had two pretty hot days last week, and then a good rain and the last three days have been all right with today superb. Farmers all about this part of the country are happy because the weather has been just right for rice. Yesterday Ellen, Mr. Hightower, Miss Betty and Miss Mary Cushman (Wenshan) and I went for a walk out east of the City. Some of you who remember Foochow will recall the mounds on the plain east of the city where the victims of the war with the Japanese some 300 years ago, are buried. We looked at these then we looked up a village called Siong Nguong. Here we looked up a - - what shall I call it?, Some 30 or more years ago a very good man died. He was so good that the people decided he ought not to be buried as an ordinary man, so they lacquered his body sitting as a Buddha. We found him and I think we thought that the story might be true. It was an ideal day for a hike and we had an ideal hike.

My chickens were not so elated over the hike as we were when we got home. It was about their bedtime. I plan to let them out for an hour each afternoon before dark. But the older ones would not venture out and the younger ones from which I have taken the hen, were frantic, or rather the old hen was. It did not take her long to lead the whole flock down stairs to the coop. I am still giving these a duck's egg occasionally. The chicks wanted to eat the egg but the old hen wanted to get to bed. It is one continual fight to keep the chickens old and young from their enemies. I sometimes wonder why the Chinese do not raise more chickens, but with hawks, rats and wild cats and the usual diseases I guess they have little encouragement. Last week I took the hen away from the older brood of chicks. I put her in a run with three other old fowls. I have a student whom I try to make responsible for shutting up and fastening the hens every night. One night soon after I had put her in the boy did not count the fowls but just shut the door. The next morning this hen was half eaten by a wild cat.

I have not mailed any more pins or cuff buttons. I am having more buttons made, there were not enough to go round. I had to wait two weeks until more stone came in.

Every mail still brings tribute to the rich beauty of Phebe's life. What rich heritage it is to belong to her family and to share in the good name she made for herself and for her family. We are still keeping flowers on her grave. Last week I put a large bouquet of roses, which are so abundant this month, on the mound. We are trying to make up our minds what shrub or flower to plant there that will keep alive all the time, and blossom some of the time.

So Marjorie and Kathleen remember the pair of oreoles that summered with us while they were here? That pair or some others are here this year, - only two. They are quite tame and we see them every day, and hear them many times a day. Mama has tried to play some of their strains on the piano.

The last week was the week in which China's Day of Shame fell. The real day is today. That is the day on which Yang Shi Kai [probably Yuan Shi Kai] signed the 21 demands of the Japanese. But today is Sunday and the students knew that it would not be fitting for Christian schools to have a holiday of national shame on Sunday. So we had the day on Friday. This was the day when the demands were made. We had a very nice meeting in the church Friday with addresses by a student and two of the teachers. This afternoon some of the boys are out in the villages distributing literature and talking. The students of the University sent a request to the Dean on Thursday requesting a holiday on Friday. The Dean sent it back to the students with the remark that it was too late, the Faculty could not consider it. They hid behind a rule that any student may at any time leave the campus and take his outs. I do not think there was any bad blood there. With us all is very amicable, students and faculty acting together.

For a week now it has been impossible to buy any wheat flour in Foochow. The Military has imposed a tax of some 60 cents on each bag of 50 lbs. The cake shops and other shops that sell or use it will not stand for it. Fortunately we have about 100 lbs. of wheat on hand and can get plenty more, and we have a hand mill. Bibas are delicious. Mulberries are just getting ripe. String beans are in blossom. That means they will be here soon. I shall pick peas tomorrow. We hope to get one meal of rubarb. It is the first we ever had in China. I got the roots in Nanking. And Ellen brought one from the U.S. I am soon sending another order for seeds to Burpee, Phil. These are to plant in Aug. and Sept. and later. Corn is a foot high and more.

You are just planting corn. How I would like to get there and help. I wonder if father would trust me to do any of the work. Or would I need to ask Dan now.

The conditions in and around Peking I suppose are on the front pages of all your papers. They do not effect us here at all. We read the telegrams and the papers and wait for the next turn of the wheel. A very good friend of mine, Rev. Diong Iu Seng tells the following story as authentic. The bandits near Kucheng seized and carried off about 30 miles a young man, the son of a well-to-do family, and a very earnest Christian family. At night the bandits placed two men at his head, two at his feet and two outside the locked door, all armed. He was tied hand and foot. In the middle of the night he was praying and he knew the four men guarding him were all sound asleep. He began to plan his escape. Then he thought, I do not know the road. The room became Dark. Then he prayed and had faith again. The room became light. He gnawed the string from one wrist and free it. With the free hand he untied the other. Then he untied his feet. He rose and walked to a window which was open. He got out. The two guards outside were snoring. He kept praying. The light narrowed down to a path. He followed. Soon he came to a house. He knocked. The people refused to open because they were afraid of bandits. He persisted and when the door was opened he saw his own cousin. He was taken in and soon they led him home.

We are both well and send lots of love to you all.

[The following is handwritten:]

Dear Mary and All the Rest:-

This is Tuesday May 11, and it is hot,- quite a change from Sunday,- good for corn. Your last letters were full of stories of muddy roads. There is one good quality of mud- it disappears before the sun and the sun has always come out to dry it up. I hope Stanley and Myra and the kiddies will get straightened out when the warm weather comes.

To day I mailed pins to Abbie and Edith. I have two more pairs of cuff buttons. I'll mail to father and Ben shortly. This p.m. I sold to Miss Hartwell my Wh. Leg. Rooster 6 lbs. 6 oz., 1 hen 6-6, 1 hen 7-9, this last is too fat. I hope they will feed her less. So I have only the 8 young hens and 20 chicks here and 8 chicks in the country.

We are thinking Kuliang ward- but nothing doing for 7 weeks yet. I wrote Mrs. Wilson the other day thanking the Kgs. Daughters thru her for $25. received last Nov- Phebe's illness and death delayed my answer. God is very good to us all. May we so live as to make it possible for Him to keep on giving us good things.

Lovingly Will.

Dear Sisters:-

I'm still living even tho' you haven't had any evidences of the fact. Yes, this last month or two has been a terribly strenuous time for me- what with a May Day program on my hands, a baseball team, and a track team to coach, and (the best part of it all) the evenings with Harold [Harold Newberg]. Oh, how I do wish I had my Mother, a sister or even a friend to confide in at this time- I mean, right here with me. Mrs. Croley has no sympathy for me at all- that is, I don't feel free to say anything about it to her, for she seems to be rather "put out" about my giving up the bunch there, or Arthur or something- I can't quite make it out. She could make it wonderfully nice for us if she only wanted to, but she is very indifferent to it all. Before I started going with Harold, she seemed to like him very well, and what has changed her attitude toward him, I don't know. Basil is the only one in the house besides me that treats him the way I'd like to have them, therefore not much of our time is spent at the house, as I should like to have it. I have asked that we wait till after the summer vacation before we make a definite agreement as to our future. He can hardly see it that way, but I feel that the separation during the summer will be a good test for us both.

Last week end a bunch of twelve of us spent two days in the cottage belonging to Harold's landlord way up north on Indian Lake- beautiful country, just like Higgins Lake.

The party consisted of Mr. Johnson our metal shop teacher, and June Munn, Mr. Adams, assistant principal, and his sister from Detroit, our dentist and his girl from Bay City, Mr. and Mrs. Manning and their two little boys, and Harold and me. We surely had a grand time. Mrs. Curtis and a friend, and John and one of his friends were up in their cottage that same week-end. Curtis' cottage is just ½ mile from the one we were in, so we saw quite a bit of them. Sunday morning they came over and we all started off in four cars for the Au Sable River about 15 or 20 miles further north. It was a beautiful drive and every once in a while we'd stop to get out and view some particular place of interest. Our first stop was the high, high watch tower on the top of a good high hill. Most of the party climbed the hill, but when it came to the tower, - higher much than Grandpa's windmill and nothing but a little ladder like that one going all the way up- four of the men and myself were the only climbers. The view was as beautiful as that from cousin Dede's tower. As we went on to the river we stopped twice to see what they call the "High Banks"- huge sand hills extending right up from the river. A few of us ran or fell down two or three of the hills and climbed back up again. It reminded me of the Silver Bay hills and made me crazy to do some more real climbing. We visited the huge dam the "Springs" and other places- a very delightful trip. I don't know what we'll do for Decoration Day. Mrs. Croley has asked us to go to the cottage. We may do that. Do you people get Monday off? We are not sure yet whether we do or not.

Those Wright Players are still here. I have seen every play but one and all have been good. Some of their plays were- "Nothing But the Truth", "The Old Soak", "Their First Year: (the one I didn't see) "Smilin' Three", "Common Clay", "The Bat", and this week's play is "The Alarm Clock".

June 1. this letter has been about three weeks on the way. I'm just so busy that I just don't get anything done for myself these days. Tomorrow our track meet comes off, then that will be off my mind. Baseball finishes up next week and that will be a tremendous relief. Then I put my May Day on again and I'm helping with the dances in a Hawaiian Operetta putting on a flag drill for Flag Day and 101 different things right at the end of school. It's hectic living!!

No summer school for me. I've decided I can't afford it. Now I'm in a huge quandary as to what to do. I guess the best thing for me to do it to help Aunt Myra out this summer. None of you have decided to go there, have you? Jinks, how I'd love to be at Eaglesmere with you girls! I suppose it's too late to get in and I didn't even send in the blank. It's all my own fault. I just haven't done anything but "be busy" this last few months. I can understand just how hard it was for Isabelle to get anything done at the end of last year.

Harold and I have been together over Decoration Day week-end at the lake with Mrs. Croley and it has been wonderful. Mrs. Croley went up Thurs. and put a first coat of paint on the cottage floor. We followed her on Sat. We all three fell to and put the second coat on Sat. Afternoon. Harold painted the canoe while I varnished some chairs. More fun! Sun. morning we went in swimming before breakfast and took it easy for the rest of the day. Swam again in the evening and came back to Saginaw Mon. morning.

There is so much I want to talk over with you girls, that I simply must see you soon. I still don't know about Commencement. I'm trying my best to get down. That won't be such a good time to talk tho', with such a rush on, and so many guests around, but I just want to see you anyway. If I do come down it probably won't be till Fri. I can get there for Punk's exercises then.

Did you hear that Mrs. Garland was dead? I found it out thru Russell Christie who had made another trip to Springfield and tried to look her up. Somehow he found it out so stopped to search for her.

Mr. Stapleton called me up this morning just as I pounced out of bed. I'm not going to see him for he leaves this A.M.

I think of you girls so often even tho I don't write. You must all be powerfully busy now. Your last two letters have some questions that I can't remember now, so will promise to write, if only a card, later to answer them.

Do you suppose you girls would have pull enuf to get me into Eaglesmere with you? I hate to ask you, for I've been so terribly neglectful.

Very much love to you all,

Dot.

Dear Folks in the Home Land:-

Here's another general letter. I have heard nothing that would indicate that anyone is kicking, so I continue the method.

To day is Memorial Day at home and it is also Memorial Day here. A year ago today occurred the deplorable Shanghai affair. Some of the students have tried to have a demonstration. Two deputations came to see our students but our boys told them that they had not planned to go out and that they were just about to hold a meeting of their own. We asked the local police to send four men to sit at our gate and be ready if any outside influences threatened to bother. They came but their presence was sufficient to keep things quiet. The school met at 9:00 a.m. and listened to a recital of China's wrongs from other nations from 1842 down to the present. Then to an address by the Dean on what to do about it. His talk was a very good one and may be summed up in this sentence,- We must set our own house in order, and to do this each man just see to it that he himself is right. It did not have the label of "sermon" but it was what a sermon ought to be. It is now 12:50. The streets are fully guarded by armed soldiers and police. There was a little fuss between the students of one or two schools and some police this a.m. about 8:30, but that has been all. This day is too far gone for more trouble and we look to quiet the rest of the day.

We plan to begin reviews a week from tomorrow. That gives us the vacation feel. School closes July 1st. Then comes Kuliang. Mama is here this year. But I cannot but think of all the plans that Phebe and I had made. She had her passport all ready and paid for. We used to have good times planning each year for the summer. This was our home life. We had other people with us every year and pleasant households, but we made the home, had our own servants and regulations.

A week ago yesterday Mr. Hightower and I went to Chong Ha, about fifteen miles away. We started in a rain that bid fair to keep up. But about 2:30 p.m. it stopped and we had beautiful weather all the rest of the time. We go by land about seven miles, then take a boat for another seven miles. At the place where we were to take the boat we waited for some students of Foochow College whose homes were in Chong Ha. With them came a student from Fukien Christian University whose home is in Chong Ha. He knew a boatman who was serving the navy. He had a fine large boat furnished with real chairs etc. We piled in and with tide against us did not reach the destination till 8 p.m., but the moon was light and we walked in the two miles with no difficulty. The preacher at Chong Ha knows that I bring no food so we were no sooner washed than he called us to supper at 8:30. Then soon to bed. The next day, Sunday was a perfect day, cool and clear. The interesting place in Chong Ha is the Christian school. This was organized and is run under a committee from the village, from several men in business in Foochow whose homes were in Chong Ha and from the church. The preacher is really the head. Here are 110 boys and girls. Seven girls. There are 11 boys in Foochow College from this village, mostly from this school. These boys are the preacher's right hand men. He calls on them to pray in the morning service. Think of Mr. Look or Mr. English calling on a High School boy to offer the main prayer in church on a Sunday morning, the four teachers are young men graduates of Foochow College and of the Union Normal and Middle school. We were up at 4:30 a.m. Monday and found the same boat waiting for us to take us back. I forgot to say that when we reached the landing Sat. evening the F.C.U. student insisted on paying the boat hire, $1.00. This was a new experience for me. This village has recently built a new temple at an expense of $2000.00. The Christians refused to contribute. But to be fair and avoid trouble they build a much needed road from the village to the river. We walked on this road and it was a good one. We reached home just at noon. Marjorie and Kathleen will remember that they and Mama went with me to this village once, I performed a marriage ceremony, stopping a heathen ceremony to do it with a Christian ceremony. We had to wait so long for the wedding to begin that we lost the tide and it took us a day longer to get home.

Last Wed. I went to the Consulate and all the papers were fixed up and I am now the executor of Phebe's Estate. The law compels me to wait six months to wind up the business. In Geraldine's last letter she suggested something in the line of a memorial for Phebe. I forget whether in a former letter I wrote that some of her friends here talked of this some time ago. The Anti Cob Club voted at its last meeting to give $20.00 toward this. It will be in the form of a scholarship. The sum is $500.00 mex. The interest on this will be just the amount for a scholarship to help a girl for one year. Phebe has about $230.00 in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank here. She has furniture that would if sold complete $500.00. If other amounts should be given I would hope that it might be possible to also buy for the school a piano. This would cost $600. I am writing in mex. I forgot to count in a $50 debenture that she had in the Kuliang Council. And I also forgot that her furniture may belong to the Board for she was not quite five years in the service. Write any thoughts you have on this memorial question.

I am sending the War Stamps with the proper papers to Uncle Elbert as the Stamps were bought in Putnam.

I shall send this to the Oberlin address asking the Post Master to forward. I do not know where to send Dorothy's.

Mr. Goertz and family will be on their way home before next Sunday.

I have a new pair of glasses that Dr. Kinnear tells me to wear all the time. I obey indifferently. But they fit me and I can read with comfort. They are bifocal and it takes patience to get used to them. They have stopped the headaches.

Dear Father:

Mary's letter of April 29th came this morning. I am enclosing two orders on the Derby Savings Bank for $50.00 each. I also enclose a check for $5.00 from John G. Matthews of Berea, Ohio. Will you put this in the Derby Savings Bank for me. I am sorry to hear that the Life Insurance had to be put into the Bank in my name. It caused Mary a lot of bother. One of these days I shall send to someone in Shelton several pairs of jade cuff buttons. I have them all now- just looking for time to do them up and send.

We are watching the tactics of both "wets" and "drys" at home [Probably referring to The National Prohibition Law Hearings of April 1926]. The "wets" must be anxious or they would not be so furious. I look to see a lot of "drys", who now are keeping quiet come to the polls and vote in the right way. I do not take much stock in the straw votes that some newspapers have carried on.

Chickens are still all here 20 young ones with me that I care for myself and 8 in the country. Eight hens 1 yr. old- I sold two hens and a rooster the other day= 19 lbs. and 6 oz. 40 cents per to live weight- one hen 7 lbs. 6 oz. That is pretty good weight for Foochow and a fair price. We have had almost no sun in May, much cloudy weather and good rains. Corn is in tassel and ears set and silk is seen. String beans are find. I wish I could send some over. We have had pie plant twice. With love Will

June 13th. 1926

Dear Folks, Everybody:-

This is Children's Day at Home. I hope you have as beautiful day there as we have here. It has rained for a month now almost steadily. We have not had two consecutive days of nice weather. Over a month ago I took out my winter clothes and hung them on the line to sun preparatory to putting them away for the summer. They still lie on the bed in the guest changer, waiting for sun. It is out this morning but it is Sunday and I'll wait till tomorrow to see if he is still out.

Last Sunday Ellen, Mr. Hightower and I went to church here in the morning, and left as soon as the service was over and went over to the river and took a boat to Uong Iong, the village to which the South Side people go in boats when they go to Kuliang. We now have a school and a preaching place there. It was about 1:30 before we reached the place. The preacher and the teacher there had dinner ready for us and we ate a very nice Chinese dinner prepared by two Chinese men. Then we walked about the village some and then to the house where they hold service and the place was packed, with children, men and a few women. After the service we walked home, about two hours walk. The threatening clouds of the morning had vanished and we had a very pleasant walk, - a very pleasant day all round.

Did I write that Mary Cushman had her appendix out about three weeks ago? She left the hospital on the tenth day and is getting on perfectly. Dr. Campbell did the job. He is a fine surgeon.

Horace E. Campbell, M. D.

WHEN not in the operating room, he will be found in his mechanical workshop or pursuing illusive trends in theology or indulging in his present fancy for ancient pottery.

Mrs. H. E. Campbell

SHE beats no drums over her high efficiency quotient but we always rest assured that any project which she undertakes will be a decided success.

Jane and Anne Campbell

ANNE, aged 5—"I'd like to live in the hospital." Jane, aged 7 "You can't unless you are sick." Anne "Well, Mr. So-and-So is there." Jane "Yes, but he's got a broken nerve."

The Goertz family left the compound last Monday. It rained as they left but we got them into the little motor boat all right and they reached the steamer all safely. Some of the Chinese went down to see them on the steamer. One of the pastors told me last night that when Paul, about six, saw the steamer he opened his eyes wide and waved his hands and shouted, "A very big boat, a very big boat." And his little sister Ruth copied his words and gestures. They had not seen a steamer before. Before another Sunday I suppose we shall say good bye to Miss Armstrong and Mr. Neff. Then Miss Atwood will start. She is going by way of Europe, and she hoped that the "Coblentz", a N.D.L. steamer would stop in at Foochow for tea and she could take it here, thus saving the fare to Hong Kong by coast steamer. But Military Governor Ciu has put a tax on about everything that the people use or sell and tea is among them. So the tea merchants will not buy tea and so the "Coblentz" will not stop. If these magnates only knew now they inconvenience people, - - -

Hazel M. Atwood

AFFECTIONATELY called "Uncle Ache" by the children, she helps relieve the aches and pains of all who come to the Kate C. Woodhull Hospital. She loves the out-of-doors and adds zest to any hike.

Miss Armstrong and Mrs. and Mr. Allen have had three or four feasts already as good bye feasts. The change in the attitude of the students toward the foreigners is most apparent. Separate classes and the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.P.S.C.E. and the Junior Middle and the Faculty and special groups each have given these people a farewell. And they also give presents. The feeling of friendship and goodwill is genuine. Miss Armstrong lives in Jewett City, Conn. That is somewhere between Putnam and Norwich. If any of you are in that section, look her up. She will be there only for this year. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have done very exceptional work teaching in all departments of the school as the need existed and doing it in such a fine spirit of selflessness and helpfulness, that all wish they would stay. But they will likely go to Kuliang with Bertha for a month and then go home via Europe. They are wholesome, God-fearing, helpful people about 60 in actual years but not over 40 in spirit, up-to-date in most everything, - theology included.

Ellen and Mr. Hightower have gone over South Side to the Vesper Service and Ellen was going to put some special pink flowers on Phebe's grave.

The mail came this afternoon and brought letters from Phebe M. and the Oberlin girls. I am sorry that Life Insurance and the draft to Oberlin caused you so much trouble, Mary, but think of the experience you got out of it. I wonder if Elbert will have as much fun with the War Savings Stamps and the Putnam Bank. I am going to send the rest of the business direct to Geraldine. My how I long to get home and do some of that farm work. I think Dan and I could work together. He would find me old fashioned I expect, but I might learn. I remember in 1921, when I was on the farm Father seriously questioned my ability to ride the horse rake and make the rows straight enough for the loader.

I was sorry to read of the illness in Stanley's family and I sure hope they are all right before this and that they will keep all right. I wonder if Gould got up for May 30th. And if Emma and Elbert came and if Flora was there. It makes us homesick to hear of all these gatherings and we not in them.

Chickens and garden are doing well. I thought in March that the garden looked bum and I was afraid that it would not amount to much. But everything has come on amazingly. We have had all the cabbage, lettuce, beets, swiss chard, string beans, carrots, endive, turnips, that we could eat with some peas and a little rhubarb thrown in. Sweet corn will be ready by the 25th and tomatoes bout the same time. We have not had a gardner at all. I have done all the work except the initial digging of the ground. I have not had so good luck with the hens. I had 8 that I hatched in the spring of 1925. They have laid well all winter and we have bought eggs only once, I believe. In April one of them got dumpish and finally died. Ten days ago I found another dead in the roost, and the only mark on her was a little hole in one side of her neck. I concluded a weasel had sucked her blood out. Ellen dressed her and said there was not a drop in her.

I know where to send three of these letters. But where shall I send Dorothy's and to the other girls? I must ask the people in Shelton and Putnam to forward. This letter takes lots of love from Ellen and from Will to you all.

Dear Geraldine:-

Two weeks these letters have been on my shelf. While I have been running here and there- saying good bye to Miss Armstrong= a whole day on the river. Sat. June 19= Then the next day Mama and I were off immediately after lunch for the University to attend the Baccalaureate service in which I had a part. That a.m. I preached the Baccalaureate for Foochow College. Then on Monday we went to the University again for the Commencement and remained for the Alumni Banquet and got home at 12 midnight. Then last Friday the "Coblentz" N.D.L. =German steamer came in to take tea. Miss Atwood sailed on her and there were two families= Hemingways and Tuckers both doctors with all their children were on her. I went down with a motor launch and brought them up. It took all day. This next week is to be a running-about week also. (Oh, I did not get in my graduation last Wed.)= Tomorrow Mr. Smith and I plan to go to Kuliang to get the cottages ready for us to move up. Another day I must go to Deng Chio to see about repairs on a chapel, and on Thursday to Diong Loh to marry a man. School finishes on Wed. and the boys go home on Thurs.

I hope we shall hear very soon where you all are this vacation. I am sending this in care of Aunt Mary. Lots of love to you and any others who are with you.

Father

June 13th

Dear Folks in Shelton= all the Family:

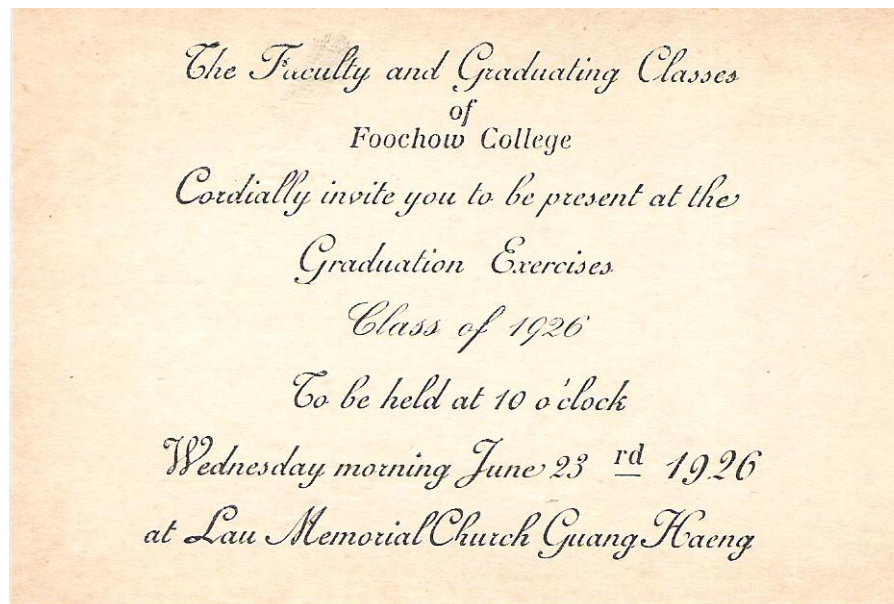

I'm sorry that this has lain idle here for a whole week. As Commencement approaches business always increases and the process of selecting what does not imperatively need to be done today becomes exacting. Yesterday we saw Miss Armstrong off and it took most of the day. Then Boards of Managers to meet and other duties that increase at this time. I have come home from preaching the Baccalaureate sermon for 40 Foochow College graduates, - Commencement comes this week Wed, - exams close next week Wed. I am sending Geraldine's letter to you. Will you please forward it. I am enclosing two orders for money for Marjorie and Kathleen. They will need about $500. next fall. I have made one order for $200. and one for $300. in case they do not need it all at once. Each of them has a Savings Bank account so in case of emergency they are safe. Ellen and I are off for the University as soon as we finish lunch- for the Baccalaureate service in which I have a part. Very lovingly to all Will.

[Willard also includes a small note:]

I have sent 4 pairs of cuff buttons to you or to fathers address- please give 1 pr. to father- 1 pr. to Ben. 1 pr. to Wells- 1 pr. to Dan.

Will

They are different. Let father have his choice and then Ben. Will.

[This letter, dated July 4, 1926, was written from Foochow, China by Willard to everybody at home. He has been busy with Commencement and visiting Kuliang and local villages and churches. He reminisces about Phebe and plans they made. Letter from the collection of Mona Beard.]

American Board Mission
Foochow, China

July 4th. 1926.

Dear Everybody at Home:-

We are all still here in Foochow. Mama started for the mountain late last evening but a shower came up and as she was not prepared for it she turned about and about 8:00 we saw her coming in to the front door. She plans to start tomorrow morning again.

The past ten days I have been a gadder. Yes for more than ten days. It began June 19 when we saw Miss Armstrong off. Then the 20th came the University Commencement, then the 21st, the Commencement, (20th was Baccalaureate) 23rd, F. College Commencement, - 25th down the river again to meet friends from the north who were passing thru on a steamer. 28th, walked to Kuliang and back, most of the way. 30th, to Den Chio, 15 miles in the country to see a church that needed repairing. Hightower went with me. We had a walk of six miles and found a flood on and had to wade about a mile in muddy water up to our knees. I slipped and got a fine stone bruise but it is getting on all right. The 1st of July went to Diong Loh to marry a former student. Left Foochow at noon and got back at 11 p.m. Last Sunday Ellen and I went to Au Ciu to church. I preached and we ate dinner with the pastor. This Sunday we went to the Upper Bridge and did the same things. It was rather hot coming home today in the sun at 1 p.m.

The Christians, Dr. Dyer, Dr. and Mrs. Kinnear and our family are still in Foochow. I have had so much running about to do that I have done nothing toward getting ready for the mountain. So I must stay here for a few days yet. We are to have four ladies from the Methodist mission with us this summer. Two of them went up last Friday. I do not know how they are getting on. I told them last summer when they engaged the rooms that we did not run a hotel, that they could come and go when they wished and we would do the same. The memory of the three very pleasant summers that Phebe and I spent on Kuliang comes up pretty strong these days. Both of us had a touch of home life during these summers. She took the head of the house so gracefully and easily that it will always be a most pleasant recollection. The summer of 1923 stands out with special delight, Mary and Cleora Wannamaker were with us that summer. I do not like to think of all the plans that you all had made for her home coming just about now. But all memories of her are sweet. What a treasure these memorials are. They cluster about Mother, Ruth and Elizabeth and James and Olive and Gracie and Annie. The recent Sentinels tell of the going of three old residents of Shelton. I cannot make out who is taking care of the people in Huntington church now.

Mr. Christian has been doing special work with two of the churches recently in the line of calling with the pastors on individual members. The work has resulted in a great reviving of the life of the churches, and in many of the members doing the same kind of work themselves.

I am going to send this to the Shelton and Putnam homes and at a venture send one copy straight to Eaglesmere. One copy I will send to Shelton to be forwarded to Dorothy. The last mail brought one letter from Father. This was all from the families. I do appreciate these letters from Father. I have not yet heard from the pins and the cuff buttons.

Ellen and I send lots of love to you all and hope the summer will bring to you all a good change and with the change a good rest. Fill up all woodchuck holes before swinging white birches. I must change one item above. I must send one copy of this to Gould, none to Dot. She will share with the other girls.

Will

[The following was handwritten:]

Dear folks all,

I am still in Foochow July 9- but I plan to leave for Kuliang tomorrow a.m. early.

It is very hot- so I cannot let my arm touch the paper- my left arm is over my leg and my trouser leg is wet where the sweat has dripped.

May God keep and use you all

Lovingly
Will

Dearest Mother and Father-

Who would ever have imagined that this summer would find all of us girls together at Eagles Mere? But here we are and we are all so glad to be together for this is the last summer we ever can - as girls. You see Dot is to get married next June so this is her last summer of work like this. What do you think of her engagement and Harold? We all think he is wonderful and are very well satisfied that she chose him. We saw him first at spring vacation when we were up at Saginaw. We didn't know anything about it then but we noticed that he was especially nice to us and to Dot. We saw him again on our auto trip when we picked up Dot. He isn't much for looks but he certainly is a wonderful man and true-blue to Dot. She has told us so much about him that we feel as if we knew him very well and like him better all the time. They write each other every day and Dot reads us parts of his letters sometimes. My! but he thinks the world of her alright as she does of him. She doesn't rave a lot about him the way some girls do but she is a very different girl in many ways from what she was four months ago. Harold is coming up here at the end of summer so we will see more of him.

I haven't written for such a long time that I must begin way back in the dark ages to tell everything. You will surely want to know about commencement won't you? Well Aunt Phebe came out with Uncle Elbert and Aunt Emma who drove in the car so Aunt Phebe stayed with us while the others stayed at Aunt Etta's. They arrived the Thursday before commencement and that very night we went to the college commencement play "As You Like It". It was the first of Shakespeare's plays that I have ever seen on the stage and it was done very well indeed. Friday night came my graduation. I sent you an announcement of it but I know it didn't get there until very late. It was most thrilling but I didn't feel half as big and important as I thought I should. My dress was darling- all white with a silk lace ruffle on the skirt and lace sleeves. Otherwise, it was plain. I had my picture taken in it and will send it when it is developed.

The girls gave me a lovely sweet-pea corsage to wear- my very first one. (I forgot to say that Dot came down over the week-end but had to go back on Monday.) Uncle Elbert took me over in style and it was so nice to see all the other girls in their pretty dresses. The boys wore creamers and dark coats. We marched in in single file down both isles of the first church and took our seats very dignifiedly then the usual program followed. I am enclosing one of our programs. There was a little hitch in the progress of events because our glee club director didn't get there in time so we went along with the presentation of diplomas and sang afterwards. The best time of all was when we marched across the platform and said thank you for our diplomas. It was lots of fun and no one stumbled or anything. Notice that I got into both honor lists (on the back page). The National honor society was the one of which Marjorie was also a member.

That over we all trotted over to the conservatory concert and heard the last few numbers which were very good. Saturday night was illumination night and as usual we wandered around the campus and watched the parade until our legs wouldn't hold us anymore. Everybody said the parade wasn't as good as usual but I like it pretty well. There was one of those huge Chinese dragons in it which the President of Shansi brought over on purpose. He belonged to the class of '06 which won the first prize. '91 won the second prize Hip Hip Hurrah. It had a float showing Millikan's newly discovered rays. [Robert Andrews Millikan was an 1891 Oberlin grad (same year as Willard) and 1923 Nobel Prize winner in Physics. "Nobelprize.org". The Nobel Foundation. September 7, 2009 <http://nobelprize.org/nobel_prizes/physics/laureates/1923/millikan-bio.html>.] Sunday night we had a big party over at Aunt Ettas which was supposed to be a birthday party for Uncle E and Fulton but Dot, all unknown to them, announced her engagement. They took it so funnily and were so silent. I guess none of them had ever been at one before and didn't know how to take it. Poor Dot! She was rather disappointed because all the relatives made such a fuss over Gould when he got engaged.

Monday was Gerry's big day when she got her hood. I took some pictures of her in line which I will try to send sometime. She was the first Masters student to go up onto the platform and she did it very gracefully. Monday evening we relatives had another get together and had heaps of fun. We all felt hilarious and Uncle Elbert was at his best so we nearly raised the roof. More fun! Every night of that week we had some party. One night we went on a picnic at the arb[arboretum?] and another night Aunt Phebe treated us to a dinner at Mason's tea-room. She devised the clever idea of making out a diploma for each one present telling some special traits of each. For instance Aunt Etta received hers for rearing such a good family and being a good housekeeper. They were all eleven and had in them the biggest language possible.

That week was the tearing up week for us. We began packing and putting things away. Uncle Elbert and his car helped us a lot and Aunt Etta very kindly is keeping some things for us over the summer. I can sympathize with you now, Mother dear, when you packed up and got out of all those houses. It surely is an awful job. You ought to have seen all the things that we threw away. They made a good bon-fire. We didn't even attempt to do anything to the barn except give away some old hats there, and a box of things you got ready to give away. The colored maid at the house took tons of our trunk [?] and Miss Wright took some books and good clothing. I guess we almost know how to pack up and get out of a place now. We didn't clean very much because Mrs. Rosecrans said she would have it cleaned anyway. She was a dear and helpful a lot.

Just before I left Oberlin I got a semi-boyish bob. You know- like a boy in back and a girl in front. I have wanted one for a long time just for fun but waited until going to get it. Gerry and Marjorie didn't like it at all but I like it pretty well. It is comfortable anyway and I am letting it grow out now. You didn't know that your daughter was so flapperish did you?

By Tuesday of the next week we were well packed and ready to start for Eagles Mere. We planned a lovely motor trip with Gertrude Layman and Chili Churchill who owned an old Buick. All our luggage except two small army trunks went with us in the car and together with their baggage we were pretty well loaded down. There was a luggage-carrier on one side, bags on the fenders and boxes inside, besides coats, blankets, rackets, eats, violins, etc. stuck around above, below, and around us. Boy! but we were a pretty gang all dressed up in knickers and packed in the way we were. We expected to start early Tuesday morning but you know how it always is- we didn't get off until noon. Mrs. Rosecrans put us up a lovely lunch which lasted for two meals and the whole family came out to see us off. Of course we were in the best of spirits and riding was such fun. That afternoon we made several stops- one at Bellvue at Gertrude's Aunts', one at Tecumseh where Gerry taught. Night found us about twenty miles from Ann Arbor so we just turned down a side road and made camp in an open field. We had the place all to ourselves, yet there was a farmhouse within sight. We spread down our blankets, coats, sweaters and everything on the ground and went to sleep. It was just grand out in the open under the stars with the full moon keeping watch on us from it's high post. It was the first time that I have ever slept out from under cover and I surely did enjoy it. The sun woke us up at half past four so we built a fire and ate our breakfast before starting on. Every meal on the road was royal and we even had salads. The next stop was Ann Arbor where both Gertrude and Gerry saw friends. On we sped until Saginaw was in sight and we drew up before Dots house a little after noon. It took Dot about three hours to get ready so we had a good rest from riding and incidentally a good visit with Whitie [Harold Newberg]. Mrs. Croley gave us a little lunch- then off again. Dot rode for an hour with Whitie for he was starting home too and our roads went together as far as Flint. We struck off for Port Huron and he went west. That night we spent at a tourist camp by a pretty little lake thirty miles from Port Huron. We got as far as possible away from the other campers but we were within hearing distance. Again we slept on the ground next to a cow pasture and quite near the little lake. Before supper some of us took a swim which was rather cold, but it felt good just to get our clothes off. Our sleep was not so peaceful that night for about midnight we woke up to the noise of a square dance not far away. The music the tread of feet and shouts of laughter were enough to wake anyone. That kept us awake for about an hour, then the people began to go home and they all had to start up their cars with much noise. Some parties rode our way and discovered us much to our embarrassment. They flashed their headlights on us and laughed loudly. Well, when they went we got some sleep until the sun woke us again.

This may be the automobile or one similar to the one Kathleen refers to in this letter.

The next day we crossed the Canadian line which was much fun. Going across on the ferry Chili made out a slip stating the value of the car, luggage, etc.- then when we reached the other side the Canadian officers began to question us about our birth. He began with the driver, Chili, and asked where he was born. India - was the answer. Gertrude said "Japan" and Dot- China. The officer looked more and more puzzled much to our amusement. I suppose our laughing made him suspect us so he sent all of us to a little office room. In there we explained about our being Missionaries and college students so he let us pass. That was our stock joke for the rest of the trip. Canada wasn't so very different from U.S. The road signs were not the same but otherwise I would hardly have know the difference. We went straight across Canada to Niagara Falls to see the colored lights on the Falls so stayed around until dark. I do hope that you will get a chance to see them for they are a most wonderful sight. They are thrown on both the American and the Horse-Shoe falls by powerful lights on the Canadian side. I think there are about twenty individual lights, two or three of each color. First they would throw white on then after about five or ten minutes it would slowly change to a light pink then deeper and deeper until the whole chasm was a brilliant flame color. The rising mist reminded one of leaping flames. When we had enjoyed that for a time the light would change to rainbow hughes. They were so soft and pretty and delicate, the scene was just fascinating. Once the falls were a deep greenish blue reminding one of a great sea. But you cannot imagine how pretty the rolling spray and mist was in solid colors. I never thought that the falls could be so beautiful.

It was late when we pulled ourselves away to find a resting place for our heads. We crossed the bridge and got into a big mess on the American side. There had just been a big convention parade of some kind and everyone was going home. Such a jam and crush oh dear! It was hard to find a good camping place on that flat ground so well settled with farms but we finally slept again in a farm field in sight of the main road. We surely slept soundly and warmly that night. The next day our route took us through Rochester and down to Penn. as straight as the road would lead us. I haven't told anything about the riding but we had fun all the time singing, laughing, telling jokes and taking naps. We made up a song about the trip under Gerry's inspiration and sang it all the time. We stopped every two or three hours of course and sometimes got ice-cream or a drink.

That day we ran into a hard shower and had to put on our curtains. There we rolled along as snug as a bug in a rug and as dry. The ground was too wet to sleep on that night so we decided to take a barn. Just before supper we reached Ithica, that hilly city, and rode through the campus of Cornell U. which is very beautiful. We surely wore our brake-bands going down those hills. I don't think New England could beat them. We supped by some beautiful little falls just outside of Ithica then started out to find a good barn.

July 18

We stopped at two houses but one was silent and dark and the other refused us. At the next house the man seemed willing to take us but had no room in his barn. He said he had an empty barn down the road a ways which we could use if we wanted to. It was quite late by then and we were all tired so we made for the barn. It was lots of fun looking around the barn with our flash-lights and we found that it was just what we wanted. It was empty but there was enough hay to make beds and there was room for the car in with us. We were asleep before we knew it and got a good rest. That was about the most comfortable night that we spent on the trip. The next day it rained all morning while we road down through Penn. We went thru Painted Post where Gould thought he might go to work sometime and saw the Ingersoll Rand works there. It looked like a large plant. At noon we were near Muncy but an awful thunder storm came up so we rode up the mountain in pouring rain. We reached the lakeside just as the girls were getting ready to serve supper and it seemed so nice to be back and see all the familiar faces again.

Miss Katherine very kindly arranged it so that all of the Oberlin bunch could be on the fourth floor together. Dot Monnie and I room together, Gerry and Gertrude have another room, Betty Strong and Ruth Clark room with Helen Ritter and Ruth Brooks took a room with a new girl. We surely have some gay old times up here but haven't done half as much as we want to yet.

We have rented a row-boat for the season so we can go out anytime we like. It is very convenient to go swimming in but it won't hold all that want to go in it. We have grand swimming parties nearly every after-noon and we all practice long distance swimming and diving hard.

The lakeside girls are now getting up a base-ball team to play with waitresses of other hotels. We have had two practices so far and quite a few girls came out. We even have the big diamond to practice on and are allowed to use the boys paraphernalia. Dot is acting as our coach and playing too.

Tips are going rather slow for most of us. Monnie seems to have the nack of drawing them in though for she has twice as much as any of us. We are not up here for tips though, we are here for fun and we surely are getting it.

Dot and Gerry are very well liked as I knew they would be. Everybody loves Gerry because she is so sweet and generous and they like Dot because she is so jolly and good-natured. I am proud to tell everyone that they are our sisters. People are so surprised that there are four of us sisters together and are interested to compare us.

Well this will fill up the envelope pretty well so I will save the rest until another time and get this started on its long trip.

Much love to you both and please try to come home next year.

Kathleen

July 27, [1926]

Dear Girls,

This letter from your father came today. We took a read as the envelope authorized and hasten to send it on.

Father has slowly lost ground all spring and summer. The right leg is big and solid but the rest of him is thinner. Until last Friday he walked out to the porch hammock on the crutches Dorothy used last summer. Friday I started to help him get up as usual and when I moved the [unreadable word] leg there was a sharp snap. Doctor came at once and sure enough the bone is broken. He suffers severely with it at times but otherwise is about the same. We keep him under aspirin or morphine wholly or partly so he may not suffer so badly. For two nights Phebe and I divided the time as he can not wait on himself. But Sunday morning we were fortunate in getting a nurse. She has had two years training in Dr. Parlato's hospital where most of the cases are surgical or confinement and is a "domestic" or "practical" nurse not a graduate. She is taking excellent care of father so we are satisfied.

The rest of us are well. The haying is most done. The making over of the barn is slow but Ben is back in the job today. We are having an artesian well sunk. Two trials were abandoned but the men think they are on a successful trial now.

Kits has been here or in Shelton or New Haven all summer. She starts west next Weds. some time. She is a dear but not the comfort to home as a visitor that you girls are.

We are looking forward to a visit from Gould and Vivienne the middle of August. Next we hope Dorothy and Harold can come see us. We want to know all our family to be.

I do hope you are having the glorious time together as you anticipated. It is nice for you to grow closer together. Letters can't do it. I know.

Lots and lots of love to each of you. I have the orders for the $5.00 your father is sending to Marjorie and Kathleen in $200 and $300 each. Interest at that bank is paid on July 1 and Jan. 1 so send for it when and how you need it.

Lovingly

Aunt Mary.

#316 Kuliang
 Foochow, China
 Sunday, August 8th 1926

Dear Kathleen,

I am thinking of a day eighteen years ago here on Kuliang, actually eighteen years ago day after tomorrow when a wee girlie came to our home. How the days and weeks and months and years have sped by! That wee bit of humanity is a member of the freshman class 1926-7 of Oberlin College. I've already sent my congratulations to you for the good standing in your High School work last term, and here are congratulations for the acceptance into the freshman class and best wishes for a successful year in College.

I am glad that Marjorie and you can be together in a College house this year and I hope you will get out of it all that you anticipate. It will be the first year you have been in school with no mom or older sister but what of that? I suppose very few girls or boys in College have parents or older sisters or brothers with them.

It is 11:15 a.m. I am on our veranda with most of Kuliang spread out before me, and farther off the plain, and then the city of Foochow, and then the river- mostly yellow sand now, for no rain has fallen since July 3 - then the mountains. This morning they lie in a sort of haze. Clouds obscure the sun. It is very still and close and hot- they say it is very hot in Foochow. The dry weather is raising prices of all food. As if this were not enough to give poor people heavy burdens, the military are heaping all manner of taxes on them for everything. Merchants and farmers and ricksha men and boatmen and craftsmen - all have to bear it, until they- whole families are moving to the Straights Settlements- perhaps 2000 have gone from Fukien during the past 18 months. I do not see how, when or where this condition is to end. With it all people seem to have money as they did not in earlier years. The stores in Foochow are full of foreign style, hats, shoes, raincoats, cloth and watches, clocks, hot water bottles, flashlights, glasses, medicines, cakes, tinned goods, etc, etc. Horses and carriages and autos are on the streets continually. The only conveyances you ever saw here were sedans. A week ago today the vice chairman of the Chinese Foochow

Chamber of Commerce was invited to a temple a little way out from the city and his body riddled with bullets. He has been helping military governor Ciu levy taxes on the merchants. But this is enough of the dark side. On the other side the work of church and Christian school goes on successfully. Over 100 teachers- men and women have been studying in Foochow for the past six weeks to better fit themselves to teach. The weather has been hot, the schedule heavy but they have stuck to it- the leaders also- mostly Chinese, giving their services. The churches are doing better work this year than for several years. The people in general were never more ready to hear and accept the story of Jesus and of his salvation. The Chinese are more and more taking responsibilities.

I will send the Kuliang registers home soon. You children may like to glance at them, and then send them to Aunt Mary. She will read them with the most recent knowledge of Kuliang of anyone at home. This summer the tennis courts and the bathing pool are very popular. The Sunday evening sings do not draw as many people this year. No new houses are going up. About a dozen are for sale. I wonder when ours will be for sale. Do you remember Elizabeth and Ethel Beach? They are about like you and Marjorie were ten years ago. They with Frank Cartwright sang very sweetly at one session of the Kuliang Convention this last week- "Fairest Lord Jesus, Ruler of all nations". Yesterday I played in the tennis tournament. I did not intend to play this year, but Prof. Metcalf of the University asked me to play with him. He plays about the same as I do. We drew as first opponents the best player on the mountain and his partner- a fairly good player to our surprise we got three games in the first set. The second set they won 6-0.

How I should enjoy looking in on you four girls at Eagles Mere. Mama would too. I remember with keenest pleasure the Sunday Phebe and I spent at Silver Bay in 1921, when Geraldine and Dot were there. Only the other evening I was looking at the photos of the visit. I was talking with the Cushman sisters about your being in Lakeside and they said that was the best place and a wonderfully good place to be in. I judge it is not far behind Silver Bay.

It is very pleasant to think that we have a son and a daughter engaged. The pull is very strong to ask the privilege to go home next year and marry them. I am afraid I could not ask to leave Foochow before June 20. That would bring us home too late for June weddings.

Mr. Nga Geng Guong left Foochow last Monday to go to Oberlin to study. I wrote of him a week ago to Dorothy. You and Marjorie will see him. You may remember him. He sang frequently at Foochow College functions when you were here 1916-1920.

Dr. Gillette went home thru Russia last Spring and his letters written after he had reached Moscow are very interesting. From there we got the idea that conditions are not as bad there as the papers would sometimes have us think.

I wonder will you girls see the folks in Pearl River, Mt. Vernon, Shelton and Putnam this Sept. Has Geraldine found a position yet? Dorothy of course will go back to Saginaw. Douglass and Arthur Coole and their wives are here with their parents. I asked Mrs. Douglass the other day if she and Douglass wrote every day while they were engaged. She replied, "I have only three letters from him. We were in the same place while we were engaged."

Perhaps after you girls have read this you will send it to Gould. I am writing only this letter today.

Very lovingly
Father.

[Included with the above letter was the following smaller note to Geraldine.]

Dear Geraldine,

I plan to send the papers so you may get the money Phebe had in the Derby and in the Berlin Savings Bank transferred to your name- or you may draw it out as you please. I would suggest that you ask that it be transferred to your account and draw it out later if you desire to. Use the Consular papers in Derby first and ask them to allow you to retain the papers to use in Berlin. I will send the papers to Aunt Mary for you this week. I plan to be in Foochow Wed. next Aug. 11.

With love
Father

[This letter dated Aug. 22, 1926 was written from Kuliang, Foochow, China by Willard to the Folks at Home. A Fukien Educational Association has formed and they asked Willard to help them discuss educational problems. Things are going well on Kuliang although with little rain the wells and springs are going dry. Willard has heard about his father's broken leg and numbered days and is grateful for his sisters, Phebe and Mary for taking good care of him and others. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006. Mona Beard has a copy of the same letter in her collection.]

American Board Mission

[Kuliang] Foochow, China

Sunday August 22nd. 1926.

Dear Folks at Home:-

Here's another general letter. The first one I have written at Kuliang. Letters have come from the children and from Shelton. The Eagles Mere girls seem to be having an awful good time. I hope it keeps up all summer and that they get to see the Conn. people on their way back to work and study in the fall. And the fall will be on us all before this can reach you.

We have had a very unusual summer here. Last Tues. we had a good hard shower for less than an hour. It only soaked down a few inches. The wells and springs hardly showed any effects. It is still hot and dry every day. The water supply is feeling it. We see showers in the distance every day and hope our turn will come soon. The rice fields on the plain are the worst sufferers, also the rice fields up country. For the people summering on this mountain the weather is almost ideal- a little hot in midday but dry and clear. Only two days when tennis could not be played. All the matches are played off. One of the ladies in our house won in ladies doubles.

Last week was Convention week. Bishop Hind and Mr. Cartwright were the speakers. We usually have two meetings each morning, - the Convention and immediately following a meeting on Evangelism in the rural communities. Hitherto we have had two or three days of Educational meetings. Last year this decided to die. It did so and in its place was born the Fukien Christian Ed'l Ass'n with delegates elected by the churches (Chinese and Foreign). The executive of this new Ass'n have asked to hold a meeting this next week here in the Club. They say "We want your help in the discussion of all these educational problems." I am very much pleased with the way this is going. Some of the foreigners wanted to hold a meeting by themselves again this year just to discuss. But others said we had died as an Association and we would stay dead. As soon as the Chinese saw that we meant what we said last year, they at once asked for this meeting to be held here where they knew the great majority present must be foreigners. No question before the missions or before the churches in China is of more importance than this: - How to make the change from administration by the foreigner to administration by the Chinese and foreigner working together. Some would say by the Chinese. But here in Foochow the Chinese are insistent that they must have us shoulder to shoulder with them in all the work. In solving the problem one stroke of the X is foreign and one is Chinese. Neither can work it out alone, each must contribute his share to the solution.

The summer is most gone. We have gone out very little and we have had few guests. As a whole Kuliang has been well. The Sanitorium is not making ends meet. The population is about the same as in other years. There are about 270 adults and 130 children. There are some 13 houses for sale and three sold already. People are buying rather than building. A swimming tournament for the children was a new attraction this year. For the Cantata we sang The Hymn of Praise by Mendelssohn. The conductor was a Mr. Bevan with the Asiatic Petroleum Co. here. This is the hardest music we have ever tried on Kuliang. Several have said it was the best concert that had ever been given.

I have mailed at last all the jade pins and cuff links. Here is the list as I have sent them. If any one has not received will you please write me and I will see what I can do about it. All have been registered except the two pairs of links that I sent in a paper and Mary has written that they came all right.

Pins to Flora, Phebe, Mary, Grace, Abbie, Myra, Emma, Etta, Edith, Nancy, Ruth, Millicent, Geraldine, Dorothy, Marjorie, Kathleen, Vivienne.

Links to Father, Oliver, Ben, Stanley, Elbert, Willis, Wells, Daniel, Donald, Myron, Fulton, Stewart, Gould.

This leaves poor Stephen out. What shall I do for him? I think I must just give him a pair of links and let him keep them till he grows into them. How will that do? I have to get some more made for people here who like them and want them for presents.

The mail has just come in, Monday Aug. 23rd. and brought you letters about Father's leg getting broke. Your last letter said that he did not dress, but sat up part of the day. I have had him and Phebe and Mary much in mind and prayer during the past month. God has been very good to us in allowing us to keep these parents so long and in such good health. How I long to be at home at these times. My spirit is there. Gould writes that he and Vivienne plan to be there this month. I wonder if Dorothy will get her best man to see you all too. The auto trip from Oberlin to Eagles Mere was thrilling. The next letter I shall likely write from Foochow.

You get love from us both, and a personal note below.

[handwritten:]

The call is pretty loud to ask to come home next year. Could I make it by leaving here about June 1?

Dear Geraldine, Marjorie and Kathleen:-

This is August 28th= Saturday. The week has been so full I could not get all the letters off. After I had written most of the above Aunt Mary's letter telling about Grandpa's condition came and I got her letter off at once. Yesterday another letter came saying that Grandpa would not suffer many days. This was written July 31. So we think of him as at peace for at least three weeks now. This letter yesterday also told of Aunt Flora's breakdown. She has always led a very active life- taking her rest periods for greater activity if that could be and since going home from China she has studied and worked as if she were thirty instead of past fifty five. [Flora is listed on page 284 in The Evolution of the school district of South Orange and Maplewood New Jersey, 1814-1927 as being the principal of Montrose from 1924 until 1926.]

The drought continues and wells and springs on Kuliang are going dry. The situation is not serious but a little bothersome. To day there is quite an exodus from Kuliang. Do you remember the pleasant loneliness here when most of the people had gone, and the fall breezes blew and the air got crisp? This morning we- just our house- Mama, Misses Wilson, Merritt, Bachman and I went over to the Bathing Pool. Misses Merritt, Bachman and I went in swimming and then we all ate b-fast there near the pool. We took oatmeal in the tin in which it was boiled, and set this in a larger tin with a tight cover. I wrapped the oat meal tin in an old newspaper. It kept nicely hot. Coffee or really postum we took in a thermos bottle. So we had a nice hot b-fast. This I shall address to Marjorie at Oberlin. Mr. Nga Geng Guong will be in Oberlin when you return there. I hope your summer has ended pleasantly and that you are all well and good. Lots of love from Father

[The following was handwritten on Mona Beard's copy of the same letter:]

Dear Oliver, Flora, Ben, Phebe, Mary and Stanley:-

I was prepared by the last letters to hear that father would be going soon. But now that the letter is here and the word is explicit it touches me deeply. We all say it is well. Father has lived a long, useful, life and has lived it well.- We are all proud of our father and of our mother. They have done the world good. Their memory is sweet. I wish I could be at home now,- I had hoped that if I came next June I might see father, but that is not to be. You girls are good to write so fully and so often. I wrote Mary that the orders on the Derby Savings Bank are received O.K.

I am sending to Mary the Kuliang Registers to date with the Directory. Will you send them to Flora and ask her to send them to Geraldine. None of you will read them all or all if any one best those of you who have been on Kuliang will like to glance at them.

Miss Fuller of our household will be leaving for Hing Hua as soon as a steamer goes. This spells the closing up of the summer. It has been a short one.

The artesian well sounds good.

When this reaches you, you will know that I have been with you in thought and prayer every day thru Aug. and Sept.

Very lovingly
Will

He and Ellen will move down to Foochow within the week. Willard has received a photo of Dorothy's fiancé, Harold. Schools such as those in Shaowu can not open farther up into the country because soldiers and bandits are taking the rice and produce. Willard and Ellen hope to return to the U.S. in June of 1927. Sept. 12th. 1926.

Dear Folks at Home:-

For the past two weeks my heart has been too full for expression. It has seemed much of the time as if I were living in the old home on Long Hill. Phebe and Mary have written so fully and so understandingly of Father's illness and going that I could almost see it all. The last letters were written the day after he died. [According to the death certificate, Oliver Gould Beard died August 7, 1926 of "carcinoma right femus for 1 year" and "metastasin of left femus for 30 days".] The funeral was to be on the next Tuesday. The next letters will tell all about that. It gives a lot of comfort to know that Father was himself till the last. It is also something to always be thankful for that he felt satisfaction as he looked back over his life, and that he could feel that his life had been well lived and that he was ready to go. The most beautiful thing that man knows is a life well lived, and Father's was well lived. No one had any doubt on which side of the biggest problems of life he would be found. As I have been home from time to time, I have been delighted and most interested to find how he kept abroad of the times. I suppose this was not as apparent to some of you who were with him all the time. But after being away for a number of years I could not help seeing big changes in him. This was just as apparent in Mother. Another thing that has impressed me very much was a growing kindness in him and greater consideration for others. I judge this kept up to the very last.

A good letter from Oliver came from him in the last mail, or the next to the last. This is to let him know that the Old Bridgeport Bank has sent me the statement. I am glad that he could be at the old home so much of the time when he was so much needed and could be of so much comfort as well as real help.

The last letters said that Flora was recovering more rapidly than had at first been anticipated. I hope the good work has kept up. I think of her now as at home and all right. I shall be greatly interested to see what changes Father's going will make in the home and the farm. You will work out the right solution under God's guidance.

The long drought has broken here last Thursday. Rain has fallen in great abundance the last three days. Yesterday there was a small flood on the plain due to the large amount of water that has fallen on the hills and run down on the plain. I judge the same condition has prevailed at home from what I read in the Sentinel. I was in Foochow last week Aug. 30 and came back the next day. On Sat. Sept. 4th eight of us connected with the Am. Board went over to Kushan Monastery for a Retreat and came back Monday. Tues. I went again to Foochow for the entrance exams for the new students. I came back Thursday afternoon. I plan now to go for good day after tomorrow, Tuesday. Ellen thinks of staying up till the last of the week. Three of the ladies who have been with us this summer have gone. One plans to go tomorrow or next day.

The photos of our new son-to-be-in-law came some time ago. I see in his face a character, force, resolution, determination. It is a good face. I suppose Dorothy and he are again at work in Saginaw. I do not yet hear about Geraldine, - except that she was corresponding with two or three parties about a position. I am hoping that she will find the one position where she can make the greatest contribution to the well being of her fellows. Marjorie and Kathleen I suppose are still in Eaglesmere and they have a week before college opens. Mr. Nga has been in Oberlin waiting for two weeks already if all went well with him. I judge that Pres. King has about finished his work with Oberlin. We had an Oberlin picnic two weeks ago or so and there we wondered who would follow him. As I remember no one expressed any conviction.

The educational condition of Foochow this summer has been very quiet. The summer school that we allow our graduates who have studied two years in the university to run, have had the best school for years. No trouble at all. And the old students all registered Sept. 1 and 2, and the examinations for new students to enter were held last Tues. and Wed. with no bother. The political situation is not so easily pictured. There has been for a month much activity in the movement of soldiers. They command go. Where is not so easy to say. Political suspects are shot with no mercy. Report says that Canton is moving on Fukien and that many soldiers are sent to the southern part of Fukien. Government educational institutions are doing very little work. Teachers pay is very much arrears. The conditions in the country districts beggar[?] description. Word came to me Thursday that in the Shaowu district of our mission ten chapels out of thirty eight were open. The preachers in some of the others were trying to stay but the people had all fled. Bandits and soldiers were the reason. It is well nigh impossible to move produce. The soldiers or the bandits get it. Yeng Bing 175 miles up the Min should be sending a large quantity of rice to Foochow steadily. Soldiers and bandits have taken all the available rice and it is now being shipped up to Yeng Bing. The schools there cannot open till the new crop is reaped in Nov.

When we were at Kushan last week I asked the men what they thought of our going home next June. No one was opposed but it was difficult to see just then how Foochow College was to be taken care of in my absence if we went next year. If Mr. Neff who is now on furlough, undecided whether to come back or not, will come back and join the faculty it will be all right. Every one as far as I could see was heartily in sympathy with our going next June.

Dear Geraldine, Marjorie and Kathleen:

I am sending this to Marjorie and Kathleen at Talcott. I boarded at Talcott two or three terms 36 years ago. How time flies, and what changes it brings. Now two of my class mates are in charge of Talcott and looking after two of our girlyies and they the youngest. I expect you are on your way back to Oberlin by now. I wonder if you will go by way of any of the friends in New York or Conn. and of course we are very eager to know what Geraldine is doing. Letters have come from Marjorie and Kathleen from Eaglesmere in last mail. Kathleen must be much at home in the water. I suppose neither of you remember how the older children used to play with Marjorie in the Bathing Pool here on Kuliang and she never evinced the least fear. All six of you children learned to swim here.

This is Monday morning- a perfect morning- quiet, clear bright sun after the refreshing rains of four days with lots of water everywhere. I go down tomorrow morning. Miss Wilson the last of the four ladies to go- goes tomorrow morning also. Mama stays all alone till the last of the week. College opens Thursday. Classes start with full and regular schedules next Monday.

All front yards display clothing and bedding in profusion this morning- all yards of houses still occupied which are few.

I wish Marjorie and Kathleen would send me an itemized account of all their expenses up to Oct. 1. I have sent five hundred dollars for you, and when your accounts come I will send more. I should like to have you keep your own Bank accounts to use in emergencies. I should like to know tho how much you have and in what Bank.

May God keep you all and guide you and may you always be found on his side.

Very lovingly
Father

[The following was handwritten on the copy of the letter in the collection of Mona Beard:]

Dear Phebe and Mary and all the Rest:-

Father's going has made me feel lonely and homesick. Of course I knew it was coming and was ready for it and I would not have had it otherwise. The family are getting more and more ties on the other side, where ties are not broken.

Your news about the new artesian well and the changes in the farm is most interesting. I judge you will continue to use the old tank and gravitation instead of some other means of distributing water.

Phebe will remember that the very last thing I did in the summer of 1921 when I was in Shelton was to level up the Beard plot in the cemetery. I believe it has all been leveled off and the appearance much changed since then. I'm glad however that I did that little in 1921. How I worked and sweat. It was a cloudy, muggy afternoon.

I think of you all as having seen the new niece-in-law. I do not hear that Dorothy planned to show her new man to you. He was coming to Eaglesmere to get her and they were going to drive back to Saginaw together. It is very pleasing to hear thus far the good impressions that both Gould's and Dorothy's choices have made on the other members of the sisters[?].

May God be very gracious and guide you all in making the readjustments that you are in the midst of making now.

Very lovingly
Will

American Board Mission

Foochow, China

October 10th. 1926.

Dear Folks at Home:-

The hot spell broke a week ago and now we have forgotten that it ever was very hot. Life has settled down to the usual fall routine and most of the activities that took a vacation have started. The Anti-cob held its first meeting last Friday evening on South Side. There were about 90 present. Miss Irene Dornblaser who came to Foochow as a missionary of the American Board in 1911, (she spent her last night in the States before starting for China at our home in Mount Vernon) has just returned to take charge of the American School here. She is the sister of Mrs. Munson, Y.M.C.A. She gave some of her impressions about the changes she has observed in ten years since she left Foochow. Then Mr. Blakeney of the University gave his experiences with a second hand Ford, and his ideas about the effect of the Volstead Act [The National Prohibition Act]. After that Mr. Hightower gave a very interesting and racy account of his trip thru Japan and Korea and North China. He tried to get into Missionary Home in Shanghai in his tramping garb. It was about midnight and the Chinese who was on night duty told him to go away. It was not until the third attempt and after he had written a note to the foreigner in charge that he was admitted.

Ellen and I went down to the reception given yearly to the students of the University by the Faculty. It was a very pleasant affair, but we had to walk all the way home from the river because Foochow is under martial law and no one is allowed on the streets after 10 p.m. There were no rickshas or carriages. Some six rods before we got to the guard at South gate he shouted at us to know who we were and where we were going. He may have been afraid of me for I was in evening dress and had my coat off and a white vest. But we got thru all right.

The weather is still very dry. It is hard on the gardens. The ground is so dry and hot that corn has rotted in the hills. I have some up nearly a foot high and doing well. It takes lots of water. I have at last got my chickens settled down and doing well. August was so hot that they looked pretty tough when I came down from the mountain. I have 18 young ones and 6 old hens that have been moulting for a month and have not laid an egg for two months.

Two new families, Shraders and Rindens with Mrs. Hand, Mrs. Shraders mother arrived Oct. 1st. They are buckling down to the language in great shape. The Shraders were both in Chicago Seminary under my classmate Ozora S. Davis. He writes that they are fine people. Of course they are dressed in the latest style. The other day at our prayer meeting, I was sitting near George Newell. One of the new ladies was standing some distance away and he said to me, - "I cannot get used to those short skirts."

Foochow has been very quiet as far as political disturbances go. Our general is Sun up somewhere in central China. The Cantonese seem to be after him but thus far he seems to keep his position. His next in command Ciu went over to the Giang Si border some weeks ago. It is my opinion that he had feathered his nest pretty well before he left Foochow and that he will not come back here. One of the most interesting episodes that has occurred in China since I came here was that fight between the British and the Chinese up the Yangste in which the British backed away. I hear nothing more about it and it looks as if the British did not plan to follow it up. They will let it drop.

This is one week after I began this letter, - October 17th. There is plenty to do for him who is willing to do. The last two Saturday afternoons a party of seven or eight from the compound and from Wen Shan and Mr. Thelin from way over at Sie Bou where Mr. Newell lives have taken a hike. What do you think of Mother and me going off on a hike with a lot of young fry? We do not hold them back tho. And both times we have hiked it right away to the house on the way home, while some of the others took rickshas when they got to the city. Last Friday afternoon Mama and I went to a reception at the Consulate to Irene Dornblaser. Next Friday evening the Anti Cob is held at the University. I shall be down the river in and from the Anchorage at a place called Ku Seu for a retreat with the workers in the Diong Loh field. This will take me away from home Friday to Monday. Next Wednesday I have to lead the prayer meeting in Chinese. This is the mission or rather church prayer meeting that is held for all Congregationalists Chinese and foreign once a month on the third Wednesday. Last Wednesday Mama led the mission prayer meeting.

Guy A. Thelin

MR. Thelin helps growing boys to work with growing plants that some day the full grown boys may be the key to China's rural problems.

Mrs. G. A. Thelin

MRS. Thelin is a fine example of the metamorphosis of a single lady into a missionary wife. Even baby Mark and a new house do not debar twenty-three music pupils.

Mary wanted to know in her last letter if I would take the farm when I came home next time. Ellen says it is my turn to have the say about where we stay this time. I vote unanimously for the Century Farm. This means that we shall plan to make that our headquarters. If you will let us we will be there most of the time. I will help what I can, in every way I can, as best I can. This is not quite Coue's formula but it assimilates it.

[handwritten]

Dear Geraldine: - The last mail brought interesting letter. It is all the news we have had from any of the children since the middle of August. That letter answers some of my queries about Phebe's things. I do not quite understand about Kathleen's watch for I sent her money last Spring for it- in plenty of time to get it before Commencement. I think I will try to send it to here by registered mail. It will do her good and it is doing no one good here. I mean Phebe's watch. I hope to get the estate settled by Thanksgiving. All Best wishes for a healthy and useful year under God's guidance.

Lovingly Father

Talcott Hall
Oberlin Ohio
Oct. 24, 1926

Dear Jerry-

Only one more week of work before our grand get-together. It seems as though I just couldn't wait for this week to go by but I suppose it will pass quickly enough. Dot writes that she and Whitie are driving down Friday, landing here about midnight, and that they may bring Mrs. Croley with them. I really can't see how she could after the way she has treated Whitie. Helen Ritter is coming up for sure and will stay with Ruth Brooks. We invited Vivienne last week sometime but she has not answered yet so we are not sure about her coming. We have ordered tickets to the game for the whole bunch of us together, nine in all counting Uncle Willis since the boys asked if he could sit with us. I wish Aunt Etta would go too, but perhaps she wouldn't enjoy the game just as Mother doesn't. We got them all on the stadium part- do you think we are extravagant? We haven't received the tickets yet but we hope they will give us what we want. Now for what to do while you are all here! I wish you could get here before Saturday noon- you will surely come in time for the game won't you? On Sat. morning I suppose Whitie, Dot, and Vivienne will visit classes and see the buildings. I hope that we can have all you girls for meals, but if not we can go out one meal all together. In the after-noon of course the game and Ruth Brooks wants us to come down to her house for supper. I don't know whether we can or not- it depends upon our time. Sat. evening we can watch the Hallowe'en dance for a while and even dance. Dot says that she wants to dance and the boys say that they want to dance with all of us. There we are dance, dance, dance. It seems as if I can't escape it. Two boys have asked me to rec[receive?] already and I am so afraid that I will get cornered sometimes. I had other engagements both times but I am afraid they will renew their invitations (adrift- oh dear!) Well, Sunday- go to church. Perhaps we girls can have breakfast in our room and maybe we can reserve a table for all of us at dinner if there aren't too many guests. That is what one of the girls did today when her folks came. In the afternoon we want to go down to Aunt Etta's for a while- and then we have to part. The week end is going to be all too short isn't it- but it will be concentrated ecstasy all the time.

Yesterday was Uncle Willis' birthday and Aunt Etta invited us down to join in the celebration. Mr. Nga was there too so we had quite a table full. The boys came home in time to help us eat the cake, made by Millicent, which was very good. We stayed just as long as the babies of Talcott are allowed to be roaming the streets and then we transferred the party to where I could be safe i.e. Talcott parlor. That is, the boys and Millicent came up and talked with us for about an hour.

To-night the candle lighting service of the Y.W. was held in the first church. It just poured all evening which kept the crowd away to some extent. Nevertheless the freshmen were out in full force to join, all dressed in white. I don't think that the service has even been held in the first church while I have been here. The scene was most effective, when at the end of the meeting, each new girl lighted her candle at the foot of the platform stairs, mounted into the choir loft and proceeded around the railing of the gallery. There were two lines, one on either side, which met directly opposite the platform in the gallery. The whole procession made a ring entirely around the railing of the gallery and thru the choir seats. It was very pretty to see this circle of lighted candles around the church, and the scene was a most inspiring one.

It seems as if all the girls got eats from their relatives all the time. They do not limit the spreads to Sat. night but have them any time their boxes come. One night this week I was invited to two and of course could go to only one. I took the first invitation but missed the best eats. We are invited to another one tonight. One has no need to buy things to eat here for you get them anyway. We want to have a spread of our own sometime but an invitation always comes before we get our plans made. Ha! Ha!

Well, I must not ramble on for ever as "Brooks" (This isn't meant for a slam- just a pun) do for I must get to bed. I have to get up bright and early to-morrow morning to finish a Bible paper. Those Bible papers are going to kill the freshman girls off pretty soon. He makes us write one every week which takes six or eight hours and we have to be up all times of the night and morning writing them.

Goodbye for now but in less than a week we will be saying Hello. Hip! Hip!

Love as always

Kathleen

Dear Geraldine,

Here is your check for the interest on the share on the mortgage that Phebe left you. I am waiting instructions as to the bank account in Berlin.

Tonight the dress maker came. I am having a wool dress so I can keep warm if it gets cold during my short stay in Putnam to attend the Woman's Board meeting in Worcester.

Uncle Dan [Daniel Nichols, brother of Nancy Maria Nichols Beard] was down for dinner today. He is well but troubled with rheumatism or something that makes him lame at times. He lives alone but has Mr. Jones in to get his meals, so we feel quite safe about him. *

We are having a Thanksgiving Party, Oliver, Ben, Stanley and their families besides Uncle Dan and possibly Gould. We have no later word from Gould than last August, so do not bank on that entirely. But here's hoping.

We have 60-75 bushels of apples in the cellar. It was fun but also work to help gather them. The main crop we sold on the trees as we could not care for it. The corn is out and getting picked slowly. Potatoes are huge but scarce. We had but few to sell and that seems to be the condition all about here.

We wonder how you like your school. The town is purchasing a corner of our land next Coram Lane for a portable school. They are now transporting about 50 children and the parents appealed for a local school and got it.

Hoping for a letter soon.

Much love,

Aunt Mary

Daniel Nichols had been a member of the Shelton board of assessors since 1889 and had twice been elected to the state legislature. Despondency, caused by ill health, is said to have been the cause for the shooting. He was discovered by his housekeeper, whom he aroused when he fired the pistol.

Dear Jerry:-

This is one busy week for us here. In fact, the weeks seem to be fuller and fuller as they come along.

We had a committee meeting Mon. night, for our annual Ames Athletic Banquet. After that I went to the teacher's glee club of this school which has already had two meetings this year.

Today (Tues.) is Whitie's [Harold] birthday. In the afternoon my volley-ball girls play Webber. We beat them badly over at their school and I hope we do the same here today. We have won two games and lost two. This evening eight of us are going to have a birthday dinner for Whitie at the Gatiot inn, a nice little place not far out from town. This is a surprise on him. After dinner we come back to Mrs. Hayden's to play cards and sing, etc. I gave him an automatic windshield wiper.

Tomorrow night we have open night at our school. Each teacher teaches his or her fourth hour class- just for an hour. Last year we taught two classes- 45 min. each. That came just the night we were going to have our banquet so we had to postpone the banquet till next week.

Tonight also there is a big Pageant put on by the Federation of Women's Clubs, and held in the big Public Auditorium. It is picturing the important historic events of our country. I wanted to go to it, but with the party on, I'm afraid we won't get there.

Wed.

A lot has happened since just yesterday when I started this. My girls won the game with Webber by the skin of their teeth. The Webber team has improved vastly, and has acquired some new players, so they put up a pretty tough fight. I never knew volley-ball could be so exciting. Webber beat the first game 15-13, we the second 15-3, and we the third- which was excruciatingly exciting- 15-13.

The birthday party went off perfectly. We had a delicious dinner and Whitie seemed very much pleased. We didn't get to see the Pageant.

Tonight we have open night for – (almost a week later)

Busy is no word for what I am!! I haven't written a word of any correspondence since I left this. We had open night and it went off well.

Last night we had our postponed athletic banquet. Whitie and I were responsible for putting that on, so were real busy. We had a good turn out- about 150. Whitie and I both gave short talks and we had two other speeches. I was elected treas. of the association.

Tues. my girls played their last game and lost it. That makes us tie for second place, having won three games and lost three. I don't know yet whether we're going to have a basket-ball tournament or not.

The girls sent Whitie a birthday card and a box of candy.

It's snowing now. We haven't had any real lasting snow yet.

Had a letter and a gift from Ish recently. She sent ½ doz. small plain hem-stitched napkins and her mother sent a beautiful Turkish embroidered center piece. I sent Gould a tan and brown silk scarf for his birthday.

Lots of love and do write.

Dot.

Dear Jerry-

Yesterday was Gould's birthday did you remember? We made two batches of candy and sent to Gould and Whitie. Dot should have told us before that his birthday came on the ninth for our candy arrived a little late. Did she write you about his birthday?

Did you go to see Ritty this week end? I hope you did get a chance to go and I hope we can get down to see her sometime this year. And how was "The Black Pirate"? I think your plan to invite Aunt Etta to meet you in Cleveland is very good. She gets out so little that I know she will enjoy it if there is something good. Can you get up Wednesday night? And will you stay here with us if we can get a room? Aunt Etta said that she was inviting you to take Thanksgiving dinner with her. We want you here very much but if you would rather go there you may. Of course you know what Talcott dinner is like and you might enjoy being with the relatives more. Do just as you like. We have invited Vivienne up for that week end since she couldn't come last time. We thought that maybe we could have Aunt Etta's family and you and Vivienne all here for Sunday dinner. Wouldn't that be fun?

Tomorrow we freshman have another intelligence test. They have to test our intelligence pretty often n'est pas? We don't care though because we get out of all classes during the morning and that is three for me. (I just spilled a lot of water on this page so it doesn't look very nice.)

This afternoon a girl on the YW cabinet came up to see me and asked me to be on the freshman commission of the Y. She explained something of what it meant but I will learn more fully at the meeting this week. It sounds very worth while and I hope it will turn out to be. Did they have it when you were in college or is it something quite new? This girl said it served about the same purpose for the freshman girls as the Y cabinet serves for the Y. I agreed to be in it and shall see later what it involves.

Last week several of us girls went up to get our grades with no little excitement. The office was crowded with others on the same quest and some were getting a little advice as to how they could raise a D. The secretary fished my card out of a group marked O.K. so I had no fears- just curiosity. I was quite pleased for I pulled 2 Bs 1 B+ and 3 A's. I am going to try to keep that up for the rest of the semester.

The past few days have been wonderful- so mild and sunny that one would think it October. Yesterday we played Miami in football and lost 14-0. The first game lost in three years! We just wish Oct. 30 had been a day like yesterday in weather but not score.

Dot wrote a peachy letter this week and sent a check of ten dollars. That far exceeds all expenses of the reunion and we really don't need it just now. She is a dear girl to be so thoughtful though. Money has just been pouring in lately it seems. We got a check for $15 from Aunt Mary for interest on mortgage and we have been subbing a lot lately which brings in the cash. I have earned $4.00 already in subbing and Marjorie has almost that much. M. has lost her night school job for this semester since they ran out of funds. I think we have a plenty to carry us until next semester now.

I must write some more letters before bedtime so here is my love and we will see you in less than two weeks- Kathleen.

Dear Jerry,

I am enclosing a paper for you to make out for the bank account transferred from Phebe's name to yours at the Derby Savings Bank. I have the bank book. Return to me please.

I went to Worcester for the W.B.M. meeting last week and attended 5 of the sessions. Emma and Elbert (he did not attend) were up Wednesday only. I spent Thursday night and Friday morning with them and had a nice visit. We are all trying to get them down here for a visit. Emma's broken unal [ulna?] makes long rides hard so I fear we will not see them until that is better.

Flora goes to New Haven tomorrow and if all is well has her tonsils out on Thursday. She is eager to get them out and get rid of her rheumatism.

This is church supper and church sale day. The morning was fairly clear but it is rainy and very windy now.

We are trying out a new man. He airs much scientific knowledge and we are hoping he can do the job. Heard part of Etta's letter to Emma telling of your home week at Oberlin.

Lots of love
Aunt Mary

Dear Jerry,

Have just received a letter from your father authorizing me to change over Phebe Kinney's bank account to you. She has no account in the Derby Savings Bank, but there is some (I do not know how much) in Berlin. Do you want the account kept there or changed to Derby or some other place easier to access for you? I will await a reply tending to the matter. I may stop and show my credentials at the bank as I come down from Putnam the end of next week so as to save having to make an extra trip. That is, if I can not use the mails.

What do you want me to do with your share of the interest money done now? It is $7.95 I believe. I shall get that this week I hope as the lady has rented her downstairs now.

Flora improves slowly. She is now taking electric treatments in New Haven twice a week. Phebe and I take her in. Our case for the auto accident is being agitated again and either it comes to trial or they make a settlement very soon. We hope it is a settlement even if it does mean considerable less money.

I now expect to go to the Woman's Board meeting in Worcester Nov 10-12. Emma has invited me to stay there and go back and forth and I have accepted. They start this week for a business trip to Philadelphia and will spend next Monday night with us. I shall go up with them.

Phebe and Flora are waiting for me to play games so I must end. I do hope you all got to Oberlin as Marjorie wrote. It would have been such a fine reunion for you all.

Sometime in February I shall have $250 to hand over to you. Where shall I put it? Or do you want it out there?

At last the apples are all gathered, and the corn is cut. Only the grapes remain to be picked and there is no market at all for them. We may have to make grape juice and jam or jelly of 3 or 4 bushels.

We have not yet settled the question of a manager for the farm. Dan's going was so sudden and there were so many extra things in attending to the estate and keeping things going too. Lots of love

Aunt Mary

[This letter dated Nov. 28, 1926 was written from Oberlin, Ohio by Monnie (Marjorie) to her sister, Jerry (Geraldine). Monnie heard a talk by the YW Secretary, Margaret Fifield on the Holy Land. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

Talcott Hall
Oberlin, Ohio.
Nov 28, 1926.

Dearest Jerry,

We have just come home from Y.W. Margaret Fifield's talk was simply wonderful. I do wish you could have stayed to hear her. Her description of the Holy Land and her impressions of it were so realistic and frank. She held that audience just spell-bound every minute. And yet she talked so simply and naturally- just as if she were telling it to a few people around a fireside. Oh! how I wish I could talk like that – without notes – right from the heart! She was so enthusiastic, too. She said right at the start that she believed that Christ had the thing that we- in all our youth and vigor and enthusiasm- wanted most. She certainly must be a wonderful Y.W. Secretary.

Whenever I hear anyone, young like that, talk or do anything well in public, I renew a resolution to try all the harder to learn to do my every-day work well so that some day I shall be able to do something worth while. Sunday means more to me now than it ever did before, because now I understand what it means to receive inspiration from it for the week's work. And I receive a double share of renewed courage and determination when you have been here. You are such an inspiration to me- Whenever it takes especial effort to do something hard, I just think of what you have done and are doing. I hope that some day I may be such an inspiration to some one. I only wish that we could have had more time to talk, the different times you have been up here. Oh, Jerry, help me to forget myself, and thus to be able to do my best.

All this is the reaction to the talk tonight and the week-end.

After you left this afternoon we felt a bit blue and went in to find Agnes. She was all alone at our end of the hall- in her room doing theory. We brought her into our room and we wrote letters for a while. Then we began to make preparations for a cozy little supper for just us three from the leftovers from breakfast. But soon Jo came in with her family, which was starting away before supper, so we included Jo. And while K and I were in the kitchenette fixing things, Miriam and Garnett, in whose room you slept, came home and wandered into our room, so we asked them to stay. We had a nice time, but all we heard about was Miriam and Garnett's trip home.

We are writing Dot tonight, too. And are sending her the list.

In thinking over the weekend, I remember lots of blunders, per usual. One was that I should have placed Vivienne on my right hand some where. But don't you think Aunt Etta belonged where I put her because she was the oldest? Oh Dear, I hope Vivienne didn't feel so dreadfully hurt.

I must write to Grace Newberg now so "goodbye now" as the popular phrase is now.

Much love from us both,
Monnie.

I'm using a little envelope, because those which match these paper are all used up.

Foochow, China.

November 28th. 1926.

Dear Folks All:-

Here goes another general letter. Some of you have waited a long time since the last one. I think I intimated in some letter to some of you about a three weeks or more ago that the Annual Meetings of the mission and the Congregational church were coming and that would mean a silence from me for a time. The Annual meeting of the church began Nov. 16 and the mission meeting closed yesterday at about 12:30. The meetings are held here so I am right in my work all the time and I have either met or arranged for nearly all my classes. And I have attended all the meetings.

The Annual Meeting of the Church was a very good one. Some of the outstanding features were the Communion held a week ago this afternoon. This was in charge of two Chinese pastors. They arranged a service different from any that I had ever seen. They asked two of us missionaries to help them but they did all the arranging and simply asked us to take certain parts. Several have said that it was the most impressive communion was ever entirely arranged and carried thru by the Chinese. Always before some foreigner has been behind it in some way. This year the various committees have functioned better than ever before. The business was done in businesslike way and the spiritual addresses were of high order. Each day the business stopped at 10:30 a.m. and one of the pastors spoke at and each day likened the relation between man and God to the watch needing repair and God the repairer. I have never seen a Foochow man hold this audience during a series of addresses as he held them. This half hour was spoken of in terms of much appreciation by many. The sacred concert of Friday evening was the best yet. The church was well filled with a very quiet appreciative audience. The music was all sacred. The University boys conducted an exercise with the Chinese flag. Each color represented some one or more songs sung. After the last color had come up, a gilded cross appeared and the flag with its country were consecrated to the cross and its Christ.

We have been for two years working to have the Chinese sit with us to determine on the calls for new foreign workers and the recalls of missionaries from furlough. This year we have taken a long step in that direction and it looks as if the Chinese might have a say in our recall from furlough (or they may tell us to stay at home).

Between the church meeting and the mission meeting came Thanksgiving. The whole day was made sacred and much chastened for me by the thought all day that one year ago our Phebe was in the hospital and I was here with her and I knew that she could never be well again. How she did enjoy the songs and other parts of the Thanksgiving that I could bring to her. She could not enjoy any of the good things that we ate. This year we met in our old home where Dr. Dyer and Mr. and Mrs. Rinden and Miss McGuiggen are now. Fifty two of us were there and there were twelve children in another place. They ate at 12 m. so all the adults could be together at 1:30. I can never give a menu and I know that all the women who read this will be interested in that. Here are a few things that we had. Chicken pie with forty pounds of my roosters in them. The largest weighed 5 lbs. 10 oz. People said they were good, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, sweet corn, sang cha jelly, peanuts, honey dates, suet pudding, apples, oranges, mandarin oranges, bananas, pumelo, pears. That should be enough to make your mouth water and assure you that we are in the land of plenty despite the news mongers.

After the dinner there was a debate, - Resolved that it is better for a Chinese student to go to the Middle West than to New England for study. Of course it was made as funny as possible. In the Middle West he would find only corn and hogs to eat. In New England he would get a queer pronunciation of English, he would hear are pronounced as air. He would have his neck muscles twisted by looking up to see the tops of the high buildings, while in the west he would find such broad stretches that he would lose his way. After this we had a radio exhibition. Mr. Newell was a soloist. The system was the Beam system, a new one in which the artists appeared in person and could be seen. Newell was dressed in the height of fashion for a public singer. He had on a ladies (this is wrong but never mind) hat, and his dress was sustained by a narrow strap over each shoulder, arms, chest and shoulders bare. His skin is as fair as a woman's. He cut a wide swath. Mr. Thelin dressed up as a farmer and spoke on how to raise corn. Several did not recognize him at first. I was Pres. Coolidge and gave an address to Congress. Mrs. Hand gave Good Night Stories to the Children.

All day Friday and all Saturday forenoon we were in mission meeting. In the afternoon Ellen and I went down to the University, I attend a joint meeting of the Faculty and the B'd of Mangers. We got home about 9:30. Took supper with Professor and Mrs. Metcalf.

The political situation is getting more tense each day. This afternoon the streets are full of soldiers coming in from the south. Many came in yesterday. Report says that the Foochow officials will not give over the government to the South and there will be fighting. It seems fairly certain that most of the territory south of Foochow has gone to the South. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been with us for the past ten days. He got a letter from Ing Tai yesterday saying that the South was taking good care of them and all was quiet. They plan to leave for Ing Tai tomorrow.

Yesterday the mission voted to join with us to ask for a furlough to begin next year. As I wrote in my last to some of you this must be early enough to get in the weddings. I shall write for a sailing from Shanghai not later than May 15th. This will get us to Vancouver or Seattle by June 1, this is in time for the weddings if they are about the time of Commencements. I had better add that I have ordered a cutaway coat and a pair of the latest style striped trousers.

November 29th. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for Ing Tai today. Mr. and Mrs. Rinden went with them, to look over the ground. Soldiers have been pouring into the city for three days now. They are pretty near "all in". They get carriers and leave at once for Yeng Bing. I think that we will be under the South in a few days. I must close this with love to all and the prayer that God will give us all grace, fairness, strength, justice and love to live one day at a time, helpfully to our fellows and profitably to Him.

Dear Geraldine, Marjorie and Kathleen-

What is Geraldine doing? She has not written since she began work in Youngstown. There was mention of her in one of your letters. That is all we have heard. Last evening the situation here was so tense that we divided the night into three watches and watched. Mr. Shrader and I were on duty from 12:30 to 3:00. It was a lonely night. The stillness was almost oppressive.- The only sounds were barking of dogs, crowing of cocks and the beating of the watermens bamboo. To day the shops are flying the southern flag a white round ball in a blue background. The student army seems to be in control. The leader of this is a former student of Foochow College. Mr. Nga will know him Ling Sieu Chiong. Our present trouble may be over- altho I would prefer to have more experienced and more mature protestors. Lovingly Father

Talcott Hall
Dec. 5 [1926]

Dear Jerry-

Your letter did M. and I such a lot of good. Sometimes we get so discouraged about lessons and friendships that it seems as if we could not rise to the surface again. But knowing those comforting facts does help you to keep on a higher level and feel a certain confidence in yourself. We have not bought a book yet, but the one sentinel that we have has several helpful articles in it which bring a new idea every time I read them.

Well, only three weeks till Xmas and only two till vacation starts. Have you found out for sure yet when you get out? We may not go to Saginaw after all. It is very much up in the air and we don't know which to do. Marjorie has a term paper to write and thinks that she can't spare the time. Then too, if we take a professor's house they would probably want it occupied during the whole vacation instead of just part. There is a slight possibility that Don Morrison will be away and if so he is willing for us to take his house. His is the one which the Mitchners had on Forest street; wouldn't that be grand? But don't get hopes too high.

We feel quite Christmasy already because yesterday we went shopping. We got an electric top for Uncle Stanley's kiddies which lights up when it spins. Very pretty! We also got some present for a party that we had last night. A bunch of us girls drew names for presents and gave them at our party last night. It seems awfully early for a Christmas party but the girls insisted upon having it so we went into the room in which you slept and were served wonderful jello and cake with Christmas candy. I got a bottle of perfume and M. got a box of Oberlin seal writing paper.

We had a very hilarious time and the room was full to capacity.

To-night for YM and YW we heard former chief justice Clark speak on America and the League of Nations. It was very interesting and enlightening and I wish you could have heard it. He traced the history of war and the League thru to now and praised very highly the act of the European nations in making the Locarno [as in Locarno, Switzerland] treaties. He thinks that the U.S. should join these countries in their step toward peace, or at least express its sympathy with their act, before they ask us to join them. He was a very clear speaker and did not go into technicalities at all. I would like to know what Mr. Geiser and others think of his address.

Did you take a copy of the Christmas list with you? In case you did not I will send one. Have you decided what we will get Vivienne and who will get it? Are we going to get Gould a travelling bag? I think that would be best. Don't forget to send a card for Rose Mary's gift and her address.

Please tell us something that you would like for Xmas so that we won't get anything that you don't want.
Much love to you from us
Kathleen

Dear Jerry:-

Life's a busy whirl these days isn't it? Your last letter to me was dated Nov. 22, and I guess my last to you was long before that.

Say, why don't you come along up with the girls? We could easily get a room up here and as far as transportation goes we can manage that too. We'd all love to have you. The reason I didn't write you along with the girls about it was because I took it for granted that your school lasted as long as ours does. It's fine that you get out so early. Come on up- please do! Then you could help me drive on the way back. We could get a "third seat" or even sit on each others laps.

Whitie and I didn't go to Galesburg after all, and were so disappointed. The weather got so bad that we didn't dare start out. Letters from his folks advised us not to try it because roads out there were bad and many cars had been stuck. We'll have to wait that trip till spring vacation now. Mrs. Newberg invited me to come for the Christmas vacation, but we think it's best the way we've planned it.

You must have had a grand time in Hiram and in Oberlin. I thought of you all. I spent Thanksgiving day in bed, but went up North with a hunting party for the week-end and had a jolly-chilly time. It really was heaps of fun even tho none in our party even so much as laid eyes on a deer.

I sent Mother's and Father's steamer rug quite a while ago. The way you divided gifts is fine. I already have a pair of silk-wool socks for Dan and a light wool scarf for Wells. For Dorothy Bodman I have a little hand made nightie that I got at a church fair. For Roger and Fulton I thought of golf socks, but have you any suggestions for Uncle R. and Aunt Molly? I think bath robes for the girls would be excellent. I think they'd love the corduroy ones. Will you get them there, or shall I?

We ought to be able to get corduroy ones for $6 or $8. The colors you suggest for each are fine.

No, Gould hasn't sent Father's letter to me. In fact, I haven't even heard for the gift I sent him for his birthday. I haven't received those snaps taken while we were there for Home-Coming, from you either. The girls said you'd send them on.

Last night we had a very rare treat. The third concert on the Kiwanis course was the Flongaley Quartet and Ganz, the pianist. Both were just fine. It happened that for the last number the quartet played that beautiful Quintet in E flat, all four parts of which Arthur had on Victrola records. It was beautiful. Ganz played a program of pieces that were almost all familiar to me and I certainly did enjoy them.

Our church work here has begun so now we're busy people. I think I'm going to have a basketball school team this year, so I'll be busier than ever.

When we got back to school after the Thanksgiving vacation, who should walk into my gym but Agnes Hosie Heistand. Her husband, Tom, is with the Pure Oil Co. of Columbus and was sent up here to look over the oil around here. They are still here and will be till the end of this week. I've had Agnes over twice with Tom and they and we have eaten together several times at the Coffee Cup. It's nice to see old friends like that. They are rooming way over on the East Side, or I would see more of her.

Do you know how the girls are making out for a house or apartment for our Christmas home? I'm worrying for fear we'll have to pitch tents and camp.

Do hurry and write. Must stop and get this into the mail.

Lots of love,

Dot

Love from Whitie, too.

Dear Geraldine:-

The diary came by the last mail. THANK YOU. I had hoped you would remember, as you have been doing for the past number of years. This one is a beauty. It is just what I want. I shall plan to keep the diary of our journey home in it next May.

I have Phebe's estate almost settled. I need your receipt for the following. I will put the list on a separate sheet. I think I wrote you that I put the money that Phebe had in the bank here into fixed deposits. One is in the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, dated July 3, 1926, due July 3, 1927 at interest 4 ½%. One is in the American-Oriental Bank, dated June 4, 1926, due June 4, 1927, at interest 6%. Then I have a Kuliang Council Loan, 2nd Series, No. 23 for $50. The value of the Fixed Deposit in the H & S Bank is $120.34. The one in the A & O Bank is $200.00. The Kuliang Council Loan is at interest 6%. The debenture (Kuliang Council Loan) is in Phebe's name. The interest was paid to me last July and I have credited it to the account I am handing in as Executor. The fixed deposits are both in my name. I think I have written you this but I will repeat it. Exchange is very bad for you to sell silver for gold now. $1 in silver is worth only 43 ½ cents. I will give you a note for all this money and will enclose a receipt for you to sign. Your signature on this receipt will enable me to close up the estate. If at any time you want the cash for these sums I will pay it to you at the current rate, in U.S. gold. The note which I am enclosing will make this promise legal. My idea is to let the money lie in the Banks until exchange is more favorable. Then it can be converted into gold. It is bearing just as much interest as if it were in gold now. The reason why I allowed the fixed deposit to remain in the H&S Bank @ 4 1/2% instead of putting it in the AO Bank is that I consider the H&S the more stable institution and Mama is dead set against the A&O Bank.

A few weeks ago I sent Phebe's watch to Kathleen. I hope it reaches her safely. She has two Pekinese rugs that we will plan to bring home. We will also plan to bring her clothes. Her pictures and curios we will select and bring as we think you would like. Her spoons also and two rings we will plan to bring. This I think covers all the things. If not we will try to do as we think you would like. I think I wrote that as she did not fill out the term of five years her furniture reverts to the Board. Miss Perkins did allow us to take two small book cases which Phebe had made to fit the desk which Mama had made in 1917 and which Phebe used.

Aunt Mary writes that Uncle Elbert has had the Savings Bank proceeds sold and sent to you. Also the transfer of the money in the Putnam Bank. She had had the money in the Derby Savings Bank transferred and that in Berlin was to be transferred. Will you write me if these are all correct.

I believe that this is all the business. I will not take time to write all about the battle that took place ten miles away at Deng Chio. It is all over now and the Kuomintang and the Canton Nationalist Government are in control of Fukien province. We cannot go outside the compound gate without stepping on the soldiers from the south. Last night the lantern procession took over an hour in passing us as we stood watching it. Some of the heads of the new government are Foochow College graduates.

Last evening was the first anniversary of Mama's return. Today is a very sacred day for Phebe has been in Heaven just a year. I shall never be able to express to you all how much she was to me during those four years that we were here together.

Last evening letters came from Dorothy and Kathleen. You have not written since you got settled in Youngstown. But references to you from the other girls give us assurance that you are all right.

I hope that the Christmas season brings you the Spirit of the Christ, with all His joy.

Very lovingly,
Father

Talcott Hall
Feb. 6, 1927

Dear Jerry-

Your card came just in time- am so glad you wrote, for we were just wondering if you wanted to hear the concert. We knew just in time to order tickets. My, but we are tickled that you are coming. Can you get here by Friday night? I think the concert will be good.

Thanks just a heap for the stockings, they were just what we needed and M. has already made use of hers. I hope you got them at a sale for they were good ones and must have been high. Monnie says not to get her a hat for the shop here has some pretty ones that are big enough. We went down last night to look, and several of the hats looked very well on her. She can order any style in any color that they have. We can't think now of anything that we want but we may later.

We were both through exams on Friday noon and it certainly felt good to be free from school work for at least two days. To-morrow second semester begins and we have to dig again. Exams really weren't as bad as I expected but I did study harder than I ever have before on them. I guess it was good for me. Monnie was pretty scared of her psyc. Lab exam because she hadn't done all her experiments and the exam came three hours earlier than she had expected. She came out with a C, though, and was mighty thankful. She made an A in her zo exam. Only two of my blue-books have come back. In French my grade was A- and in Theory A+ without a mistake. I was so thrilled.

Friday afternoon six of us girls took a hike to celebrate. I guess we went about five miles and it was good fun. In the evening after choir we went down to Aunt Etta's and played games. They told us then that Pick was planning to surprise you. I am so glad he did and also glad that he told you about the concert. It couldn't have worked out better.

Things still seem pretty serious in China don't they? Today's paper said that refugees (I don't like that name for them) were landing in Shanghai from inland every day. Hunan province seems to be the place of disturbance just now. I do wish we knew where Mother and Father are. We haven't had a letter direct from them since his one dated Dec. 7. Perhaps there is interference with the mails.

Yesterday we paid our semester bills and then cleaned our room. I don't believe that this room ever had such a cleaning for we turned everything upside down and wrong side out till the place looked a sight. But when we got it done it looked wonderful. I wish you could have seen it. Last night we wandered around town for a long time looking at hats, shoes, lamps etc. Say, if you see a little boudoir lamp with a yellow or orange shade that isn't over two dollars we wouldn't mind if you brought it up. We find only one that we like in town and that isn't exactly what we want. One with a real small metal standard or blue standard and a small orange silk shade is what we are looking for. Don't bother unless you happen to see one. We splurged on some ice-cream too, last night a whole pint. To-night Millicent came up and stayed for supper. We really had a good time with her this time. She is getting to be lots of fun.

I am enclosing a little calendar that Mrs. Metcalf sent in with mine. Write and tell us when you are coming- Love as ever

Kathleen

Dear Jerry:-

You're as quiet as I am these days, and, well so, if you're as busy as I am- and I know you are.

I was thankful to hear that Punken [Kathleen] is back in school and got there in time to take her exams. She was a lucky girl not to be sicker.

Those towel sets that you sent are beautiful. They are so different in pattern than those one generally sees. Thank you heaps for sending them. It happened that I saw a lovely one in blue that I got just the week before, so now I'm fitted out with three sets each in a different color. Oh yes, and when I get a yellow wash-cloth to go with Aunt Etta's towel that will be the fourth color. I have purchased something for my chest out of each check. At some of the sales I found some pretty hemstitched sheets and pillow-cases. I got two sheets and one set of cases- also a beautiful white spread and bolster. At another sale I got two lovely white linen hand towels and half a doz. little Madira napkins that were real pretty. Found some nice dish toweling at a sale and hemmed four of those. Am now working a table scarf on heavy linen-colored linen with dark blue and white. I've also started an everyday luncheon set in blue and white. Miss Batschelet worked a little set in yellow for use- very pretty.

Do you hear anything from Mother and Father or the Board? It's been three weeks now since we got that last letter. Either they have no time to write, or else the mails aren't coming through. We saw in the movies last night in the news reel, some terrible mobbing scenes in Hong Kong. It took the heart right out of me to think of Father and Mother anywhere near anything like that. The papers now say that all of the missionaries are out of China. I think the papers have been way ahead of the story all along. I'd love to hear that they are on their way home. My they'll have some interesting things to tell when they come home, won't they?

A new ninth grade girl came to our school from Tecumseh the other day. I was asking her how long she'd been there, etc. She was in the grades, but in the High School building when you were there, but doesn't seem to remember you. Her name is Dorothy Buck. I think she had a sister or brother in the H.S. Was it the Gillespie's you stayed with there? That was the only name I could think of that sounded anywhere near like it. She knew some people by that name. She is a nice little girl- has red hair.

Harold and I have been entertained royally around here lately- outside of the 1825 circle. As I wrote you Mrs. Curtis had us to dinner on Sunday a while ago. Do you remember one of my competent little leaders that they called "Barney"- (Helen Barnett)? Her family is all very active in the Ames Church. Harold has Mr. Barnett in his Brotherhood class in the gym. I have Mrs. in the ladies class. There is a H.S. boy and a H.S. girl, both in their respective classes. Little Helen comes with Juniors, and I have the two tiny ones in my Primary class. Mrs. Barnett had us over for dinner and the evening not long ago. Last Sunday we had two different invitations- one from Mrs. Gelinas and one from Mrs. Hayden- where Harold stays. Mrs. Hayden's invitation held over till this next Sun. So we went to Mrs. Gelina's for dinner and spent all afternoon there. Didn't leave till after 5:00. Al Adams went with us and entertained with his banjo. We all had a very enjoyable time.

I sent for two doz. boxes of Jasmine tea from Mrs. Davis in Oberlin, and have found quite a sale for it here. Mrs. Hayden took several boxes and served some at a tea. It was a fine ad. For when the ladies left they took all of her tea away with them, so she came to me for some more. The teachers have taken quite a bit. I can't make very much on it because Mrs. Davis herself is already making 10 cents or over on each box. I started out selling it not as a money making affair but simply because so many of the teachers who drank it when I served it, wanted some, that I sent down and got the 2 oz. boxes. I tho't I'd make 5 cents on each box so charged them 55 cents a box. If I could get it direct from Father, I could really make something on it.

Last Sat. was Father's birthday but I didn't get to write him either then or Sun. - in fact, I wonder if it would ever get to him if we do write. Are you writing, and what do you think the chances are of letters reaching them?

I hope a letter from you will cross this on its way to you.

My free period is up, so I must stop.

Lots of love and many thanks for the pretty towel sets.

Dot.

[This letter dated April 17, 1927 was written from Easton, Pa. by Gould to his sister. Gould's fiancé, Vivienne, has broken off their engagement. He expresses his thoughts regarding it. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

109 N. 3rd St.,
Easton, Pa.
April 17, 1927.

Dear Sister:

I must write you tonite before I go to bed for I have left your two dear letters unanswered all too long. I have just returned from Aunt Mollie's where I spent the Easter weekend.

Thank you ever so much for the candy. It is delicious and I am indulging in it cautiously and slowly to make it last.

Now as regards Vivienne, there is nothing that can be done further. The break has been made and at least for three years or so I do not look for any change from her direction. I still love Vivienne. I do not hold any hard feelings against her. I feel she has made a mistake- one which she will probably see some day. She is not a bad girl. She has a lot of good in her and perhaps will find another man whom she will love more constantly than she did me. I want you to understand that I will take her to my heart just as lovingly as before if she wants really to come.

It hurt awfully at first and I carry a rather heavy pain deep in my breast all day long now. There is something missing in my life- something that I had before but have lost- the love of a sweet, fine girl and a sweet fine girl to have. When a person develops the capacity to love completely, fully, beautifully and purely and the object of the love is suddenly wrenched away, there is an immense void in the person's life which is filled with nothing that is not as best or good or better than the original love.

I do not want you to feel at all apologetic for your sex. There are just as bad and far worse betrayals going on every day responsible to both sexes and the pot can't call the kettle black. This one happened to strike us in one particular way.

For the present I have little inclination nor inspiration to seek out another girl whom I can love. That will better wait for a few years. Certainly I will not take one in any inferior to the first love.

There is one thing you can do if you feel like it and have an opportunity. Voda is nearly sick with grief about this affair. If you will assure her in any way and comfort her by letting her know that all is well and that we do not feel wrathfully resentful about Vivienne's doings it would please me greatly. I am not sure but I suspect that she is respectant[?] and she really must not worry nor have too much sorrow to bear. She takes the troubles of their family very heavily on her own shoulders. I think she could bear it much better if all you sisters could find it possible to write her a loving little note to let her know that our attitude is not malicious nor revengeful and that we take a really loving view of it all. You are the only ones outside of Aunt Phebe and Aunt Emma who have met Voda and who can write her on this subject. Please do not mention that I asked you to nor what I suspect.

Vivienne sent the ring back and I sent it directly to Mr. McCormack without opening it for I could not bear to look at it. He is giving me a fair price on it. I have asked him to keep $50 on deposit for whatever Dorothy may want to buy there for her wedding present. Please keep this secret till I think best to tell her so she can plan about it.

Now don't feel bad about me. Rather pity Vivienne for I do believe she will not be happy in her present state. She suffered too- I know she did.

Lovingly-
Gould.

P.S. Am sending Dorothy's letter to Aunt Mollie first.

Foochow, China
April 24- 1927

Dear Folks All:-

This goes to Shelton and to Oberlin- I am writing with carbon, - and they will send to all the other children and to the brothers, - Shelton will also send to Putnam and Oberlin will show to Aunt Etta and family.

The best piece of news hereabout for a month is that I drove the last mail in the last freight last night. We have ten boxes to send by freight. Two are trunks- one Phebe's and one Ellens. This makes less baggage to look after, which decreases the work en route. I am sending this freight to Boston, and will see when we arrive what we will do with it. I think I wrote in my last what we hope to do after reaching America, and I'll repeat here. (1) I will telegraph Marjorie and Mary and ask them to let all the others know. We want to stop at Geneseo, Ill. and see Ellen's cousins Addie Paul and Carl Chamberlain. From there we hope to go to Galesburg and see Harold's folks, then we wait on the order of Dorothy and Harold to go where they are to be married. I hope we can stop at Oberlin for commencement. From there we plan to go to Conn. I shall hope to get to Century Farm in time to help at haying. Perhaps I can drive the cows and turn the grind stone- if Mary does not bear on too hard, - might milk a cow on a pinch if a thunder shower threatened and a load of hay was out ready to come in- or I might be trusted to drive horses for the loader or for the horse fork. I would not presume to ask to ride the mowing machine or horse rake.

My what changes there will be at home. I know them, but I must realize them after getting home.

The last mail brought Geraldine's letter with the receipt so I can finish the settlement of Phebe's estate, - that is the legal part of it. It looks as if there would be quite a settlement to make after we get home. Phebe's things are scattered thru several of the ten boxes.

Farewells are in full swing. This last week, we have attended four and more coming this next week. If there is doubt in any ones mind as to whether or not we are wanted here just attend one of these farewells or listen to any number from any group as the inquire if we are coming back. When we come back it looks to me as if we would be able to do much more efficient work for our time will not be so much taken up with doing things= administrative work. We will be able to be- to be friends.

There is not much to write of a political nature. You get as much if not more about events in Nanking and in other places as we do. In Foochow all has been quiet for two weeks or more. The Nanking trouble did not affect Foochow at all. The big question for China now is Nationalists vs. Communists. Where the Nationalists are on top there is quiet. Where the Communists rule there is not quiet, - all is topsy-turvy. In Hunan the Communists are driving out all foreigners and closing schools and churches. The same in Hankow. In both these places from 7/10 to 10/10 of the offices are in the hands of the Reds. Here in Foochow the Nationalists are in almost complete control, and we are quiet.

Last Wednesday two of the government officials gave to those in charge of mission schools three hours of discussion, where we could ask anything about registration. It was a frank meeting. One requirement rather staggered us, i.e. There must be a Geromintory party organization in every school. But we must remember that China is in a revolution just now- Times are not normal.

I want to congratulate Kathleen on her standing. Keep humble and do it some more. Mr. Nga sent me his marks- mostly B+= pretty good I thought for a foreign student of his age. Please tell him- if I do not get a letter to him in this that I want to see him when I reach Oberlin. I want to talk over summer plans with him.

May the Father of us all keep us and prosper our plans so that we may see each other soon.

Very lovingly

Father and Brother

Rest Room

The Strouss-Hirshberg Co.

Youngstown, Ohio

Tuesday noon.
[Probably Spring 1927]

Dear Jerry,

We were so sleepy when you went this morning that we didn't say half what we wanted to. We appreciate so much all that you did to make Youngstown interesting for us. And you surely succeeded- because we think this is one of the nicest cities we've visited-barring the smoke.

We'll live over this visit just the way we did the visit to Saginaw last year; and I don't blame Dot for being sorry she couldn't come!

I'm afraid I'm not going to see the Guttridges. I did want to so much, too.
I hope you get rested up again soon. When this play is over, don't take on any thing more, for you need the time. Be careful about burning the candle at both ends.

We are looking forward to seeing you real soon.

Much love,
Monnie

Please tell Mrs. Mill how much we appreciated those waffles last night- we forgot to speak about them this a.m.

Dear Jerrabee-

I can hardly realize that we won't see you again here- it seems almost like home now and I sure do want to come again if the folks can bear with us.

Thanks for the candy a lot- we left a little for you to taste on your desk. You notice we finished the egg ha! Ha! I do hope we didn't leave anything or take anything of yours with us. I don't think we did either for we looked very carefully.

Well we must hurry so goodbye and thanks just loads for giving us such a dandy time. This surely was a real vacation.

Both Helens are going home with us so maybe we won't get lonely on the way home.

Loads of Love

Kathleen

Dear Jerry-

We are being quite gay for us. Last week one day we had several errands- on the Cross[?] Road, in Nichols and at Olivers. Hence we decided to combine them with a swim and a picnic. We got in the errands and then picnicked but it stormed so we omitted the swim. On Saturday we (Gould and we three) took a peek at the air-meet at the Bridgeport Airport, got a swim at Lordship and picnicked up on the bluff near the light house. Nancy missed out as she was with Aunt Mary. So today we packed a lunch, got May and went to Pleasure Beach for a swim and back to Lordship for supper in the bluff. A severe thunderstorm from 2:45 to 3:45 nearly upset our plans again.

Gould was up from Thursday until Sunday and we had a nice visit. He said he was looking a bit for a home for next winter for you two.

Theodore and Ruth Tambio have set up the date of their wedding to July 27th. Mrs. Tambio had a sale for her home and the purchasers want possession August 1st. Ruth wanted her wedding there so changed the date. If you were here she would love to have you help serve. She has two young cousins on her side to help and Edith on Theodore's. She would like another of her cousins but all those here are boys. She is sending no formal invitations, just telephone calls, formal calls and writes where neither is possible. All the cousins and I think a very few special friends. If you can come let us know and we will be on hand to meet you. If it were only three weeks later as originally planned, Dot and Harold might have made it. They will all live at Theodore's for the present at least.

Mrs. Jacques came and spent 10 working days. Flora has a new dress and two remodeled ones; Phebe 1 new and 1 remodeled and a coat for the new; I an ensemble also and a remodeled linen that goes with the coat. I'm going to reverse the sleeves from my green with the black lace flounces to wear it to another wedding. Phebe wears the dress she had for Dorothy's wedding too, - the panels have become shoulder drapes and the sleeves are out.

We expect Myra and Stanley this weekend to get Nancy. Probably one of the others will stay to be gotten when they come for the wedding.

Lots of love

Aunt Mary.

Hope all is fine and your getting fat and rosy.

Dear Mother:

Back in the flying game again and it seems good to talk to the old boys again about flying and old times. There are two here that I knew at Kelly Field. The rest are all strangers, but all aviators and good scouts.

This man's Army is an entirely different outfit from what it was during the war. There is little risk and hustle about the field. Officers are more genial and less particular about military etiquette and discipline. They often wear civilian clothes when going to town and when off duty. I guess the air service is a little more lax in that respect than the other branches because their work requires duty clothes and dungarees much of the time while flying and it is not as conducive to keeping up the details of a uniform. Also they have real constructive work to do instead of just carrying on as the Infantry does.

Today I took the 609 aviator's physical exam, which was much the same as the first one I took on enlisting. The whirling chair was left out as it has gone into the discard with a lot of other things that were found to be no good. Tomorrow I expect to take my first flight.

A lot of these boys know Byrd, Costo, Lindberg, Chamberlin and the rest intimately and it is interesting to hear them talk of them.

I have no idea whether I can get over the Farm or not, but if I can possibly do so I will. Have not investigated into the possibilities of jumping in a parachute yet, but there is still time to find out about that.

I will probably be at the Farm next Sunday for we have no duty on Saturday afternoon or Sunday unless we get stuck for guard duty or Officer of the Day.

May love to all,

Lovingly your son

Gould.

[About July or August 1927]

Dear Mother, Father and All:

I'll be up Sunday in time for dinner and can stay till Friday morning.

You folks did'nt get any more thrill in seeing me in the air than I did in showing you that I really could fly and in achieving that desired stunt of flying over the farm and my own people. The plane I had was not fit to stunt in so I let it go without showing off. There is more to the story of the flight and the air carnival at ?? than will go in this letter. Will give you the details when I get there. Have something more to tell you bout my doings also.

Was at Aunt Mollie's last week end and had a real good time. She and Dorothy are all excited about the wedding. Only a week more and it will be in full swing. I'm glad Dot could have it in Shelton where all our folks can enjoy it and make a real big time of it. Guess it was'nt so bad that another wedding didn't meet its schedule, else everyone would'nt have been able to come.

See you all on Sunday.

Lovingly,

Gould.

[About Early Sept. 1927]

Dear Jerry:

You're well started by now, too, I suppose. How is it this year- just the same, or a lot different? You've discovered by now that Milo Bugbee is coach in your school, or at least that's what Mrs. Bliss and Mabel tell me. He is Mrs. Bliss's nephew. Wasn't he your classmate in college? Do you remember him there? I had the first date here in Saginaw with him. He was staying with Mrs. Bliss when I came. Mrs. Croley was anxious to have me meet him because he was an Oberlinite. I wasn't at all impressed with the date, tho. He is now engaged to a girl here, who teaches on the East side. We used to see her every night at the Coffee Cup last year. I wonder what kind of a coach he'll make. He has been principal of a small school and has done all of the coaching, too I guess.

Where did you finally get rooms? Did you take that lovely little apartment? I don't know where to address you, so I guess I'll send this to your school. I suppose you don't know where to address us either.

We're beautifully located in a dear little brick bungalow with six nice rooms. It is on the same street as the school about ten blocks north. It is such heaps of fun being all by ourselves and taking care of this dear little home. We wish that it really belonged to us. The lady that owns it is a Christian Scientist, and is a divorced woman- quite a rascal I guess, but she has moved way out to Nebraska, so won't bother us at all. She has beautiful furniture in the house, but took quite a bit with her. She took her piano, lovely big Sonora, two tables and two lamps, her sewing machine, a big mohair chair, electric iron, all her silver, and linen and half of her dishes and kitchen utensils. All this she took after we had decided to take the house, and at first we were terribly provoked and began to look around for something else, but in looking, we found that we weren't so jipped after all for all the apartments and houses that we looked at were higher, or not half so well equipped, or not enough room, or something else was the matter. We are getting this house- beautifully furnished and all by ourselves for $55. a month with $5 for the garage (right with the house). That's no so bad when I hear that you are paying $35. for three rooms on the third floor. I got your letter yesterday afternoon after I started this.

Our house has a cute little cement floor porch with vines growing up over it and a nice porch swing. The door opens right into the large living room which has a lovely davenport something like the one at Thatcher's. We bought a big leather rocker to take the place of the big chair she took. There is a large gate- big table in that room. We need two more tables, so I'm going to ask Mother for the rest of green lacquer tables, then we will get a library or living-room table of some kind. That will fix our front room. Oh yes, we'll get one or two lamps too, I guess.

Off the front room on one side is a little den where she had the piano and a large desk and the telephone. I've asked Mother if we can get our piano up here. That will fix that room.

Right back of the living room is the dining room. The three front rooms are all open with just large doorways between. The dining-room has a beautiful dark walnut set- large round table, six chairs and a long low buffet. We brought a pretty walnut shiva closet to keep the pretty wedding things in. We keep my cedar chest there, too.

Our bedroom opens off one side of the dining room. That is beautifully furnished, too. A lovely dark wood bed, and nice bureau and a chiffoneer for Harold. A nice closet, too. The bathroom opens off from our bedroom. Small, but nice and has another door opening into a little passage that goes to another door in the dining-room and a door into a small back bedroom with a double bed and a chiffoneer. The stairway to the big attic (all over the house) leads off from this room.

The kitchen is very nice. It is right back of the dining-room, and there is a little back porch off from that.

When we got up here we went to the Hayden's and stayed there for three or four days while looking for a house. They were at the cottage. We unpacked one load and there it stayed till we moved in here. We moved in on Sept. 2. I had my wedding things on display all over the front rooms and dining room. Several people came to see us, the things and the house. We unpacked our things (gifts) the first night we were here. Asked Mabel and her sister to come down and help us. We had lots of fun and so did they. It was almost as much fun as unpacking them the first time.

Those first few days we worked like the Trojans getting the place unpacked and settled. Harold is a dear about helping. He does anything and everything- dishes, sweeping, helps with the washing and cooking and helps me make the bed every morning etc. We are now fairly well settled, aside from a few little things we want to get to fill our rooms. She left us a few dishes, but we are soon going to get our set. We are using the silver from the lunch kit till we get our set. Ethel Le Roy sent a sugar spoon and a jam spoon in the William and Mary set, for a wedding present. Mrs. Bliss gave us $5. and Father's friend Mr. Beecher gave us $5.

I'm glad you are nicely settled. Sorry you didn't get into that nice little apartment. Do you want the radio? You might as well have it if you want it for I don't know how much time we will have for it.

I'm also mighty glad that you got so well rested before starting in with school. I hope that you can keep rested. Don't go too hard.

I'll write to Miss Coughy. Thanks for sending her letter to you.

I wrote to Father asking him to come up here, too. I hope he does. I'd love to entertain him in our little house. We both love it here, and we're having just piles of fun in it together. We very much want you three girls to come up here to "our home" for Christmas vacation. I think it would be heaps of fun, and we have plenty of room. Two can sleep in the spare bedroom and one on the davenport. Talk it over and think it over and tell me what you think of it.

Yes, all of our gifts came through perfectly. It's so much fun using my new pretty things. We use the electric toaster and the coffee pot that I got in my showers every morning. On our bed we are using the quilt that the Ames church ladies made me and the spread that I got in New Haven.

We didn't hear from the Beetle" for a long time. Finally Harold got a letter from his mother saying that they got home safely at about 3 o'clock Sat. afternoon and had been busy "telling their story" ever since.

We got our first letter in our new home today from Aunt Etta. She surely did enjoy the summer. It was a good rest for her.

I love that glass bowl you gave me more and more all the time. It stands on the middle of the buffet all the time. The colors in it at night are beautiful.

I don't get much time to do any real cooking but we have been eating all three meals at home. Tomorrow I am going to do some baking. The cafeteria at school hasn't opened yet.

The wedding pictures came the other day. I was mighty glad to get them. Now I have more letters to write to send them to the friends.

Mon. is Fair Day here and the schools are closed. We thought some of driving to Oberlin for the weekend and bringing the tables and one of the chairs back with us, but we are both so tired from "settling" and starting school that we decided to "play" this week-end and rest. We want to drive down sometime in the Fall tho! I'll ask the girls when would be the best time for us to come.

We are so glad that we had so many pictures of our own to hang, for that is another thing that she left a minus quantity of. Your Alice Blue Gown picture we appreciate very much. We also had those two Chinese embroidered pictures and I had three Wallace Muttings and two little Japanese pictures, so the walls are fairly well covered. I am going to have some of my Chinese embroideries framed.

Alice Halahan- the girl who taught Civics the year you were here- is back this year teaching in our building, but not Civics. I guess she has a grade home-room.

Tomorrow's going to be a busy day, so I guess I'll close and go to bed. Harold is painting the kitchen ceiling and walls and is just about through.

Did you get the certificate of title that Harold sent to you? He sent it Special to Aunt Etta's. That crazy fool thing that I looked all summer for was reposing calmly in my desk drawer at school with some of my other papers. How I ever did such a crazy thing as to leave it there I don't know.

Lots of love from us both, and write again soon.

Dot and Harold.

Dearest Mother-

We are wondering where you spent Thanksgiving. Did you go up to the farm and see Gould or did you stay in Putnam? Uncle Elbert sent a most delicious turkey to Aunt Etta and today we were invited there to finish it up. The boys were home and we had a very jolly party. For Thanksgiving dinner we both stayed at our boarding houses where they had special dinners. Ours at Talcott was very formal. I was so glad we waitresses escaped all the formality by eating out in the kitchen, per usual. We took our bones up in our fingers and did anything else that we wished. We had a good dinner but not as good as a home one. Our dinner lasted only an hour and a half- most houses sat for three hours. We didn't have any speakers like other houses, though, just had a short play after dinner. We all felt like stuffed pigs after it, of course, and didn't do much all afternoon. In the evening four of us went up to Prof. Lathrops to take care of the baby while they went out. Mrs. Lathrop told us to make candy and do anything we wished. We made some fudge, then found the "Revolt of Modern Youth" in the bookcase and read that. We talked all the rest of the evening and such an interesting two hours I have never spent. I learned a lot and thought still more. My eyes certainly are being opened to a host of truths that I never dreamed of before and with the knowledge of these things life takes on so much more meaning. It thrills me at times with its opportunities and chance for developing. I just want to read and talk and learn about human relations of all kinds. I am just at that stage where I have to consciously adjust myself to my surroundings and I have found it very hard at times. Did you ever feel that you never could be like other people and learn to be natural? I suppose it all comes by constant practice and experience, but the struggle seems awfully long. I wish that I might always stay upon the heights and feel inspired by the romance of the unknown before me, but so often I "can't see the woods for the trees" as our Sociology professor so nicely puts it. Never fear Mother dear, I'll come out alright but the learning process is now in full swing. I seem to be waking up gradually from some dream or daze that I have been in up till now. Things that I have experienced before take on new meanings and I see how horribly stupid and blind I have been.

Well, to change the subject, where are you going to be on Christmas? It's only four weeks from today you know. My, how time flies. It always has but it seems to gain velocity as it goes. I guess we are headed for Saginaw for our vacation- nearest rest for wanderers. I am real anxious to see Dot's little home so I am glad we are going. I just hope you can come too, so we can all be together.

I must go to bed now like a good girl and get ready to work hard tomorrow. This week we have six week tests so I will have to dig-especially in chemistry. It's a nightmare.

With just heaps of love and please write us a nice long letter
Your daughter
Kathleen

45 Smith St., Hempstead
L.I., N.Y. Jan. 3, 1928.

Dear Father and Mother:

I guess I have procrastinated all too long about writing this letter to you. I have received all of four or more from you and many more forwarded from the sisters and Aunts, and I should have let you have a little news long ago.

This Fall I have managed to get up to Shelton a little oftener than I had expected to. I have driven the twins up three times and had my visit with the Aunts Sunday morning. The Aunts settled down finely to the business of making a living on the farm after you left. They felt a little more competent to cope with things than when they started in. Paul has done a good job. Aunt Flora can't seem to get over the idea that she must tuck his beard full of fools knowledge and that he is a numbskull because he doesn't go around devouring all printed matter that falls into his lap. Aunt Mary controls her prejudice against him pretty well, but she is decidedly cold towards him. Aunt Phebe keeps the equilibrium well tuned up for all parties and so, in their own ways they get along as well as can be expected and I guess they will break even and perhaps to even better this next year.

Paul had his hands full with harvesting the corn. He had more than he thought he had. He cut the silo full of green corn and is cutting the dry stalks in there or for day lots and feeding it out before it rots. The dairy looks fat and well.

The week end of Nov 10 Virginia, Lillian, Chas'. Curtiss and I drove to Baltimore and attended the Michigan Navy football game. Score 6-6. We had a very hilarious and nice time. Mr. and Roberta Van Amee [Van Namee] have invited us up four times this Fall. This Xmas I had from Sat. noon till Wed. morning and the same at New Years and I spent the time at Shelton and Seymour. I had Xmas dinner at Cousin Nellie's with the Aunts. There were five maiden ladies and three widows there so I didn't have to do much talking. The dinner was excellent and stuffing. Cousin Nellie reminisced about the wedding.

Virginia gave me a pretty belt and buckle. I gave her a camera. She grows deeper into my heart as I love her better. She is a good sound girl and a wonderful little Sweetheart and her love is inspiring.

I got out to the Chicago Show the first week in Dec. I flew a new model of Fairchild plane out with the designer as passenger. Caught the grip and dropped in on Dot and Harold to recuperate. Had a day in Oberlin and saw all the girls. Jerry drove up from Youngstown. It was the only way I had of seeing them all for Xmas.

The girls gave me a fine leather brief case which will supplant the old one I have been carrying my maps around in.

I have forgotten whether I told you or not but now I am Chief Test Pilot for the Aviation Corp. I do all the testing of all the new planes we build and also the testing of the experimental engines built by the engine Co. The Caminez Bros. were bought out by the stick holders and were a good riddance. The Engine Co. is now the Engine Div. of the Corp.

I received your box of tea and thank you very much for it. They all think it is very pretty. Virginia is very much pleased with hers. I want to give Virginia a gold signet ring for her birthday. The kind that has our character in Chinese on it. Please give me an indication of the cost and I will foreword it to you at once. Her birthday is in April.

Remember me to all my old friends out there. I don't know who to specify, but all whom I used to know. My love to my very close father and mother.

Your only son,
Gould.

Dear Geraldine:-

Since the family got together in Saginaw they seem to have gone out of the business of letter writing. Kathleen has written me. I believe that is the only letter from the members of the group. Whether Mother is still in Saginaw or in Geneseo or in Oberlin I do not know. Kathleen writes that you and she had a record trip to Youngstown from Oberlin. I spent the night with Uncle Wells and Aunt Etta. Tuesday I called on Mrs. Bliss and Dr. and Mrs. Kinnear. In the p.m. I looked up Mr. Nga. Together we looked up Mr. Cio- and found with him and Mr. Uong= all from Foochow. Mr. Nga stuck to me until I took the train at 5:40 p.m. At Cleveland I took what should have been the 9:10- It left a little after 11 p.m. and was 3 hours late into Worcester. I reached Putnam at 5:30 on Wed. Fri. I went to Boston. Sunday I spoke three times in the Cong'l Church and am to go up there to speak next week Thursday to the joint meeting of the Rotaries of Putnam, Danielson and Southbridge, and the first week in Feb. I go for the Woman's Miss'y Society and High School. Next Monday I go to Flatbush and shall spend Tues. and Wed. nights with either Gould or Uncle Stanley.

Today got the photos of Phebe's stone and am sending you a copy of each of the three views.

The weather here in Conn. has been quite in contrast to what I saw in Illinois, Michigan and Ohio during the whole month of Dec. Some nights it has not frozen at all here.

In Boston I asked about any possible place for you in the Am. Board Schools but they did not know of any. I shall be writing some of the Foochow people soon and I will mention your wish to go to Foochow.

I hope your Ford is behaving well. Uncle Elbert is quite agitated lest in cranking it on a cold morning it kick and hurt you. He had a narrow escape cranking his car and yesterday Uncle Oliver was here and showed me his wrist- broken when his Ford kicked once as he was cranking it.

I trust no news is good news from all and that all are well and happily busy. We had such a deep pleasure in being together in Saginaw that it will take us all little time to get back to normalcy.

Paul [Paul Clapp – boarder and manager at Century Farm- 1930 census] is here and doing well, - a very different man from Clifford. He is getting most twice as much milk as we were getting last Sept. and does more work in a day than the other man did in several days.

The aunts are all gapping and yesterday I did a big long days work drawing manure and am tired so good night.

With love
Father

Shelton, Conn.
Feb. 11- 1928

Dear Geraldine:-

The Beard reunion must have been a deep one, for mental states are often characterized by opposite extremes. We often go from extreme joy to extreme sorrow or sadness. We were vulnerable at Saginaw, and then swing to the other extreme, and it has been hard to get any expression from all since. Monnie and Kathleen have been pretty good and mother has written often for her but Gould and you have not written at all, and Dot once and mother is begging for any letters I have from "The children". She was still at Geneseo Feb. 4, and still with a lot of work to do.

Yesterday a dozen photos of the family came from Saginaw. I am mailing one to you. I am sending to Gould, all my brothers and sister, Emma and Elbert, Raymond and Mollie, Flatbush, you= 10. I have asked Dot and Harold to send to Monnie and Kathleen, Etta and Willis and Addie Paul. I do not know if others of you want to send to other people.

Did you receive that Devotion Book. I sent it some weeks ago. The family photo I have ready to mail to you. I can deliver all the others in person. We plan to take dinner with Oliver and Grace tomorrow and Monday I go to Pearl River for an address and hope to see Gould and the Jewetts on the way back. I was in Putnam last Monday to address the Mothers and Daughters Tuesday Woman's Miss'y Meeting- 96 at M. and D. Monday and over 100 Tuesday- Wed. a.m. I spoke at Assemble at Putnam High School and went to Abington for Teachers- some 30+ in the afternoon, and came back Thursday.

We are in something of a quandary about Gould. He has written Flora once since Jan. 1. and has phoned twice, - once to say he hoped to come up= two weeks ago and again two weeks tonight to say he could not come. I phoned while in New York the last of Jan. but he was not on Long Island. I wrote last Tuesday asking his landlord to open the letter if Gould was not there. But no reply yet. I plan to go to Pearl River next Monday and wanted to go to see Gould on Tuesday, go to Mt. Vernon Wed. and Bridgeport Thursday. I am to be in Hartford Friday afternoon and back in Flatbush for Feb. 19, 20, 21.

We have had a very open and warm winter here thus far. Ice is only 5" thick and the Aunts have cut none. There has not been over three inches of snow on the ground at one time this year and 8 degrees above zero is the coldest we have seen it.

I came back from Putnam two weeks ago yesterday to find Paul waiting for me to go with him to see a cow with a view to purchasing. We drove down to Nichols- traded one of ours for two. The next day I bought another of Fred Bennett. The Aunts have sold two- traded off one and traded in two and bought one. The same number still but they are getting much more milk.

Aunt Mary announced a few minutes ago that she had 23 doz. eggs this week- had sold 21 doz. Her prices are 65 cents for those that weigh 30 g. to the doz. and 55 cents for those smaller. About $\frac{3}{4}$ are large.

After Supper

Gould phoned from Hempstead while we were at table. He is all right and I plan to see him next Tues. - spend the night with him, spend Wed. night with the Jewetts and Thursday night with Oliver and Grace. Aunt Phebe has been talking with May Palmer ever since we finished supper- Mary and I did up the dishes and I wrote to this place while they talked.

Have you heard that Fred Carpenter was found dead in his bath tub last Monday morning? He had recently bought a new gas heater for the bath room. He had told about that he would go home from his mothers Sun. night after supper, take a bath, and go to bed early, and Mon. morning go to New York after his wife. They found his clothes laid out ready, but he was in the tub half filled with water. The rubber tube that connected the gasgit [gasket] with the stove was pulled off. That is all that is known. He has been very despondent for some time. Not many people are able to do as he has done and keep up the show of decency after their physical power begin to wane.

This is growing into a long letter- for me. Remember me to Leolyn and be good to yourself and others and keep on God's side- then you'll not have to worry as to whether He is on your side.

Lovingly

Father

[This note was probably sent to Willard's daughters in 1928. There are three different passages written down by Phebe. Donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

This is a sheet that I found recently in a book of Phebe's. I think it is her hand writing. The writing on the other side I think is Pricilla Holtans- a very close friend of Phebe's at Wenshan. Pass it on to Jerry and Dot and Kathleen and Monnie when she comes home.

Father

The best way for a young man who is without friends or influence to begin is: First, to get a position; second, to keep his mouth shut; third, to observe; fourth, to be faithful; fifth, to make his employer think he would be lost in a fog without him, sixth, to be polite.

To watch the corn grow or the blossoms set; to draw hard breath over ploughshare or spade and to read, to think, to love, to pray; these are the things that make men happy.

Bless to us a love of they world- a fellowship with all that line- and a desire born of love to follow and to come thee as did they only see our Lord, Jesus Christ. His alone can save them from ourselves and give us to thee.

Amen

Dearest Kathleen,

I thought you would like the thrill of receiving an air mail letter, especially one that went with Lindbergh on his famous flight tomorrow. If you think it foolish you may sell the Post-mark for money that is more useful. Ask Myron how much it is worth. I think in a few years it may be more valuable. In 30 or 40 years, may be very valuable. Thank you for that appreciative letter. I will write another soon. Hope to be with you before Apr. 1st.

My love to you flies high tomorrow in the "Spirit of St. Louis" on the famous flight, if my plans and Lindbergh's carry.

Affectionately,
Mother.

Shelton, Conn.
March 25 -1928

Dearest Ellen:-

Your good letter of the 21st came yesterday. I am sorry the papers telling about Gould's flight from Wichita to Farmingdale or to be more specific his forced landing south of Utica, N.Y. in a freezing blinding blizzard- and the Sentinel telling about our trip from Farmingdale to Century Farm did not reach you. I would suggest that you write to Geneva and ask if the post office has a package of papers for you. I have one Waterville paper left but no Sentinel. Gould had a very narrow escape,- up 5000 ft. engine frozen stiff- a 50 mile blizzard on and able to see hardly to the end of his wings,- not able to see the ground. But his success in coming thru all right has been all to the much-good in his standing with the company.

Gould was in Flatbush with me Feb. 19 all day. We agreed there that I would go to Hempstead Tuesday afternoon after only address before the Woman's League, spend the night and if all conditions were favorable he would take me to Century Farm in his #3562 plane = the same one that he brought from Wichita. I went over as agreed and on Wed. had a little work that he must do before starting. I sat down at his desk and wrote a letter to Foochow. About 11 o'clock he came in to say that the engine was not running well and altho if he were going alone he would go, yet he did not want to take another up and he thought we would have to postpone the trip and I looked up and decided to go home by train. While we were talking the engineer came in to say that the engine was working all right. We went out and Gould got in and sorted about right side up and bottom side up and sidewise and came down to say that it was all right, we would go.

He brought in a big aviation suit of khaki, lined with something that looked like fleece- a one piece suit, with a zipper that fastened the thing all up front. Then a pair of fleece lined overshoes- high- fleece lined gloves- a knitted cap with a leather cap over it and a pair of aviators goggles. So the only thing that was not doubly covered was my nose. David Coming and I sat in one seat. We were too broad, with all our clothes on, to sit shoulder to shoulder, so his right shoulder lapped in front of my left shoulder. We could not put the strap around us- but we were in too tight to fall out. My suit case and overcoat were in the baggage department.

The ground was a little rough and the springs were not up to those under a Rolls-Royce car and as we taxied preparatory to riding it shook us a little. But as soon as we left the ground it was smooth enough. If I had given myself to thinking, "I'm going up off the ground where I have lived and walked and ridden for 63 years, and I may fall- oh!! oh!!- what if- " etc etc etc etc etc. I could have had a real lively time and could have had a lot to write about my sensations. But I began to enjoy the sensation as soon as we began to rise. Then I got interested in looking at the roads, streams, autos, lakes, trees, houses etc that we were passing over. Then I began to watch for the Sound, and when we reached it, we saw from 3000 feet above it a side wheeled steamboat and a tug pulling five barges. When we reached the Connecticut shore I recognized Stamford- then Bridgeport, then I saw Washington bridge and the R.R. bridge and the Housatonic River. Then the road from Mr. Palmers to Shelton. Then very soon I saw our house. Gould came up west of the house and went up above Fred Bennetts, turned and went down to the French farm, came north to Fred's again and flew by the school house. As we passed it we were a little above the roof. We touched ground about half way between the sch. house and the lane, and taxied= rode on the ground= right up to within two rods of the bar way at the north west corner of the house. The girls were out to meet us and about fifty people were here from all over the district. Wells and Dan brought a load down and one other auto came. Dinner was on the table by the time we were undressed and washed and ready. Gould and David left at once after dinner. I enjoyed every minute of the ride- except a few times when I passed thru what they call air pockets. The plane seemed to fall- the sensation was like that of a ship when it falls from the top of a wave. I think also that Gould was pleased to have taken his Dad in his plane.

[End of letter – not signed]

[In a December 2007 conversation with Edith Valentine, she told Jana that Gould took her on her first airplane ride when Gould and Geraldine were living together in New York. Edith said she got sick and "Fed the seat!"]

[This letter, dated April 6, 1928, was written from Hagerstown, Md. by Gould to Kathleen and Marjorie. He is there to start and test a Cam Challenger airplane. He would like to stop in Oberlin to visit if possible on his way back. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Hagerstown, Md.
April 6, 1928.

Dear Kathleen and Marjorie:

I'm not dead yet; only delayed writing to you a long time. It so happens that I am here in Hagerstown at the Kreider-Reisner Aircraft factory visiting until they are ready to fly their "Cam Challenger". It is their first plane with a Caminez Engine in it and I am here to assist them in starting it and testing it out. They will not be ready for a day or two and I have a little time on my hands to do whatever I want to.

You ought to see my garden in Hempstead. I have one double row of garden peas in and three double rows of sweet peas each 40 ft. long. Next week I will have about 150 onion sets planted and two more rows of peas. Of course it is too early to plant anything else, but we will have everything you normally find in your garden before the spring is over. I think I have about 1/8 acre in all.

These days are wonderful for flying. It has been so warm as 65 degrees in Hempstead. Wednesday I got the fever and climbed to 15,000 ft in 45 min. It was zero weather up there and I only had on summer flying togs so came down before I got any higher and colder.

On or about the 14th I am flying to the Detroit show. My route will be Albany, Buffalo, Detroit and I hope to fly to Saginaw. On the return trip I may go to Toledo, Cleveland and Bellefontaine to N.Y. If possible I will stay at Oberlin although I don't know if there is a landing field there or not. Those are tentative plans so don't expect too much.

Hope everything is going nicely in Oberlin. Happy Easter to all.
Lovingly,
Gould.

[This letter dated April 10, 1928 was written from Shelton, CT by Willard to Geraldine. Willard has been busy preaching, speaking and farming. He and Ellen are planning on going back to China hopefully in September of 1928. Willard discusses Christian Science and Geraldine's leaning towards it. He is hoping that Geraldine can come to Connecticut for the summer. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

Shelton, Conn.
April. 10-1928

Dear Geraldine:

Too much time has slipped by since your last letter. The days have been very full for me during the past month. I have been running about the country preaching and speaking and the weather has been superb for farming. I have enjoyed it much- plowing, making garden, burning brush- hauling manure, repairing machinery, milking, drawing grain from Shelton, butchering 2 pigs, cutting up the pork and putting the hams, shoulders and bacon with the pickle and smoking some of them.

Next Friday I go to Boston to consider educational work in Foochow, and I expect we will talk about the date for mother and me to sail for China. They asked if we would sail Aug. 30, and I asked them to give us another month at home and let us sail Sept. 30.

It was not a complete surprise to me that you were leaning toward Christian Science, altho I do not remember that you ever mentioned it to me. Those things sort of come partly by intuition to an observant loving, solicitous parent.

Thursday, April 19- It's a shame that I have allowed this to be held up so long. Last week I was sort of knocked out and had to go on quinine to Boston Friday- back to Putnam for that night, home Sat. and preached in Shelton Sunday. Then I quit the quinine and Monday I kept to the bed and Tuesday I got only downstairs. Wed. I went out and filled the wood box in the morning. In the afternoon I went to West Haven to sit on the platform for the Am. B'd at Mr. Hubbard's funeral. He was preaching in the Baptist Church at W. Haven last Sunday and just as he was closing, he was trying to give some statistics, got mixed up, began to stagger and at last- in a moment- he sank down, saying, "God bless you all." He was gone when the doctor arrived. Wed. was a beautiful day and the three sisters and I went and from there we drove down to Uncle Oliver's. I think all the children were there yesterday except Winnie. I did not see her.

To resume the topic I had just started on when I left this, I have no intention of trying to argue you into keeping away from Christian Science. I expect that would be the surest way to drive you into it. I never knew very much about it. Mary Baker Eddy [Founder of Christian Scientists] has always seemed to me to be (to Christian Scientists) the whole thing. To me, she and Aunt Grace would be sufficient arguments to let it alone.

There are two lines of thought that seem to have interested you- (1) You say Ch. Science is broad. I read and then re-read your letter to find out wherein its breadth lay. But I did not find out. I had always held them as possibly of the narrowest of sects. (2) You write that a friend in N.Y. had been greatly helped to hear [her?] trouble by Ch. Science. I have yet to know or hear what that cult has to give are in trouble, more than Christianity. - I mean than the ordinary Christianity of a Meth. or Bap. or Presb. or Cong'l. Certain it is that Ch. Science is not more broad. No, it looks to me as if it was neither of these factors that has attracted you- nor is it Ch. Sci. as a cult or as a doctrine but it is some personality somewhere that has influenced you. You have a deep emotional nature and you open up to few people. Your home surroundings since you were 16 or so were such as to rather turn you with yourself. Ch. Sci. offers a retreat for such. As far as I know it offers much less than- what shall I call it? Ordinary Christianity. For instance. I know of nothing that Ch. Sci. offers that any one church does not offer, and I think my own church offers much more, as far, I say, as I know. A Congregationalist may hold to faith healing as sturdily as Aunt Grace and still be a good Congregationalist. I do not know what the Ch. Sci's. believe about God and Christ. One phrase in your letter might be interpreted to mean that God was some kind of our impressionality.

As far as I know Mrs. Eddy got immensely rich out of her teachings and the church as far as I know it is a wealthy church. - There are many wealthy business men in it and they have most of their thinking done for them.

Well you see how deficient I am in knowledge of Ch. Sci. If it will help you to become a more useful woman to be more helpful to God in His great work of making a world society of friendly people (Bosworth), I should not hinder you in joining,- altho I expect I should find it hard to forget the injury that our= my family has been subjected to by Ch. Sci.

It is very unsatisfactory to write on a subject like this. I wish I could be with you and talk. It is in a way unfair too for me to write- with all my prejudices and not give you a chance to reply at once. But be perfectly frank and write anything that is in your mind.

Is mother with you? I wonder when she is coming back to Conn. The Board is arranging us to sail Sept. 28.

I wrote Dot and Harold to consider spending the summer in Uncle Dan's house- sort of camp out for a month. Could you come with them? I wish I could see more of you. Last summer, your work in Yale, mother's dress, and the wedding seemed to demand our time so we saw little of each other. I suppose I must add to the list farming.

Next Sunday I am in the Ansonia Cong'l pulpit Apr. 25 in Essex- with Rev. Herbert Woodin- born in Foochow. His mother is 90+ and living with him.

Apr. 29 in Center Ch. Worcester, Mass. - go to Putnam Sat. and Uncle Elbert dress me up.

May 2 Waterbury- May 8 New Haven, New Haven Branch, Woman's B'd.

Shelton, Conn.
May 4 – 1928

Dear Geraldine:-

The interest for the mortgage in which you have a share came the other day and I am sending the checks instead of Aunt Mary this time,= $7.95.

I hear that Aunt Myra has held out a bait for you to be with them this summer. I am this evening writing Dot and Harold again about camping in Uncle Dan's house next July. Uncle Oliver wants to paint the house. If Harold wants to work at the painting Uncle Oliver will save the job for him. There are two houses there and either could be used.

To day I had a letter from Uncle Elbert. You have heard that his shop was totally destroyed by fire a week ago today. I was there Sat. eve'g and saw the ruins. Day before yesterday the adjustors came to Putnam and Uncle Elbert will receive the full amount for which he was insured. The coal shed did not burn. He was fully insured and he writes that the adjustor allowed the full face value of his policy on all the buildings totally burned and allowed a very liberal amount on the damage to the coal shed. He has agreed with the Wheaton Building Co. to take away all the debris and clean the place up for the wood they can get out of it. He writes that he is very happy over the outcome- if it had to be.

In my former letter I wrote that it would – just here a telephone from Gould in Hempstead called me to talk with him. He is coming up tomorrow.- be a very great pleasure if Dot and Harold and you could be on White Hills during July. We four and Uncle Oliver and Aunt Grace were looking at the house= Uncle Dan's this afternoon with a mind to your living there during July. We all said it could be made very cosy with little trouble. The Garrett here is stuffed with old furniture. There is a cook stove in the house and oodles of wood lying all about.

Well I must write Dot and Harold and get to bed. I am feeling better than I have felt for three weeks- but I'm not up to 100 yet.

Very lovingly
Father

THE STEVENS

Chicago, July 27, 1928

Dear Mother:

Tomorrow we arrive in Detroit after completing the 6500 mile National Air Tour of the Western states. This has been grand, thrilling, marvelous, exhausting, exciting, discouraging, entertaining and humorous. The mountains were grand and marvelous and our climbs over the ridges and sweeps thru the narrow passes were thrilling beyond description. The deserts of Texas, Arizona and California were grand, bleak and barren and one could not help but be a little on edge about a forced landing in these desolate wastes. Baring thru thunder storms and picking holes thru clouds and mountain passes when the clouds hung low offered all the excitement and thrills a man needs for stimulation. The trouble- unending, incessant trouble we had with our engines was discouraging for we had hoped to make a record with them. The entertainment we received from the western people out did everything the East has ever given the preceeding three tours.

The pilots and mechanics and other people accompanying the tour were the best bunch of boys I have traveled with since College. We have had a great time together.

After the celebration and feasting is over in Detroit we will give our engines the once over and hit for New York about Tuesday or Wednesday. I intend to take a short vacation after I get back which may be for the remainder of next week. If you can give me an old bay board to sleep on I will spend it with you in Shelton.

My love to all and all my love to you.

Your son,

Gould.

Sunday
August 12, 1928.

Dear Mother:

Nothing much has happened since I returned. We are all sitting tight and watching for whatever may develop, but something will in the near future.

Tonite I am going to Schenectady, N.Y. to get the plane, then fly it down tomorrow next day. Rain has been the weather style ever since I got back here. The garden has given us a lot of beets, carrots, turnips and corn with swiss chard and spinach. Tomatoes will be ripe soon. The weeds killed the squash completely out. The flower garden is gorgeous with color. The whole garden has been a great success. The K?? ?? bearers[?] are going to be fine.

The week with the family was wonderfull and I am very glad it happened so I could get it in. Am sorry I could not have made Putnam. I'll have to try a week end up there later. The Kelso's all raved over the Chinese things of Phebe's and thought they were excellent. I will pack them away to putter with this winter when the weather is inclement outside.

Have been swimming twice since I returned. Its great on the beech. We go at nite and don't wear bathing suits. Of course its just our guys at the shop and the beech is barren and desolate there.

Will hope to have a visit from you all before you go back West. Write us as soon as possible before hand.

Lovingly your son,

Gould.

Sept. 13, 1928.

Dear Father and Mother:

When this reaches you, you will have bid good-bye to all east of the Hudson and to Ginny and the two kid sisters in Oberlin. I hope you are up to schedule.

My own status is very different from that I hoped it would be when you were on your way to this country. What the future will bring is only known by God. I am glad though that you know the girl who is my love now. I do love her and I am going to stand by till she gets her education. Of course she is rather young yet and has many changes of thought to go thru. Some of them may be disastrous to our personal relations, but I feel she is stable and pretty sound and has a good Christian foundation to pull her thru. I have faith enough in her to want to carry it thru till she is ready.

This year with its few glimpses of you has been a treat I will always cherish. Somehow I didn't see as much of you as I had hoped to, but enough so I feel I know you again and you know me.

My work for the next few years is to be intensely interesting and I hope I grow in it as I see the chance. I most certainly am going to study toward that end. The new management in the company is a new chance for everyone that stayed by and was retained and I must work to make good and even more.

Don't worry about my flying. It is not as dangerous as most people make out. There are a lot of gray haired men among us who have flown for a long time.

Will write you at Berkeley again.

Your loving son
Gould.

[This letter, dated Sept. 21, 1928, was written from Gould to his father and mother. He writes them expecting that they are in San Francisco and hopes that his Aunt Leolyn will show them around. He has listened to speeches by Hoover and Smith on the radio. Letter from the collection of Virginia Van Andel.]

Sept 21, 1928.

Dear Father and Mother:

You are now staying at Leolyn's home where I was only last July. I hope Leolyn will show you all over the campus and that some of the nights will be clear so you can see the lights of the city.

The fog was jut rolling in over the hills from the Pacific as we landed at Mills Field and it was all foggy as we took off Monday morning so that we could not see Golden Gate at all.

Last Saturday nite I was invited to go up and spend the nite at Pleasantville at Mr. and Mrs. Vanamee's [Van Namee] home. All the Space family except Mr. S. were there. The next morning after church we went to a friend's home in Yonkers and had a lawn lunch party. It was a most enjoyable afternoon and week end.

We have been listening to political speeches over the radio by Hoover and Smith and various others. One is impressed with the very high and dignified way in which the Republican speakers present their platform. The Democratic speeches seem too full of much slinging and are too jazzy to make a very favorable impression on the majority of people. I think Smith has lost more votes than he has gained by his last two speeches.

Our factory is still running slowly and will be for a long time. Dot and Gerry are the only ones who have written me as yet since they left for the West.

I'm going to send this letter Air Mail so it will be sure and get there before you sail.

Give my love to all the Morgan family.

May God be with you on this voyage and may it be the best voyage you have ever taken across the Pacific.

Love to both my father and mother from your son-

Gould.

American Mail Line

Saturday evening, Oct. 6", '28.

8:45 P.M.

Dear Children All,

We are settling down to something like quiet after one of the most up-roarious dinners we have had thus far. It was the occasion of a "Hard times party." When first announced we couldn't understand how they came to choose that sort of a social function when every one's baggage on a sea voyage, is reduced to lowest terms and those few togs are perfectly proper attire for ordinary occasions plus a few "glad rags"; but next to nothing that cannot be put to practical use in the requirements of decent habiliment [clothes]. No one expects to go equipped for special and extra or rare occasions. We wondered what kind of costumes could be conjured up and still more what we ourselves would appear in. I hesitated between my shoulder strap skirt with the blouse that goes with it a silk that is "loaded" and was breaking out- it looked sure like hard times;- and a new gingham dress, the least expensive of dress materials which was also a bit old-fashioned but which was not at all strikingly illustrative of the idea of the occasion, viz. a costume party. I finally decided on the latter, as entirely respectable, good-looking and entire keeping mildly with the idea of the occasion. Father's old clothes, overalls and so forth were all in his big trunk and the wooden boxes on their way to China. So he wore his knickers, long-stockings, oldest shoes, a mushed shirt with sleeves turned up above elbows, collar turned in and open at neck, and his cap on the side of his head. He surely looked a case of hard times but he proved to be only a mere circumstance to most of the men who changed their dress at all. They unquestionably were a tough looking lot of human beings. One tall big stout man impersonated a negro in working clothes, red bandana, blacked up face and hands, carrying pail and broom: One wore a tow colored wig, patched blue checked shirt and blue overalls and he used lots of pink powder on his face to make it look burned in the sunshine. One man had a coat much too big for him and a stand up stiff collar end turn over corners and one side of front sticking up by his ear because the button hole was broken out, and a blood stain on his collar. Another had his collar with turnover corners on hind-side - before and a big "swallow-tailed coat," and some change below I forget what, - one thing was a different shoe and stocking on each foot. Several had "black eyes," painted on and beards or mustaches also painted on. One was in his gay ones. Several had mustaches and goatees painted on and one had a false nose of great size stuck on. Several had little white sailor caps on or dinkey little hats or caps on their heads tilted at all angles and sometimes the visors behind. Several of the girls and ladies were dressed as men or boys in white trousers, knickers, overalls, or something very old. Two or three were in Japanese kimonos; one had a tin can tied on her head for a hat and a costume made distinctive by hdkfs of all sorts and colors attached by one corner all over it. Several had a 'kerchief' tied over the head, of any old cloth; one had a big straw poke hat; one had a simple costume made of one big flour bag for the blouse, and one for each leg of the trousers with the lettering all on in full color on the outside of each leg and at back and front of blouse. Miss Allen of Foochow and Miss Coe of Japan impersonated flour girls with baskets of roses and calling their wares in a little song in Chinese and Japanese. Some women wore men's shirts; some men had their shirts hanging outside their trousers. One lady represented a news boy and went around selling newspapers. Miss Bement tied a cloth over her head and wore a kitchen dress and represented a beggar and went around to near tables begging money, grapes and other food. She and Father had a scrap and he set her down in her chair and backed another chair up against hers so she couldn't get up again till the table boy took it away. He snatched away Miss Allen's basket of roses from the floor beside her chair where she had set it while she ate the next course of the dinner, and then began a chase to recover it. Every body was playing all sorts of jokes on others, which kept continual running about all over the dining saloon; few people kept their seats through the entire meal. Those were the ones who didn't dress up specially for it, or who didn't approve of it, or were too quiet to participate in such chicanery, or were too fat and lazy to exert themselves. I was one who did not leave my chair during the dinner and who conducted herself perfectly properly throughout (you may put me in whichever of those above named classes you think I fit best); the Catholic priest also did not, nor the six nuns, nor two lady missionaries and a Mt. Holyoke College teacher (for 30 yrs there) the last three sit at our table, nor a young Chinese Dr. returning from U.S. to China, nor his mother and sister, nor Ne sing, and a few other quiet, orderly people. The last half of the dinner hour there were anywhere from 3 to 8 couples dancing on the middle of the dining saloon in front of the orchestra. But they do that every evening and sometimes at luncheon,- leave their plates just brought in hot and dance till that piece is finished, then return and go on with their dinner. Some people dance 3 or 4 times during a meal. Gay tunes!!

The man who was in the tow wig and pink face took first prize and the negro second. Of the ladies, the flour-bag dress took second and the news-boy first. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing by the people so inclined. But the next day everybody kept his seat throughout the meal. I guess they had had enough for one while.

The notices are up on the bulletin board of the tournaments and passengers are requested to sign up for the game they want to try for. I went into mixed doubles in shuffle board only. Father went into that also and into deck tennis, and deck golf. My partner was AJ Thomas and I helped him a lot- to lose. I felt awfully sorry for him for he seemed glum about it but was courteous. We played against Mr. Kopf the Catholic priest and Mrs. Nash the wife of the Y.M. sec. of Korea. Father got to play the second time I think in shuffle-board. I tried quoits all by myself the other day and threw 105 rings before I got the first one on [similar to horseshoes except with rings]. So you see why I did not enter that tournament. You would hardly think one could throw so many really trying and not get one on; but I stood on the gentleman's line instead of on the lady's line 14 in. in front of the men's. It is hard to see where all the time goes to on the steamer; I hardly get time to do my washing and stocking darning! But you have to take certain opportunities when you find them. - I forgot to say in connection with the hard-times dinner that we had a very simple menu (which gave the cooks a rest) had paper table cloths, paper napkins, tables lighted by candles, and the silver just thrown on in a bunch at each place instead of being set out in order. Also the floor was all covered with sawdust to simulate a cheap stool restaurant. The Capt. said as we passed out of the dining room, "Well, I'm glad that's over with."

Oct. 14.- Sunday P.M. 2:40

I have just three hours to finish this letter and do lots of other writing for the mail closing at 5 o'clock.

Father preached again today and altho a good attendance can be claimed, not quite so many came as the two previous Sundays because we reach Yokohama tomorrow morning about 6 o'clock and many get off there and are busy packing up. "Reaching port," is in the atmosphere! Along with the packing, every body is desperately writing and many are desperately visiting with the new-found friends they are going to leave tomorrow. A few are madly reading to finish library books that must be in by 5:30 tonight. Some others are putting in a few last games of deck sports with some one whom they want to beat at least once.

The Jackson is slowing down her speed so as not to get there too soon. And tomorrow morning at sunrise we see the hills of fairy-land Japan. All hands, both passengers and crew must be on deck at sunrise to be counted. If any one fails to appear on deck he will keep about 450 people waiting as the Japanese officials will not pass any one through the quarantine inspection until every soul is seen and counted. Interesting memories of former voyages arise! Next we have to pass the passport inspection and get our slips for going ashore. We have only until five o'clock to shop when our boat leaves for Kobe.

A few days ago we had the contests and races and deck sports for grown-ups. I went into a potato race, egg race, and tug of war; I lost in the first two but was on the winning side in the last, married women vs. single. We pulled the girls right over the line as tho their shoe soles were greased, both times, pulling toward bow and toward stern. I am sure I helped my crew to win it, but I haven't seen my share of the prize yet, which was presented to the capt. of our team at dinner last night. All the prizes for all events, costume parties, tournaments, and sports were presented after the "Capt's Dinner" Saturday evening. At that time also the wife of the American vice-Consul to Harbin (of Russian extraction I think), did some Russian dancing to entertain the company. Her first costume was Martha Washington style with white wig, only the full skirt was deeply scalloped so that when she whirled the skirt stood out straight on all sides showing her white-legged tights which were bright red from her waist down to just below the seat. The next costume was a very full skirt of black tulle over red tulle and heavily trimmed with full-pleated six in. ruches of the same two materials, one row at the bottom and one a foot higher but we could see right through it anywhere; worn over the same tights. She danced or walked on her toes (ends) kicked very high and kneeled on one knee bending her body and head away over backwards. There was nothing especially graceful or pretty nor evenly rhythmic about it; only interesting (to certain people) as a physical feat. In the Martha Washington costume she danced a minuet. She had danced in a Russian dancing costume a few evenings ago at the hard times party which was pronounced indecent by some, and which is better described in a private conversation than in a circular letter. She was given a prize for the costume but many tho't. it unjustly awarded.

At the Capt's dinner the dining saloon was decorated as before Honolulu, in flags of many nations, small, descending from strings run along the ceiling, Japanese lanterns, colored shades over electric lightbulbs. On the tables were fancy paper cups for all, the snapping bonbons for all (balloons in some of them) and coils of streamers to throw. I don't think there was quite the enthusiasm this time as there was the first time, but there was a jolly time. Father received as his prize for his costume, a handkerchief case of leather silk-lined which was marked $4.00.

3:25 P.M.

Dearest Children All,

We have just been down into the depths of the Pacific, 15 ft. below the surface of the ocean, but we had the hold of the ship all around us, so we didn't get wet, but we did get pretty dirty,- all of which means that we have made a tour of the ship.

At first, I asked the ladies of our table if they would like to make a tour of the boat in case the officers were willing to let us go. They were all glad to go; but before we had completed our negotiations with the officers, Miss Hinsdale, who is a teacher at Mt. Holyoke College and sits at our table, had been offered that privilege by the Dr. of the boat who discovered after long thinking that she was his High School teacher in Joliet, Ill. over 30 yrs. ago. When he first saw her on the boat he knew he had seen that face somewhere before. Her face haunted him, but he could not recall where it was till yesterday when it came to him and he came and introduced himself, at the same time asking her if she would like to take a tour of the ship bringing her friends along. Of course she accepted and our problem of how to get it done was solved.

Right after lunch we went beginning with the bridge. But on our way he showed us 2 suites of rooms for wealthy people each of which costs $2250. for the trip from Los Angeles to Manila! There is a large bed-room furnished with 2 beds just like home furniture with dresser, wardrobe, chairs, chiffonier and all the necessities; a living room with table large enough for dining table so that meals can be served there if desired, couch, easy chairs, draperies and walls covered with the same striped satin material as the draperies instead of wall paper; a completely furnished bath-room very compact but room enough. One of these suites was occupied, one was not. He showed us the Capt's room; very fine. Also 1st Officer's, Purser's, Chief Engineer's, then we went to the bridge and saw the compass,- the old fashioned one wh. they still use also the gyration compass of which they have four on the boat. The biggest one was down stairs near the engine room and it makes 35000 revolutions a minute and requires 1 ½ hrs. to stop after they shut down the machinery when they get into port! There was also on the bridge in the steering room a wonderful machine that is run by electricity, which guides the ship itself without the aid of man when once man has set it in motion. They can all go off and leave the steering room all alone and the ship will continue on its way keeping its course accurately, in fact it is more accurate than the human brain in its action. They first set it to a certain course and if any thing, as wind, wave, swell, deviates it the least bit from the true course set for it this machine,- humorously called the "Iron Mike,"- (I did not learn its technical name) corrects it at once automatically and exactly accurately. So now, a man does not have to stand at the wheel all day and all night to guide the ship. It will do in a second what it takes 4 or 5 seconds for the human mind and hand to do, coordinately. The machine was opened and we saw it correct the ship several times as we sped along. It is absolutely beyond my power to give you any clear description of it as I do not know the technical terms of the mechanical parts nor do I understand its electrical action; but you have heard of and have some faint conception of the electrically automatic action of the electric stoves, refrigerators and electric flat irons and I imagine that this is similarly operated on a much grander scale. It was contained in an iron case, resting on the floor, and stood about 3 ft. high, was a foot deep 15 in. wide. The thick iron door fully an inch thick, was on the front side and opened, the full side of the case. Inside were many pieces of brass, of different sizes and shapes intricately arranged to do the fine work it was made to perform. At the bottom near the floor many insulated wires entered the machine to conduct the electricity which was the motive power of their almost intelligent machine, "more accurate and speedier than the human brain and hand"! On the wall back of it, "Iron Mike" recorded his own work and every detail with unfailing accuracy. The record was made electrically in red ink on a roll of paper which moved thru the machine as a movie film moves thru its machine; there was a line of little round holes on the right side. The 1st Officer unrolled the paper record of the last 24 hrs. and showed us the report. The red ink path of the point that recorded the ship's deviations and the machine's corrections looked something like the line down the left margin of this page. When the zig zag is slighter there was less deviation or, in other words, the sea was smoother and the wind had dropped; while the wider variations due to heavier sea and greater velocity of wind, are recorded by the broader zig zag. I think the hour was recorded periodically but am not certain as I was too far away to see well. There were several other instruments in the steering room which he did not stop to explain. But there was another which he did explain most interestingly. It was the fire alarm. In a wooden case about 5 ft. high and 18 in. square with a slanted top of glass, were about 40 square brass pipes 1 ½ in. in diameter coming up vertically and side by side in rows into the case, and each row shorter than the one behind it with the open tops slanted at the same angle as the glass top. Each tube bore a number on its inner rear wall thus: which could be easily read through the glass. Each upper corner of the case had a small red glass disc behind one of which was a tiny electric bulb; these bulbs were connected with the two motors of the machine which run the fans which pump air up through these tubes from all parts of the ship. Only one of the motors run at a time and they are changed of periodically to cool off the motor; the red lights indicate which motor is running. In each state-room, social hall, dining saloon, tea-room, writing room and all over the ship, there is on the ceiling a circular arrangement of insulated wires and loose flat coil about the size of a tea-plate (8 in. in diam.)

with a small white disc ½ in. thick and 2 in. in diam. in the center of the coil and applied over it. We had all wondered much what it was for; these were the other ends of these brass tubes. The officer told us that if a fire started in any part of the ship, as soon as any heat was produced, it would affect these wires and the bell in the steering room on the wall would ring and at the same time, or before, the smoke would come up one of those tubes; looking at the number of the tubes from which smoke was issuing, the officer in charge could tell just where the fire was. Another bell is on the wall of the Capt's room and beside it is a number-recording board similar to those in hotels in connection with the bell system for calling the bell boy, which also records the location of the fire. He said if a person should light a piece of paper and hold it near this instrument on the ceiling of his cabin, it would set off this fire alarm. In this connection, I think I have not written that we have had three fire-drills on this voyage thus far. All the crew, sailors, stewards and officers hasten at the sound of the whistle to their assigned positions by the life boats. At the second whistle, they swing about 4 of the boats out over the water each time but do not lower them to the water; the crews of the other boats go through the motions of letting out the ropes but do not swing the boats out. I think they take turns with the different boats instead of doing all boats every time; for it is a great deal of work since each boat has a kahki canvas cover which has to be removed and then laced on again when the third whistle blows; at the fourth whistle all hands file back to their work. The fire drill always comes after the 4 o'clock tea is served about 4:30.

Then the Dr. took us to the kitchen and showed us the great coffee urns 3 of them, the huge stoves and ovens, the electric arrangement for boiling eggs exactly so many minutes 2, 3, or 4, or more and it takes care of itself automatically. The dishes were all stacked on shelves with racks in front of each pile of plates, saucers etc. to keep them from sliding off in rough weather. The pantries, with stacks of bread and the meat room where the meat and fish just taken from the refrigerator were being cleaned and prepared for dinner; the great pots 2 ½ ft. across and as high wear soup meat was boiling; the immense buckets of vegetables all prepared for dinner; the potato mashing machine; the potato peeling machine, etc. From there he led us to the laundry where 3 or 4 Chinese laundry men were ironing in a temperature at least up to 95 degrees perhaps higher. I felt sorry for them. But when we got to the engine room it was worse. As he opened the door to go down the narrow stairs a hot blast struck our faces which was a bit disconcerting and made us wonder if we could stand it after all. Miss Allen turned back here, and so did Ne sing, Miss Bement's Chinese girl but the rest of us went on. As we took hold of the iron (polished steel) handrails to help us down the narrow steep stairs, they were so hot we could hardly hold them. But this was worst at the top as heat rises and grew cooler as we went down. Two flights we descended into the hold and were then several feet below the water line. All the tubes and machinery that could be painted at all was painted light yellow which made it look clean and more cheery. And there we stood in a little open space amidst a bewildering array of pipes and tubes, big and little and intricate machinery of which I do not even know the names. Here I shall have to cut off this chapter to get it into the mail. Continued in my next mailed I hope at Kobe.

Dear Marjorie and Kathleen:-

Just before we reached Yokohama Mother and I mailed a dozen or more letters, post cards and menu-post cards. She sent you something in one of these lines.

It was a #1 good mail that met us- part at Leolyn's, part after we got to the S.S. office in San Francisco and part after we went aboard. Your letters were most interesting. Before I forget it I must assure you that my shaving brush has stood on end on the little glass shelf over the washstand all the journey thus far and has not needed to keep awake[?]. The sea has been very smooth. The ship has been loaded heavily and has been very steady. I never enjoyed a voyage as much as this one.

The chickens are getting on well. I found two eggs the first week, none the second but day before yesterday I found one and another this morning. The twelve in one coop are a bit crowded and I shall be glad when I can give them more room. The ship carries a lot of green vegetables- cabbage and lettuce and I found ends of onions and some garlic. The chickens like all these, and this green food keeps them healthy. The room steward gives them left over rice and potatoes and meat. I bought in S. Francisco 100 lbs of corn, oats, barley, wheat, etc. mixed and I feed this to them myself twice a day.

Yesterday Mother and I went up to Tokio. We went to the Japan Tourists Bureau in the Tokio Station and an attendant there telephoned Mr. Abe Iso, a classmate of mine in Hartford Seminary. [See photo with letter dated April 8, 1895 by Willard.] He replied that he would come down to the station where we were. We had a visit with him from about 12:45 till 4 p.m. He taught in Waseda University, Tokio for nearly 20 years. Last year he was elected to the Lower House in the Japanese Parliament by the common people- that corresponds to the Commons or Labor Party in Great Britain. Waseda University is controlled by the Higher ups and when Mr. Abe was elected as the representative of the common people the University Board did not want him longer. I have been told that the students came near striking if he left. But he could not hold down both jobs and the work as a member of Parliament was in line with his ideals so he is now a member of the Japanese Parliament. He has always wanted to help the working man and the poor. He is chairman of the Purity Committee for all of Japan. He has already drafted a bill against prostitution which he plans to bring before parliament at the next election. Mother was much interested in talking with him about the coronation of the new Emperor which is to take place in two or three weeks. As a member of Parliament he is to attend. Mother I think is writing more of the details of this. Mr. Abe was ill with typhus fever last winter and spring- just as he had taken his seat in parliament. For three weeks he was unconscious or out of his head- he does not remember anything that took place during those three weeks. He is not yet well- shows his illness some, and is very careful with himself, hoping to be able to work hard for righteousness when parliament again sits. Abe is one of the great men of Japan. It was worth a day of time and ten yen to have the privilege of talking with him for four hours. We talked of China and of Japan's attitude. He remarked, "When the United States settled the Nanking affair with the Nationalist Government, independently of Great Britain and Japan, the Japanese Cabinet officers were very much surprised"- He said this with a chuckle, characteristic of himself. He said, "My party does not want Japan to have Manchuria. Manchuria belongs to China and should unite with the Nationalist Government." These two remarks pleased me specially for I have for several years felt that Japan's attitude toward China was the attitude of militaristic Japan only, and this from Mr. Abe confirms my feelings. On the way back from Tokio, we got off at the large new station opened only a day or two ago. It is a huge affair with all the modern improvements of a station in the U.S.

I was astonished at the amount of building going on both in Yokohama and in Tokio. Mr. Abe said that most of it was to replace the buildings destroyed in the earthquake. Our ship left a lot of autos at Yokohama - one lady said most "Stars" [?]. I saw one Ford- owned by a Mr. Nash of the Seoul Y.M.C.A.

Going back to Foochow with us here are Miss Bement and Miss Allen. The Storrs family are ahead of us. So are Mr. Kellogg (Shaowu) and Mr. Newell.

The past summer was a delightful one to us - I got better acquainted with all the children than ever before. We were on the go more than any of us intended, but perhaps we saw sides of each other there that we would not have seen if we had been quietly in one place. I have the "farmerette" picture and the one of Monnie on the horse rake in my vest pocket diary and I look at them frequently. [Kathleen told Jana that she and Marjorie would play "farmerette" at Century Farm when they were younger.]

I shall often think of you Marjorie and pray that you will find just the best work for yourself after you finish at Oberlin- the work in which you can make the most helpful contribution to society- in which you can be the most useful to God as He is moulding society in a great world society of friendly people. That was Professor Bosworth's idea, and it means much – no more war- no more hatred- no more jealousies- or secret plottings- no more trying to get the best of the other fellow for our own selfish advancement.

Remember us to Aunt Etta and the family. I'll write some of them soon.

In the fancy dress I took first prize for an original costume. I was "Departed Spirits"- a ghost moving about the dining room distributing my cards. The prize was a beautiful leather-silk turned handkerchief holder.

May God keep, guide and use both of you.

Very lovingly

Father.

Osaka Shosen Kaisha,
On board S/S "Chosa" Maru
Wednesday 8 P.M. Oct. 24" 1928.

Dearest Marjorie

Before another sunrise, we shall be in sight of the rambling old sanitarium of hallowed memory, the birthplace of our first dear baby daughter. A strange emotion thrills my heart as I near the soil in which her dear form rests. Sacred associations cluster around the old building in which her voice first sounded. I shall view it from the port-hole tomorrow at early dawn and recall many pleasant scenes and happy events.

We anchor off Matsu at about 3:30 A.M. and reach Pagoda Anchorage about 9:20 A.M. We have to wait for tide to enter the river on acct. of the bar. We ought to be up to the bund and the long bridge by noon, and in the city by 1:30.

Betty Cushman came on to the boat at S'hai and surprised us. She had been up to Shanghai about two weeks to meet her sister Mary who was at Wenshan School teaching music when Phebe died and went home after we did; and “met her fate” in Shanghai when waiting for her boat to go home and after she got well again she became engaged to him and came out two weeks ahead of us to be married in S’hai. Betty came up from Foochow to meet her and attend the wedding and be her brides-maid. Their boats arrived the same day and almost the same hour; Mr. Brown went first to meet his fiancée then they both went to meet Betty. The wedding over, B. went to Nanking on business and the bride and groom went to Foochow on their honeymoon. We’re hoping they stay until we get there but we may pass them on the way returning to S’hai. Interesting, isn’t it? Mary going home, health impaired, to get well, met this man casually at a social or some place, very short acquaintance, few days at most, they corresponded, proposed, she went to his home in Missouri to look him up and meet his people; found them very similar to hers, interested in church and missions, were engaged and a few months later came out and married and will live in S’hai indefinitely; he is an employee in the customs. Beginning a life like a story!

Betty says the Hodous house in the city has been made into two apartments, upper and lower, and we are expected to live in the lower, the upper being already occupied by Dr. Campbell’s family. I don’t like to sleep on the ground floor but I guess it’s “no hwak.”

Later- We find the up-stairs floor of the big hospital house back of the tennis court is also vacant, painted, whitewashed, etc. and ready for our choice of it, or the other (Where the Ruman’s lived when you were here.); Father wants this and I like it better as we can sleep up stairs; also the view is better and more light and air than on ground floor where we look out on walls and just our own compound.

Now about the buys. Geraldine’s letter from me, which she will let you all read (promptly please,) will explain why I have not sent more things and earlier. I’m sorry not to have had more time to browse around in Japan. But I’ll try to get the gifts to you by Christmas. I may send several things to let you select from and what you don’t want you may put into Dorothy’s or Geraldine’s Christmas sale if she is down in Oberlin any time to get them or you could send them by mail to her. I have already sent to you from Japan, two Happi coats, - a little different from Haori coats. You did not ask for a kimona, I suppose because you expect to be able to select one yourself before many years; so I found these happi coats comparatively cheap and tho’t you might like one. They are shorter, shorter sleeved, unlined, wool challis (instead of silk) as compared with the Haori coats. They are worn inside by Japanese ladies, the Haoris outside. I think they are comparatively new as I have never seen them before, - not new to the Japanese women but new to the foreign trade. I should imagine a college girl could use one for an evening wrap in summer. You may be too modest to wear so bright a blue as one of them is and the other is white with red bamboo on it, - very dainty to wear over a light summer dress. Then when I got to S’hai, I was so sorry I had not bought a black one that I went into a Japanese store and paid 1 ½ dollars more for a black one which you may like better to wear than so bright a blue. All I saw were bright red or bright green, or vivid orange or royal purple, or this black one. The black one I bought would be prettier with the light blue left out and less compact and loose clusters of cherry blossoms. The blue one has a tiny spot on the front where the blue color did not take well. I may be able to send you something to wear on that spot, to cover it perhaps one of the little charms I am sending Dorothy to sell. There are also some tiny blue specks on the front of the white one which are not very disfiguring but probably cannot be removed. You are to have your choice of these three and if the other girls don’t want them let them have them all if they can use them. The others Dot or Geraldine may sell them. The blue one and the white one which you will receive together are 4 yen each or $1.87 cents gold. The black one is 5.50 yen or $2.57 gold. I hope you have enough money to pay the duty without inconveniencing you until the girls who take the others can pay you. If Dot doesn’t want any surplus coats to sell, but they surely will, perhaps you can sell them to college girls in Oberlin- let our daughters have first chance at them. But don’t sell them till all you girls have a chance at them if you want them.

Another thing, I am sending some braided silk ties which I tho’t you and Kath might use in some way when you wanted to wear the Oberlin colors, as at a ball game, instead of ribbons. They are worn by the Jap. women to tie the inner coat or something of the kind. These two are the Oberlin colors and caught my eye. You may divide them as you like. There should be no duty on these as they cost less than $1. mex. each. $.35 and $.55 So don’t pay any. I was sorry not to have time to go out to the wholesale bead shop for your pink beads but Geraldine’s letter will tell you why. I felt that the time was so limited I would better get what was close at hand than to spend all my time hunting a place which might be closed when I had found it. I may be able to get them by correspondence as I have his card.

Morning- Thursday Oct 25”, 6 A.M. – I am all alone on deck, watching the last flash of the light house on White Dogs (island); watching the Island Matsu near which we have been anchored all the latter part of, - to be accurate, the last 8 hours, recede in the distance, watching the rosy tints of the sunrise on the thin uneven veil of gray clouds with which the sky is almost completely overcast and wondering over just which peak of the dear old Fukien Mts. the sun will appear; [she switches from pencil to green ink here] and watching for Sharp Peak Island as it comes into view. There I’ve finished up, that sentence properly and now I’ll tell you that I’m finishing this letter on the Monday morning following that Thursday on which I wrote the last 8 lines of pencil script above. The intervening days have been so busy that I've found no time to write. And I can't finish the description of our arrival now as I must write you information about things I'm sending or they will arrive before the letter does and you'll not know about them.

Dear Kathleen:- I have sent your Kimona to Geraldine with hers. She will pay the duty on yours and you may pay her when you can. She will bring it up to you about Thanksgiving time I think as we mailed it at Kobe (after we left) on the ship, and it was to be transferred at S'hai to a Dollar Line Boat going to Seattle. So by this time it must be 2 or 3 days out from Yokohama and will be in Yokohama [does she mean to say Seattle?] in a week. 10 days later it should be in Geraldine's hands. You have read above what I wrote Marjorie about the crimson and gold silk ties which I am sending you and her to wear as college colors on occasions. I shall send them to her address, or one to each; I haven't planned which yet. But, however sent, you can suit yourselves which has which. I fear you will not like your kimona for a Japanese one because it is not Japanese enough, but Geraldine's letter tells all about it. Write me just what you do think about it to guide me in further purchases. I am writing this while two women clean the house, floors, windows, furniture; the walls have been whitewashed and the woodwork newly painted white; floors newly painted a pinkish drab, which is pretty; but they are dusty and need washing.

Yesterday we went to give Gue Ging Miong's [?] church, the serious faced preacher rather small; you may remember him. At the close of the sermon he asked Father to speak, and me. I first said 2 sentences and gave the floor to Father. We walked both ways. Foochow seems very quiet and peaceful. Few soldiers here and no trouble. It has been very dry here for a long time and the grass is pretty brown and the flowers dried up. Ever since we arrived it has been as warm as summer. I am wearing white dresses and father white trousers. I suppose you are wearing wool dresses and sweaters, and the autumn leaves are all fallen and burned up, and flowers all gone. Houses heated and frosty nights. Much love and prayer, Mother Am using just a single envelope that I took to use when on steamer but didn't get letter finished. I didn't sponge their stationery!!

[This letter dated Nov. 1, 1928 was written from Foochow, China by Ellen to Geraldine. Willard and Ellen are back in China and Ellen tells about the trip she and Willard took to Kuliang in one day. She describes the process of making sweet potato rice. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

[Foochow, China]

Nov. 1st 1928

Dearest Geraldine,

We have been to Kuliang today and not in sedan chairs as you used to go. Starting at 8 A.M. we went by rickisha out across the plain toward the Mt. to the village where the chair coolies used to take the first rest, drink tea and smoke, about 2 ½ miles. There we paid them off, 3 ½ dimes each, and they returned and we started on across the plain walking. It has been a pleasant warm day with a few clouds which shaded the sun a part of the time and it is very dry. The farmers all across the plain are very busy reaping the second crop of rice and the fields are about half reaped. When we reached the foot of the Mt. we had walked 3 ½ miles and we did not stop at the rest house there as we used to do but kept right on up the mt. a climb of 3 miles, stopping only once to rest. We arrived at our first stop on Kuliang at 12:10 having made it in a little over 4 hours. Mrs. Matheson, wife of an English Dr. wanted to go up with us as she wanted Father to help her decide on the repairs on her house. We let her know the night before what time we would start and she started from her home over south side in time to meet us at the foot of the mt. where our roads meet, as nearly as she could judge. Just about 10 minutes before we came to the foot of the mt. father said "There is a foreign lady just starting up the mt. road. And it is a foreigner, for Chinese do not wear yellow clothes." He waved his hat but there was no response. But as we neared the first rest house, ¼ the way up, she shouted back to us and waved and waited for us at the rest house. On reaching the top, we went to her house first, looked it over and decided on the repairs with the mason, ate half a pomelo together in place of a drink of water. Then father and I went on up to our house leaving Mrs. M. to eat lunch alone and do some things about her house. At the village father ordered rice and sweet potatoes cooked by our landlord and brought up to our house. We rested a half hour and looked over the house then started to eat what we had brought and soon the landlord came bringing a big bowl of hot rice, 4 hot sweet potatoes, 2 boiled eggs, 4 slices of fried fresh pork and a tin of boiling water. We ate a part of ours and a part of his and left him all the rest giving it nominally to his little boy who was with him, wearing a pair of English men's khaki riding trousers, - a lad 10 yrs. old! Some sight! I imagine that after the Kuliang season is over and the summer residents are all gone, there is quite a gay parade of foreign cast-off clothing among the native population. As we started down the mt. and came to the branch road leading to Mrs. Mathesons house, we boohooed across the fields and soon heard a reply and in a moment she appeared and we all walked down together without stopping to rest. At the foot of the mt. our ways parted. We found our rickshas waiting at the end of the richisha r'd and rode home reaching home about 5:40, just about dark. One of the summer store buildings on the mt. had been burned since we were there last; a part of the church lawn, retaining wall, and stone walk had slipped down into the valley below in a land-slide during a fearful rainstorm late last summer, a part of a typhoon which everybody is telling us about, and we saw two other land slides up there which occurred at the same time. A fine new stone building of squared stones has been put up since we were last there, by a mason, "out of his squeezes of the foreigners", father says.

Our landlord uses our house harder all the year thru, especially Sept. Oct. and Nov. than we do in the three summer months. He had the lawn all covered with bundles of sweet potato vines drying for winter feeding for his cattle. The veranda was covered with shredded white sweet potatoes drying to make "sweet-potato rice" which is a substitute for rice, which is cheaper and an inferior food which nobody really likes but which a great many of the poorer people of this section of China have to eat a part of the time. The ends and fragments and little potatoes which couldn't be "riced" were drying on the veranda floor too, for pig food. Out on the stone walk in front of the house were two of our bureau drawers filled with chunks of snow white stuff which looked like huge lumps of laundry starch, drying. I asked what it was and gathered that it is a byproduct of the "sweet-potatoe rice" process; presumably the juice which drains from the sweet potatoes as they are being shredded by drawing them over a series of corrugations in a piece of tin attached to a board (2) ft. long and 7 in. wide; this instrument lay on the window sill in our dining room. The juice is dried out till this sediment is left and when dry enough to turn out of the receptacle in a cake it is broken up into lumps and dried perfectly dry. I tasted it and it seemed exactly like starch. I think it was. I tried to get out of the landlord what it was used for but all he could tell me was, "O, you can use it in making anything" meaning in cooking I suppose. Then on the back lawn was a hogs head 4 or 5 big water gongs, and one or two buckets, all filled with dirty water where they had washed the potatoes before ricing. Inside, the house, was cluttered and somewhat dirty and it didn't look like our summer home at all; but by next June he will have the lawn all cleared off, the veranda all cleaned off and washed, the inside all arranged and cleaned; ready for our arrival. Then I'll have our servants do it all over again after him and white washing, painting and oiling, will make it a home again. On the road across the plain there were two or three bad washouts or bridges gone; one place where we had to cross a canal on a board nine inches wide; another place had a bridge much slanted from a higher to a lower bank over a stream, which consisted of four narrow thin boards held together by strips of wood nailed across for steps, a rickety affair, insecurely set. At another place we crossed the stream on stepping stones. I crossed them all alone (unaided) and safely; but coming home my knees were so shaky from the long walk and especially the walk down so many irregular stone steps, that I had to stop and gather courage and poise as much as two minutes before I could venture the 9 in. board. After that long flight of steps down the mt. was finished, the muscles of my legs and especially knees had been on tense strain so long, holding back, and at the same time stepping down those rough, uneven, irregular stone steps, no two successive steps exactly the same height, width, slant, or surface, my muscles were so unresponsive and my feet so unmanageable and unwieldy that in walking on the level(?) they struck the ground at almost any angle and any time, and my gait was a ludicrously laborious amble, as I negotiated the uneven half-paved roads. But, - I did it! Walked up the mt. and back the same day and am able to sit up till 11:30 and write this letter to you on top of it without even lying down a minute to rest either. And I carried my own sweater all across the plain and Father's brief case filled with lunch, up the mt. and my umbrella all day either over my head for shade or as a cane. Also on the walk down the mt. I picked a bouquet of flowers, wild chrysanthemums and asters and wild lavender, and carried them all the way home. And I don't feel tired a bit. So I guess your mother isn't getting so awfully old, even if she is 60; thirteen miles including a mt. climb. I wonder how many of my 60 yr. old acquaintances (women) could have taken it with me? As I had no rubber heels, father took my arm and supported me the last half of the way down the mt. steps as my leather heels slipped so on the smooth, foot worn but irregular stones.

The grains of Sweet Potato Rice are about seven times the size of ordinary grains of shredded cocoanut and resemble it only not so pure white, - grayish white. Everywhere on the mt. it was being dried on matting trays 8 ft. long and 4 ft. wide set up at an angle of 45 degrees facing the south. Unhulled rice also on mats of bamboo flat on the ground were drying in many places. As the rice reaping was going on sticking up all over the plain could be seen the tan colored coarse cloth screens on 3 sides of a rectangular box in which the rice is threshed off the stalks by beating it by handfuls, on a grating made of 1 ½ in. strips of wood nailed 1 ½ in. apart on a rectangular frame 2 ft. X 3 ½ ft. set into the big box washboard fashion. The box has projections at all four corners for handles, is large and heavy and looks like this.

Box = 4 ft. X 12 ½ ft. X 2 ¼ ft. – screen 6 ft. high bamboo frame.

Use your magnifying glass,- reading glass to read these post scripts. I'm not out of stationary. Didn't know I was going to write so much.

Dearest Geraldine,

This must be business strictly, as I must get this on its way to you that you may be prepared to receive the goods I am sending for your Christmas Sale.

First,- let me say, that I quite forgot when in Yokohama that you had asked me to buy things for a sale in Youngstown and in my haste sent all the beads (12 strings, assorted) to Dorothy for her sale. But later remembering it I wrote Dorothy she was to share equally with you and asked her to send you half of them after making her own selection. Handle them carefully as they seem strung on very fine thread that would break easily. In price they averaged about 60 sen a string but the small ones and the long ones always cost more. Don't price them quite up to what is being asked for them in American stores as I think these may be seconds, or, at least, not inspected for foreign trade. But you don't need to tell that; neither should you publish the exact cost of your goods. People in their thought of it don't make allowance for the time spent in buying, wrapping, posting and necessary writing about them; not the cost of packing and postage and duty and your work, in the sale. So it would seem that you were making several hundred percent. Don't forget to add to the gold cost, the postage, duty etc, in fixing your selling price. And you will have to ascertain at the P.O. when you get your parcel and pay your duty what rate % is charged on each kind of thing in order to fix your prices proportionately and fairly. You ought to make at least 10 % on everything after all cost items are added to the purchase price. Some things, the best sellers, much more.

Yesterday I sent you your first parcel- shipment! – if you please, which contained one thing which unless I miss my guess, never gets as far as your sale. If you like it as well as I did, it will probably go straight into your own wardrobe and no one else will get a chance at it or a peep of it till you wear it. Now, perhaps I am getting your hopes too high so come down quickly before your anticipations are rudely dashed. For it's only a piece of Japanese wool challis and you may not think it at all suitable for a dress. But it is so pretty, to me, and they are wearing the large patterns somewhat; and the color combination is so harmonious and the whole thing so very distinctive, - you'll not see anything like it anywhere in America; not that it is ultra refined in its tone but it's just pretty, - and different. I wish it were silk instead of wool. But perhaps it will not appeal to you for a dress, perhaps it is too large a pattern; remove it one stop down, then, and call it cloth for a kimono; I think that will surely make a go,- only,- it's not silk. The goods is very fine and thin, the dyes are good, and the colors harmonious. It combines, black, lively dull blue, and henna in about equal parts and the pattern which is not at all definite or set, reminds you of the sky lien of trows of trees gracefully and charmingly indefinite and irregular and easy in arrangement. I'd give ten cents for your mental picture of it right now! And shall be interested to hear how your mental concept delineated by this description compares with the real thing. Please be very frank. I ought to add two more touches of my brush to this picture. The three colors are arranged in irregular horizontal bands regularly repeated. The work "indefinite" refers to pattern, not to the line which separates one color from another- which is very indefinite. My imagination makes this venture- that in choosing these particular colors, the designer intended to represent earth, blue sky, and dark shadowy trees silhouetted against it at eventide. The Japanese are poetic even in their arts and industries. - There are nearly six yds. of it and it is 30 in. wide I think, altho I did not measure it. For such a pattern one would want a straight plain dress I should think, so as not to disturb the art in it by many pleats and shirrings and drapings. So it would hardly take 6 y. to make one dress. There would be enough for two if one, at least, combined solid color material with it in one of the colors of the material; possibly preferably black. I think that would make the prettier combination altho the other two colors would do, especially the henna. Both dresses might have black combined if need be. Some smooth thin plain wool material might be found I should think, if not exactly challis. In any case I should think it best to face the skirt with satin (thin) so it will slip easily on the stockings and not cling and be kicked up on the legs with every step. So much for suggestion! Now do just what you want to with it. Sell it if you don't care for it but not until all the other sisters have had a chance at it in case you don't care for it, or for a second dress if you find there is enough for more than one, for yourself. The whole piece of nearly 6 yds. cost 8 yen or $3.73 gold exchange in Japan that day being $2.14 silver for $1.00 gold. I sent this to you instead of Dorothy as you have more dress-making done than she; she buys more of her clothes ready made. If you decide to use it for dresses for the family let whichever sister wants or admires it most have the other if it is possible to tell; i.e. if there are two. It makes no difference to me. I sent Dot a rather pretty hand painted white silk scarf from Canton. In this first parcel, I also sent 10 Japanese Christmas Cards, 15 sen each or .07 gold, 2 calendars, 30 sen or .14 gold each, a linen towel, cross stitch, $1.00 silver and a linen tray cloth in cut work $2.90 silver or 1.36 gold. That was all in that parcel and it was registered; so write at once when you receive it as the time is so long anyway before we can hear that if it doesn't arrive we should begin to look it up from here. It should arrive by Dec. 10, I think.

Today supposedly, the lacquer man will post to you a box of small pieces of lacquer which I chose yesterday and he promised to post today. It should contain 30 pcs. of lacquer, - napkin rings, paper knives, ruler, boxes, small trays, oval, sq. long, and one set of larger oval trays. I bot 2 sets and sent one to Dot and one to you. But wanted each of you to have both colors so divided each set sending part of each to each. I tho't you would not sell them altogether anyway, but separately, and I tho't you'd each like some of the red ones and some of the black ones. If any one wants the full set we can send it easily if you take their order. But most people will probably want to buy only one. I did not have at hand capital enough to buy two sets for each. This shipment is just a sample to see how it sells and if you want to go into it further you can forward a draft for purchases and I'll get as much as you like.

Today I am sending you a small parcel- Father is just starting out to mail it, - containing two Pin trays, Chinese Canton Black wood, two trinket cups, Japanese, three Japanese tops, and a lacquer box of tea. All of it cost only 75 cents gold so you should pay no duty on it.

Lacquer Box of tea, {Box 25¢ Silver 12¢ Gold, Gold
Tea 28 1/3 " 13 1/4 "		.25
2 Jap. Trinket Cups, @ 30¢ = 60¢	28¢ "	.28
2 Chinese Canton Pin Trays, @ 15¢ = 30¢	14 " "	.14
3 Wooden Japo. Tops,	17¢ "	.08
Gold Cost Each.		.75
Box Tea,	$.25	Take care of this so you can fix your prices for where for your sale.
Trinket Cups,	.14
Pin Trays,	.07
Tops,	.02 2/3

Tomorrow I will send you another parcel containing Japanese cotton print, red and white; my thought in buying this was that it might be used for covering a comforter. If used for one side only, with a border of plain red all around the four sides, 5-10 in. wide according to size desired, and a different material or plain red used for lining it could be used two comforters by dividing the piece exactly in the middle; and each half exactly in the middle to make two breadths. It is about 30 in. wide and 11 1/2 yds. approximately, long. It might also be used for draperies in some places I suppose. I sent Dot an all-over chrysanthemum pattern in several colors. I bo't them because they were so pretty and cheap, thinking they might prove salable as oriental things. The red print cost 4 yen for the 11 1/2 yds. or 1.87 fold, for the piece or 16 ¼ cts. gold per yd. Keep your accts. In this sale, accurately and strictly so you will know 1st whether you are making anything; 2nd How much you owe Dot and me.

We are having a real thunder shower just now, Nov. 8th 3:30 P.M. Rather unusual! No rain recently, very dry.

Diary for 1928
[Geraldine Beard]

Sun. Jan. 1, 1928

We are all together at Dot's in Saginaw, except Gould who is in Kansas or Long Island. Went to church, had a fine chicken dinner, then Father, Kathleen and I started back to Oberlin. A bitter cold day with much snow but we were comfortable. Reached Monroe and are spending the night here.

Cold Monday 2

Started at 7:30 from Monroe, reached Oberlin at 12. Had lunch, went to Aunt Etta's, left Father there, and K. and I started on at 2. Reached Youngstown at 5:30, had dinner in town, then came out to the house. Evelyn came soon after. It is not so hard as I tho't to be back ready for work.

Tues. Jan. 3, 1928 Cold

Kathleen went to school with me. The youngsters seemed glad to be back. We left soon after school and K. and I looked for coats. Found none, so I telegraphed Dot to get one I saw there. Studied in eve. Had a hard time getting the car started.

Wednesday 4

A kind lady on our street came out with her car to push mine till it started. All generosity isn't dead. Kathleen did not go to school, but I went into town for lunch with her. She phoned that she got a coat, and I went for it after school. She left at 2:35. The girls reported on their visits to homes to take Christmas baskets. Went to lunch then to Jane Polly's and hear Dodge's radio program.

Thur. Jan. 5, 1928

Uneventful so far as I am concerned. Am so busy with school work that the world could turn Red and I should be none the wiser. Our schedules came out, and I still have 5 preparations next semester! No rest! Exams begin a week from Tuesday. But, oh yes! I went skating!! That saved the day.

Friday 6

School let out 15 min. early and we all went to the basket-ball game against Cheney. I almost believe sports do make for manliness if conducted rightly.

Planned to skate again, but all is melted. Went to skate again, but all is melted. Went to Mary French's and played a bit.

Sat. Jan. 7, 1928 Warm

Went to town on errands. Got a pretty fern for the room. Graded papers. Was going walking with Mary French in the eve. But it rained. Our seasons are certainly confused. All the beautiful banks of snow are gone.

Rain. Sunday 8 Warm.

Went to the Unitarian church with Mary French. It is a beautiful little edifice. Mr. LeFevre seemed to be reading an apology for Liberalism and deriding all other sects. To me, now, no belief gives the satisfactory sense that Christian Science does. Worked all day on exam questions. Such a schedule gives no time for feeding one's soul.

Evelyn went to church for the first time.

Mon. Jan. 9, 1928 Warm

After school came thru town, got supper, and worked on exam questions. My coat came from Saginaw- a beauty, grey with black Martin[?]. Wrote Rose Mary.

Tuesday 10

Went to hear Cornelia Otis Skinner- She is delightful! More exams to do!

Wed. Jan. 11, 1928

Our club supper was very nice tonight. Took Alice home and tried to get to prayer meeting but failed.

Thursday 12

Went to Jane Polly's for a sewing club.

Saturday 14

Heard "My Mary land"- a musical light opera performance. It somehow did not impress me tremendously, tho' the others tho't it good! Got a pair of shoes and a 1 dollar hat.

Sun. Jan. 15, 1928

Church in morning. The Fultons took dinner with us, then we all went to the Steinbaugh Auditorium to hear Dean Chas. R. Brown of Yale in the Y. [Youngstown] Forum[?] 4000 people were there!

Monday 16

Last day before exams. Spent the eve. duplicating questions.

Tues. Jan. 17, 1928

In assembly Mr. Barrett gave out letters to football men- very well, nicely done. Two exams this afternoon. Duplicated more for tomorrow.

A letter from Rose Mary! Those mean so much. And this one just sparkles with love and scorn for would-be oppressors.

Wednesday 18

Gave 3 exams and corrected at school till 5:30. Went to prayer meeting and talked with Mrs. Delanto about joining the Science Church. I feel an abounding freedom already- merely upon having mentioned it. For years the orthodox church has not given me what I craved in spiritual truth. There must be a great power which for some reason we ?? because of false belief.

Thur. Jan. 19, 1928

Corrected exams all day. Patsy visited with me for an hour. He is going to Oberlin with me. Graded papers all eve.

Friday 20

Grades were on cards by 11:30. Children came for cards at 1 P.M. Patsy couldn't go with me, so I started for O. alone at 4. The wind howled and swept in gusts, being against me all the way. I felt lonely yet cosy in the car, with dark, stormy clouds threatening ahead, and cold, gusty winds blowing about me. Reached O. at 8. Monnie has been to Cleveland for ??

Sat. Jan. 21, 1928

Slept till 11:30. Took lunch with Monnie at Baldwin. K. and I looked thru the book-store in the afternoon. I got the "Educ. of Henry Adams." We sewed and visited. Took supper at the tea room. Visited all evening. It is as nice just to be with the girls. Talcott and Baldwin both had formal parties tonight.

Sunday 22

We visited in K's room after breakfast there. I made a collar and cuff set of grey and white silk. Took dinner with Aunt Etta. Started for Y.[Youngstown] at 4 and was here at 7:30. The girls do me worlds of good!

Mon. Jan 23, 1928

The new semester started and my classes are fairly well numbered. A fine Roman History class. I have library the 2nd period.

Tuesday 24

Got a new battery for the car and it is ten times better.

Wed. Jan. 25, 1928

Joined the Chorale Club of the Monday Musical. Could sing only about 2 notes. If I can't read any better, I'll be of no use. Frie Le Ser Cit held election of officers.

Fri. Jan. 27, 1928

This day I did not write, so will dedicate the space to Lindbergh. He is a hero of the age. I do tremendously admire his thorough-going mastery of his art, his persevering, patient fulfillment of the task, his courage, his unselfish use of his achievement to further peace and neighborly understanding, and his selflessness, simplicity.

Saturday 28

We cleaned house, ironed, mended, went to town, and did school work. A full day, but got quite a bit done.

Sun. Jan. 29, 1928

Church. Saw Mrs. Delanto and got an application blank. Its tenets are stricter than I thought. We had a nice dinner, then worked, listened to Robt. E. Speer by Radio. Wrote to Dot and to Rose Mary. Tired.

Monday 30

Ossip Gabrilorivly[?] - Harold Bauer played in a double-piano recital. It was delightful - a light pretty program. Got paid today - I needed it badly.

Tues. Jan. 31, 1928

We entertained the sewing circle this evening. Served puff shells filled with ice cream, and chocolate sauce, with tea.

Teacher's meeting.

Wed. Feb. 1

Went to chorale and am much encouraged, for it seemed much easier. The selections are lovely. Frie Le Ser Cit held installation of officers and election of new members. The service really went finely.

Thur. Feb. 2, 1928

The first night in this week. School seems to be running to chaos. It is a ship without a sail or rudder. I believe I could do better myself as principal.

Friday 3

After dinner I went to the Lib. with Mary French. On the way home we stopped at Raver's tea room - all in Czechoslovakian decoration. Mary is adorable. Perhaps we'll take a trip south right after school is out.

Sat. Feb. 4, 1928

Expected to walk this morning, but it rained. A most peculiar nanter[?!] Went to town and back. Slept for two hours. Graded papers, washed hair. Evelyn went home early this morning. I enjoy being alone - or with Mary French. Wrote for a letter of dismissal from the Congregational Church. It is here.

Sunday 5

A glorious day. Rose in time for church. After lunch, Mary French, Annmaria and I walked in the park. Melted banks of snow and icicles still decorated the ravines and cliffs. It was beautiful. Heard Senator Shepperd of Texas in a good talk. Baked some muffins and brown betty. E. came back at 6, and brought some lovely honey. Wrote Aunt Molly.

Mon. Feb. 6, 1928

Tired to begin the week. Mary French went with me to a Christian Science Lecture. She is a dear thing.

Tuesday 7

Got cakes for the supper tomorrow and table decorations. Worked till late. Letters from both Marjorie and Kathleen.

Wed. Feb. 8, 1928

Our new monitor system started with Mr. Barton as head. No cooperation from the office made matters difficult. Our Frie Le Ser Cit supper was ever so nice tonight- up in the teacher's balcony. We took in 5 new girls. Went to chorale. Tired. A long letter from Gould telling of his exciting flight from Wichita to N.Y.

Thursday 9

A little more order has resulted in the school halls with the monitor system. Perhaps a ship can sail without a rudder if all the oarsmen pull together to steer it aright. A joint committee of Frie Le Ser Cits and Four Square boys met to talk over cooperation.

Fri. Feb. 10, 1928

The boys and girls are checking on delinquents and are planning to supervise the cafeteria. I came home, leaving Evelyn at a basket ball game. Read a Monitor all eve. Mrs. MacDonald came up and stayed over an hour. Read Edna St. Vincent Millay for an hour. She is sweet in some places, but fatalistic in others.

Saturday 11

Mary French and I walked in the park this morning. The snow lay in pretty fluffs all on the fir and spruce and pine trees, and on every bush and twig. It was like a fairyland. I did the purchasing, then came home and washed, mended, cleaned and ironed. - till 10 P.M.! Mother's letter tells of the whims of an eccentric - Cousin Addie!

Sun. Feb. 12, 1928

Rose, cooked, went to church. Saw Irene Smith again. Had dinner and went to the concert by the Minneapolis Symphony. It was delightful- The New World Symphony- Dvorak was one.

Monday 13

School is still a "mess" so far as order and discipline are concerned. We heard Caswell give Abraham Lincoln readings. He looked very much like Lincoln and kept us spellbound. Martha and Florence Cook took supper with us, before the lecture.

Tues. Feb. 14, 1928

Some of the Frie Le Ser Cit girls were in my room talking about their trouble in school, with boys, etc. and I feel I know them much better. Gertrude has a little one- Margaret Louise; and Constance Russell is married.

Wednesday 15

Mrs. Fitzgerald talked to our Club this afternoon on the ideal girl and really struck home to the hearts of the girls her message. Chorale Club at night, then went to a teacher's party, with a genuine good time. We came out to Mrs. Swagger's and are spending the night.

Thur. Feb. 16, 1928

After school I studied, washed hair, prepared clothes and read. Tomorrow Mary French and I go to Oberlin. Ate supper at the Campbell Methodist Church.

Friday 17

We came from school, packed and got off about 5:30. Mary drove much of the way. Arrived here at 9:30 and are staying in Baldwin. Had some of Monnie's birthday cake.

Sat. Feb. 18, 1928

We went thru some of the buildings before lunch, but did not attend classes because Mr. Mager[?] was ill. After lunch we called on Ruth Burueson, and a friend of Mary's and on the Jaszi's! They are truly wonderful. We took dinner at the hotel- Oberlin Inn, then heard the Men's Glee Club Concert.

Sunday 19

Took breakfast at the Hi-O-Hi tea rooms. Church was held in the newly refurbished First Church. Cornelius A. Patton preached. His is not of this age, and did not seem to be overflowing with my conception of Truth. Dinner at Baldwin, a short call at Aunt Etta's, and left for home at 3:30. A fallen bridge sent us 10 miles out of our way. Much work to do.

Mon. Feb. 20, 1928

Nothing of note happened in my little orbit today, and I should have been too tired to have noticed it if it had.

Tuesday 21

No school tomorrow! Chorale Club rehearsal. I feel more and more that I lack voice control and quality for such a chorale. Would that I had taken it! Discussion in Frie Le Ser Cit.

Wed. Feb. 22, 1928

Rested a bit, duplicated questions in History, and got ready for a party at Helen's (Oldekens). Twelve girls were there- such a lovely group, and such a nicely planned party. I won a little prize in a- "Nation" word glance[?] We heard Tito Schipa in the Auditorium. His is a sweet tenor, lovely but not powerful, and his presence is gracious and charming.

Thursday 23

Lindbergh has furnished another thrill - to me and 99,299 others, who received letters in his St. Louis to Chicago Air Mail Flight. Mother wrote me, and we are all tremendously thrilled. I shall cherish the envelope! It is his first mail flight after retiring. We took supper at Trinity Church.

Fri. Feb. 24, 1928

School is a model of disorder still. A weak principal and shiftless janitor combine to make a head-less institution. Went to the Nature Club banquet. There was the most interesting group present, and the address by Dr. Alexander on weather was fine.

Saturday 25

Mary French's birthday.

Cleaned house, washed. Went to library and read a criticism of "The Merry Wives of Windsor", then went to the "Park" to see it. I've never enjoyed Shakespeare so much, that is for sheer fun. Otis Skinner, Mrs. Fiske, and Henrietta Crossman played. After a little dinner, we went to Mary and Ann Fulton's for a sewing get-together. Saw Helen Estabrook at the theatre.

Sun. Feb. 26, 1928

Rose in time to get a bit of the dinner ready before church. After dinner we went to the Staubaugh Auditorium to hear Ed. A. Steiner on "Can the race be educated." His use of humor to bring out a deeper thought is rarely fine. Studied and washed in the eve. A free Sunday would be a blessing!

Monday 27

"Payday"- not much more of note.

Wednesday 29

Frie Le Ser Cit had a party with Four Square boys and we had a fine time. Staid till 11 o'clock to clean up. Missed chorale.

Sat. March 3, 1928

Mary French and I took a walk in the park. I cleaned did school work and sundry jobs. Evelyn went home early this morning.

Sunday 4

Went to church. Helen Zimmerman Mrs. MacDonald's daughter, had a birthday dinner here and they brought up a lovely tray-full to me. I went to Campbell and got all the Senior girls in our club and took them to the Auditorium to hear Mordecai Johnson, Pres. of Howard Univ. They seemed to enjoy it much. Evelyn came back at 6:30.

Mon. March 5, 1928

Heard the Russian Quartette from the cathedral at Moscow I think. Enjoyed them ever so much. Many papers to grade. A letter from the board about a position in Kok College!

Tuesday 6

Papers and more papers but my eye bothered, so are going to bed.

Wed. March 7, 1928

My eye began to pain today, but I staid and got grades on cards, but left at 3. Called Mrs. Guthridge and she is working for me. The tear duct seems to be stopped. Did not go to Chorale.

Thursday 8

Staid in bed. They eye is badly swollen. Mrs. Guthridge called and my tho't is much cleared. Mary French and Annmaria came and bro't a lovely primrose and some gingerale.

The eye started to drain tonight so will probably be better. The students took charge of classes.

Fri. March 9, 1928

Did not go to school again. They eye drained all day and is much less painful. A good letter from Father telling of a position in Kok Col. and in Yenching.

Saturday 10

Called Mrs. Guthridge and told her I could take care of the eye myself. Helped wash and clean. Ironed in eve.

Sun. March 11, 1928

Did not go to church. Got dinner and then went for a long walk in the Park with Evelyn and Annmarie. Got tomorrow's lessons but did not other work.

Monday 12

Went to school and got along pretty well with one eye. Worked in the eve on it. Read over Tues. lessons.

Wednesday 14

My eye pained again and I lost faith in Truth and yielded to the teacher's entreaties and went to the doctor. He calls it an abscess in the tear sack. Went to the Y.E. and met the Frie Le Ser Cit girls for a supper and party. We played games, danced and sang. Did not stay for all of Chorale. Mary French drove me home.

Friday 30

School closed. I sold about 10 boxes of Father's tea. We heard Singrid Ouegin of the Metropolitan Opera-Wonderful. Evelyn packed up to leave tomorrow. We took dinner with the Fultons.

Jan. 17, 1929.

Dear Father and Mother:

Your letter to Virginia and me are coming faster than ours to you are going I am afraid. Virginia is greatly touched and exceedingly happy in receiving a word direct from either of you. Our courtship has progressed much faster than I had hoped for. In fact perhaps faster than I had planned for it to. Between us two alone we are pledged. There has been no announcement and will be none publicly until Virginia finishes Pratt a year from next June. However the Space and VanAmee family recognize our mutual love and we are accorded the privacy of an engaged couple.

Since the failure of the last real love- the one with Vivienne I had resolved not to become engaged until the wedding seemed certain in the near future, but here I am again as deep in love as before and as much engaged as far as I am concerned and knowing that the wedding cannot be for a year and a half anyway.

The only reason I am allowing myself to be engaged so long is that I feel Virginia is truly and deeply in love and is sincere and has a sound, wholesome background to her. I believe in her- believe she will stand by me in the troubles of life and will bear with me the problems of living and share with me the responsibility of solving them. I will give her my heart, my all, and have faith in her to hold my love precious even as I hold hers.

I came out here or rather to Chicago to get a plane and fly it back to N.Y. The Chicago office wanted me to demonstrate it to a man in Indianapolis so I flew down here expecting to make a demonstration and proceed to N.Y. via Cleveland. However while we were demonstrating a sleet storm came up and covered the plane with ice and today it was foggy and tomorrow promises rain so it looks like a long stop here.

I'm very anxious to get back. Probably will fly over Oberlin en route to Cleveland.

Virginia is a constant joy in my heart and a great inspiration to me. I love her.

My love to you both,

Your son,

Gould.

Dear Jerry-

Last week- end was such a glorious one, it just left me walking on air. You certainly must come up real often. How about next Saturday for Monnie's birthday? She wants us all to come over there for Sunday dinner, so if you could get up here Saturday we would drive over there Sunday morning and spend the day with her. Write real quick what you think of it so we can make plans. What do you plan to get for Monnie? I am going to ask her what she needs most, but if you have any suggestions tell me. We have had a wonderful time this week end. Ronnie and she came last night just in time for the Glee Club concert and are staying till tomorrow morning. Monnie has been telling us all about the people and the work over there, which is most interesting. I guess she will give you her own account of it. She seems very enthusiastic although she really hasn't done much yet, but I bet she will do herself proud when she really gets into the work. I am so anxious to see the place and all her little Mexicans.

This week has been a very easy one compared to last semester. I hope my time is going to be more free so that I can do lots of other things. I am taking swimming lessons over in the Elyria pool on Mondays. Last week we tried the back stroke and some diving. It would be thrilling if I could really learn to dive correctly. Then I am learning to be a dancer (?) too. Gidge and I are joining the natural dancing class which meets once a week. That is a lot of fun, although I feel as awkward as an elephant. They turned all the light off except the piano lamp, so we couldn't see each other very easily. It is surprising what the music puts into you. The costumes the girls wear are so pretty, all shades of the rainbow and so graceful. A few wore bathing suits, but they are not nearly so inducive to dancing. In March we give a public program for invited guests. If you can come up I will invite you.

It was rather lonely here without Monnie last week, but not as bad as I thought it would be. If we had been living in the same house, or had seen each other oftener it would have been worse. As it is we can see each other quite often, almost every week end. This morning we went to church and I had the girls to dinner. After dinner Monnie got to playing her saw downstairs to the accompaniment of one of the girls who plays the piano real well. You should have seen the audience gather. Girls heard it up in their rooms and came down to see what it was. A crowd of interested girls listened for about twenty minutes and were very enthusiastic in their praise. Some tried it afterwards with comical results, and several vowed that they would get a saw right away. Monnie played very well and I was proud of her.

Do come up next week if you can and better bring your skates, for the skating is still good here.

Loads of love

Kathleen.

Am enclosing a handkerchief you left here. Did you also leave a pair of scissors- (no we have found the owner.)

March 9, 1929

Dear Jerry and Gould-

Today is one of those glorious times when we are deluded into thinking that spring has surely come and then learn afterwards that winter will have one more stroke at us. Yesterday it was snowing and blowing like fury, but today our thoughts turn toward Silver Bay without our realizing it. I have been thinking a lot lately about the summer and wondering what to do. I heard about an industrial project in Chicago thru the Y.W. where an organized group of college girls go right in and work with the industrial girls to get acquainted with the condition and the people. It sounds like a grand opportunity for experience to me and both Gidge and I are quite enthused about it, but there are several drawbacks. It is for only six weeks and I don't know what I would do the rest of the summer; there is practically no money in it, which I need; it would be rather hard on health, and I wouldn't get to see any of you. Yet it might be just the experience that I need and would be very educational. What do you folks think about it? Do you have any idea what you will be doing this summer Jerry? You have to move out of your house in May don't you, and what will you both do then? Oh, if we only didn't have to keep thinking of the future all the time and deciding what to do!!

Your account of your first ascent towards heaven was most interesting and especially to have flown over the farm and try the carrier pigeon stunt must have been such fun. When you get to be a pilot let us know.

How goes the cello lessons? I do wish I could be there to play your accompaniments for that is just the kind of practice I need. Is your teacher turning out to be as wonderful as you hoped? I was talking to Mr. Leedy about Pablo Casals the other day and though he could tell me nothing about his method (not being a cellist) he told me something about the man. It seems that he is the greatest cellist in the world and even acknowledged by some to be the greatest musician who draws the bow. Harold Bauer in New York is well acquainted with Casals and has done some accompanying for him. Mr. Leedy said that if your teacher is a pupil of Casals he ought to be very good. Isn't it grand to get back to your music again? I should hate to give mine up now and am very thankful that I have another semester anyway. Mr. Adam says he thinks my voice tone is improving, which is most encouraging. While I can't see very perceptible progress in piano I enjoy every bit of it and am able to spend all of the after-noon in the Con[?] every day. Mr. Leedy just gave me a new piece by Debusey which thrills me so much. It is so different from anything else I have had and is very modern.

I was down at Aunt Etta's this afternoon and heard all the latest news from the East. She told us of Edith's visit to New York- They thought it was Edith Pease. But the biggest surprise was Uncle Elberts trip to Florida. He certainly does take alarming jaunts without letting a soul know doesn't he? What will he do next?- probably run off to China on a weeks notice. [In April 23rd of 1929, the ship's list for the S.S. Bermuda shows Elbert and Emma traveling from Hamilton, Bermuda to New York. Back in 1912, he is seen on the ship's list S.S. Morro Castle traveling from Progreso, Yucatan, Mexico to New York.]

Spring vacation comes in three weeks. Gidge has invited me out to her home again and I think I will go. Her family is so lovely- especially do I like her sister Chuck who is living at home and working in Chicago. I think Jerry would love to meet her for she is one of these refreshing spontaneous unaffected girls with whom you can have such loads of good sport and whole hearted fun. Her other sister I have never met but expect to when she comes to visit Gidge some time in April. Her home is some much like what ours used to be that it makes you feel comfortable right away and the whole family takes you right in. We are planning all sorts of things to do in Chicago and we want to rest lots. Gidge is pretty tired.

Monday Your letter just came in the morning mail and I am glad I held this over to finish it. My goodness! But aren't you folks leading the speedy life. I don't see how you stand it rushing all around so fast. It must be a wonderful variety seeing so many people and going so many places though! Compared to our quiet studious life here yours seems like a blaze of activity. I am so glad you like Mr. Rosanoff so well. Is it every week that you take your lesson?

I know I have been awfully neglectful about writing and I don't see when my time goes for my schedule is only fourteen hours. I am going out for my basket ball and spending all my afternoon at music and I guess the rest of my time when I'm not studying goes to Hugh [Elmer]. We study (?) at the Lib. almost every night and have dates on Saturday and Sunday. I'm afraid it is too often but when it has once got started it is awfully hard to cut down. Last Sat. night we went up to his house and read poetry all evening. It was lovely and he has a much more developed appreciation of literature and poetry than I do. I get a lot out of being with him but can't consider it so seriously as he does. It's hard to know just what to do.

Our tea comes next Saturday and Monnie is coming over for it. Then Gidge and I are going back with her to attend a Vechemika that night. Gidge has never been to one. You say Monnie writes often-I wish she would send a few of her letters this way- I only get a card now and then. It's awfully good to hear from all you folks, so do keep us posted on what you are doing.

Must study now for a change-
Love Kathie.

In a 2001 interview, Kathleen wrote: "Hugh lived in a big house (Tank Home) while his parents were in Russia, and my family rented a house just behind "Tank" for a few years, in Oberlin. (Let nature take its course)." Tank Home is at 110 E. College Street and in the early 1920's, Kathleen and her family lived at 120 E. College Street. Hugh's parents were missionaries until 1923 with the A.B.C.F.M., so this was probably the time period that she talks about.

Dear Jerry and Gould-

Jerry's and my letters just crossed so that neither of us have the information we asked for. Don't worry about the hundred dollars Jerry, for Father sent me a check for a hundred last month and asked me to tell you to keep yours. I have plenty to carry me thru the year now. Your request for Chinese things leaves me blank for I have nothing but a lacquer desk set which is interesting and that you probably already possess. No one would know that I was from China by the amount of oriental things I have.

Dot told us last week-end about Gould's engagement and coming wedding. I am heartily glad for you Gould and hope that you are really happier than your letter sounds. You don't seem a bit thrilled and I should think you would feel like walking on air, or is it that you have settled down into a less romantic form of love? Write and tell us all about it, where you are going to live, what date the wedding is, etc. etc. Will you give Jinny [Virginia Space] my love and kisses and tell her that I am feeling with her in thrills of joy. I fear that I can't get around to writing her for some time yet as things are now but I am thinking of you both just the same.

Dot's and Harold's visit was a little longer this year because they had Good Friday and Easter Monday off. They drove Ruthie Brooks and a friend of hers down with them. We had lots of time to talk and be together since we didn't do much and they were driving between Lorain and here most of the time. It was a treat to have rides in a car for which I sometimes hunger. Sunday noon we Beards and Humes and Newbergs all put our most elegant airs and clothes on for a rip-snorter dinner at the Hotel. It was fun and I think Aunt Etta and Uncle Willis enjoyed the change. Sunday afternoon we all went for a ride but Harold and in the evening we visited with Ruth for a while.

This last week has been filled with blue books and in the next month two term papers are due. Work-work-work. But last night we forgot work for a while in the gaiety of the junior prom. Debbie and I went with Hugh and his room-mate. It was a beautiful dance and the art building was wonderfully fixed up for it. Flowers were looped in great strings between the arches and a huge bouquet of snap-dragons and carnations occupied the center, illuminated by colored lights. The floors were all waxed as never before and the side rooms were dim with subdued lights. I wore my red dress again and Gidge lent me her marvelous white Spanish shawl for a wrap. Did I feel swell?!! And we actually stayed out until twelve-thirty. It was all very lovely and of course was not as big a thrill as it was last year since the novelty of formals has sort of worn off. Favors were little clocks with blue leather encasing and an Oberlin seal in the corner. Today I woke up as early as usual in spite of the late hours.

Jerry, we are all extremely concerned over what you are going to do next year. Am I right in guessing that you may keep a gift shop somewhere around there and take cello lessons? Or do you consider going back to teaching? The sale that you had at Aunt Mollies sounds very encouraging for future business and it would not be straining as much as school work. Dot has signed her contract for another year since her "family" is still a myth and a hope. Aunt Etta says that I am welcome to stay with her next fall and room with Milly [Etta's daughter, Millicent]. It will be a good contrast after four years in a boarding house. After that I must "step out into the world" and shift for myself- but when and how. If you see any bait just let me know for it is already beginning to weigh on me. Debbie and I are applying at Chatauqua for summer work but have little hopes. I don't want to go to Silver Bay because I have no one to go with and then Hugh is going to be there and I'd rather not be with him so much. I ought to work somewhere but can't locate a place.

Monnie was over for a few minutes yesterday and is very busy getting Ronnie ready to leave. She is actually leaving this week and their new worker comes today I think. I am so glad for Monnie for it will be a relief- at least a change even if it is added responsibility in breaking in the new worker.

My love to you both
Kathie

How about an address!

Talcott Hall
May 18, 1929

Dear Jerry and Gould,

Are you economizing on postage or stationary? Maybe both, but how about a penny postal once in a while? You are all moved by now and how is the new home? Are you still taking cello Jerry and selling Churchill things? Have you talked over the radio any more Gould? We couldn't get you that night so you will have to write out your speech for us. Hugh tried and tried on the radio up at his house but it was the wave length area where the stations are thick and confused so we had to give it up. Aunt Etta said that they were unsuccessful too.

For the past two weeks I have been deep in an English term paper which I got off my hands last Friday. I emerged from that tunnel only to plunge in again for a Soc. paper for Family course. We have to tell the whole history of our family characterizing each member and criticizing the training. I wonder what will be left of each one of you when I get thru with you.

Yesterday I had one of the biggest thrills that I can call such. We have just been taking up "Hamlet" in Lit. and this is my first reading- Imagine! I can't see how I have escaped it for so long. Walter Hampden presented it in Cleveland yesterday so the whole bunch of us went in to see it. To read it for the first time and see it right away is just too ideal. Hamlet was supreme in his acting and even some of the supporting staff were very good. The soliloquies especially brought out Hampden's power of dramatic expression and I will always connect the parts of that play with Hampden's interpretation of them. I expected that the intenseness of it would not be so straining with a knowledge of what was to come but I think, if anything, it was more so. We all sat there just spell bound, and there were places where the whole audience sustained a dead silence. It is the greatest stage production I have even seen and I am even glad that I missed opera to have this chance. Three weeks ago we went in (again by special bus) to see "The Rivals" with Mrs. Fiske acting. While it was very enjoyable I did not get nearly so much out of it because it was not so familiar and hearing was extremely difficult. I surely am thankful to have these opportunities and as such reduced rates or special buses afford.

Uncle Elbert and Aunt Emma will be out here in about two weeks and will go on to Ill. directly. He may bring Myron [Etta's son] with him I hear. Did Mich tell you that he was going to preach out West this summer and that Fulton [Etta's son] was going to be advance man on Chatauqua? I have decided to go to Silver Bay again as no other opening offered itself to me. I will have to go alone but it will probably do me good. I am rather dubious about getting off for the wedding tho and I hate to think of missing it.

Monnie was over today to bring her new worker to Oberlin. I was fast asleep when they came in and got up to meet Miss Evans in a daze. She is a very jolly easily met girl and is a good tonic for Monnie. I can see that she has pepped up already and is fast snapping out of her laxidazical depression that Ronnie cast upon her. It was pouring all day today so Miss Evans did not get a very nice impression of Oberlin.

I'll be expecting an airmail letter any day from you-

With my love- Kathie

June 9- 1929

Dear Geraldine:-

It is 9 p.m. Sunday. The thermometer stands at 83 degrees and the humidity is great. When I wrote you last, I do not like to tell, if my correspondence register is correct. The past month I have been away to the country much= up in the hills ten miles west of Kuliang for one Sunday, to Ing Hok for a Student Conference for another and stopped off at Chong Ha over two nights to perform a marriage ceremony, and two or three times to Deng Chio and Nang Seu. It is beyond me to be away from home three days in the week and do all my work here and keep up to the mark with my letter writing.

Mother bought a string of amber beads for your landlady the other day. Better not tell her till the beads get to you. We've been buying lots of things for Marjorie's Conference. I hope they get there all right and that they meet her expectations. It pleases me much that you girls are able to get together so often. Kathleen writes that she is going to Silver Bay this summer. A week ago Friday I ran up to Kuliang and gave directions for repairs to the cottage. For two years the poor ranch has been allowed to shift for itself largely and it will take well over $100.00 mex. to put it into shape. If all goes well the rent on the rooms will meet this. Mother and I plan to be selfish and take the large west room with the round end. - The one that you children used to use for paper doll weddings with Gould as minister. What pleasure Phebe used to take in recalling those incidents in her childhood.

Last Sunday I was over at Nang Seu- I did not take a scrap of foreign food and the preacher with whom I staid is 71 years old and his wife in the sixties. Well the fare did not tempt me to overeat. The rice was good, but one dish or pork was too fat. The dried salt shrimp did not appeal to me. The little shell fish I could get down. The gourd was tasteless but I could eat it. The one good condiment was the bean curd. I always like that. The dining room was my bedroom, and the bed was put up against the wall by day. There was no partition between my room and the kitchen. I dressed Monday morning while Mrs. Ding was getting breakfast. Just as I was putting on my trousers she came in and set the table.

At the Sunday morning communion service two men and a woman united with the church. The men were learning Christianity under Mr. Hartwell. You can

He died early in 1905, just before we got back from the first furlough, so you may compute the number of years they have been connected with the church. The woman was the wife of a church member.

Sunday evening two brothers= Christians= invited Mr. Ding and me for a feast. After eating a dozen young men gathered and we talked till I got tired. I prefer such a gathering, where anyone can ask questions, to a formal church preaching service. Then Monday morning I took a ferry boat 2 hrs to the landing this side of the river. There were some twenty fellow passengers. A foreigner is still a rare bird and the subject or object of conversation and by keeping a discreet silence for a time, I can always direct the conversation. Thus far these ferry boat talks have been of great satisfaction to me. The men are of all ages and in different callings- farmers- coolies, merchants, students. I can turn the conversation on education. Then last Monday morning I asked them how much money the village of Nang Seu spent recently in the procession of the idol Taisan. They got quite enthusiastic over reckoning and finally settled on $20,000.00. This was what other people had told me. Then I asked them about schools and education- how many boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 15 in Nang Seu. About 2000- How many are in schools- perhaps 600 or 700. Why not the rest- no money. Well cut down the idol procession in honor of Taisan one half and you may have good schools for all the boys and girls. They are not likely to do it next year. But shocking things are being done here in Foochow every day. Do you remember the big grave yard back of our Gek Siong Sang house? Well, they are putting the main road 48 feet wide right thru that grave yard. It will run thru our Gek Siong Sang property. There was a large temple on the road half way between the city and Ponasang. In the old days of sedan chairs, the coolies used to put the chairs down there for a smoke and a rest. When the road was widened to 24' in 1917 that temple stuck into the road about 4'. The shops on either side were cut back. But no power could disturb the temple. It is torn down now and about 15' taken off the whole side. And a large Banyan tree that nothing has been able to disturb has been cut down and entirely removed to make way for the new road. Some one told me today that in one city the modernists had sawed off the head of the principal idol and hung it up just as the Chinese hang up the heads of culprits with the sins he has committed. This idols sins were – the money he had caused poor people to spend in worshipping him, the fear he had caused people who were ignorant and superstitious, etc.

The city wall is obliterated between the south and west gates. I rode over the new road that is now built on the side of the wall the other day.

There is the ten o'clock bell of the college- Good Night. God bless you, - keep you, - and make you a blessing.

Lovingly
Father

Dear Jerry-

I bet you are having one glorious time on your trip. Do write a long letter telling all about your impressions of the South and your experiences. I am particularly interested in that part of the country just now because there are so many girls from Southern states and it is like music to hear them talk. I could sit and listen to it by the hour.

Was it thrilling to see old Eagles Mere again? I should like to make a visit there sometime just to see the place. Did Millicent think she would like it? You certainly are right about the comparison between S.B. and E.M. Eagles Mere doesn't hold a candle to this place in quality. The very first night we were here Mr. Speer got us together and made us feel like a big family. There is a boy here from China who knows several of our acquaintances and who went to North China American School. There is a boy from Oberlin whom we didn't know was coming, and a girl who is going to Oberlin next year. We were helping her fix her schedule this morning. Do you remember Grace Vinning (I guess she was more a friend of Dot's than of yours) in Oberlin? Well, it is her sister Peg and she is a very sweet girl, popular with everybody and socially capable. Of course Henry is still here and Milton. I told Henry who I was and he was all interested immediately, asked all about you two and said he hoped you could get up here. He has been darling to me since, given me little special favors and been nice in general. He is wonderful to everybody though isn't he? Mr. Speer is at the head of things and his daughter, Syble, is assistant head waitress while brother Speer is boat house manager. You know the Spellman girl too don't you? I recognize her from some of your pictures because her blond hair and features are so striking. I think that is all that you would know here now unless it would be Miss Huges in the office.

The service is certainly simple isn't it, especially compared to E.M. It is so much like that at Talcott that there was practically nothing for me to learn. We serve in dishes, family style now, so don't have to bother about stacking dinner plates. The kitchen is arranged so that the steam tables are right in front of the dining room doors and there is no need for going clear back where you used to. We change tables in the dining room every conference and since this Missionary one is a small conference about a third of the waitresses can be off every meal. I was off all day today but didn't know it beforehand so didn't plan anything. The last conference was the girls Y.W. They were here for a week and gave us plenty to do but left few tips. Each of us got $2.45 out of it- really not so bad for girls. When they went we followed the old time custom of singing them off at the dock. It was piles of fun only we didn't have many songs learned.

Sports have been rather submerged the last few days by the rain and cold. It was melting but when we first came and, as luck would have it, I couldn't go in the water. Now it is so cold that I don't want to. Consequently I have been in only a few times, but enough to get used to the lovely clear water. Tennis courts didn't have time to get dry between showers so we stand and look with longing eyes at the mud puddles while they slowly evaporate. We have done some hiking though. Gidge and I went up Sunrise one morning after breakfast and were never so thrilled over anything. Gidge loves the country which is all new to her. It is such fun to see her reaction to this new environment. All the kids like her a lot because she is so good looking and so sweet. I have heard many remarks about her beauty. We have also hiked to Uncas and S.B. Post Office. Today we got bold and bummed to Ticonderoga between lunch and dinner. Had dandy luck on rides and had about an hour to shop and look around. I didn't know it was so easy to get there or I would have gone before. You can't get a thing here in S.B.

Tonight we have our first emp party over in the gym. There is going to be several clever stunts I understand and we will get better acquainted. I'll tell you more about it afterward for we are going to it right away.

June 30- The party was pretty good last night. We had some cute stunts, one by each department of labor, and made attempts to play games afterwards but that wasn't a great success- because there were too many to handle easily. The bunch of girls here is lovely and most of them are dandy sports, but oh, the boys! I expected some real nice fellows from your experience but the disappointment is overwhelming. Most of them are dumb nuts with a big line, or little innocents that don't dare speak. I really shouldn't make such snap judgments for I don't know any of them well but you can tell a lot from the looks and actions. The spirit is very friendly though and we all have lots of fun around the kitchen.

You know, I have thought of a big idea! If you are considering giving me a birthday present this year I have a suggestion. All you kids could go together on it for it is a big and rather expensive thing. I am just crazy for a new tennis-racket for mine is no good and I am convinced that I can't learn to play any better with it. I would just be thrilled to bits if you could get a real good one and the sooner the better. Nothing like asking for a thing (?) I have tried a few other rackets and I think about 13 or 13 ½ lb. is all I could wield. If you think that is too much for me at once just say so and I can get it with my summer earnings.

Dot wrote me on her way out to Galesburg so I know that she is there but I have only had a card from Monnie. I suppose you are all as busy having a good time as I am, but it is such fun to get mail. It's awfully hard to find time and opportunity to write letters here. Yesterday our room was full of kids all day long and we just raised the roof. When there is nothing to do outdoors we gather inside and have regular talk fests. It is interesting to learn all about other colleges and find out how other girls live. There certainly are all kinds represented here from the flapper to the school marm. You can't tell anything about ages though. Some of the high school girls act the oldest.

Well, I had better get this off before the news gets stale. Do write me all about the place where you are and how you are getting along with your transient teaching.

Oodles of love
Kathleen

Dear Jerry:-

We were mighty glad to find your letter here when we landed. We had quite an eventful and varied trip down this time. Started from Saginaw at about 8:00 A.M. Wed. morning and made Hammond, Ind. where we stayed over night with a college friend of Harold's. Started on the next morning for Chicago where we attended Al Adams's wedding at 2 o'clock. He married a girl very much the type of Vivienne, and, I'm afraid, as Harold and Johnson say, is going to "learn a lot about married life" very soon.

We started at about 5 o'clock and spent that night in Joliet, and reached Galesburg in the evening on Friday.

Found all well but Mother Newberg. She has been having attacks of head- and eye aches, that make her nose, eyes and forehead swell up terribly. Some doctors say it is caused by her goiter and others, her teeth. I think it is from both, so Harold and I are going to try to fix her up this summer- have her teeth and goiter removed.

I've been thinking often of you- where you were and how much you must be enjoying yourself.

Yes, I got your letter from Aunt Mollie just before we left and I didn't have any idea where to send it, so tho't I'd wait till I heard from you. Gould's letter is certainly "straight goods" isn't it? I wonder how she answered it, and how Gould took her answer. Did Gould say anything about her when you saw him?

So you've started to invest? I do hope your stick goes the right way.

Where did you stay at Hempstead? Did you see the family that Gould is with?

Harold fixed your insurance up at the same time that he did ours. He paid $10 down on the amount, and they said it would be O.K. to pay the rest later, so we'll send the rest to him out of the check you sent and send you the receipt and the change. The total was around $27.

I'm so sorry that Gould and Virginia can't be with us at S.B. I think both of them would enjoy it largely, and wouldn't it be a grand rest and change for Gould!!

Just how much and what is Patsy coaching?

How and when are you going to find your home for next year? Is Gould going to hunt this summer, or are you going there early, and hunt with him? And did you decide whether you are going to get a house, or an apartment?

Kathleen's first letter from S.B. didn't sound quite as enthusiastic as the first letter I wrote from that dear old place. The little rascal had a date the first night and decided the boys on the whole were "Under average". That's sort of snap judgment, I'd say. I dare say that they won't have quite as good a time there as we did, but I do hope to get more enthusiastic letters as the summer goes on.

We may take a camping trip to the Dells of Wis. over the 4th of July with the Johnsons.

Had a card from Monnie while she was at Bowling Green.

I also had a little stork announcement from Hazel Geeson Peterson.

Much love and write often,

Dot.

Monday-
[Summer 1929]

Dear Jerry:-

Yesterday, I wrote long letters to Monnie and Kathleen and was so tired that I waited yours till today. I'm glad I did not, because your letter came just this morning.

Did you get the letter from Aunt Mollie that I sent you?

We were sorry to hear the fate of poor Lizzie, for just last night we had talked of taking it from you and either using it ourselves, or trying to sell it up in Saginaw for you. Well, I guess the big question is settled now. Yes, it's a fortunate thing that Don came out as well as he did. He seemed rather chagrined about the whole affair, didn't he? Harold is very much provoked that he didn't pay $12 more, when he was settling insurance on you car, and cover this accident. Did I tell you that our insurance took care of the fender on our car? They didn't put a new fender on, but hammered ours out and welded the hole and finished it up so that you could hardly see any fault in it. We will send your policy right to Youngstown tonight.

Before coming here I wondered what on earth I should do around here to busy myself. I brought plenty of sewing and mending along and looked forward to doing a lot of reading, but have touched neither. When we arrived, Mother Newberg was sick- had had some very severe headaches, and her eyes, forehead and nose were badly swollen. We took her right to an eye, ear, and throat doctor and he sent us to the dentist. He found three old roots in her upper jaw. Her upper teeth have been out for 20 yrs. He took them right out, cutting her jaw open. That left her real sick and the duties of this household fell upon me- cooking, doing dishes and cleaning for this family of eight. It keeps me humping. This afternoon Harold and I did a fine-tub washing and I have all that ironing to do tomorrow.

I never saw so much sickness and so many ailments as there are around this neighborhood. They need a good deal of Christian Science around here. It wouldn't be so bad if we didn't hear so much about it, but it is always the main topic of conversation and is very boring.

I am real anxious to get up to Silver Bay aren't you? I suppose you are having such a good time that you don't care to have it end. When are you planning to go up? Monnie will be at camp the first week in Aug., so I suppose we shall drive through and pick her up about the beginning of the second week. How are you going up? - Meet us at Lorain, or go straight up by train? We'd love to meet you somewhere and take you up. We are getting together some camping things. Have our little camp stove already, and are going to get either a double, or two single cots and some blankets, and some utensil. I have written to Punk asking whether or not she's done anything about our camp site. What would you think of trying to get on the little island right across from the bay.

Over the 4th of July we took a trip up to the Dells of the Wisconsin River. We drove the first day, up to Stoughton, Wis. where the Johnsons live. Stayed over night with them. We took Ralph and his girl with us. Six of us started on from Stoughton the next day and took the boat trip through the Dells. They are really very beautiful. They are just peculiar formations of rocks along the river bank that the river has worn through centuries and centuries. We got off the boat three times and walked around - once through a perfectly wonderful canyon. That night we camped in tents. The next night we camped in the lovely Tourist camp at Madison, Wis., going through the Univ. the next day. That night we saw "The Trial of Mary Dugan" in the talkies. It was very good.

We've been golfing once, but that's about all the excitement we've had.

Write me often for I get lonesome for letters from you girls.

Much love- Dot.

[Summer 1929]

Dear Jerry:-

Your letter was wonderfully interesting. I'm so glad you're having such a grand time. You must be getting just about all "rested up". I'm looking forward to camping at S.B. to do my resting this summer.

Your plans have changed a bit haven't they? We have been planning all along to leave here about the third, fourth, or fifth of Aug., and pick Monnie up and camp the second and third weeks in Aug. Harold and I thought we wouldn't visit around the East this year. I'm afraid it will take too much time and too much money. We've spent about all the money we saved for our vacation already, so I guess we'll got to S.B. and stay put till we start for Saginaw. We want to get back to Saginaw early, too, to have all the settling done before school starts.

Monnie is at camp the first week in Aug. - I imagine from the 1st to the 7th she will probably want a day or two to get ready to go East, then it will take us two or three days to get to S.B. At that rate we ought to be there by Aug. 12 or 13. Would you mind if we got there before you do, since you're having company? I think it's fine that Rose Mary and Mary Ann can be with us there. "The more the merrier." I think they ought to like it, altho it may be a bit tame for them after the gorgeousness of the South.

We are pretty well equipped for camping now. We bought a double cot which is very comfy- a spring with iron frame. I made a partition of heavy khaki cloth to hang through the middle of the tent to divide it into two sleeping rooms. We bought a little two-burner camp stove and the neatest and most complete and compact set of camp utensils- a big aluminum pail in which are packed two sauce pans of different sizes, a coffee pot, six each of cups, plates, knives, forks, and spoons (soup and tea). The cover to the outside pail is the frying pan. There are two detachable handles to use on frying pan, coffee pot, and sauce pans.

We still want a few things more to complete our camping outfit- a flashlight, another blanket, a gallon thermo jug and some pillows.

Yes, I do hope K. can arrange to get the island for us. I think that would be just the place for us. It's a shame that she isn't having a better time up there. Monnie wrote that she received a very disillusioned letter from K. about S.B. Poor thing, she should have been up there with us. The place and the personnel must have changed a whole lot.

Well, I turned from housekeeper to painter. Mother finally got well enough so that Harold and I could start painting the house. It hadn't been painted for seven years and sadly needed a new covering. We are painting it light grey with darker grey trimming and green blinds. We got all of the first coat on in 2 ½ days. The second coat and trimming is going to go much slower. We started on the second coat today and finished up one side. My arm got powerfully tired after the first day and a half, but it's acclimated now.

It got so hot about a week ago that we could hardly breath in our little bedroom, so we pitched our tent out in the yard and have been sleeping on that new cot ever since. It's lovely and cool out there in the evenings.

We've played gold only twice this summer, but have been swimming several times after painting in the P.M. We swim in the clay pit near the brick yards about two miles from here.

Today we received an announcement of Theodore's wedding. At last he decided to "hook up" and I hear Harold is engaged. Who to?

Aunt Myra wrote that they are going to be at Diamond Point, Lake George, with Uncle Rob for a week or so. I believe they are to be there for the second week in Aug.

I haven't put up a can of anything this summer. Last summer I got to Saginaw well stocked with blackberries, blue-berries, applesauce, peaches, etc. and, believe me, they came in mighty handy during the year. This year we'll have to live out of store cans, I guess.

Much love- and do write again soon.

Dot.

Thanks for forwarding the letters. I had one from Father, too.

Foochow, China
July 10th 1929

Dear Kathleen,-

Your last letter shortly before you left Oberlin was a most interesting one. I'm very glad you wrote about your relations with George Linco. It will help you to write it to us and it will help us to know you better. I judge you have treated him wisely and kindly. If anything you have been over indulgent. Any man who will threaten to kill himself because any woman refuses to marry him is not fit to be a husband of any woman much less a father. You will likely continue to return his letters unopened and refuse to see him if he should ever call or try to call on you again. Such men are to be pitied and dealt with firmly. Argument or the reiterating of your inability to return his affection is only to add fire to his flame. I hope you will not be further bothered with him.

The other interesting feature of your letter was your application for the Shansi work. It would be very pleasing indeed to have you in China next year. Of course we should expect you to spend the summer with us in our Kuliang Cottage. But we'll count the chickens after they hatch. I did not think much of the Skinner boy when I saw him in Oberlin – was it last year. He may be smart but he lacks common sense, which to my mind ranks higher than what is commonly known as smartness. I do not remember that I ever saw Hugh Elmer. So I have nothing to say there. Mother did not say much about him.

I am writing this in Foochow. Mother started from home a week ago today at 12:30 p.m. almost to the consternation of Dr. Dyer and Miss Atwood- the only foreigners left here. I started at 4 pm. Mother walked all the way arriving at 6 pm. I walked all the way and got there at 7:15. The day was a very hot one in fact I never felt the heat so much any summer before as I have this summer and last week was well up in temperature.

July 24 – I have just found this sheet and am sending it on. We have been on the mountain almost two weeks. I came up a little seedy as the British say- with a bad cough. I can realize it is getting better every day.

Yesterday mail bro't a card from Geraldine and one from Aunt Etta. They were on their way east in Uncle Elberts car.

With love
Father

Yesterday had a good letter from Virginia.

Dear Jerabee-

You must be having one grand and glorious time and I envy you all your wonderful trips etc. Your letter sounds so enthusiastic about the South, I would just love to go down there. You didn't say anything about this itinerant education that you were going to take up. Have you decided not to try it?

I am so glad Rose Mary is coming up with you. I want to know her better and she will be such lots of fun up here. If you are not starting until the middle of August you won't have much time here though. We leave the third of Sept and that would only leave about two weeks if you don't stay longer than we do. Does Monnie's vacation begin the first of August and are you going to pick her up as you come thru Ohio? Nobody seems to know much about the plans for you all sound so uncertain in your letters. I do hope you finally all land here anyway. As for camp sites, I have picked out a nice one just above Evergreen cottage, if you remember where that is. It is near a grove of pines and, I think, will have about as few bugs as you can expect up here. I have talked to some cottagers who have a camp up in the woods back of our house and they are not badly disturbed by bugs. Of course I will have to see the association about your camping there first, for it is on S.B. property, but if they don't permit it I can find another place.

Things are a little livelier around the grounds now than they were during the other conferences. The Y.M. conference is here now and it seemed so funny to serve men at first. Some of them are very nice and others are terrible pills.

Did you ever go horseback riding up here? I would go every week if I could afford it but as it is I have been twice. The last time it was with a party of ten on a moonlight ride over Hague mountain, such fun! We had a three hour ride for two-fifty getting back at eleven. Of course we couldn't run the horses much in the dark for they stumbled occasionally but we had a wonderful time all the same. When we got home three of us girls decided to throw rules and convention to the winds and keep the moon company all night. We crept in and got our blankets and crept out again going down to Skin Point right by the water. Really I have not felt such exuberant freedom in ages. You can imagine how thrilling it was in the quiet night with the moon shining full upon everything and the water softly lapping the rocks. It was so perfectly intoxicating that I was afraid I couldn't sleep at all but the cool breeze and light spray on my face soon lulled me off. We woke up at five and watched the sun outshine the moon over Spruce mountain and then stole into our houses before any suspecting eyes should be cast upon us. I have heard nothing from it but one of the girls was recognized and gently advised to let that be the last time. I am crazy to sleep on Sunrise Mt. and see the sun rise from there some day.

We are running off an emp. tennis tournament both girls, boys, and mixed. I have played my first round in singles successfully and think I have a good chance in the second round, but don't know after that. I have been asked for the mixed doubles but that hasn't started yet. We play basket-ball and baseball occasionally but there are scarcely enough to two teams. The rest of the time we swim and sleep. I am having more fun learning diving and life saving with all these physical directors around. I can almost do a jackknife and swan half decently now but not off the high board.

Did Monnie send you some Chinese confections? I enjoyed them so much and the girls like them too. Wasn't it fun to crack the dear old watermelon seeds again?

You know- Hugh may come up for a day sometime in August. We have been corresponding all summer at the rate of once a week (about) and he is awfully nice to write to. He doesn't write wonderful letters at all, but they are cute just like him. He seems quite smitten but you can't always tell thru letters.

Last night we went out with a couple of fellows from Saginaw. One of them said he knew Harold a little and we had the best talk.

Do write me your plans when you know of them
I'm off for a swim and more tan.
Lovin' you always.
Kathleen.

Dear Jerry and Kathleen:

Here's hoping you are both together somewhere in the East.

The "good old Summer-time" is all over and we start on the grind tomorrow. Jerry, I sorta envy you being your own boss. I do love my work after I get into it, but, oh how I do hate to leave all you sisters and get started!!

Monnie left for Lorain this morning, and oh how lovely this day has been. One meeting is all we had today.

I wonder if you have heard of our wonderful thrilling trip home. We made Canandaigua the first night, and the edge of Cleveland, the second. The next morning we went in to find Gould, and really, before that night came we began to think he wasn't there at all. Instead of going right out to the field in the morning, we went into the exhibit at the Public Auditorium which was very well worth the while. We saw the Curtis St. Louis Robin which made the endurance flight. Nobody there knew anything about Gould. At noon we went out to the field and the events had just started, so we decided to get tickets and go in where we would be more likely to find him. We got so intensely interested in everything that was going on that we just sat right through it all. There were two or three airplane races, manoevers by the army planes and by the navy planes (perfectly wonderful!) stunts and stunts and stunts that just made your hair stand up on end, beautiful formation flying, and just lots of thrilling things that I've never seen the likes of before. We saw Lindy fly down doing stunts in formation with two other fliers. We saw Amelia Earheardt christen a huge blimp and then a lot of noted lady fliers climb in and take a ride in it. One of those perfectly immense Ford tri-motored, all-metal planes went up and did beautiful loops and flew upside down 'n everything. The announcer said that that was the first time in history that one of those mammoth things had stunted. Last and by no means least, we saw about 10 or 15 parachute jumpers. It was a contest to see who could land inside, or nearest to a big circle drawn on the field. We later learned that Gould flew the plane for one of the jumpers that landed pretty near. I just could hardly look when they jumped from the planes. I was so afraid their chutes wouldn't open but they all did. That was "awfully" thrilling.

After the events were all over for that day we drove around to the hangars to find Gould, just to discover that he had just left the field for a dinner engagement, but would be out at about 9 the next morning. We were planning to leave for Saginaw, but changed our minds and drove to Berea and camped.

We arrived at the field at nine sharp, but had to wait till 9:30 before our millionaire brother rolled up in the back seat of a taxi with his nose in the morning paper. Well, maybe he wasn't flabbergasted to see us-all! He told us that he was to race in a cabin plane race that afternoon, so that decided us right away to stay. Then Whoopee!! – he took us all three up for a ride in that very cabin plane. Oh, what fun it was. Just as comfy as a chair car on a train. We went around the race track four or five times at about 500 ft., and 150 miles per. The coming down was perfect- lots of fun- and a wonderful landing. Now, Jerry, it's your turn. Monnie's ahead of us all with two rides.

Gould got us grandstand seats for that afternoon, so we saw everything much better, but, alas, didn't they have to go and call off Gould's race till the next day- the very event that we were there to see. Gould will probably tell you all about it. The events for that day were much the same as the day before, except that we saw a lady's race.

You probably saw in the papers the ado about Lindy's being proved. We saw him leave his two stunt companions and chase the passenger plane and order him down. It did look rather funny- rather "all-powerful", because of popularity.

Gould rode to Berea with us and ate, then took the bus to Cleveland. We started out for Saginaw and drove all night and slept all day Sunday.

Jerry, do you remember Myron's friend Lady Heath? The night we camped on the edge of Cleveland we heard of her smash-up. You probably saw it in the papers. She was going around the smoke stack of a factory and her wing hit a guy wire and she and her mechanic went right through the roof. The factory was just a little way from our camp. The last I saw was that they were fearful as to her recovery. I wonder if Myron heard about it.

The first day we were there, we sat and watched a man who was trying to break the solo endurance record, fly slowly around and around the field as the events went on. When we left the field at night we still heard the plane purring away up in the dark sky, and they said he had four or five hours to go to break the record. As soon as we reached the field the next morning the news boys were shouting "Extra! All about the endurance flier's crash." The poor man had broken the record by about two or three hours and then people thought he fell asleep. He came down right near the field. We read in the paper that his wife is to get the money for his breaking the record.

We're all so glad we stopped in Cleveland to see Gould, and if any of you see him you tell him that all the thrills we got there are going to last a long, long time. About the first thing Harold says upon greeting old friends now is, "Well, I had my first aeroplane ride this summer."

Kathie, I thought of you so much the day you left S.B. [Silver Bay on Lake George]. I wondered whether you had the same sad feelings I used to every time I left there- this last time included. I'm so glad you found your knife and the fork. My, I do wish that by some mysterious act of fate, Jerry would get her camera back. Jerry, do you want another camera for your birthday present now?

I should think you would be just about ready to settle down and take a rest from your roving now. Jerry, I bet you did most of the driving. Gould said that he was to have two weeks vacation soon after he got back, then he may come out to Detroit for some air meet in Oct. so you may not get settled down for a while yet. We may get to see Gould again in Detroit, or here.

Monnie helped a lot in getting settled and getting our clothes washed up, etc. She went with us to our first two meetings, where we heard a Psych. Prof. from Columbia talk- Dr. Kulp- very interesting.

It is so hot and dry around here. Harold just read in the paper that Saginaw hasn't had rain since Aug. 13. That is the day we left for S.B. My how it poured that day- all the way down to Lorain.

What was your total for the summer Kathie- salary and tips? How did the pajama parade come out? You should have read Father's letter. It is very interesting. I'll send it on just as soon as I answer it.

Tomorrow classes start, so it's up early in the morning again.

If you are at the farm give our love to all there, and tell them we are mighty sorry not to get down there to see them this summer. Of course, we came within an ace of seeing Aunt Phebe, but "a miss is as good as a mile," and we said "Hello" and "Goodbye" to Aunt Mary, but we did miss a real visit with all three of them on the farm.

Love to all Dot and Harold Nang Seu, Foochow, China.

September, 29th. 1929.

Dear Gould, Virginia, Geraldine:-

Nang Seu is a village about fifteen miles southwest of Foochow. I'm writing this in the chapel here and I'm going to try to bring you here with me for this Sunday. It is a sample of what I have most of the Sundays.

Yesterday I was up a little before 5:00 a.m. At 6:25 I was in a ricksha with my baggage, - a thin cotton mattress that weighs 7 lbs., a mosquito curtain, a thin blanket, and extra suit of palm beach cloth, an extra B.V.D., and shirt, - four corn meal muffins, four pieces of sponge cake, half a dozen Cheefoo apples, and a few dates. At 7:00 a.m. I reached the Min river where I had planned to take a river launch to a point near this place. I had taken special pains to find out when the launch would start and was a bit ahead of time only to see it moving down the river. That meant to find a man to carry my forty lbs. of baggage and walk five miles, - to make this five miles the launch must go about twenty miles. A man was found to carry the load for about 35 cents U.S. money. This stage of the journey was finished at 9:00 a.m. The next stage is by small boat, with six or seven other passengers. At 11:30 a.m. we reach Nang Seu. (South Hill). The preacher here is 70 years old, half blind. His wife is 60. Both are unwell. They are poor but they have done faithful work in God's Kingdom for over thirty years.

I climb a very unsteady wooden ladder into the loft over the chapel. Furniture, - a rattan bed bottom on two wooden horses (stools), - a rough table, two leather seated folding chairs. The rafters are jet black with years of soot and dust. The walls of the room are newly whitewashed. To save the whitewash I try to give it a wide berth. In one wall are two board windows with hinges at the top, that may be propped open with sticks. Lunch is served in the dining room. This is sort of a public room for the occupants of the whole big house, which is home for four or five families, or that branches of one family. The church and parsonage are also in this house and they have a right to this public room. English words will fail to give you a true picture of this. The door sill is 18 inches high to keep the children in and the pigs out. Not a pane of glass. Open the doors for light and air. One side of this is the public parlor-parsonage-bedroom and living room. On the other side is the chapel with the prophet's chamber over it.

I come down for lunch. Mrs. Ding is of the old type and does not eat with men. She serves. The food;- a bowl of rice, in the idle of the table are bowls containing bean curd, rice vermicelli, jelly fish (raw), bamboo sprouts cooked with a few pieces of pork. Utensils; a pair of chopsticks and a Chinese spoon. It's a good lunch and I rise satisfied. The floor of this room is of mother earth with the dirt of a few hundred years added behind me as I eat lies an old pig on a bed of pine needles. She is unwittingly waiting to be converted into pork Sunday morning. Just to my right are tube and racks used in slaughtering pigs. Back of these stands an old unused loom. Many women still use the hand loom for weaving. Back of these on an old table are four ancestral tablets. I am of the opinion that many of you would have indulged in some things as you sat down to this lunch in this room, at the table with no cloth and on a small four legged stool with no back.

At 8:00 p.m. we are in bed. The walk yesterday was a good sleep medicine. In addition I went about the town in the afternoon with Mr. Ding to call on some of the Christians. As we passed a cool inviting temple front a dozen men of all ages sitting there invited us to "sit". We sat. One of the young men said, - "Yes I have heard this Jesus' mother was Mary". As we rose to go I took from my pocket a Gospel of Mark and said to him, - Here is the story of Jesus' life. You must buy it and read it- only two coppers. "All right, I will", feeling in his pocket for the money. "No money. Here friend" to a man near him "Lend me two cents." Here it is" and the sale was consummated. Then we call on widow Ding and her eighteen year old son. One room is bedroom, kitchen dining room store room and parlor. Mrs. Ding is preparing supper, she keeps right on while she boils water for our tea and talks with us. The son sleeps in the loft over this all-purpose room. Next we stop at Mr. Tiang's medicine shop. He is a fine old gentleman- not very talkative at any time and today he has a cold that makes it difficult for him to talk at all. We make sort of a Quaker call. But he and preacher Ding understand each other, and I have called on him and seen much of him. One realizes that spoken words are not essential to a successful call of this kind.

We are back at the chapel at dark. Supper is ready. The very same that I had for dinner, - except what I had eaten, - in the same dishes warmed over.

Sunday morning I shaved to the rhythm of the squeals of the pig that was my dining room companion on Saturday at lunch and supper, as she was becoming pork. This process was carried on right in front of the dining room, and the sides of the house were ventilated in such a manner as to allow me to see the process. When I came down to breakfast the last man was just finishing up after the slaughtering.

About 8:30 a.m. the Christians begin to come in. They come on foot from as far as four miles off in the country. Here are two old women 70 years of age, not yet church members. Here comes a blind boy- walked four miles, not yet a church member. Here is a fine man of forty who has carried his little girl two years old and asks to have her baptized. Her name is Pek Nguk. Let's hear you pronounce it. Here is old lady living with her children and grand children. Her grandson asks to unite with the church today. 12 years old. I wish you could hear and see him as he talks with me. It is no easier for a Chinese for a Chinese boy of 12 to talk with a man of 60 about his religious experience than it is for an American boy to do the same. You must add the further fact that that man is a foreigner and a comparative stranger. Tears will come to the little fellows eyes, but his conversation proves that he knows the Jesus way of life. His grandmother tells me that she wants him to become a minister. He says he would like to be one.

How the people listen to the foreigner as he tries to tell them what kind of man Jesus was. Fifteen partook of communion.

I climb the ladder again and the next I know preacher Ding is sticking his head up thru the hole where the ladder reaches the prophet's chamber, and announces, - "Lunch is ready." Only he says, - "Dau Bieng lau." (pronounce it) Sleep must have taken a good grip on me. Menu rice with the leavings from breakfast, with a dish of sweet potatoes added.

This afternoon I feel that duty calls for a rest, then a bit of reading and then this letter. About 4 p.m., while I write a Christian calls and says, - "You, Mr. and Mrs. Ding are not very well. Let Mr. Beard come over and take supper with us." Agreed. But Mrs. Ding adds, - "You must come over and lead him to your house. He doesn't know they way. And just at dusk, a boy of twelve who is an apprentice in the Christian's shop, comes carrying the baby of the family in his arms, with him are the host's ten year old son and a still younger brother and sister. They escort me to their home, for supper. My! I wish you could have been there. Talk about cordiality, hospitality. You folks in city homes in America are still in the first year of the kindergarten. "Come right in and sit down at the table. Right here on this end of this four foot horse i.e. stool. We have nothing to eat. - only a few scraps of very coarse food. We could not find any beef or pork, - only a little poor fish. But there are two ducks eggs that we have poached for you and we'll try to find some rice before long. Have some wine. Nothing to eat." In the center of the table were,- a big bowl of fried fish, a bowl of bean curd, a bowl of pork, a bowl of small shell fish over which had been poured boiling water, a bowl of alt fish, and a bowl of soup with a few greens in it. Then in came a bowl of rice for each of us. Each bowl was nearly six inches in diameter. Grace was said the then the host and his brother, also a Christian, with three workmen and three children fell to, - so did I. No one will ever see any of that rice again. Neither will they ever see those two ducks eggs, nor quite a portion of the general dishes in the center of the table. , - hygiene? Forget it. Monday before light I am up bed folded and tied in a bundle with an oiled cloth about it and other things in a suit case. It is raining- the first rain in six weeks. Mrs. Ding has all the rice and other things that were left warmed up and I eat breakfast and start for the ferry boat. I have only one pair of shoes, white canvass, nearly new. I hate to walk in them five miles in the rain. I brought along a pair of grass slippers as bedroom slippers. They have a piece of braided grass over the toes, otherwise only the bottom or soles. You keep them on by cinching your toes to them. They cost 2 cents a pair. I tie them on with some string and the shoes are saved for I walk the five miles in them= grass slippers.

On the ferry boat which takes me about five miles in about an hour and a half I hope to find a company of from fifteen to twenty people going my way and I have never failed to have a good time with them in talking about the realities of life and bringing the talk right down to their everyday life. But today the rain has kept people at home. One woman and I are the only passengers. It is not the right thing for me to talk much. So here you have as best I can give it a little travelogue that comes to me about once a week and its pleasant work. I have tried to give it to you, - travel-social- eats-sleeps-preaching in chapel and on the street-selling books all jumbled up as they come to me in the days work. That is the way I have to take them. The realities of these three days work of each week, tho are the personal contacts I make with others all along the way when Jesus is one of the company of, - it may be two or three or a dozen or fifty. They may be business men or farmers or coolies and there may be women in the company. It is worth while.

October 15th. 1929.

You will see by the heading that I wrote this two weeks ago. And it was in the Nang Seu chapel. I read it to Mother and she thought it would be of interest to more than one so I have copied and am sending it to all the children and the brothers and sisters.

A week ago last Saturday and Sunday I was at Deng Chio across the river from where I wrote this and last Sunday I was at Chong Ha about five miles from Nang Seu. Since we came down from Kuliang I have been away from home in the country on evangelistic work fifteen days. We came down on September 13th. When I am at home there is teaching that fills completely two afternoons, and more committee meetings than you can shake a stick at. This week I am auditing the books of the University. That means get up at daylight to catch a launch and go down the river three miles and stay to lunch there. I get back home about dark. This I hope to finish this week.

Last Thursday Mother and I took a whole day off and skipped the country. We went as protectors of a party of younger people. Started at 6:30 a.m., went to the river took a boat three miles down to the foot of Kushan mountain, walked up to the Kushan monastery, stopped for an hour for lunch, went on to our cottage at Kuliang. There we built a fire and took lunch. There were nine in the party. Three were Chinese girls, one a Chinese man. Two other men foreigners and Mother and Betty Cushman. We left our cottage at a little past four in the afternoon. It was plump dark when we got to the city and found rickshas for the last mile of the trip. Mother and I walked every bit of the way. It was a good sixteen miles. Both were up and at work the next morning feeling all the better for the trip. It was a beautiful day not too hot nor was it cold.

It is getting time that one thinks of Christmas. Mother and I have agreed to tell our people in the good old U.S. not to send too many presents and not to put too high a value on them. The Chinese government is out for all the duty it can possibly get. We have to pay two duties. And practically nothing except books are on the free list.

Well this is getting to be too long so here is love to all of you with best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving. I hope to get another letter to say Merry Christmas.

Love to All,
Father

Oct., 6, 1929.

Dear Jerry:-

I'm sorry it's been so long that I haven't written you. Your two long letters came in the same mail.

My, yes, that full moon in Sept. reminded me every night of the dear old camp site on Lake George [Silver Bay]. Kathleen wrote that it was hard for her to settle down after the summer. It was for me too- mighty hard.

We were waiting to hear whether you and Gould were flying out for the Ford tour. We watched the Detroit papers and failed to see Gould's name in them, so gave up hopes of seeing you. We read that three Fairchild planes entered. Poor Gould, he must have been terribly disappointed not to be able to go.

We got the package of pink silk. My, how glad I was to see that it wasn't lost. The other package of Chinese things also came. Thanks for sending them.

I think your idea of a Chinese dinner cloth for Pearl is fine [Probably Pearle Leonard Chamberlain]. I think if we sent to Mother right away and tell her what we want it for and to rush it, she'll do it quickly. In that case, you'd tell Pearl what we are doing, wouldn't you? I really think she'd appreciate that as much as anything we could get her. If you don't do that, let me know what you get and how much my share is.

Your house looks darling! It is very much like ours, isn't it? I hope you have just the very best time ever in it this year. I bet Gould will enjoy it a lot. I wish we could go out there and see you two sometime. Maybe at Christmas, if Gould can't get off to come here, we can drive out there. Poor Monnie doesn't think she can get much of a Christmas vacation this year.

Do remember me to Edith and any others of our friends that you see out there.

So Gould finally did get back to Aunt Molly's. I bet she was glad. She did seem so hurt to think that Gould's confidence in her was shaken.

You said that you saw Mary Carpenter. Didn't Eleanor say that she wasn't a bit well? What did you think when you saw her?

How did it happen that Gould came back from his vacation early? Was it to help you both get located and settled before he went back to work?

Yes indeed, Harold and I have intended all along to give Theodore and Ruth a gift. I think she also would like something Chinese. The rug idea is fine. You go ahead and get it and include our names on the card. That is, if it's O.K. with M. and K. Let us know and we'll send money for that, too.

Poor Ruthie! Has she had her operation yet? Let me know when and where she is to have it. I'd like to send her something.

My Parent-Teacher's gym class starts tomorrow night. From the interest shown and the calls for information about it, I'm going to have quite a crowd this year. I have asked for more money this year- at least, a definite amount. Last year each person that came gave a dime. Toward the end of the year people began to drop off and sometimes I'd get only a dollar or $1.50 for two hours, which wasn't hardly worth my time.

We were hired for the Ames work again this year, at a meeting held last week. This year we are each going to try to get an assistant to divide the work with us. We also tried to get out of teaching our S.S. classes, but it just seems absolutely impossible to get out. It makes me so provoked the way they shove work off onto those who will work. Of course, we could flatly refuse, but in a church like that where there are so very few capable persons, and leaders one just hates to do it.

We wrote the girls inviting them up to the Ohio-State game and "The Miracle" which will be playing in Detroit then. That is their Migration Day and they had planned a big spree, and since "Jerry's Lizzy" is no more, they didn't think they could afford it, so I guess we won't see them until Christmas, unless we drive to Oberlin sometime.

Have you had your air-plane ride yet? I haven't gotten over the thrill yet.

Much love to all there and to Gould-

Dot.

Monnie sent me a clipping from the Lorain paper saying that Betty Garland has been appointed Dean of Women at Wilmington College, Wilmington, O. Can you imagine our Betty a Dean!

[This letter dated Oct. 17, 1929 was written from Foochow, China by Willard to Kathleen. He heard she had gotten a tan over the summer. He gives her a little advice on bothersome boys. Letter in Jill Jackson's collection.]

Oct. 17 -1929

Dear Kathleen,-

This is just a hug and a kiss for you alone- the general letter is too public for such personalities. Others have written of the brown color you got [at] Silver Bay and the good time you had there this summer. It was very pleasant that you could see so many of your own people at Silver Bay and then go to the homes in Putnam and Shelton. I wonder if airplanes will bring you over here or us over there for a week end before we come home. Men are fast attaining some of the attributes that used to be attributed only to God.

Will you let Aunt Etta and Uncle Willis read this and then send it on to Marjorie.

I think of you frequently in your relation to the young men of whom you have written. I hope the one that bothers you has become tired of receiving his own returned letters, and that your own common sense rectified by your continual association with God and Jesus will guide you in all choices and actions.

Very lovingly Father

[This letter dated Oct. 27, 1929 was written from Saginaw, Mich. by Dorothy to Jerry and Gould. They have been trying out different radios to see which they would like to buy. She is teaching a ladies gym class in addition to regular school. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

Dear Jerry and Gould:

I can't find any of your letters that I haven't answered, so I don't know whether you owe me, or I owe you.

I picture you two as nicely settled in your little bungalow, and I bet you're having a grand time. Have you had time to do much entertaining?

I'm sorry that you weren't fortunate enough to get in on the tour, Gould. We kept track of it all the way around, in the papers. Has Jerry been up in the air, yet?

I haven't had any word from Monnie or Kathleen for almost two weeks. I do wish they could have come up to the game. We had such a good time. Sat. morning we drove to Ann Arbor for the Ohio State game. It was a wonderful football game. We sat with no cots all during the game. It was an interesting game even tho Mich. didn't win. From Ann Arbor we drove right over to Detroit, got a room at Webster Hall (where we stayed at the time of the Board meetings) and went right to see "The Miracle". It was beautiful! Sunday we started home at about 11:00 A.M.

Jerry, do you have the Chinese dolls, or does Monnie. I would very much like them for two occasions. One is on Nov. 8, - sort of an International dinner, where they are representing as many nations as possible, hearing a little about each. They want curios. The other is an exhibition at the library of dolls of various nations. Irene Gelinas asked me for that. They are to be on exhibit the week of Nov. 17. If you have them could you send them right away, please.

We have been trying out radios lately. Have had lots of fun with a couple of them already- the Edison and now we have the Victor. The Edison is a wonderful machine but rather steep in price. My, what perfectly enchanting concerts and programs we get on Sundays, - all day long. Six thirty to seven is still my favorite hour, with the Whittall Anglo Persians. Does your complete establishment include a radio?

Have you started work on your cello, and are you selling Chinese things and Churchill Weaver things yet? You two must hurry up and write us all about yourselves.

Last Sunday evening for the church service I delivered an "address: (?) on China. At least, so it was called on the church calendar. Mr. Watters, said today, that the Meth. church in Bay City was going to ask me to talk there soon. Fortunately, Father's last two letters were rich with news that I put to good use.

My ladies gym class has started on Mon. nights. My volley-ball (school) tournament has started. My girls have won the first two games. Tues. night our teacher's sextet organizes again. I'm having them here this time. We've been asked to sing at the Bay City broadcasting station again this year.

Have you done anything about those wedding gifts? We must be thinking of gifts for Father and Mother soon.

Have you people been thinking about what you are going to do for Christmas? We must get together somewhere. I do hope Monnie can get a vacation- and Gould, too.

I saw Ruthie Brooks at the Teacher's Convention at Flint. She wanted to be remembered to you girls. I am going to have her up here some week-end soon. Much love to both of you- Dot.

I received the cake decorator and am so anxious to try it. It looks like a lot of fun. I've got to experiment before I decorate Harold Charles' birthday cake. Thank you so much for it.
Dot.

P.S. (Private for Jerry)

Can you give us an idea of what Gould would like for his birthday?

[This letter dated Nov. 3, 1929 was written from Oberlin, Ohio by Kathleen to Jerry and Gould. Kathleen jokingly scolds them for not giving out their new address yet. A Dr. Ames has been at the college that week giving lectures on sex and talked to the men and women separately. It is the talk of the campus. She thanks Jerry and Gould for the new tennis racket. Aunt Grace has had a stroke. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

Kathleen C. Beard

Talcott Hall
Nov 3- 1929

Dear Jerry and Gould-

You kids certainly don't deserve my mail if you don't let a body know your address. But I found it out, all the same, and would like to give you a good bawling out. But I haven't the time, space, or heart to do it so thank your lucky stars that you are spared.

How is the little house and the people in it? The diagram that you sent of it perfectly splurious[?], but I am crazy to see it in reality. Are you having just heaps of guests and parties or haven't you got that far yet? Have you found a cello teacher yet, Jerry, to take lessons of? I wish you could be here Tuesday night to hear Gregor Piatigorsky play.

We went to the ringration[?] day game two weeks ago, Gidge and I had never been up for it and this was our last chance. Monnie and Millicent make it a party of four so we did the day up brown. Shopping kept us busy in the morning and for lunch we went to the loveliest place. It was called "Charm House" and was decorated in Old English style throughout- even to the waitress uniforms. The day was real warm so the game seemed more like a spring track meet, but we won and nothing else mattered. The Bamboo Gardens kept us entertained through the dinner hour and then we saw "Blossom Time" which was very sweet but nothing tremendous. Monnie stayed with us over Sunday and we had a good visit. She seems as disoriented as last year with regard to Ronnie and is definitely planning to leave in June. Ronnie is resigning too, for that matter- to get married.

The whole college has been in a big uproar this week about the lectures given by Dr. Ames. I don't know who got him here or anything about him, but he talked to the men of the college about sex and was asked to speak also to the girls. There was some objection by a few members of the faculty to his giving public addresses (probably the dean of women) but he was permitted to speak twice and to answer any questions which were handed in. I attended his second lecture, which indeed left almost nothing unsaid. He spoke very frankly and very scientifically, yet not professionally, if you get what I mean. More interesting to me than the lecture itself is the reaction of the students to it. Some were highly pleased and thought it a very good thing, while others didn't like his open way of presentation. Mother would have been mortified and shocked to tears. It was probably just what some girls needed but I know that others were rather overwhelmed by such a dose without previous information. It has been the subject of every group conversation since, you know how a thing like that can be discussed and hashed over. It shows what a liberal attitude most people take toward it and I think they are overdoing the educational side of it a little.

This is the second man who has talked on it this year here, the other one being an English Minister and presenting more the general moral attitude, instead of information. Well, one just has to maintain ones balance these days or be swept by every current. Don't worry about me, Jerry.

Last night we had an all girl's dance representing the sailor idea. About half the kids were dressed as sailors and the old gym was decorated to resemble a ship. Those parties are such fun for you can just let go and act as crazy as you please. After it we had an onion spread - so we are all strong today.

The tennis racket that "you all" gave me is doing good service for me. I entered the class tournament and will probably play in the finals for class championship. I have one more match to play which everyone says is simple. I am much thrilled but know that I can't get the championship because I will come up against the college champion of two years back. A racket sure makes a difference, though.

Oh Jerry, Mrs. Lawrence informed me that you wrote her about George. I don't know what you said, but, for heaven's sake, don't say anything more to anybody about it. Do let the matter drop for good, for I am sure that nothing more will come of it, and I hate to have it talked about so much.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes of Sturbridge (is it?) stopped here on their way to Conn. this week and I went down to see them for a little while. They were here for just a day after having a month's vacation out west where they saw Cousin Carl and Addie. They say that both of them are rather poorly.

I must stop and study History which is the very bane of my existence. It is awfully hard for me and I can't seem to find time to study it properly. My work in it has been very poor so far and I will have to brace up pretty soon.

Do, both of you write and tell us everything we want to know. Aunt Mary wrote that Aunt Grace has a stroke and that Ruthy had her appendix out!!!! I fear we are way behind on family data.

Oodles of love to you both
Kathie.

[This journal, dated November 1929 through December 3, 1929, was written while on a trip to Shaowu by Willard. He tells about the trip upriver and of the stops along the way. From the collection of John and Nancy Butte.]

Shaowu trip – Nov. 1929.

At 5:45 p.m. Saturday Nov. 9th I left home for Kienninghsien to help in the Shaowu Mission Annual Meeting. At 6:30 I was on the motor launch that is to take me as far as Iong Kau on the main Min river. This is about 175 miles from Foochow. From Iong Kau to Shaowu is about 75 miles. Just before I left home the American mail arrived with letters from Geraldine, Mary and Marjorie. I read the letters instead of eating supper and ate a muffin, a doughnut and a small piece of pumpkin pie before going to bed on the launch.

This is the fourth time I have made this trip. The other three times were in a man propelled boat. Twenty seven years ago it took me one week to reach Yeng Bing and two days more to Yeng Kau (Iong Kau). This time I should be in Yeng Kau in 3 ½ days. This is a high powered motor launch. The engine is running smoothly and sort of purring- like a good auto and we are flying thru the water. Last night I slept well. The launch is completely covered with iron plates to turn the bullets of the bandits. But there are sliding doors – or a door in each section, so the passengers can have light and air- between the nests of bandits. There are however hopes that we will not encounter bandits on this trip up. Two soldiers are on with bayonets and ammunition. My head is next the sliding door, my “berth” is long enough so I can lie full length if I lie cornerwise. I have a suit case and a bamboo basket on one side of me so I am quite “secluded”. Two Chinese occupy the rest of the compartment. I can sit up if I am careful to get my head between the beams that hold the flat top of the launch. I really am cang Huai= very well fixed, for breakfast. I ate with four Chinese, rice, rice, rice, peanuts, bean curd, bamboo sprouts, small shell fish. It is now 8:30 a.m.

Shaowu trip- Nov. 1929. 8:30 a.m. Monday, Nov. 11th 1929

Last night was clear and much colder. This morning is fine. We anchored at Uong Cheng for the night. The rain last week raised the river 3 or 4 ft. and we are sliding up the rapids on good time. For breakfast we had rice. Please note we had rice – plenty of it. There were six of us at the “table”. The table was a tray 16 in. X 26 in. We= two other men and myself, pushed our bedding aside to make room for the table. On the table were empty bowls for rice,- a plate of bean curd, one of bamboo sprouts, one of peanuts, one of olives,- about as much on each plate as we would put in individual dishes at home. We are a polite crowd however and no one eats all the condiments. I can afford to be polite for after each meal I open my country basket and cut a “shoestring” of pumpkin pie which mother hid there, and which I found- strange!!- it leaves a good taste in my mouth- so do the honey dates that I found also.

It is the same river that I went up 27 years ago, but its very different going. Then the 8 men often pulled an hour to make 30 rods- now the twin screws, each with its engine push the boat steadily up every rapid. We are at Iu Ka Kau = the mouth of the branch that goes in to Iu Ka. A launch is on its way down. One of its screws is injured, a man is in the water up to his mouth with a monkey wrench repairing it. It is rather cool work. He has completed the job and come up.

Tuesday, Nov. 12th 1929

At daylight the trusty engines began to spit and we backed out of our berth and nosed up stream. A fog had settled on the river and it was damp and cold. The bed felt comfy. But at 6:30 the "boy" came to say "hot water. Wash your faces." I opened my iron window, took my wash cloth and reached out and dipped it in the river and had a good sponge, cold water bath, while the "boy" and other passengers shivered for me. To be sure I had to set in bed and be careful to keep my head between the beams above me or it would be bumped. But then it was better than no bath. Each time before when I have gone up I could jump into the river. The boat was man-propelled and I could jump in from the bow, come up and swim and catch the stern. But this modern launch cut out that bit of fun.

The river is getting narrower. The rapids are steeper. Twice 8 men have got out and towed. The launch stuck her nose up into the rock just at the side of and below the rapid. The screws purred gently- just to keep the boat from going backward while a man fastened her to the rock, until all was ready. 200 ft. of 7/8 in. bamboo toe line was let out. The water, only ten feet away was boiling, seething, rushing down past us, jumping up into waves 6 ft. high like an angry wild beast as if it were defying this man made contraption to attempt to invade its age long domain. One boatman took two small sticks of incense, stuck them in a crack of a rock and lit them. To him and to all the crew this was a prayer to the gods to take us safely up this rapid. The 8 men stood ready 200 ft. up ahead on the shore to give succor to those two little engines. The levers were pulled back a bit to let her back away from the rock. The rudder swung just a trifle. The levers were pushed gradually up and the throttles opened slowly, until they were wide open. The screws hummed. The 8 cylinders of the right engine and the 4 of the left engine went up and down in perfect rhythm and with increased rapidity until it was almost one continuous spark. The men on land straightened the tow line. The water seemed to gather all its strength to resist our attempt to go forward. We were in a raging torrent- only four rods wide. Rocks on either side waited with gaping mouths to devour us. The waves came over the deck. We stood still for a minute. Two men on the boat seized bamboo poles. Stuck them into crevices in the rocks and pushed. The water redoubled its fury. But man's brain had calculated correctly an after ten minutes of steady, combined pushing, pulling and engine power. The launch perceptibly advanced, and with every inch gained speed. The poor torrent was worsted. But undaunted it rushes on still waiting for the next invader, who is sure to conquer as we conquered. These motor launches are already driving the large 10 + 15 men powered boats off the river. The little so-called rat-boats are still at work. But will not long compete with these swift birds or fish. I am making this journey of 175 miles in 3 days. It used to take ten in the lightest, speediest boats. Freight was often a month on the way. This launch has walked up all the rapids but two thus far without the help of the tow line. How long before these launches will be replaced by airships?

Last night two launches tied up side by side for the night. Some of the passengers from the other launch came over and we had a company of ten or more- all intelligent business men- one an agent of the B.A.T. - British and American Tobacco Co. We talked of conditions in China, Japan, India, England, America. I had the Scientific American for October with me. This is given largely to aviation. We talked for an hour. I did not preach but I talked and got them to talk of the injury to man of superstition and idolatry. They were interested and very thoughtful. One of them stood by me when the man stuck the incense in the rock at the foot of the dangerous rapid. He smiled and said "superstition."

It pleases me greatly to see so many of the hills covered with trees,- the farther up the river we go the more trees are to be seen. This in spite of bandits and soldiers. We had the "protection" of ten soldiers for a few hours this morning. We left them or they left us when we drew up to a raft of logs. They jumped from our launch to the raft and both fell flat as they slipped on the round smooth surface of the logs. Their grins and caps parted company with them and they looked anything but "protectors". If they live three or four years they will be able to grow mustaches, but they are not old enough now.

5:45 p.m. at Yong Kau

We made a fast trip up- arriving at 2:30 p.m. today= 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ days. From Foochow to Yong Kau. Here I find Rev. E.D. Kellogg and Miss Josephine Walker. Miss Walker makes her head quarters here now instead of at Shaowu.

Great changes have taken place here since I was here in 1909. Then the hills about were bare, now thick groves of building trees cover them- about 8000. They are perhaps 15 years old and worth 50 cents each now standing. Then there was a church parsonage and boys school. Now there are added a hospital, another boy's school, a girl's school and another parsonage. Beside these an electric light plant with 700 lights in the village and a water system- all the work of pastor Guang. It is wonderful what one man can do in a place like this in China. It is intellect, backed by altruism and character. There is plenty of intellect all about in China, but public spirit and character are at a premium, when one finds it. There is something doing. Pastor Guang is always thinking of the other man. The water (gravity) system, the electric light plant and the forest are for the hospital, for orphans, for the church – not for himself.

Wednesday Nov. 13th 1929. 4:15 p.m.

This Gould's birthday. Last night I slept on my own cot bed in Kellogg's room at Long Kau. This morning we were up at 6:00 and on the boat- a little rat boat at 7:00 and off at 7:30. The District Magistrate of Kienning is on several other boats with his retinue and several soldiers. We are keeping in sight of him, as protection from bandits. The boatmen said we might meet bandits this a.m. but we saw none. Reached Song Chiong at 12:30. Because of the fear of bandits we spent the afternoon here- also tonight and go tomorrow,- should reach Ciong Lok Friday before noon. From there we are to walk.

This has been a beautiful day- sunny and warm. We have taken off our coats. The boat is just wide enough so we three can sleep crosswise in it tonight and tomorrow night. There are five in the party going to Kienning.

Thursday Nov. 14- 1929

Last night we were tied up at Song Chiong. All turned in at 7 p.m. and went to sleep. We live in the open air and this is a good medicine for sleeplessness. About 9 p.m. things got of interest outside. 50 or 60 soldiers seemed much exercised- in mind and voice- not so much in body. There was a great conglomeration of tongues. I could hear the Foochow, Mandarin and other dialects that were entirely unintelligible. Between some 15 of us on our two boats we made out that a soldier had come across the river saying that he was one of some 20 who wanted to pass thru Song Chiong. Could they pass? But he had no credentials, could not tell to what regiment he belonged etc. etc. There was much commotion for an hour. Then the Song Chiong guard decided to let them pass. We lay down and slept.

This a.m. we were off at 7. But we are going up very leisurely. The Magistrate has about 25 boats. This region is infested with bandits- our boats are light. The Magistrate's heavy. He is slow, and our men dare not get much ahead of him. It will take us three days instead of two to reach Ciong Lok. My soul, possess thyself in patience. Be calm. Rest. The world was not made in 1 day. It is not finished yet after 6,000,000 years.

Friday morning Nov. 15 1929.

About noon we reached a city of 2000!!! named Moh Buo. Here there was a tense secretary. None of us could make out just what was the trouble. That bandits had operated was certain but how we could not tell. No two stories agreed. I was going up in the village to mail a letter. Pastor Ding said, better not. I did not go. About 3 p.m. We all went up to the village and found a Meth. pastor and two or three Christians that pastor Ding knew. They told us that the bandits came across the river on the opposite bank the night before. They seized a farmer whose house was across the river. He was too much for the 2 bandits who attacked him. Shook them off and ran. But a third bandit came up and shot the man thru the upper thigh. All the soldiers of Moh Buo had gone to drive off the bandits. We waited till about dark and finally got the promise of 4 soldiers to protect us as far as Ciong Loh for $13.00.

This a.m. the boatmen were up and off as soon as they could see. The past two days we have made about 60 li. or a little less than 20 miles. It is 70 li on to Ciong Loh and the men are to get us there tonight. The soldiers had not appeared. But we were off just the same. You see if the boats started before the soldiers came the soldiers would walk and the boats are so much lighter. We stopped after about 2 miles and the boatman started back for the soldiers and met them coming. It rains a little. But we are sliding up river fast. The commanding soldier has just pointed to a path coming down to the river from the hills. "That is a very bad place,- many bandits there." It is where Mr. and Mrs. Christian were robbed a few years ago and where Charlie Storrs and the pastor who is with us were robbed a month after.

Evening Nov. 15 at Ciong Loh

We reached Ciong Loh about 4 p.m. We had two soldiers with us. They were apprehensive at 2 points. At one place the leader took his rifle. But no bandit appeared and when we got within about 5 miles of Ciong Loh they left us and returned saying it was perfectly safe the rest of the way. Here Mrs. U and her 2nd son who had [a] drug store and hospital here gave us a very good supper. The boat fare for three days, 3 times a day has been rice, greens and bean curd.

All arrangements are made for starting tomorrow at daylight. A pastor, a preacher, three delegates, Kellogg, myself, 3 chairs = 6 men, 3 soldiers and one boy and 3 load men ==20- quite a caravan.

Mrs. U the wife of the preacher here 27 years ago when I came here said she remembered me. Her husband is dead. One son is in charge of the hospital at Yong Kau and one has a hospital here. Her husband is dead. The church here has acquired a fine property since I was here.

These hills between Long Kau and here are bare – no trees. This region is surely bandit ridden. I have seen two houses- that have been sacked by them.

Monday evening Nov. 18th 1929.

Since the last writing Fri. Nov. 15th I have been on the road. Sat. morning at 5 o'clock came the call to get up. Breakfast had been prepared and sent on to us by Mr. U where we are Friday evening. At 6 a.m. we were on the road,- 8 of us. We had three chairs- 2 men to carry a chair. We moved steadily until 2 p.m.- climbed 2000 ft. and went down again,- stopped for dinner, 18 min. In 40 minutes we were off again,- dinner = rice, greens, bean curd, rats, rice flour dumplings. All the morning and most of the afternoon we were in grand scenery. It was very mountainous, and the hill sides were very steep, and covered with hard wood forests- so far away from any stream that the wood is almost worthless. The background was a dark green, with here and there a very beautiful dark brick red not brilliant as at home but sober, and a few yellow trees, the effect of the whole was very pleasing. I have never seen so much forest in my travels before and never such beauty as between Ciong Lok and Tai Ning.

It was a long day and the puo = 10 li = 3 1/3 miles about grew longer in the afternoon. The coolies on two of the chairs gave out about 3 p.m. and as one of the company said, "We shall have to carry them." We reached Tai Ning about 7:45 p.m. The moon was full and it was not bad. Before dark we had emerged from the forest and came out into open country.

The church at Tai Ning is a large house. Pastor Laiu had gone to Kienning to Annual Meeting. At 7:45, unannounced 22 men = 2 foreigners, Mr. Kellogg and myself, a Chinese pastor, 3 preachers, 2 delegates, 6 chair coolies and 4 load bearers suddenly enter her front door – with 4 soldiers. Her neighbor calls over the wall to her. "There are soldiers knocking on your front door." What would an American minister's wife say to such a gang coming into her house at 7:45 p.m. Sat. night? And she had a good supper ready for 8 of us at 8:30. How is that for efficiency?

Sunday morning we were up at 8 and invited over to the home of a druggist – the leading church member, - for breakfast at 9:30, then a dozen of us walked about the city calling on some of the Christians, and on the government school, headed by a man who learned how to run a school while monitor of the Boy's Academy at Shaowu some years ago. We brought up at the new church and parsonage, not yet completed, and pastor Ding [Chinese character] who had come all this way with us from Long Kau preached on the boy with the 5 cakes and two fishes. This new church, to seat 400 comfortable and the parsonage has cost $1800. mex. about $900 U.S. gold.

At 12:30 we were on our way to Mui Kau 12 miles toward Kienning,- arrived at 5 p.m. Here we have a house, no part worker – several Christians. They were arranging for us all -8- to sleep in a room 12 X 15 ft. but Kellogg and I begged to go up stairs where there was oceans of room and plenty of air. After supper, in that little room with four beds all ready for sleepers, there gathered over 30 men and boys and listened to four sermons, and sang two hymns and at the close we had a prayer. That meeting was worth coming 12 miles for.

This morning at 5 a.m. came the call for breakfast and we ate by lamp light and were off soon after 6:00. Another mountain about 1500 ft. high had to be climbed and descended. At 2 p.m. we were at the home of the Shepherd's – Mr. George, Mrs. Dr., three girls and one boy ages from 18 months to 6 yrs. Mr. Storrs, Mr. Riggs and Dr. Judd arrived Sat. I have three days in which to do nothing. From Tai Ning we have had no guard, - no bandits operating in this region just now. But from Foochow or 25 miles up the river from Foochow to Tai Ning bandits may appear anytime.

Thursday, Nov. 28th 1929

This is Thanksgiving Day – I am still in Kienning. Riggs left yesterday alone for Shaowu. Dr. Judd left this a.m. with two ladies for a city 2 days away. The husband of one of the ladies is magistrate of that city. They plan 2 days to go, 2 days there, 2 days back to here. Yesterday there were reports that the Communists were marching toward that city, with a program to come to Kienning, then Tai Ning. Then Shaowu. All take this report and salt it down and go on about the day's work.

I wrote last Monday evening Nov. 18.- just 10 days ago. On Tuesday, the day after I arrived my schedule was given me- made entirely by the Chinese. Friday Nov. 22 an address at 2 p.m. The church in the present social Environment. Sat. evening 7:30. The Spiritual Life of the Church. Tuesday 11:30 a.m. The Relation Between the Older and Younger Churches.

Sat. morning I rose, bathed, shaved and went to bed and stayed there till Sunday I got up for lunch. Kellogg took my time Sat. evening and I took his Monday evening.

The big excitement in this Council's Annual Meeting is (1) the election of the Executive Committee. They elected 9 and 3 at large – no restrictions of sex or nationality = 6 Chinese pastors, 3 Chinese women, 3 missionaries. This newly elected committee elect a Chinese and a foreign General Secretary. This body then goes to work. It elects a superintendent for each of the three districts – centering at Shaowu, Iong Ken and Kienning and a travelling evangelist for each district. The travelling evangelist is apart from the general treasury entirely, and cannot hold a pastorate. The Superintendent also. After electing these 6 the Comm. appoints the pastors and preachers and decides their salaries. All not on the Comm. wait about for the results. The minutes are read when the Comm. are thru with their job. Last year 8 men were retired with full salary for a year. If a church called any of these men the Comm. would consider reinstating them. The idea was to take the money thus released and increase the help given to the faithful ones. But nothing was said last year to the men retired about their work being under par. It was only on a financial basis that they were retired. They all wanted to be reinstated this year. Different members of the Comm. could give good reasons for reinstating each of the men. Kellogg voted for reinstating three of the men, then when he saw that all 8 were likely to be reinstated he resigned from the General Secretaryship and left and thus “bust” up the Comm. But the next morning a compromise was effected and the Comm. finished its work and reported last = Wed. evening. This Comm. takes its work with a tremendous seriousness. I think the Chinese pastors rank higher in integrity, fairness, singleness of purpose and unselfishness than the pastors in Foochow.

The weather has been superb all the time since we arrived. Cold clear nights with the mercury hugging 30 degrees above. Bright sunny days sending the mercury up above 70 degrees on the front porch. I must mention father Geser of the Catholic mission here – a German- was in the war, wounded, very friendly – very sociable was over to afternoon tea last week – dropped in a moment yesterday to say that Dr. Judd had just pulled 2 teeth for him and had got the tooth roots and all. We were by his place last week on an afternoon walk. He showed with great pride, but wholly unaffected – all the church – chancel- the cabinet he had himself designed for the Vestment etc. Then asked us to sit down to coffee, bread and cake. We are invited to his place again this p.m. [Dr. Walter Judd would eventually become a Republican member of Congress for Minnesota in 1942 and serve twenty years.]

Shaowu, Dec. 3rd 1929. Tuesday.

Last Friday all the pastors, preachers and women left Kienning on 2 rat boats bound for Mui Kau. It was a perfect day, warm, sunny, very restful. Arr’d Mui Kau 5 p.m. Water low and travel slow. We slept in an Inn this time.

Sat. a.m. at daylight were eating breakfast, and off at 7, walked to Tai Ning arr’d 11:30. I had a good nap= dinner and off again at 1:30 for Cio Kau arr’d 6 p.m. walked today 80 li. Here we had a good clean room in the church. Sunday the father of a boy in Union Middle invited us all to breakfast, ate about 9:30. Then all debated whether I should stay here for church which would be late because it was market day,- or go on with Charlie Storrs. It would make me arrive Tues. in Shaowu. I started at 11:30 with Charlie. We reached Duoi Buo Gong at 5:15. It was full of soldiers going to Keinning to guard it against the Communists reported to be coming fr. Ting Ciu region. We have met soldiers with rifles and machine guns all along the road. They say 400,- We finally found a room with 3 beds wh. Rev. Ding, Charlie and I occupied. Monday a.m. before light we were up and off at 7,- reached Shaowu about 4. Stopped a minute at South Gate to greet Mrs. Riggs, then on to the Storrs house. Four beautiful children greeted a proud father- a proud mother and wife also greeted him. A real American bath tub never looked better. I was tired all thru, feet and legs ached for keeps [or weeks?]. I had walked during the past three days about 60 miles.

[This letter dated Nov. 13, 1929 was written from Song Chiong, Fukien Province, China by Willard to Gould. He writes a birthday letter to Gould. Willard was glad to hear that Gould got to give Dorothy and Harold their first airplane ride. He is on his way to the Shaowu field and they were shot at by bandits on the way up river but no one was hurt. Letter donated to Yale by family in 2006.]

Song Chiong, Fukien, China
Wednesday, Nov. 13th 1929.

Dear Gould:-

Because this is your birthday, it decides to whom I am to write the home letter to day.

Last Saturday at 6 p.m. I had my hat on ready to start for Kienning in the Shaowu field, when the American mail came in. I was just going to take a bite before leaving. The rickshas were waiting. But I had to read those letters and take the “bite” after I got on the boat. Marjorie’s letter was a thriller. She can now outboast the rest of the family. She has flown twice and the rest of us only once. I can imagine your delighted surprise at Cleveland when you saw Dorothy, Harold and Marjorie, also your pleasure at giving Dot and Harold their first air ride. Also your disappointment when your race had to be postponed, and the three would not be able to see you fly the race. Marjorie wrote that they drove all night Saturday night reaching Saginaw about 6 Sunday morning and went to bed and slept all day and then all night. It was a pleasure to read her letter. It shows that she is well and enjoying her work and enjoying life. She feels that she is doing things worth while and is successful.

I'm going to hang up for today with my heartiest congratulations.

Thursday morning. Nov 14-

We were all asleep shortly after 7 p.m. yesterday. About 9 p.m. there was much shouting by the Song Chiong Guard. All the dialects of this much dialected region were floating on the still air. We at last gathered that a band of soldiers were across the river- about 20. One had come across to ask permission to pass thru Song Chiong. He had no credentials, could not tell his regiment and caused much doubt to the Song Chiong Guard. He might represent a band of bandits. For an hour no one slept. They ran up and down and there was general commotion. A little after ten they became quiet and we slept. We are right in the open air- both ends of the boat are open. At 7 a.m. we were on the move. But the boatmen were careful not to get much ahead of the magistrate with his soldiers. Bandits may appear at any time. Last Sunday at 10:30 a.m. while on the armored launch the launchmen rushed to cover behind the sheet iron sides of the launch, all the iron windows were pulled shut and I could hear bullets pelt the sheet iron covering the sides of the launch. One struck a bale of cotton carried as freight. That bunch or bunches, for they were on both sides of the river, were all we have seen thus far. This letter is very scrappy. I am writing Mother every day and am also writing a diary with a carbon copy which I am sending to Mother to be sent to Kathleen to go the rounds as follows- Kathleen, Marjorie, Dorothy, Geraldine, Gould and Virginia, Century Farm, Putnam.

We are just now right in the reported bandit region, near where Mr. and Mrs. Christian and later Mr. Storrs were captured. When I called on the Am. Consul and told him I was coming up here his first words were- "You're a brave man." I do not feel so at all. One of my principles has always been to first consider carefully, and if I felt it was my duty- if I could be sure that God wanted me in a certain place to do a certain work I made all preparations for safety and went ahead. As far as I can learn there is a minimum of dangers on this trip. Rev. E.D. Kellogg of Shaowu is with me and a Chinese Pastor- a bright fellow of 36 who has been in bandits hands right in this region twice. Also two church members. These all are going to Kienning to the Consul meeting. We should reach a city- Ciong Lok tomorrow noon. From there we plan to walk 310 li. One li= about 1.3 of a mile. 310 li= 310 divided by 3 1/3 miles. I finish at Kienning Nov. 26. Then I want to go to Tai Ning for a church dedication. Then to Shaowu to look see and say hello to the people= Storrs, Riggs families, Dr. Judd, Miss Dr. Nutting, then down the river home.

Before Nov. 1st I mailed to Geraldine 3 boxes of lacquer, and two boxes of linen. In letters I sent to her the invoices with prices in mex. of each article- also the original receipted bills for the goods- some of the linen Mother had bought previously. We had no bills for these. I hope Mother will get off to her about 20 boxes of tea. I am not getting any Christmas presents off this year. Getting ready for this trip and the trip came just at the time when the presents should start. So all you children and the Uncles and Aunts will not likely receive any Christmas reminders from us this year. I'll try to get something off later, or you and Virginia may play that the pin and ring are for Christmas. I should like to know how much duty Virginia had to pay on the pin and how much you had to pay on the ring. I hope also that Geraldine will write me how much she paid on the lacquer and the linen.

One of the business men- Christian- delegate to the Annual Meeting has taken the cards of Kellogg and pastor Ding and gone ashore to ask for an escort of soldiers. The 20 + boats of the magistrate are too slow for us. We have left them and are going by our lonesome.

Tell Virginia I know she has written us two letters since I have written one to her direct, but I have included her in some to you. I'll write her specially sometime if all goes well. We enjoy her letters immensely. I want to help train her to write for its not natural for the man to have to write all the letters. Mother has several times started letters to you children but she does not get them off. I hope all of you will keep writing her- address your letter to her alone and urge her to write. You'll win out in time. She likes to see your letters addressed to her.

The mail last Sat. brought Aunt Mary's letters telling of Aunt Grace's illness. I do not see much hope for her.

May God keep you in touch with Him= Gould, Geraldine, Virginia. I think of you as housekeeping and you have a home to write Virginia to now. Lovingly Father.

Nov., 24, 1929.

Dear Jerry and Gould:-

We were mighty glad to get Jerry's long epistle, after such a long wait. You both seem to be having one jolly big time there in your little home, and visiting around among the relatives.

I wondered why my check didn't come from Aunt Mary. It was a good idea of yours to take that as my share toward the rug. Are Monnie and Kathleen going in on that? If they are, they might be able to give two or three dollars apiece, and you and I can divide the balance.

I was glad to hear about Mary Carpenter. Where and when did you see her last?

I got your Christmas package to China, and have added to it a pair of washable cotton gloves for Father and a pair of double silk gloves for Mother. Are you sending Father anything? Don't you generally send him a diary?

Yes, let's group the other gifts the way we did last year. Can you remember who you had. I had Aunt Mollie's family and Aunt Grace and Uncle Oliver I think. I'll take them again if it's O.K. I'll write Monnie and Punk that I'm taking them. I'm really going to try hard to get all of my things off real early this year.

By the way, will you please send me a list of some things that you and Gould really want for Christmas. Do it soon, please.

Good for Gould and his Buck!! I bet he was one tickled hunter- boy! How I would have loved a taste of the poor beast. I haven't tasted venison since the bit we got from the one grandpa killed, when we were in Mt. Vernon. I hardly remember what it tasted like. My, deer are coming down on cars from the north by the score, -two and three and four on a car. I guess they get the best hunting in the upper peninsula here. Where did Gould go and for how long? Gould, you must write us all about it, yourself. [Stanley Forbes emailed a story about Oliver Gould Beard Sr. and a deer: "He is the one who shot at a deer (about 50 yards away) in the field in front of their house, and when the gun went off, it not only knocked the deer down, but also Oliver." This may be a different time period than 1929 though.]

I'm sorry our parcel was not the one for which you got the notice. I hope the Romeo's fit, and that Gould will have some use for them. Harold wore his so very much- all Sat. and Sun., and every evening that he was not out.

I'm waiting for the second part of your letter telling of Gould's party and the one Edith took you to. Did Gould get my telegram?

I shall send your letter right on to the girls.

We have not as yet decided on a radio, but are still trying them out. So far we had an Edison, Victor, Atwater Kent and now a Brunswick. I like either of the first two best.

Our work at the church starts next week. I haven't found an assistant yet, but am really going to try to.

We are driving to Galesburg for Thanksgiving- leaving right after school Wed. What are you doing to celebrate?

We drove down to only one football game this year- the Ohio-State, which was not very good. The Harvard would have been much better. However, we've had the radio for all of the games, and have listened in on most of them. Harold has had several opportunities to officiate at High School games this year. He worked his last yesterday.

My Volley Ball is ending in a rather exciting way. My girls have one more game to play this Tues. We play South school who haven't lost a game. The only game we've lost is the one to them on their home floor. I'm hoping that my girls can get them on our home floor, so we'll tie. In that case, we'll have to play off the tie after Thanksgiving. We have a chance for the banner.

What are we going to do for Christmas? Have you found out anything about possibilities of coming out here? I do hope you can.

I have forgotten whether or not you get the Oberlin Alumni Magazine. There are some mighty interesting personal items that I know you'd be interested in. If you do get it and have read these just pass this part over.

1. Dorothy Garland is revising in the catalogue dept. of the Princeton Univ. Lib. She spent the summer in Eng. Scotland, Switzerland and France.

2. Rudolf Hertz is in charge of the Indian work of the Amer. Miss. Assoc. He and his wife spent a three months vacation in Portugal, Italy, Greece, Austria, Switzerland, Germany and Eng. (I'd like to see him again; wouldn't you?)

3. Jo Dum is in charge of Phys. Ed. For Women here in Albion College, Albion, Mich.

4. Alice Lockwood Andrews is studying for her Master's in Columbia Univ. (Have you seen them yet) George is teaching 5 classes a week in the Amer. Institute of Banking night school. Their address is 631 W. 152nd St., Apt. 4H. N.Y.

5. Rev. James Fifield married a Helen Ramsey of Ann Arbor. I guess he has a new church at Grand Rapids where they were married.

6. The Ludwig twins are both teaching at Shaker Heights High School. Their pupils shave a hard time recognizing their teacher.

7. Frances Dunscombe sailed for Peru in Aug. to be principal of a missionary school under the Christian Missionary Alliance. Her twin is teaching math in Cleveland.

8. Rufus Lunery and his wife have a little son- Sept. 9.

9. Mr. and Mrs. K.P. Harten (Natalie Stapleton- have a son Philip Henry, born Aug. 2. Address- Hampt. Str. 38, Wittenaw, Germany.

10. Alfred Carlton was married Feb. 1, to Mary Cashmore of Jericho, Vt. He is in Hartford Theological Seminary. He graduates in 1930 and is going back to Turkey.

I hope you haven't read all this before.

I guess I told you that I spoke one Sun. evening on China at our church. Soon after I was asked to give the same talk at a Meth. church in Bay City.

Write soon- both of you and let us know what you want from Santa.

Ever so much love

Dot and Harold.

Dear Jerry and Gould-

We heard thru a letter from Aunt Emma about your house-party over Armistice day and about Jerry's spending a week at Aunt Myra's while Ruthy was at the hospital. Is Ruth alright now, and is Aunt Grace holding up? I am just crazy to see your house and hear all about your good times. How about that deer that you killed Gould? I bet you had venison for a month.

I have just got back from a week-end over at Lorain with Monnie. She was all alone over this Sunday so it was especially opportune for me to go. I helped her decorate one of her display windows for the community chest. It was a group of dolls of many nationalities with their respective national flags gathered under the American flag. The effect was very good when it was done and it was lots of fun.

We went to a show after that and got home real late. Her new apartment is much nicer than the old one although no bigger. The Greek lady downstairs burned incense last night and filled the whole house with the musty odor. It was much worse than Chinese. This morning we went to visit a Bulgarian family who had two of the dearest kids. Monnie certainly does have some adorable friends over there and they all think the world of her. She seems much happier than she did earlier this fall and is getting along better with Ronnie. I do hope that she can be with us for Christmas but she is very dubious about it. You write her about it will you?

Oh! we got a new evening dress between us yesterday and it is a flaming glory. I am invited to the Junior Thanksgiving formal so had to have one. It is flame color and very modernistic in style with a low close fitting hip line and a beautifully dropped full skirt. It was very reasonable and looks much more costly than it is.

Don, with his girl, and Stewart are coming home for Thanksgiving and Aunt Etta has invited Monnie over for dinner. Isn't that nice? I am curious to see what Don's girl is like for they say that the affair is almost settled.

Last week has been one of the fullest this fall. Edith Matheson gave a recital of Shakespeare on Wed. which was perfectly exquisite. We have been reading some of his plays in "rush Shakespeare" and she gave several familiar passages. Then "Disraeli" with George Arlis was here in the movies and we had to see that. Do see it if you get a chance for it is supposed to be even better than the play. The biggest thing of the week, though, was the Causey Conference on Peace and War. You would have been real interested in it, Jerry, for dear Mr. Jazzi had a good deal to say on the subject. They first took up efforts toward Peace since 1918 explaining in brief detail. The League of Nations, Lacorno treaties, Kellog Pact etc. The speaker who had this topic laid a great deal of faith in these mechanisms, whereupon Mr. Jazzi violently disagreed. He got very much excited over his reputation and spoke with some difficulty. The substance of his argument was that the former presentation was much too optimistic for the future and that machinery like the League of Nations would not alone bring peace. They mean nothing unless you get at the fundamental causes of war such as economic imperialism, nationalism, racial animosity and fear. Mr. Jazzi spoke at nearly all the conferences and, I think, greatly impressed the conference leaders in his thorough thinking thru of the problems. There was some general discussion after each meeting but not as much as I expected on a subject like this. It was very interesting, however, and I got a lot out of it. I am sending you a program of the conference. Do you know any of the speakers?

Have you gotten off your Christmas presents to China yet? Monnie and I both have ours and are sending them this week. Isn't that too bad about the heavy duty? Will you both send us a Christmas list of what you are wanting and needing, and are we dividing up the relatives as usual? You know, Aunt Etta's family wish not to exchange gifts this year so we have agreed not to give them any. O.K.?

Well, I am still hoping and praying that some day I will find at least a penny postal from you to show that you have not forgotten that I am still listed in the column of the living and sane.

Love and then some

Kathie

Your bank slips are enclosed, Jerry, which I ran off with this fall.

My dearest Kathleen,

Perhaps father wrote you that he was going to take a trip to Shaowu, 250 miles up the river. He went about the middle of Nov. He has sent me his diary letter and wants me to send it on to you and you will see on the back of the first page how he wishes it forwarded to the different members of the family. Will you all please forward it promptly.

Never before have I been all alone in my own home so long without any of my own family. It will be almost a month when he returns. (I am getting sleepy and can't write straight.) I have just returned from an informal reception to Miss Hurlbert and Dr. Hurlbert, her brother and a Mrs. Carey, all just arrived from America, on a voyage around the world. The two former move on in a few days but the latter stays a year with Miss Hartwell to help in the work of the Christian Herald Homes, - an orphanage for boys and girls and also an industrial school. Miss Hurlbert represents the Woman's Board and is from Chicago. We get a number of visitors like that now in these later years; formerly it was an event to have anyone visit us from America.

Christmas is almost here; how the time does fly! I am going to send each of you girls a string of beads-choker- that I bought this summer on the mountain from a man who came [edge of page torn] beds ?? was selling last summer. Each string is different and if I haven't assorted them among you four as you would have chosen, you may change at your convenience as it makes no difference to some of you. The price varies a little but the average price is about $2.00 silver. I was so busy at the time they should have been mailed to avoid the Christmas rush in America that I could not get them packed and mailed; so now I am waiting till the Christmas rush will be over so as to give them a little better chance not to get lost or broken open. I shall send them separately to each of you, and hope there is no duty on them. We got a big order of things off to Geraldine for her sale, most of which ought to have been received by her before this time. We are soon sending Dorothy an order of tea; we did not get here letter in time to get it to her by Christmas and I guess she did not expect it when she wrote. She evidently did not care to have a sale this year. I have never heard how either hers or Geraldine's sale came out. I was interested to know how some particular things sold; what sold well and what did not; how much they had left and how much they made etc. They only wrote in general terms about it. I hope you have not sent us much this year. Don't send more than a small gifts here after as it costs us so much duty to get them out of the P.O. since China has raised her duty. I hope you have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and a good get together.

...in two places if not in one. We have enjoyed your letters very much and will try to write you again soon. If I could only find time to pen all the letters I ?? out to you when I am in bed, or doing some other work you'll get many.

I hope many things for you, especially that you are improving all the opportunities you have there in Oberlin for cultivating your Christian life; and that you are not allowing yourself to be led away from established standards of right and good breeding by the silly and dangerous social fads of ?? present. ?? conservation ?? Enough ?? maintain ?? high standards of character ?? conduct.. forget or discard ?? ?? Most of ?? is ?? [torn edge]

My dearest girlie Kathleen,
 You see I am writing you another letter rather speedily but I am not promising to keep this up daily for long.
 We are having a deal of gray weather just these last three weeks but not much rain.

Today there is a sale at the Girl's School but I fear I'll not be able to go as I have a tailor and a woman to wash house. You remember that is at Sie Buo over in the English Mission.

Thursday, Dec. 5", day before yesterday, The Blind Boy's School had an opening for their new building which will house the school and its industries much better than it has ever been before. You remember Mrs. Wilkinson, Dr. Wilkinson's wife, established the school some 25 years ago with one boy. Then 2 more wanted to come and she took them and built a small house and hired a matron. Then 2 or 3 yrs. later she built on another room, later another and another; and thus the sch. grew and was housed, - in these later years very inadequately. A new building was imperative. Mr. and Mrs. Woods whom you will remember, he a great joker and she a little short stout lady very cheery have been in charge of the school 2 yrs. with a furlough right in the middle. Now the Eng. Mission Board in Eng. is suffering a great falling off of contributions and have got to curtail their work so they are calling home some of their missionaries who are nearest to the retiring age, and Mr. and Mrs. Woods were the ones selected to go from Foochow. Everybody in all the missions just thought it must not be; the school could not get along without them; and they themselves were very loath to go. There was some talk about getting up a petition to send home to the board asking them to reconsider and let them remain here; but Mr. Woods said, "No, let it go as they have planned". So Mr. and Mrs. Norton of that mission have been selected to succeed them and the Woods start home now in a few weeks. Mrs. W. had a lot of dress-goods and curtains, etc. which she wanted to dispose of Everybody in all the missions just thought it must not be; the school could not get along without them; and they themselves were very loath to go. There was some talk about getting up a petition to send home to the board asking them to reconsider and let them remain here; but Mr. Woods said, "No, let it go as they have planned". So Mr. and Mrs. Norton of that mission have been selected to succeed them and the Woods start home now in a few weeks. Mrs. W. had a lot of dress-goods and curtains, etc. which she wanted to dispose of so I took them and had a sale for the ladies of the mission, with afternoon tea. We didn't get them all sold, however. Mrs. Woods let her cook go before they left as the place he was to go wanted him at once; so when they had the opening she asked me to make two cakes for the tea served in connection. Mrs. Christian also was asked to help out that way. Both Mr. Woods and Mr. Norton made very good talks at the opening, the one historical and retrospective; the other appreciative and anticipatory. The rest of the program at the opening was tea and inspection of the building and work from 3:30 to 5. And Band playing, organ solos, cornet solos, singing in chorus and duets and quartets by the boys with Mrs. Woods at the organ sometimes and sometimes a blind boy at the organ. 8 of the older boys have been to England with Mrs. Wilkinson and played before the King and Queen. Those 8 are all teachers now. Some of them are married and have families. At their work they earn about $8 a month the most advanced of them- and help support their parents brothers and sisters. And a part of it is saved and put away for their own old age. They have a waiting list of over 60 who want to get into the school; if they could have raised another thousand dollars, they could have built a 2nd story on the new building and made room for 20 of that 60 but they had to put the roof on to the first story, lacking the needed thousand. It is a most interesting work.

At our Thanksgiving dinner they asked Mrs. Christian and me to be hostesses at the children's table, so we had 10 children at our table in the veranda. The rest of the people were seated at four other tables with a husband and wife as host and hostess at each. Now the committee are getting ready for the Christmas celebration of the mission. We have already drawn names to give gifts too. Each couple draws a gentleman's name, a lady's and a child's. Then the children each draw names among themselves for an exchange of gifts. A new family has come out, the man to take charge of the Boy's industrial work of the Christian Herald Orphanages, in the boy's dept. and they have four boys and another child soon coming. So that adds quite a bit of spirit and enthusiasm to the children's group of the mission, this family brings it's own teacher along for their children, in the person of a man, the children being boys. Well, here is the end of any paper and your letter. More soon. Circulate this among the other children if you think it's worth it. Praying daily for God's help and keeping of you all, in all your problems and difficulties and temptations and work. Most affectionately, Mother.

[Early Dec. 1929]

Dear Brother and Sister-

It really looks as if this Christmas would not see a family gathering of the W.L. [Willard Livingstone?] tribe doesn't it? I just wish that there was some way for us to get out there for I am crazy to see your little home and all you folks, but we will be thinking of you anyway, you see where I am now from the heading, but not for long. Monnie and I are going to Saginaw Tuesday to stay until the day after New Years. My vacation began Friday but M. couldn't get away until the day before Christmas. She is very busy now with clubs Christmas parties, and distribution of gifts, all of which is most interesting to observe on the side. This afternoon they had a childrens meeting in their club room at which they showed slides and sang Christmas carols that you could barely recognize as such. Just now they are out with a bunch of kids serenading the neighborhood. I am rather thankful that I don't have to listen in for it is almost excruciating. Carmen (Ronnie's fiancé) and I are holding down the house and making cocoa for them when they return.

Last week was a busy one in Oberlin. A week ago we got up early as usual to go caroling and I think I enjoyed it more than ever before. Our house had practiced diligently on three part harmony and, if I do say it, the singing sounded well. That night the carol service by the choir increased the Christmas spirit. Mr. Christianson, the new director, has done wonders with it and all the carols, with one exception, were sung a capella. The effect was beautiful and they kept in perfect time. The rest of the week was a big rush to get ready for vacation and several tests to add to the misery.

On Wednesday night we had a most thrilling experience that was the talk of the town next day. About four o'clock when most of the girls were peacefully sleeping clang! clang! went the fire gong- you know how that can ring Jerry. It just threw me right out of bed and automatically Gidge and I put on shoes, coat and grabbed our pocket books. As we rushed down the third floor corridor the smoke poured up from below getting more dense as we got down to the parlor. Our little hearts were beating loudly and I had visions of being cast out into the snow with next to nothing on. I have never had such a real scare over fire before, but the congregation of tousled and sleepy girls seemed very calm and we numbered off our fire numbers in orderly manner- only one missing who was immediately sent for. Nobody knew how the fire started but the Christmas decorations on the parlor mantle were burned and the picture hanging above the fireplace had gone up in smoke. That made the mantle piece and wall badly scorched but did little damage beside that. An application of the fire hose soon put out the sparks (no flames were in evidence) and in twenty minutes we were ordered back to bed. The humor of the whole thing struck us after danger was past, for such a funny looking gang I never saw, with pajama legs hanging below coats and heads done up in curlers. All sorts of valuables were in evidence, from violins and jewel boxes to semi-trunks and pocket books. We didn't sleep a wink afterward so stayed up and studied for a test next day. Did you ever have a Talcott fire Jerry? You had a theft anyway didn't you?

That wasn't the end of excitement for me tho- Thursday while playing basket-ball in the gym I somehow fell on a turned ankle and gave it a royal sprain. A couple of husky girls carried me way up to Talcott (I pitied them awfully) and deposited me in a bathtub of hot water. Dr. Moulton was "Johnny on the spot" and gave it excellent care, taking me right into her apartment and treating it with ice packs and hot water. It was an awful time to have it- just before vacation, with a thousand and one things to do to get ready. My poor room-mate had to run all my errands, including breaking a date with Hugh for that night. Everybody was as sweet as honey-pie about helping - "a friend in need"- you know. Mr. Lawrence brought me a box of candy, which Don later demolished. I managed to get up to my room next morning to pack, and after Dr. had taped the foot up she took me down to Aunt Ettas, for I had to get out of Talcott and couldn't get over to Lorain. Aunt Etta is the dearest woman to take us in any extremity; it seems as if we always land on her when we are disabled or sick and she is always the most wonderful nurse. I feel almost wicked encroaching so on her hospitality. Don and Milly were there but the other three boys are not there yet. We had lots of fun setting up and trimming their tree and playing games. My ankle wasn't supposed to be used for two days so you can imagine me hopping around on my left foot "up stairs down stairs and in my lady's chamber". My left leg is much over developed by now but my right is beginning to do a little service. On Saturday one of Hugh's friends offered to take me over to Lorain in his car, at Hugh's suggestion, the dear boy! I was glad to get over here as I had previously planned, and get out of poor Aunt Etta's way. We got stuck in a snow drift on the way over and had to turn around and go by way of Elyria. You know what an awful blizzard we are having out here. The special busses west were taken off because they could not get thru and the report for Friday was- no trains running west of Chicago. I hope Gidge got home alright. We were thinking of taking the bus up to Saginaw but a heavy snow has set in again so I guess we will take the train. I can walk almost normally now so travelling won't be so bad. (Danny Kantalus is sitting on my lap helping me written this letter. The little boy down stairs.)

I am sending five dollars which Monnie says is to be toward a bathrobe for Uncle Elbert. Aunt Etta sent you two dollars for it, she said, which you are to put with this and send to Uncle Elbert. Is that O.K.? We got Aunt Emma a lovely chiffon scarf, gray and white. Poor Monnie had to do all our shopping while I sat up here looking over cards. My presents to you kids are going to be late. I'm afraid, as all my gifts were because of this catastrophe but you will get them some time.

This vacation has to be one of study for me. History is improving a little but I have just got to study this week to pass the course at all. I never felt less interested in making good grades before. I just don't "give a darn" what I get so long as I pass and am not a bit interested in the material. Oh, to be intellectual like you both- but I guess I wasn't cut out for brains- worse luck.

Well- I suppose you will be up in Connecticut for Christmas won't you? Have a real good time and may Santa be good to you. Think of us as up in the little red brick bungalow making merry around a little tree.

Loads of love to all the folks dear to us there and Merry Christmas.

Happy New Year

Kathie

Foochow, China

Dec. 24th 1929

Dear children:-

Four years ago this afternoon Mother and I with a very large number of friends of different nationalities said farewell to the mortal part of our dear eldest, Phebe. Four years ago just now 8:20 p.m. Mother and I sat at home all alone, four years ago this evening. Some of the richest experiences of my life I had during the six weeks that Phebe was in the Hospital. Her beautiful character came into full bloom then and it was my privilege to see it in all its beauty. The numerous letters received during the next months testified to the very broad influence she exerted. In the brief span of thirty years she lived much and well. I am sorry the others of you did not know her better- during the last few years of her life. I count it a privilege to go to her resting place over in the American Cemetery occasionally and stand with bared head in her presence and think of her influence on me as well as on such a large number of others. Aunt Elizabeth once remarked that she hoped people would continue to talk of her after she was gone. I think Phebe would have it so too.

I am led to write as above just now because of the very sad news of the very sad occurrences in the McLachlin home recently. Mr. Mac and Margaret came to Shanghai a little over a year ago. We knew that Margaret smoked and went with rather high society, but knew nothing more. Mrs. Mac and Helen came out a few months ago. Not long ago Margaret came in to her home one day with a young man and introduced him as her husband. Mr. and Mrs. had known nothing of it. About Dec. 1, Helen called her parents one morning about 2 o'clock. She was in great distress. The doctor was called and could not seem to find the seat of the trouble. After some time she told them she had drunk Lysol. She died in spite of all efforts to save her. She had been coming home late from parties so drunk that she had to be carried in from the auto. She was only 19 years old. The parents were so deeply sad that they could not attend the funeral which was very largely attended.

Wednesday= Christmas Day.

With me Christmas began last Saturday and each day is full up to and including next Wednesday. Jan. 1- Day after tomorrow I start for two country chapels at Ding Chio and Deng Chio and hope to get home for lunch Monday. Sunday I was at two places- Sang Bo in the a.m. with Mother. It seemed best for one of us to stay for the afternoon and as I had agreed to preside at the foreign children's Christmas on South Side Mother staid as Sang Bo and I got home first. She had to stay for a long feast after the exercises and I could leave immediately after the exercises. Jane Campbell aged 3 yrs. spoke a piece. Her mother says that she had been very uncertain about it. Sometimes she would do it and at others she wouldn't. I went to her before we began and told her I would come down from the platform and help her up. She did it all night and I got a feather in my hat for it. To day I went to Au Ciu in the a.m. and to a feast after then home and fed the hens and then to a Christmas at the orphanage and this evening Mother and I have taken a feast at Lau Memorial church. I get my breakfast at home.

Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Lewis parents of our Dr. Neil Lewis of Ing Hok arrived in Foochow a week ago Sunday, Dec. 15. According to their cable from Hong Kong they should have arrived on Monday Dec. 16. But a day or two before they left Hong Kong pirates took passage on one of Jardines steamers going from Foochow to Hong Kong and between Swatau and Hong Kong they opened fire on the Captain and crew, - shot and killed one foreigner of the crew. The other foreigners held the pirates. The wireless sent an S.O.S. for help and a British gun boat came very quickly and every one of the pirates was captured and taken to Hong Kong. There have been 4 or 5 or more steamers pirated on the China coast during the past five years. Most of them have been cleaned out and the pirates have taken their loot to a place between Swatau and Hong Kong= Bias Bay and then let the raided steamer go. As I have seen the accounts, more Chinese steamers and more Chinese passengers have been the sufferers than have foreign boats or foreigners. The British crew in this last instance were very brave and did a valuable piece of work. Due to this pirate raid the steamer the Lewises came and got in a day ahead of time. Mother and I had been away from home to a chapel three nites down the river- walked- took dinner with the Bible Woman there and walked back in the afternoon to find a carriage standing at our gate. The Lewises were at our door. The son Neil appeared about 8:30 p.m. They left Tuesday morning for Ing Tai and will be back about Jan. 20. They are our guests while in Foochow.

Last Friday evening the Anti Cobweb Society held its Christmas Meeting at Wenshan. The program consisted of Christmas music- and readings "A Christmas Carol"-Dickens, by W.L. Beard. There were eleven solos and choruses. Some of the pieces were, "Here we Come a Carolling", "The Birthday of a King", "The Angels and the Shepherds", "What Child is This", "Bring a Torch Jeanette", "O My Peaceful and Blest."

On Jan. 5th I am to preach the Baccalaureate Sermon for the Union Middle School. As far as I know now this is my only appointment for commencements.

There have recently come to Foochow Mr. and Mrs. Culver and four boys from 3-14 yrs. and another coming soon- no age as yet. Mr. Talbot, tutor for the Culver boys, Mrs. Carey 60+ and Miss Chittenden. They are all connected with Miss Hartwell, - not in any way with the Mission except as we ask them to prayermeeting and Christmas exercises etc.

I hoped before this to write up my Shaowu trip but the chance has not yet presented itself. I am not putting it in here. It is too long but I'll get it to you before many weeks. It was a very interesting trip- bandits, soldiers, communists- long days on the road a foot, sleeping in inns, new steam boats that climb rapids. All the trip planned by Chinese who were perfect hosts. But I'll not anticipate more. - Will you children share this, Kathleen, Marjorie, Dorothy and Harold, Gould, Geraldine and Virginia, - keep it on the road.

Often I talk with the Father about each of you by name- If you are in any special need- remember that I am talking with God about you and asking him to take care of you.

With lots of love

Father

2108 No. Bond St.,
Saginaw, Mich.,
Dec., 29, 1929.

Dear Jerry and Gould:

We're having one grand old time here together, but, needless to say, it would be much grander if both of you were here. We've missed you ever so much, and have spoken of you many times.

Kathie has told you all about their lengthy journey up here. It was quite thrilling to arise at 3:30 on Christmas morning and go to the station for our company. It made a short Christmas day for us, but we managed to get everything in.

Of course, we had a tree- and lots of gifts. You and Gould hit just the right spot with Harold and me. Harold was in dire need of new ties and I was just waiting to see if Santa brought me perfume, before I bought some for myself. You remembered my "brand" too, didn't you? Thank you both so much.

Were we surprised- And How! - when on Christmas day, that generous check arrived. Well, that just started a realization of a dream we had had for some time. With a starter like that it will be easy to add to it, till we have our car. Thank you a hundred times for the check.

Other gifts I got were three pairs of stockings, a little telephone pad, a Chinese brass letter opener from Dorothy Jewett, two boxes of candy from my girls, a pair of ship book ends from Aunt Molly (they are exactly like the ones Hazel Converse gave me for a wedding gift, but don't tell Aunt Molly.), two aprons, four handkerchiefs, pictures of Kathie, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Johnson, and the two Lappiner children, a pretty quilt from the Aunts, nuts from Uncle Elbert, and last and by no means least, a beautiful bureau set with ten pieces, from my husband, I was so happy over that, for I have always wanted one, but never hoped to get it.

Harold got lots of socks, ties and handkerchiefs. I gave him a big pair of driving gloves.

I am having a bridge party tomorrow night, for the girls. Am getting a big kick out of getting it up, for it is the first one I've ever given. You might be interested in the guests- Hazel Curran and her sister, Alice Stapleton, Irene Gilenas, Margaret Curtis, Ruth Avery, Lillian Ryman and Grace Brady. It's going to be lots of fun. I wish you were here.

We've just done nothing but visit, eat and sleep, but we've had piles of fun doing it, and the vacation is going all too fast.

We are trying to decide now of a radio. I guess it's between a Victor and a Spartan.
