Manuscript and Folklife Archives

background

Manuscripts holdings are unpublished materials, chiefly concerning Kentucky and Kentuckians, and include letters; diaries; account books and business papers; literary papers; church and institutional minutes; theses; land grants; political papers; court records and a variety of other memorabilia. The materials document local, national, and even international events, and reveal details about day-to-day life in many settings and on varied levels, mainly in 19th and 20th century Kentucky.

Folklife Archives holdings consist of papers and projects generated by folk studies undergraduate, graduate, and faculty members coupled with reel-to-reel, audio, and videotape interviews and performances (some transcripts), about folk ways, folk songs, folk beliefs, and regional speech patterns.

ARCHIVAL COLLECTIONS RELATED TO
CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY WORK IN SOUTH ASIA

Garland Craig (1883-1924). Photocopy of a letter written April 28, 1920 by Craig from Kodaikanal, India, to his father James H. Craig in Cave City, Arkansas. Garland is serving as a missionary and describes everyday life mentioning the natives, but really not telling much about his work.
