initiated for the purpose of meeting certain imperative needs of the University and those outside pledges and appropriations, while of great service to the University, would not meet any one of these requirements - additional dormitory space, additional residences, campus improvement, etc. Moreover, I think Mr. Boyd is only working for the interest of the institution in holding to the actual conditions set since it is only thus that these requirements for the University can be met.

We are all deeply grateful to you, not only for your patience, good-nature, and generosity in submitting to a second appeal and in making a second pledge, but also for your willingness to co-operate with Dr. Jenney in arranging for a luncheon conference with a few of your friends. I know that Dr. Stuart, who realized how very busy you are, will wish to express to you his special personal thanks. If you succeed in arranging the luncheon meeting, as Dr. Jenney suggested by telephone today, for some day next week, I feel hopeful that this may help materially in securing the relatively small amount still needed to complete the campaign.

Gratefully yours,

Assistant to the President
