of this sort. On the other hand, we are faced by the tremendous urgency of the need for correlation of the educational work in China, and unification of promotional efforts here at home. Being stanch Presbyterians, we may well feel that such unification is predestined, and must, therfore, work itself out in some way in spite of all the difficulties along the road.

I hope you are planning to be in New York soon. I should like to have an opportunity of talking these things over with you at greater length.

Very cordially yours,

BAG-H
