could crowd into an address lasting more than an hour.

As to dress, I suppose most of the men will wear their dinner coats. Mr. Davis will probably wear tails, as befits the toastmaster. I haven't checked with Dr. Hume, but my guess is that he will stick to a tux, and I know he would if you preferred that to full dress. A few of the men may come in informal attire.

Thank you for the personal note about Margaret and me which you put at the close of your letter. I'm taking the liberty of passing it on to her - for she will appreciate it a lot. We are both mighty grateful for your constant and kindly interest.

We look forward to seeing you and Mrs. Luce at the Waldorf Tuesday evening.

Cordially,
