PART ONE: GENERAL INFORMATION

Statement of Purpose

The program of the Department is planned to meet as far as possible three specific needs in present-day China, namely, (1) constructive leadership in social planning, (2) scientific sociological research, and (3) modern social work.

Specifically speaking, courses offered in the Department are designed to prepare students: (1) for teaching in sociology; (2) for advanced study and research; (3) for community service including city planning, model village building, local self-government, mass education, public recreation, and citizenship training; (4) for public welfare administration including work in connection with such government departments as the Ministry of Interior and the municipal bureaus of social welfare; (5) for corrective institutional work such as prison administration, reformatory work, and police administration; (6) for urban social work; (7) for rural social work or rural social planning; (8) for family and social welfare work in connection with famine, flood and general relief societies as well as hospitals, health agencies, and child welfare organizations, and (9) for work in connection with modern population census and registration.

In addition to courses in general sociology and social theory, the Department offers special opportunities for professional training in social work and field social research—fields in which there has been a growing demand for workers. Practical work or field work is the basis on which the training is offered. This program has been made possible through the establishing of a rural social experiment station in Ching Ho, a social research laboratory in Ch'engfu and a special research library under the auspices of the Department; and through the co-operative arrangement between Department and other public and private social agencies in Peiping and elsewhere in China.

Degrees and Vocational Certificate in Social Work

The Department offers four types of courses, namely :

- The undergraduate course in Sociology leading to B.A. degree.
- The undergraduate professional course in Social Work leading to B.A. degree and Vocational Certificate in Social Work. (C.S.W.)
- The graduate course in Sociology leading to M.A. degree.
- The graduate professional course in Social Work leading to M.A. degree and Vocational Certificate in Social Work. (C.S.W.)

Regulation Governing Departmental Requirements for

B. A. in Sociology or in Social Work

Students majoring in the Department should take the following courses during the first year :

Freshman Chinese	3-3
Freshman English	4-4
Contemporary Civilization	2-2
Principles of Sociology	3-3
General Psychology	2-2
Introduction to Economics	2-2
Politics, Jurisprudence, or History	2-2

Students having had a course in human geography or biology may not be required to take general psychology. Students should also note general regulations of the College of arts and Lettes governing Physical Training, Military Training, Hygiene (for women), Party Principles, as well as credit requirements in the major Department and in correlated subjects. Students are advised to take, if possible, the 3-3 credit Introduction courses in Economics, Politics, and Jurisprudence, instead of the 2-2 credit courses.

After the first year, students in Sociology (the general course) should include in their program of study the following courses :

Introduction to Social Anthropology	3-0 (Soph. Year)
Social Psychology	0-2 (Soph. Year)
Social Research Methods	4-4 (Jun. Year)
Contemporary Sociological Theories	3-3 (Sen. Year)
Senior Thesis	2-2 (Sen. Year)

Beginning with the Junior Year, students should do their major work along some special line of study such as the Teaching of Sociology, Social Theory, Sociological Research, Social Anthropology, Family, Population, Rural Sociology, Social Pathology, etc., in consultation with an adviser to be assigned by the Department with the approval of the Chairman. Students are also advised to acquire a reading knowledge of either German, French, Japanese, or Russian ; and to take a course on Documentary Chinese. Those who intend to enter the Graduate Division after graduation should take those major courses as required by the Department upon admission.

Students in the Professional Course in Social Work, after the first year, should include the following subjects in their programs of study :

Second year :	Introduction to Social Work	3-3
	Poverty and Poor Relief	3-0
	Community Organization and Problems	0-3
	Social Psychology	0-2
Third Year :	Social Research Methods	4-4
	Case Work Methods	2-0
	Population or Family	3 or 3
	Field Work A	3-3
Fourth year :	Social Legislation	3-3
	Administration of Social Agencies	3-0
	Public Welfare Administration	0-3
	Public Health	0-2
	Field Work B	2-2

Major students in the Department who wish to enter the Professional Course in Social Work should apply for admission from the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work and work out with the Chairman of the Committee his or her individual program of study and field training. Field Work A (3-3) is open only to professional students in the junior year and the course is to include six hours on the field and three hours of readings each week for two semesters. Field Work B (2-2) is open to professional students in the senior year and includes also six hours on field each week for two semesters. A student must complete both Field Work A and Field Work B in order to receive credits. Students taking Introduction to Social Work (3-3) must keep open Saturday mornings for field trips to be specially arranged by the Department. If a student misses any one of the field trips during the course, he receives "incomplete" unless it is made up. In connection with the field work, evaluation of work done by individual students toward departmental requirements is decided upon by the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work. With regard to travel expenses, students taking field work may receive from the Department the minimum essential fare from the University to the bus station at Peiping (eighty cents at present) or to the Ching Ho Experiment Station (sixty cents at present) or any other place especially assigned by the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work. Allowance for such fare is limited to once a week, extra fare must be met by students themselves.

Students in the professional course who intend to continue post-graduate study are also advised to take during the undergraduate years, if possible, all pre-required courses in the major department for admission into the Graduate Division.

Regulations Governing Departmental Requirement for
M.A. in Sociology or in Social Work

Candidates for Master's degree in Sociology or Social Work, in addition to general regulations prescribed by the Committee for the Graduate Division of the University, must fulfill the following minimum essentials in the major field of study upon admission, or in case of any deficiency, take those pre-required courses without credit as the Department may prescribe:

- A. For graduate students in Sociology :
- a. History of social theory, past and contemporary, Chinese and Western.
 - b. Social statistics and methodology of the social sciences.
 - c. General theory of foundations, structure, relationships and forms of anthropo-social phenomena.

or Introduction to Social Anthropology	3-0

If a special graduate student feels that at the end of a semester he or she will be able to make up all his or her deficiencies for admission to regular graduate study as a candidate for the graduate degree, he or she should apply to the Chairman of the Department for the status of a regular graduate student about the middle of the semester. The special graduate student will become a regular graduate student during the following semester when the application is duly approved by vote of the Department faculty and by the Committee for the Graduate Division.

A regular graduate student in Sociology should work out a program of graduate study, in accordance with his or her individual interest and preparation, in consultation with his or her major adviser and with the approval of the Chairman of the Department. He or she may select any of the following fields for concentration or any other as the Department may approve: Sociological Theory, Rural-Urban Sociology, Comparative Social Institutions, Population, Sociology of the Family, Social Pathology and Criminology.

A regular graduate student in Social Work should include in his or her program of study the following courses: Welfare Administration (3-3), Social Legislation (3-3), Graduate Field Work (3-3). Should the student have already completed the undergraduate professional course in social work, he or she may register for two credits of graduate field work instead of six credits.

The examination for the Master's degree will include a thesis, a written examination, and an oral examination, especially on the subject of the thesis. The written examination for the Master's degree will consist of two papers, one paper on social theory and social institutions; and the other paper on the special branch of Sociology or Social Work with which the thesis is connected.

Correlated Subjects

Courses in any Department of the University that are given with a sociological or cultural point of view and general courses in any social science may be accepted as correlated electives. In addition, the following three groups of courses may be recommended as correlated study by the major adviser and with the approval of the Chairman of the Department:

1. Courses that furnish fundamental methodological training helpful in sociological research. For example: Historical Method, Archeological Study, Logic, Advanced Statistics, Educational Tests and Measurements, Personality Tests and Measurements, and Measurement of Intelligence.

2. Courses that furnish significant relevant data for a specific sociological study. For example: Students who are interested in Principles of Population will find it very helpful to include in their programs of study such courses as Human Geography, Economic Geography, Political Geography, Agricultural Economics, Industrialization, Public Health, Social Biology, Eugenics, International Economic Policies, International Relations etc.

3. Courses that are useful to professional students in any branch of social technology. For example: Students in Social Work may profitably take such courses as Administrative Law, Constitutional Law, Criminal Law, Family Law, Labour Problems, Coöperation, Industrial Welfare, Vocational Education, Educational Sociology, People's Education Movement, Abnormal Psychology, Psychology of Adolescence, Mental Hygiene, Child Care, Child Training, etc.

PART TWO: DESCRIPTION OF COURSES

Explanations

Courses are elective in each case according to the following schedule:
1—Freshman, 2—Sophomore, 3—Junior, 4—Senior, 5—Graduate.

Courses marked with asterisks are not given in the current year.
(e.g. *Soc. 108).

The college credits assigned to each course are indicated in the space directly following the title of the course, (e.g. credits 2-2).

When the course is a year course, the credits for each semester are indicated separately with a hyphen, (e.g. credits 2-2). Year courses must be taken by students for the whole year in order to obtain credit. When the course is a semester course, the credits are indicated before or after a hyphen and a zero according to fall or a spring semester, (e.g. 3-0 for a fall semester course, and 0-3 for a spring semester course).

Odd number courses are offered during the first semester and even number courses are offered during the second semester.

Credits 3-0

This course is largely devoted to methods, suggestions and problems of research in the field of social changes in China. Students are required to make original studies and participate in discussions on both the static and the dynamic aspects of social changes which are going on in China at the present time. The static aspect includes such topics as secret societies, non-political and less formal social organizations, political parties, non-political social movements and the newspapers. The dynamic aspect includes the trend of actual changes in familial organization, in village community, in social economy and in political relations. The scientific or realistic point of view in sociological study is emphasized. Students taking this course should have had previously a good background in sociology, economics, politics, anthropology, social psychology and history.

PART THREE: EXTENSION WORK AND FACILITIES FOR FIELD TRAINING IN SOCIAL WORK

In order to provide field work training to the students majoring in Social Work, the Department, besides cooperating with the most up to date social agencies in the city, has undertaken several pieces of extension work both in the city and in the country. The following is a brief report of the extension work of the Department and other training facilities.

The Ching Ho Rural Experiment Station. With the twofold purposes of experimenting on the methods of rural reconstruction and providing a laboratory for students interested in rural work, the Department opened the Ching Ho Rural Experiment Station in Ching Ho town about three miles from the University and six miles from the city, in June, 1930 following the survey made in 1928-29. The area of the experiment is forty villages with a total population of 22444. The farthest village is 12 li from Ching Ho and the nearest is only one li. The length of the experiment is seven years and it is hoped by the end of this period that the work will be self-supporting. The experiment is under the complete control of the Department and it has a director and a staff of twelve. The work of the Experiment Station is carried out through four divisions: Rural Health Work Division, Rural Economics Division, and Rural Research Division.

The program of work of the Station may be summarized as follows:

The Rural Health Work Division:

1. Health Work (In cooperation with the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station and the First Midwifery School).
 - a. Clinic
 - b. Vaccination
 - c. Street cleaning and food inspection
 - d. Visiting nursing
 - e. Birth and death registration
 - f. School hygiene
 - g. Midwifery and child welfare work

The Rural Social Work Division:

1. Educational Work
 - a. Thousand characters for women
 - b. Two girls' schools

- c. Two kindergartens
- d. Children's library
- e. Public reading room
- f. Public lectures and wall posters

2. Club Work

- a. Boys' club
- b. Girls' Club
- c. Mothers' Club

3. Recreation and Play

- a. Playground
- b. Musical club
- c. Boxing club
- d. Playroom
- e. Dramatic performances

The Rural Economics Division :

1. Small Loans Social work with a capital of $3,000 to be loaned to the farmers at a low rate of interest.
2. Coöperative Credit Societies with a total membership of 166.
3. Children's saving Society.
4. Pig and chicken extension work
5. Handicraft industry—embroidery work and wool weaving with a total capital of $1,000. There are now sixty persons working under these two projects.
6. Agricultural exhibit.

The Rural Research Division :

1. An intensive study of the Pei Tien Village.
2. Ching Ho market attendance study.
3. The Green Crop Association study.
4. A study of rural lawsuits.
5. Birth and death registration in Ching Ho and Pei Tien Village.

Besides these special projects, the Rural Research Division makes all the necessary analysis for the activities of the Station.

The Peiping Family Welfare Agency. In the winter of 1930, a group of citizens in the city of Peiping fully impressed by the case work method of handling the problem of poverty and other social problems, sent in repeated requests to the Department for help in organizing a family welfare agency in the city of Peiping. The Department accepted the request and asked one of its members to work together with these citizens in the creation of such an agency. After two months' work, the Peiping Family Welfare Agency, the first of its kind in China, was created in January, 1931. The objects of the Agency are :

1. To assist poor families to improve their living conditions ;
2. To promote co-ordination and coöperation among public and private charitable organizations and to arouse the interest of the community in Social Work ;
3. To demonstrate to the community the value of sound and intelligent social service measures and technique ; and
4. To furnish a training station for students in Social Work.

The Agency has its office in Hsien Liang Ssu, 1 Ping Cha Hutung. It has a Board of Directors fifteen in number with Dr. H. H. Lou, Formerly Director of the Bureau of Social Affairs of the Peiping Municipal Government, as its President, Mr. Y. S. Djang of the China International Famine Relief Commission as Vice-President, Mr. Cho Chun-wei as Secretary, Dr. Y. Y. Tsu as its first Treasurer, and Messrs Y. T. Tsur, J. B. Grant, Sohtsu King, S. J. Chuan, H. C. Chang, and Miss Ida Pruitt as members. Under the Board of Directors, there are the Executive Committee of five with Mr. Y. S. Djang as the Chairman, Miss Ida Pruitt as the head of the Case Department, and Mr. H. C. Chang as the head of the Department of Promotion and Organization, and the Financial Committee of ten with Mr. Cho Chun-yung, a Peiping banker, as the Chairman.

Because of the insufficiency of funds, the work of the Agency has been confined to the Inner First Police Ward of Peiping. By the end of the first year, it handled 174 cases and spent $4,858.43. The total number of people helped is 751.

Fully realizing the importance of creating jobs for the cases that are capable and ready to work, the Agency has started a small scale industry project, making toys and dolls, the former for ten boys and the latter for ten girls. These projects will not only save money and keep the funds intact, but it will give families some work by which they can make an independent living without the usual demoralizing effect from distribution of relief. Two thousand dollars have been received and another two thousand have been pledged for this purpose. Mr. C. C. Lin of the Jen Li Rug Factory has been asked to serve as the Chairman of the Small Scale Industrial Committee with Mr. Samuel Dean and Miss Bullington of the Social Service Department of the P. U. M. C. as members.

The Agency has already accomplished to some extent its second purpose, that is, to promote co-ordination and cooperation among the social service agencies. The Peiping Home Finding Society and the Peiping Committee on Maternal Health have their offices in the Agency. Besides working very closely together in the solution of the problems of the clients, they are sharing together all the office expenses.

In the year of 1931-1932 a number of students from the Department had their field work training in the Agency. Beyond rendering technical advice to the Agency and helping in the promotion, the Department is not responsible financially.

The Yenta Relief Federation. The Yenta Relief Federation was organized in the winter of 1929 to co-ordinate all the relief agencies in the University, and to work together for the relief of the poor families in the University neighborhood, and to prevent poverty. It is governed by a Board of Directors composed of two members from each affiliated association, and two representatives from the Sociology Department. The work is divided into three divisions: The Division of Investigation and Research; the Emergency Division; and the Division of Family Case Work. The Executive Secretary of the Federation is also a member of the Board of Directors, and the head of the Division of Family Case Work.

More than two-hundred families have been helped through the agency of the Family Case Work Division, which co-operates with the Peiping Union Medical College Social Service Department, the Peiping Home Finding Society, the Peiping Family Welfare Agency, the Ching Ho Experiment Station, and others.

The Division of Investigation and Research has made an enquiry into the budgets of workers in and around the University; a survey of the women workers in the No. 3 Appliqué Workshop; and also undertakes investigation into the status of other agencies referred to it, such as privately established poor schools, workshops, etc.

The Federation has endeavored as far as possible to attack the problems of poverty at their source, rather than to give relief only. For this reason it organized, in co-operation with the University and the local community, Public Health Work in the village of Chengfu, and two of its "cases" are employed as street cleaners under the Chengfu Health Committee. Secondly, it opened an Old Ladies' Home in Haitien to house those old ladies who because of the present disturbed conditions in China find themselves without home or relatives to look after them in their old age. At present, seven old ladies live in the home which supervised by a local committee, having representation on the Board of Directors. Thirdly, an Industrial School has been opened in Haitien for young boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years. Most of these boys have had two years' education, but their families have not been able to afford for them to continue. Therefore, the School was opened to continue their education, and also teach them a trade. Half day is spent in learning elementary subjects of the ordinary curriculum, taught with a view to the necessities of this type of boy; and the other half day is spent in hand-work, making wooden educational toys. The Industrial School is also supervised by its own local committee.

The students of the Department are encouraged to help in the organization and running of the work of the Yenta Relief Federation and its various aspects. The students do this without credit.

Other Institutions. The other places in which Yenching students do their field work are the Social Service Department of Peking Union Medical College, the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station, the Peiping Home Finding Society, the Peiping Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., the China International Famine Relief Commission, and the Bureau of Social Welfare of the Peiping Municipality. During the present year, we have six students taking field work in the Social Service Department of Peking Union Medical College, two in the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station, and two in the Peiping Y.M.C.A. These places are selected by the Department with great care for the students to do field work or to be engaged with field research, particularly from the standpoint of supervision and training. The educational value of field work is very much emphasized. Students are required to go to the city for field work at least once a week for a whole day. Students must hand in their reports with the details of work done each time. Individual conferences are arranged with each student twice a month with the field work supervisor. The agency is asked to hand in a monthly report concerning the work of each student, and the field work supervisor goes to each agency now and then to have personal conferences with the supervisor in the agency in order to keep a close touch with the work of the students in the field.

PART FOUR: FACILITIES FOR SOCIOLOGICAL RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS

Sailer Sociology Alcove and other Library Facilities

Through the generous contribution of an endowment by Dr. T. P. H. Sailer in memory of his mother, Josephine Sailer, the Department of Sociology and Social Work has been able to establish a special research library known as the Sailer Sociology Alcove, located in McBrier Hall, second floor. This library provides students with facilities for working with source materials in the field of Sociology and related subjects and it contains a fair collection of original reports of social research and Social Work institutions, periodicals, pamphlets, statutes, maps, charts, etc. The library is open from 9-12 A.M. and 1:30-4:30 P.M. on weekdays except Saturday afternoon. It is not open on Sunday or on holidays.

The University Library contains also a large number of volumes and pamphlets on Sociology and Anthropology; and much germane material is to be found in the historical, political, economic, philosophical, psychological, geographical, and other collections in the University Library as well as in the special libraries in the College of Public Affairs, in the Department of Psychology, and in the School of Religion. The unusual resources of many other libraries located in and near Peiping, such as the National Metropolitan Library, Chinese Social and Political Science Association Library, Library of the National Tsinghua University, and the library of the College of Chinese Studies, should be very useful to advanced students of social sciences.

Chengfu Social Research Laboratory and

Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research

In cooperation with Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research, a special research laboratory is established in Chengfu at No. 4 Huai Shu Chieh. The laboratory occupies a whole Chinese building with a number of research and statistical offices.

Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research is an independent organization and it has five specific objectives:

1. To gather social and population data in Peiping and elsewhere for teaching purposes;

2. To provide opportunities for field training in research for university students;
3. To develop technique for scientific study of Chinese population or Chinese social life;
4. To furnish data for comparative study in these fields for Chinese and foreign students; and
5. To supply concrete facts for scientific social planning.

The Committee is at present engaged in several research projects. The project on the Ching Miao Hui is a sampling study of rural community organization in North China. A project on village litigation is a sampling study of rural conflict. Then an intensive study of the life of a village near Ching Ho is planned. In Peiping, a project on Yin Tsu Chien is a study of the credit system in actual practice and its relation to community and family life. There are three projects related to population. A system of registration is set up in a village near Ching Ho in order to secure facts on births, deaths, and marriages through the exact method; and it is now in its second year of work. Another project of population registration and enumeration is planned in another province on a relatively larger scale. Finally, there is a more general study of the problems of population in China. There is also a study of ancestor worship in China limited to one aspect of the time-honored social institution in this country.

Staff of the Committee: Leonard S. Hsu, Director; Cato Young, Executive Secretary; W. T. Wu and H. C. Chang, Members; I-chin Yuan, Honorary Member; Wang Ho-ch'en, Research Associate; Hsu Yung-shun, Research Assistant; Chang Che-kuei, Research Assistant from Ching Ho Station; Lin Yueh-hua and Chang Chih-ming, Investigators; Kuo Ta-t'ung, Computer; Li Ch'ang-hui, Clerk.

Other Research Connections

Members of the departmental staff carry on from time to time a number of research projects in cooperation with other institutions in Peiping or elsewhere. One of the main purposes of this kind of cooperation is to provide opportunities or facilities for research for faculty and students of the Department. During the past year, a member of the Department has been conducting a social survey of poor families in Peiping under the auspices of the Social Welfare Bureau of Peiping Municipality. Another member of the Department has served as Executive Secretary of the Social Research Committee of the Shantung Provincial Academy for Rural Reconstruction. A third member, as soon as he returns from advanced study abroad, will be associated with the research bureau of the Provincial Institute for Social and Political Reconstruction in Kuangsi.

PART FIVE: ORGANIZATIONAL ACTIVITIES AND FACULTY-STUDENT RELATIONS

I. Chinese Sociological Society

The Chinese Sociological Society is a national scholastic organization devoted to the study of Sociology. Its headquarters are in Nanking with branch organizations in other centers such as Shanghai and Peiping where sociologists are gathered. The Society has five kinds of membership, namely, regular membership, student membership, honorary membership, permanent membership, and institutional membership. The Society edits a quarterly journal in Chinese, known as She Hui Hsueh K'an (Sociological Review), and the journal is sent free to all members. A National Convention for all members of the Society is held once a year; and in 1932 the Convention met at Yenching University. Branch societies meet more often, and the Peiping branch of the Society usually meets six or seven times a year. Both national meetings and branch meetings are largely occupied with the reading of scientific papers and discussion on sociological research. A representative group of faculty and students of the Department of Sociology of Yenching University is active in the various aspects of the Society's activities.

II. Tsinghua-Yenching Friends of Social Sciences

The Tsinghua-Yenching Friends of Social Sciences is a rather informal organization among faculty members of social science departments of both institutions. The group meets at the call of its two secretaries, one representing Tsinghua and one representing Yenching; and its meeting is devoted entirely to the reading of scientific papers.

III. North China Social Science Research Society

The North China Social Science Research Society is a recent organization. Its main purpose is to encourage coordination and coöperation in research in various social sciences among university departments and research institutes in North China. It intends to publish from time to time lists of research projects being undertaken under the auspices of these various organizations.

IV. Alpha Kappa Delta Fraternity

Alpha Kappa Delta is an honorary sociological scholastic fraternity having for its purpose the encouragement of the scientific study of Sociology and Social Work, and the promotion of fellowship among men of similar interest. The fraternity was originally founded in America and has established numerous chapters in colleges and universities throughout the United States. In March, this Department was authorized to establish the Alpha Chapter of China, the first international chapter of the organization. A senior or graduate student in Sociology or Social Work, upon satisfaction of certain requirements, may be nominated for membership by the Executive Council of the Chapter and be elected to membership upon unanimous vote by those present at regular membership meetings. The standards are: an average scholastic record of G in Sociology, a good moral character, a socialized personality, manifestation of ability in research, and a permanent interest in the field of Sociology. The regular semi-annual meetings of the society are held in the months of November and April. Further information may be obtained from Secretary of the Society in care of the Office of the Department in McBrier Hall.

V. Yenching Sociology Club

The membership of Yenching Sociology Club includes both instructors and students of the Department and its purpose is to stimulate interest in sociological study. The activities of the Club are: public lectures, discussion meetings, practical social service, publishing social surveys, and fellowship meetings. The Club has two regular meetings each semester, and in addition, it has many special meetings. The Club sends three representatives to Departmental Meetings to discuss matters of common interest. It has also sponsored a publication known as "The Social Problem". Further information may be obtained from the Chairman and officers of the Club.

VI. Sociology Class Fellowships

In recent years membership of the Sociology Club has become so large that it has become more and more difficult to maintain as close and intimate a fellowship among its members as could be desired six years ago. Thus since 1927-28 each class among major students has organized a "class fellowship"—graduate fellowship, senior fellowship, junior fellowship, sophomore fellowship, and freshman fellowship. So far these fellowships have even continued to exist after students have left the University, and the result is the growth of class fellowship in the various years such as the 1928 Fellowship, the 1929 Fellowship, etc. In addition, local fellowships of Yenching Sociology students have come into existence, such as the ones in Shanghai and Peiping. The activities of the fellowships include periodical discussion meetings, presentation of scientific papers embodying the results of individual study, social meetings, debates, and so forth.

IV. OBJECTIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY AND SOCIAL WORK

1. The program of the department is planned to meet as far as possible three specific needs in present-day China, namely,
- a. The need of constructive leadership in social planning;
 - b. The need of scientific or objective sociological research; and
 - c. The need of modern social work.
2. Specifically speaking, courses are offered to prepare students for:
- a. Teaching in sociology;
 - b. Undertaking technical work in social research institutes;
 - c. Community service including mass education, Y.M.C.A. work, Y.W.C.A. work, model village building, etc.;
 - d. Family and social welfare work in connection with welfare institutions and hospitals;
 - e. Public welfare administration such as the work in municipal social bureau and national ministry of interior;
 - f. Administration of private social agencies including relief societies;
 - g. Rural social work;
 - h. Corrective institutional work such as penal administration; and
 - i. Work in connection with modern population census and registration.
3. The department offers special opportunities for professional training in social work and field social research -- fields in which there has been a growing demand for workers. Practical work is the basis on which this training is offered.
4. During the past few years students in the department have worked in mass education (including Ting-hsien), in social research institutes (such as the Peking Institute of Social Research, Academic Sinica in Shanghai, and Institute of Educational Research in Canton), in government institutions (including Ministry of Industry, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Interior, Peiping and Shanghai Bureaus of Social Welfare), in community organizations (Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.), in charitable agencies (Peking Family Welfare Society, Peking Child Welfare Society, etc.), in hospitals (P.U.M.C. and General Hospital in Chengtu), etc.
5. Sociology, as a science, deals with the nature of society, its natural history, its characteristics, and the laws and rules by which society moves and changes. As a study, it is related to other sciences in the following aspects:

to

V. ACTUAL PROGRAM OF THE DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY AND SOCIAL WORK

1. The following statement is a statement of actual facts, not a prospectus of future programs.
2. The department offers work leading to B.A. and M.A. either in sociology or in social work. Professional students, in addition to degree, may obtain "Professional Certificate in Social Work." At present, Yenching is the only place in China to be able to get a full course, undergraduate and graduate, in professional social work.
3. The teaching program: About 35 courses which may be grouped under five headings, and about ten of these courses are offered in alternate years only because of limited staff and equipment:
 - a. Fundamental Courses: Introduction to Sociology (for non-major students and required by natural sciences as alternate), Principles of Sociology, Anthropology, and Social Psychology (by a member of Psychology department).
 - b. Social Institutions - Population, Family, Community Organization, Social Leadership, Urban Sociology, Rural Sociology, Social Changes in China, Social Progress and Social Reconstruction.
 - c. Social Theories - History of Western Social Thought, Chinese Social Thought, Contemporary Sociological Theories, and Journal Club.
 - d. Social Research - Social Research Methods, Vital Statistics, Field Research, Senior Thesis, and Seminars.
 - e. Social Technology or Social Work (professional courses) - Introduction to Social Work, Poverty and Poor Relief, Criminology and Penal Administration, Social Work among Youth Groups, Child Welfare, Public Health, Family Case Work, Psychiatric Social Work, Social Legislation, Administration of Social Agencies, and Public Welfare Administration. Also 2 years of Field Work.

Note: 8 of these courses are being taught by outside non-paid special lecturers.
4. Extension work in social work:
 - a. Ching Ho Experiment Station, with three departments in social work, social economics, and social research; 13 workers; and approximate budget of $5,000 a year.

b. Peiping connections:

1. Public Health Station for training in health social work;
2. Public Health Department in P.U.M.C. Same training.
3. Social Service department in P.U.M.C. For family case work and medical social service.
4. Peiping Child Welfare Society. For Child welfare work.
5. Peiping Family Welfare Agency. For relief work.
6. Peiping Committee on Maternal Health. For family welfare and case work.
7. Y.M.C.A. For group work training.
8. Prisons. For penological work.

c. Chengfu connections:

1. Nursery schools. For training in child welfare.
2. Yenta Relief Federation. For scientific relief.

d. Other outside connections:

1. Ministry of Industry, National Institute for Training of factory Inspectors. For industrial welfare.
2. Ysiang Shan Orphanage. For child welfare.
3. China Famine Relief Association. For rural credit cooperation.
4. Shantung Academy for Rural Reconstruction. For census work.
5. Peiping Municipal Bureau of Social Welfare. For study of poverty conditions.
6. Shanghai Social Bureau. Industrial welfare.

5. Social Research:

- a. Committee on Social and Population Research, with its main office in Chengfu, and a staff of about ten, just opened. Research money secured from outside amounts to over $10,000. Projects in Progress:

1. A sampling study of rural population (for Shantung Provincial Rural Academy);
2. A Critical Examination of the Chinese Population Problem (for the American Academy of Sciences and Arts);
3. A Study of Ching Miao Hui (for Gamble);
4. A Study of Village Litigations (for Gamble);
5. A Study of Stamp Money in Peiping (for Gamble);
6. A Study of Ancestor Worship (for Gamble);
7. An Intensive Study of Village Life (department project for Ching Ho Station work);
8. A Study of 1,200 poor families (for Peiping Municipal Government).

- b. Sailer Sociological Alcove covering three rooms, with reference books, research material and pamphlets, periodicals, reports, newspaper clippings, anthropological and statistical maps, and valuable original manuscripts and out-of-print books.

c. Sociology Publications:

1. The "Sociological World." Already five volumes.
2. Monographs and reports.
3. Publications by faculty members - Hsu, Wu, Young, Burgess, etc., amounting to nearly thirty volumes.
4. "Chinese Sociological Review," official publication of Chinese Sociological Society (registered with the National Government), edited by Hsu, Wu, and Young, with editors from other universities including Chen Ta of Tsing Hua, Sun Pen-wen of Nanking, etc.

6. Distribution of work among staff members:

Leonard Hsu (Ph.D.) - courses in social institutions and social theory; general departmental administration; population research.

Cato Young (Ph.D.) - courses in rural sociology and social research methods; field director in social research; research in rural sociology.

W. T. Wu (Ph.D.) - courses in anthropology and social theory; matters of publication; research supervision on ancestor worship.

H. C. Chang (M.A.) - courses in social work, general promotion for social work program, research in poverty.

H. C. Wang (M.A.) - Field responsibility for research and extension, newly arrival.

K. K. Louis (M.A.) - Courses in child welfare, Introduction, and urban sociology. Women students' advisor.

Special lecturers: Dr. C. W. Luth - social psychology

Dr. I. C. Yuan - vital statistics

Dr. J. B. Grant - public health

Miss Ida Pruitt - case work methods

Dr. Robert E. Park - sociology seminar

Dr. Lennig Sweet - primary social groups; and administration of social agencies

? - psychiatric social work.

CHING HO

A RURAL COMMUNITY CENTER

Purpose: To Provide an experiment station for rural community organisation, and a training center for students in rural social work.

When the Department of Sociology & Social Work in Yenching University decided to open a rural community center they had no difficulty in setting down the purpose. Even a superficial study of the material presented in the survey made in 1927-28 impressed them with their need for a place to experiment in, and where their students could learn something of rural work. Ching Ho itself provided as nearly as possible what might be called a typical town of the North China plain. The problem before the committee appointed to set up the work was two-fold: firstly, what type of rural community organisation to start with, and secondly, what ought to be the particular contribution that such a piece of work under University auspices could make in present-day China with its emphasis on rural reconstruction, and considering the number of plans for rural betterment already under way.

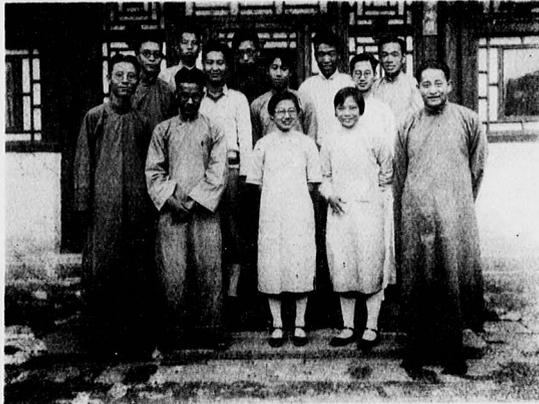

To answer the second question first; it was agreed that the unique contribution that could be made by a group such as ours was in an all-round programme, which while not emphasising any one feature, should through economic, political, educational, and social channels seek to raise the standard of living of the countryman and his powers to utilise those standards for his own and his groups' enjoyment. In other words, to give the peasant the opportunity of a more abundant life. It was on this basis that we commenced to build, and the following pages will show the type of rural community center which has developed in the North China market town.

During the progress of the survey many contacts had been made with the local officials and townspeople so that the preparatory period was not beset with so many difficulties as might have been anticipated if Ching Ho had been unknown territory. At the same time all was not plain sailing, particularly because of the fears of the local head of police who suspected that we wished to usurp his position. However a house in the main street was rented, furnished with the minimum equipment, and on June 14th, 1930 the Ching Ho Rural Experiment Center was formally opened before a distinguished gathering representing the provincial, district, and local education authorities, the China International Famine Relief Commission, the Mass Education Association, the Peking Y.M.C.A., the Peking Union Medical College, the Presbyterian Mission, and others.

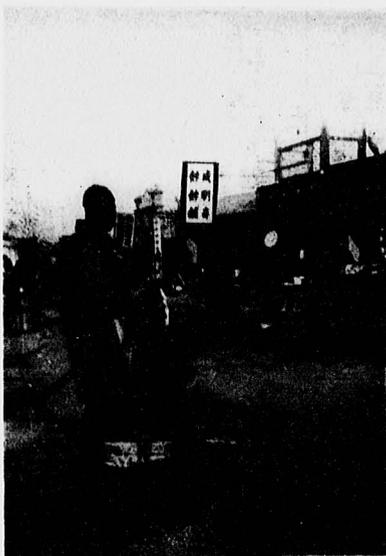

The opening meeting was held in the square courtyard, and was attended by about 300 people from the town and villages. Several speeches of welcome and good wishes were made, and six pien or illuminated scrolls were presented from the local community; and so the work was launched.

At first we were undecided what limits we should set to our work. Should we confine ourselves to the town itself, or should we extend to the immediate district? The survey had shown us that Ching Ho was the marketing center of about forty villages of approximately 22,450 persons, or nearly 4,000 households. It was eventually decided that we should keep our headquarters in the town, but that the actual work should extend to these villages which are all economically and socially bound up with Ching Ho. Unfortunately the villages are separated politically, sixteen belonging to Wan-Ping-Hsien, nine to Chang-Ping-Hsien, and the remaining fifteen are under the jurisdiction of the Peiping Municipality.

The unit of work is the village; the town, which is the economic center where most of the buying and selling is done, is the headquarters.

Thus we can get in touch with the farmers as they come in every second day to the grain market. It is also the political center and headquarters of the local self-government association, and of the police station for the whole district. However, each village, composed of several hundreds of families is a unit in itself with its own self-protection association, village school, and a certain amount of social life.

Up to the time of writing (June 1932) our work had extended to eighteen villages. This included Small Loan Society Work (16 villages); research into the Green Crop Associations, Law Suits, and a study of Vital Statistics, (3 villages); pig breeding (8 villages); chickens (7 villages); co-operative societies (4 villages); girls' sewing clubs (3 villages); kindergartens (3 villages); and children's books loaned (2 villages).

At first, the work was carried on by an Executive Committee appointed by the Department of Sociology & Social Work, but in September 1931 a change was made to the "director system". One director has been appointed by the Department to be solely responsible and the work is divided into three departments, each with a departmental head with his or her own workers. Under this method there is a centralization of personnel and policy. The three divisions of work are Rural Social Service, Rural Economics, and Rural Research.¹

As the Ching Ho Center is part of the extension work of the Department of Sociology & Social Work the funds for its maintenance come, in the first place, from the Department. The appropriations provide for the salaries of the workers, and for the running expenses. As far as possible the money for activities is raised locally or from special gifts received for the purpose.

¹ In August 1932 a further department was added: The Division of Rural Health, which is in charge of a qualified doctor.

In the beginning we set ourselves a seven years' task. For the first three years we expected that the work would have to be entirely financed from outside sources, but during the next four years the intention was that the work should more and more be supported from local funds, so that by the end of seven years the enterprise could be turned over to the local community. This is to be realised through contributions of money and personnel, co-operative enterprises, schemes for economic improvement, and so forth. As an instance of the method, the first kindergarten had to be subsidised by outside funds, but later ones have found their own accommodation and teachers, only asking for our supervisory help. From the beginning the pigs have been a source of income. The same is true of the medical work, and the small loan society work.

As far as possible we are endeavouring to train local people, and already many members of the staff are from the town and district. This all helps to create the feeling that the Center belongs to Ching Ho, and is not an outside agency. At the same time we are pointing the way to local men and women for more efficient ways of service.

During the first two years the buildings in which the Center is located were rented, but in February 1932 we were faced with the alternative of finding other accommodation or of buying the buildings. After careful consideration and estimation it was agreed to purchase. The money was secured through loans free of interest, from interested friends, and it is proposed to pay back from rent and interest on the small loan societies' dealings, within three years.

An amount of £200 has been lent free of interest for seven years, and this has been used as capital for pigs, home industry work, and small loan society work.

RURAL SOCIAL SERVICE.

CHILDREN'S WORK.

The emphasis which is put on children's work in Ching Ho is unique, as it is the one side of Chinese life which social work programmes seem to have neglected more than other. Work for children, beyond the town school, was certainly unknown in Ching Ho before.

In the summer of 1930 a Children's Club with a membership of about forty was started, for both boys and girls, from the ages of 6 to 14 years. However, six months' experience showed us that such a large grouping of all ages and both sexes was not the most desirable way to deal with them, so that at the beginning of the new year they were divided into groups according to their ages and needs. The older ones have been helped to find work, those of school age were persuaded to join the local school, the younger ones were gathered into a kindergarten. A student from Yenching has spent two afternoons each week at the school in charge of a course known as Citizenship Training. The term has been given a wide interpretation, and the course has included team and ball games, a literary society and a story-telling club, gardening, health talks, a fly-swatting campaign, etc. On the whole the local teachers are not well prepared, and a good deal of our work has been to give them a broader view of the term "education".

A Children's Library was set up in Ching Ho, containing nearly 500 books. In the first few months every one of the books had been borrowed more than once by the school children, and by 36 individual members. The monthly average of books loaned over a twelve-months' period is 105, the highest number being 216 in August 1931, and April 1932. The Library has already started to travel, first to the village of Pa Chia, four li from the town where the books have been taken by a member of the Girls' Club, and loaned to other children in the village; and now to two other villages. This is a very worth while piece of work which needs expanding, but funds and personnel are limited. So far only $50 (local currency) has been spent on books.

In March 1931, sixteen children from four to six years of age were enrolled into a kindergarten. The average attendance was somewhat low, about nine, and this was accounted for by sickness, long distances, and lack of education on the part of the parents. In order to try to remedy this state of affairs parents' meetings were held. The obvious pleasure of the children as they sang songs and played their games did more to convince the parents of the value of such work than many a long speech. Two classes have already graduated, the children attending the local school, and a third class has now started. A local girl is primarily responsible for the kindergarten under the supervision of the head of the Social Service Division.

In the village of Pa Chia lived a Miss Hsü who came to the Girls' Club, but could not get interested in sewing. However she was interested in the kindergarten, and asked for help in setting up a similar school in her village. On January 22nd, 1932 the kindergarten was opened in a large room given free by the local people. The room is fitted with a k'ang (brick bed) on which the children sit as in their own homes, and there is a large courtyard for a playground. Now the room has to accommodate 40 students, 20 in the kindergarten, and 20 older children who have started a school there. The Ching Ho Committee gave $35 to cover the cost of cleaning and papering the room; but later in the spring when the villages of Huang-Tu-Pei-Tien and San-Chi wished to start kindergartens they provided everything for themselves only asking our help in supervision and advice.

Twenty-one boys of about 16 years of age registered in a Boys' Club, with the purpose of training for rural leadership. Classes were held in rural economics, including the care of animals, seed selection etc.; self government principles were particularly emphasised. The Club ran for several months, and then a scheme was worked out whereby a member of the Center went to the School each week to give courses along the lines which the Club had been following. The Club was then dissolved as it was felt it was more desirable that these subjects should be taught as part of the school curricula.

WOMEN'S AND GIRLS' WORK.

There are no women teachers in the local school, and therefore very few girls attend after the age of 12 years. Although a country girl is kept very busy in her home many of them are anxious to learn some work that will enable them to earn a little for themselves. The standard of living of many farmers in the North is so low that even the smallest sum which the girls can earn makes a distinct difference to the family income. As a result the women who are skilled in hand-work have often been exploited by middlemen working for the big shops in Peiping and Tientsin. The Girls' Club therefore not only had the purpose of teaching the girls to make saleable goods, but of helping them to market their goods, and if possible, through some co-operation to prevent exploitation.

Twenty-four girls meet at the Center twice a week, in addition to working in their homes. In three villages groups of girls meet in the different homes. Altogether 55 girls are registered, their ages varying from 8 years to 26, the most usual being 14 years. They learn to do embroidery and simple tailoring, and in addition talks are given on clothing, hygiene, care of small children etc., and the girls are encouraged to learn to read and write and do simple arithmetic. As many of them as possible are being encouraged to make their homes into demonstration homes. The purpose is to teach the women how they can make their houses clean and attractive without any great economic outlay, and to get the best value from the materials they have at hand.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

In the beginning we did not initiate any special public health or medical work beyond putting out posters showing the advantages of preventive measures and general cleanliness. Then the wife of the local Chinese trained doctor was taken seriously ill, and arrangements were made through the Center to send her to the Peking Union Medical College. She came back well, and the doctor then became the prime mover in encouraging us to include health work, especially maternity work, in our programme.

Through the co-operation of the Public Health and Hygiene Department of the P. U. M. C. a project of rural health was launched, they being responsible for the technical side, the supply of medicines, and the sending out of a doctor one day a week; and the Center being responsible for the local health worker and his salary, and for the provision of accommodation. A local man was sent to receive six month's training in their short-course training school, and has returned to Ching Ho to take charge under their supervision. The Health Station was opened on August 20th, 1931 when more than 200 persons participated. An exhibition of health pictures and posters was also held with a total attendance of about 800.

The dispensary is open daily when dressings and minor ailments are attended to by the nurse in charge. The doctor visits the clinic every Saturday, and attends to the more important cases. During the first eleven months 560 examinations were made by the doctor (433 men and 127 women). Of these 155 were medical cases and 405 surgical. In the same period the total number of visits to the Dispensary was 615 (453 men and 162 women).

The health worker visits the school three times a week to give health talks to the children, and to encourage them to support the work the station is doing. A Student Health Committee has been formed to encourage health education, the boiling of water, clean toilets, etc. The school children have all been examined, and about half of them (73) were found to have trachoma.

Once a week the P.U.M.C. Public Health Station in Peiping sends out two visiting nurses to Ching Ho who visit the homes, attending the sick, giving health instruction, talks on home and personal hygiene, etc. The Center also acts as a training ground for students who are taking the public health courses, and who visit Ching Ho once a week for field work training.

There is a very high mortality rate among mothers in childbirth and of young children. Arrangements have therefore been made with the First Midwifery School in Peiping to send a modern trained mid-wife to be stationed at the Center for three purposes: (1) to take care of maternity cases with pay; (2) to train the local midwives; and (3) to give pre-natal care and instruction. This trained midwife will arrive on July 1st, 1932.*

Road-building. The main road through Ching Ho is the direct highway between Peking and the North-west, and there is a continuous traffic of mules, donkeys, heavy carts, etc. As a result the surface had become very bad, and the dust which lay thickly on the road was continuously stirred causing contamination to the food displayed in the shops on the roadside. Through the stimulation of the Center a batallion of the Army stationed near Ching Ho agreed to give the labour necessary for mending the road surface. The Chamber of Commerce paid the expenses, the local factory gave ashes, and the surrounding villages contributed forty carts for one week to draw the material. Thus the road was rebuilt, and is now in good condition.

During the week there was also a "Clean the Town" campaign, and efforts were made to clean up all the side roads as well as the main high street. The Agricultural Society and the Chamber of Commerce have jointly agreed to employ regularly two street cleaners.

RECREATION AND PLAY.

On part of the land which belongs to the Center we have erected basket ball posts (kindly given by the Physical Education Department of Yenching University), and here the children and others are encouraged to play outdoor games.

The Center provides five newspapers in the Reading Room and some very simple reading material for adults. As soon as funds are available it is proposed to start an adult library. There is now an average of 40-50 persons using the room daily. In addition to reading the visitors may play chess or listen to the victrola. Most of the visitors are men. Very few women can read, and also it is not customary for the women to mix with men in public places.

The walls of the Reading and Recreation Room are used for the display of pictures and posters in connection with savings projects, mass education, health, agricultural improvement, etc. There is also room to display new models of agricultural machines, or improved implements.

As so many of the residents, especially the women and children, have never been more than a few li from their immediate neighbourhood we have arranged visits to places of interest in Peking and the surrounding district. Several groups have been to Yenching University, especially to see the Agricultural work, and on one day 200 people went to the Summer Palace.

The play has always been a great educational and social feature of Chinese life as of life in other countries. The subjects are mostly historical, religious, or folk tales. The Mass Education Association has prepared several modern plays which are useful to show the way to better and higher standards of living and education. Two of these plays were given by a local group recently, and produced on two days, for which a small admission fee was charged. The first day there was a total attendance of 588 and 538 on the second day.

For some months a local paper was published twice a month by the Center in co-operation with the local leaders. It contained articles on local conditions, the development of our work, local and national news items, and special articles on public health, self-government, agricultural experiments, etc.

We have always aimed to keep a wall poster announcing affairs of importance both local and national, to draw attention to special agricultural improvements, preventive health work, etc. Each of the three divisions co-operates in the collection of material.

RURAL ECONOMICS

That the farmers are particularly interested in the economic aspect of things is only natural when so many of them are making but a bare subsistence. It is not surprising that the central thought in their lives should be how to make a little more from the soil, or how to make what they already have go a little further. Therefore, we have given a great deal of thought and energy to this problem of improving the livelihood of the country people through economic channels. As social workers we cannot pretend to have expert knowledge along all these technical lines, but we have been greatly helped in our plans by the Yenching Agricultural Station, the American Board Mission at Tungchow, the China International Famine Relief Association, the Ting Hsien Mass Education Association and others who have had special experience which they have unstintedly placed at our service.

On October 24th and 25th, 1930, an Agricultural Exhibition was held in co-operation with the Yenching Agricultural Experiment Station, and participated in by the local farmers. The exhibits included farm products, modern or improved implements, improved and drought-resisting seeds, pictures illustrating pest prevention, etc. During the two days some 900 people visited the Exhibition. This has now become an annual affair.

For some years the Yenching Agricultural Experiment Station has been experimenting in pig breeding and the benefits of their experiments have been available for the farmers in the district. When, because of reorganisation, it was proposed to close down this division of work in Yen-ching the farmers requested that the Center should take up the work. Accordingly five pigs: one Poland China, two Tamworths, and two Berkshires (three boars and two sows) were assigned to Ching Ho.

During 1931-32 fifteen farmers from six villages brought their native sows to be bred, and the fifty-nine small pigs which resulted from the cross-breeding were valued at $183.00. From our own two sows we have had 18 pigs during this period. One died, and the remaining seventeen were sold to farmers in nine different villages for $82.50.

The cost of maintaining pigs is rather high, and so an arrangement was made by which we could feed our pigs at comparatively little expense to the Center, and at the same time conform to a local custom. $350 has been lent as capital to a family who wished to set up a bean-noodle business, and in return they feed the pigs under the supervision of our worker. In addition to feeding the pigs they also agreed to give us twenty carts of manure a year as rent for the land and house which they occupy for their business, and which belongs to the Center. This has since been computed to a rent of $20 per annum.

At the same time as we took over the pigs we also took over a few chickens from Yenching and Tungchow who have been making experiments with imported chickens crossed with local stock for several years. We propose to carry on a certain amount of this work at Ching Ho. Our regulations are that the Leghorn cocks are given out to farmers who have at least seven native hens, provided they agree to kill off all their native cocks and raise their new stock under our direction. Their payment for the cocks is in eggs according to the local price. In 1931-32 fifty-two White Leghorn, and five Rhode Island Red Cockerels were sent out to 14 villages, and according to information the second crossing has resulted in a total of 978 chicks.

Small Loan Society work has been started with the purpose of trying to bring down local interest rates, which range from 36% to 40% monthly, and also to demonstrate to the people that with efficient management money can be safely invested. It is hoped that such work may develop later into a People's Bank. The first Small Loan Society work was started with a capital of $240 lent to the Center interest free, and the success of the first year's working encouraged a friend to lend us $3,000 free of interest for seven years to develop this type of work. According to the rules no one person may borrow more than $20. A committee of five of the local people has been formed, with the head of the Division of Social Economics as secretary, and all applications are made through this Committee, and thoroughly investigated before a loan is made. The system is as follows: if a man borrows $10 he pays back nothing for the first month, but for the following eleven months he pays back $1 a month, thus making a total of $11 returned for the $10 borrowed, repayed within one year. This is high interest, but we did not wish to antagonise the money lenders, neither did we wish to put interest rates so low that it would be uneconomic. During the first year 41 people borrowed money; 20% repaid before due date, 20% were late, and the remaining 60% paid when due; there were no bad debts. By March 1932 all the money had been lent out to 194 individuals; 99 of these belonged to Ching Ho town, and the remaining 95 were from the villages.

The biggest borrowers were farmers (37%); retailers (20%); laborers and merchants (each 16%). Most people borrowed the money for capital (48.4%); for cultivating land (22.2%); and to clear other debts borrowed at higher rates of interest (18.5%).

The China International Famine Relief Society has been active in establishing Credit Societies in North China in an endeavour to encourage the farmers to make provision for a "rainy day." A group of people get together and borrow a sum of money collectively to add to their own savings in order to accomplish some piece of work. The Center has also taken up Credit Society work with the help of the Commission. When a society is properly organised, and has shown ability in managing its own affairs the members may apply to the Center for "recognition", and then have the privilege of borrowing money to add to their own shares and capital funds. Up to June 1932, five district societies were recognised by the Center with a membership of 107 persons owning 122 shares. The total money value of these shares is $142 and in addition the members have subscribed capital of $32. With the $450 borrowed from the Center this gives the five societies a total capital of $624.

In addition there are four other societies still unrecognised with a membership of 40 who have subscribed for forty shares at a total value of $43. We are hoping to be able to gather several of these small societies together into a larger group so that they be more influential.

The children have been encouraged in habits of thrift by the opening of a Children's Savings Society. Fourteen members were able to save $1.35 in the first month. The keeping of accounts is carefully explained to them, and interest is added.

RURAL RESEARCH

Any type of experimental work must be based on accurate knowledge of the facts related to its own area and conditions. Therefore a strong research programme is absolutely essential as the foundation on which all work is built. The following studies are at present being carried on.

1. A Study of the Green Crop Association (Ching Miao Hui). This association is of prime importance in the rural community. It does educational work, it arranges for the protection of crops during the growing season, and during the winter it organises bands for self-protection from robbers and bandits. It also settles disputes between the farmer, and does social work through the provision of food and clothing to the poor, and helps in case of famine. It is a religious body. Its headquarters are usually located in a temple, and at the Autumn Festival the heads of the Ching Miao Hui take up their positions at the temple, and the farmers, who are all assessed according to the amount of land they own, must then come to pay their dues to the Association and make an offering to the gods in thanksgiving for the harvest. A feast is often provided from the funds, and sometimes public performances of old plays are arranged. The Association usually serves as a government agency for the collection of taxes and levies.

This study has been made possible through a generous gift from Dr. Sidney Gamble, and three full time field workers are now employed under the supervisions of the Center, and with the advice of Dr. Cato Young.

2. Marketing. Ching Ho is an important marketing center. The Economics Department of Yenching University have made an interesting study of grain marketing in North China including a survey of Ching Ho. To supplement this the Center has made a study of the number of people who attend the market held every second day. The study was completed early in 1932, and the statistical data is now being worked out.

3. Vital Statistics. Through a generous gift from Professor Warren Thompson of Ohio University and the Scripps Foundation, it has been possible to attempt a study of vital statistics in co-operation with the Peking Union Medical College. Our purpose is not only to get statistics, but to experiment in methods of collection in rural districts. Connections have been established with school teachers, doctors, midwives, village heads, temples, coffin shops, and other likely sources in efforts to secure accurate data.

4. Law Suits. Although the farmers are thrifty in many ways yet they are quite generous in the payment of legal expenses. During the busy season there is little trouble and hardly any litigation, but as soon as the harvest is in the granary, and they are free, trouble begins. Knowing very little of court procedure and technique they go to their friends for help, and in one way or another lose a lot of money. It is the purpose of this study to make an investigation into the causes, and the effects of law suits on the farmers.

5. Village Community Study. One worker has spent two years in the village of Huang-Tu-Pei-Tien studying village geography, population, religion, education, protection, etc., to make an intensive study of village life.

PART ONE: GENERAL INFORMATION

Statement of Purpose

The program of the Department is planned to meet as far as possible three specific needs in present-day China, namely, (1) constructive leadership in social planning, (2) scientific sociological research, and (3) modern social work.

Specifically speaking, courses offered in the Department are designed to prepare students: (1) for teaching in sociology; (2) for advanced study and research; (3) for community service including city planning, model village building, local self-government, mass education, public recreation, and citizenship training; (4) for public welfare administration including work in connection with such government departments as the Ministry of Interior and the municipal bureaus of social welfare; (5) for corrective institutional work such as prison administration, reformatory work, and police administration; (6) for urban social work; (7) for rural social work or rural social planning; (8) for family and social welfare work in connection with famine, flood and general relief societies as well as hospitals, health agencies, and child welfare organizations, and (9) for work in connection with modern population census and registration.

In addition to courses in general sociology and social theory, the Department offers special opportunities for professional training in social work and field social research—fields in which there has been a growing demand for workers. Practical work or field work is the basis on which the training is offered. This program has been made possible through the establishing of a rural social experiment station in Ching Ho, a social research laboratory in Ch'engfu and a special research library under the auspices of the Department; and through the co-operative arrangement between Department and other public and private social agencies in Peiping and elsewhere in China.

Degrees and Vocational Certificate in Social Work

The Department offers four types of courses, namely :

- a. The undergraduate course in Sociology leading to B.A. degree.
- b. The undergraduate professional course in Social Work leading to B.A. degree and Vocational Certificate in Social Work. (C.S.W.)
- c. The graduate course in Sociology leading to M.A. degree.
- d. The graduate professional course in Social Work leading to M.A. degree and Vocational Certificate in Social Work. (C.S.W.)

Regulation Governing Departmental Requirements forB. A. in Sociology or in Social Work

Students majoring in the Department should take the following courses during the first year :

Freshman Chinese	3-3
Freshman English	4-4
Contemporary Civilization	2-2
Principles of Sociology	3-3
General Psychology	2-2
Introduction to Economics	2-2
Politics, Jurisprudence, or History	2-2

Students having had a course in human geography or biology may not be required to take general psychology. Students should also note general regulations of the College of arts and Lettes governing Physical Training, Military Training, Hygiene (for women), Party Principles, as well as credit requirements in the major Department and in correlated subjects. Students are advised to take, if possible, the 3-3 credit Introduction courses in Economics, Politics, and Jurisprudence, instead of the 2-2 credit courses.

After the first year, students in Sociology (the general course) should include in their program of study the following courses :

Introduction to Social Anthropology	3-0 (Soph. Year)
Social Psychology	0-2 (Soph. Year)
Social Research Methods	4-4 (Jun. Year)
Contemporary Sociological Theories	3-3 (Sen. Year)
Senior Thesis	2-2 (Sen. Year)

Beginning with the Junior Year, students should do their major work along some special line of study such as the Teaching of Sociology, Social Theory, Sociological Research, Social Anthropology, Family, Population, Rural Sociology, Social Pathology, etc., in consultation with an adviser to be assigned by the Department with the approval of the Chairman. Students are also advised to acquire a reading knowledge of either German, French, Japanese, or Russian ; and to take a course on Documentary Chinese. Those who intend to enter the Graduate Division after graduation should take those major courses as required by the Department upon admission.

Students in the Professional Course in Social Work, after the first year, should include the following subjects in their programs of study :

Second year :	Introduction to Social Work	3-3
	Poverty and Poor Relief	3-0
	Community Organization and Problems	0-3
	Social Psychology	0-2
Third Year :	Social Research Methods	4-4
	Case Work Methods	2-0
	Population or Family	3 or 3
	Field Work A	3-3
Fourth year :	Social Legislation	3-3
	Administration of Social Agencies	3-0
	Public Welfare Administration	0-3
	Public Health	0-2

Major students in the Department who wish to enter the Professional Course in Social Work should apply for admission from the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work and work out with the Chairman of the Committee his or her individual program of study and field training. Field Work A (3-3) is open only to professional students in the junior year and the course is to include six hours on the field and three hours of readings

each week for two semesters. Field Work B (2-2) is open to professional students in the senior year and includes also six hours on field each week for two semesters. A student must complete both Field Work A and Field Work B in order to receive credits. Students taking Introduction to Social Work (3-3) must keep open Saturday mornings for field trips to be specially arranged by the Department. If a student misses any one of the field trips during the course, he receives "incomplete" unless it is made up. In connection with the field work, evaluation of work done by individual students toward departmental requirements is decided upon by the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work. With regard to travel expenses, students taking field work may receive from the Department the minimum essential fare from the University to the bus station at Peiping (eighty cents at present) or to the Ching Ho Experiment Station (sixty cents at present) or any other place especially assigned by the Committee for Professional Training in Social Work. Allowance for such fare is limited to once a week, extra fare must be met by students themselves.

Students in the professional course who intend to continue post-graduate study are also advised to take during the undergraduate years, if possible, all pre-required courses in the major department for admission into the Graduate Division.

Regulations Governing Departmental Requirement for
M.A. in Sociology or in Social Work

Candidates for Master's degree in Sociology or Social Work, in addition to general regulations prescribed by the Committee for the Graduate Division of the University, must fulfill the following minimum essentials in the major field of study upon admission, or in case of any deficiency, take those pre-required courses without credit as the Department may prescribe:

- A. For graduate students in Sociology :
 - a. History of social theory, past and contemporary, Chinese and Western.
 - b. Social statistics and methodology of the social sciences.
 - c. General theory of foundations, structure, relationships and forms of anthropo-social phenomena.
 - d. Social organization or social changes.
- B. For graduate students in social work :
 - a. General theory of foundations, structure, relationships and forms of anthropo-social phenomena.

- b. Social statistics and methodology of the social sciences.
- c. General theory and practice of social work.

or Introduction to Social Anthropology	3-0

If a special graduate student feels that at the end of a semester he or she will be able to make up all his or her deficiencies for admission to regular graduate study as a candidate for the graduate degree, he or she should apply to the Chairman of the Department for the status of a regular graduate student about the middle of the semester. The special graduate student will become a regular graduate student during the following semester when the application is duly approved by vote of the Department faculty and by the Committee for the Graduate Division.

A regular graduate student in Sociology should work out a program of graduate study, in accordance with his or her individual interest and preparation, in consultation with his or her major adviser and with the approval of the Chairman of the Department. He or she may select any of the following fields for concentration or any other as the Department may approve: Sociological Theory, Rural-Urban Sociology, Comparative Social Institutions, Population, Sociology of the Family, Social Pathology and Criminology.

A regular graduate student in Social Work should include in his or her program of study the following courses: Welfare Administration (3-3), Social Legislation (3-3), Graduate Field Work (3-3). Should the student have already completed the undergraduate professional course in social work, he or she may register for two credits of graduate field work instead of six credits.

The examination for the Master's degree will include a thesis, a written examination, and an oral examination, especially on the subject of the thesis. The written examination for the Master's degree will consist of two papers, one paper on social theory and social institutions; and the other paper on the special branch of Sociology or Social Work with which the thesis is connected.

Correlated Subjects

Courses in any Department of the University that are given with a sociological or cultural point of view and general courses in any social science may be accepted as correlated electives. In addition, the following three groups of courses may be recommended as correlated study by the major adviser and with the approval of the Chairman of the Department:

1. Courses that furnish fundamental methodological training helpful in sociological research. For example: Historical Method, Archeological Study, Logic, Advanced Statistics, Educational Tests and Measurements, Personality Tests and Measurements, and Measurement of Intelligence.

2. Courses that furnish significant relevant data for a specific sociological study. For example: Students who are interested in Principles of Population will find it very helpful to include in their programs of study such courses as Human Geography, Economic Geography, Political Geography, Agricultural Economics, Industrialization, Public Health, Social Biology, Eugenics, International Economic Policies, International Relations etc.

3. Courses that are useful to professional students in any branch of social technology. For example: Students in Social Work may profitably take such courses as Administrative Law, Constitutional Law, Criminal Law, Family Law, Labour Problems, Coöperation, Industrial Welfare, Vocational Education, Educational Sociology, People's Education Movement, Abnormal Psychology, Psychology of Adolescence, Mental Hygiene, Child Care, Child Training, etc.

PART TWO: DESCRIPTION OF COURSES

Explanations

Courses are elective in each case according to the following schedule :
1—Freshman, 2—Sophomore, 3—Junior, 4—Senior, 5—Graduate.

Courses marked with asterisks are not given in the current year.
(e. g. *Soc. 108).

The college credits assigned to each course are indicated in the space directly following the title of the course, (e.g. credits 2-2).

When the course is a year course, the credits for each semester are indicated separately with a hyphen, (e.g. credits 2-2). Year courses must be taken by students for the whole year in order to obtain credit. When the course is a semester course, the credits are indicated before or after a hyphen and a zero according to fall or a spring semester, (e.g. 3-0 for a fall semester course, and 0-3 for a spring semester course).

Odd number courses are offered during the first semester and even number courses are offered during the second semester.

PART THREE: EXTENSION WORK AND FACILITIES FOR FIELD TRAINING IN SOCIAL WORK

In order to provide field work training to the students majoring in Social Work, the Department, besides cooperating with the most up to date social agencies in the city, has undertaken several pieces of extension work both in the city and in the country. The following is a brief report of the extension work of the Department and other training facilities.

The Ching Ho Rural Experiment Station. With the twofold purposes of experimenting on the methods of rural reconstruction and providing a laboratory for students interested in rural work, the Department opened the Ching Ho Rural Experiment Station in Ching Ho town about three miles from the University and six miles from the city, in June, 1930 following the survey made in 1928-29. The area of the experiment is forty villages with a total population of 22444. The farthest village is 12 li from Ching Ho and the nearest is only one li. The length of the experiment is seven years and it is hoped by the end of this period that the work will be self-supporting. The experiment is under the complete control of the Department and it has a director and a staff of twelve. The work of the Experiment Station is carried out through four divisions: Rural Health Work Division, Rural Economics Division, and Rural Research Division.

The program of work of the Station may be summarized as follows:

The Rural Health Work Division:

1. Health Work (In coöperation with the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station and the First Midwifery School).
 - a. Clinic
 - b. Vaccination
 - c. Street cleaning and food inspection
 - d. Visiting nursing
 - e. Birth and death registration
 - f. School hygiene
 - g. Midwifery and child welfare work

The Rural Social Work Division:

1. Educational Work
 - a. Thousand characters for women
 - b. Two girls' schools

- c. Two kindergartens
 - d. Children's library
 - e. Public reading room
 - f. Public lectures and wall posters
2. Club Work
 - a. Boys' club
 - b. Girls' Club
 - c. Mothers' Club
 3. Recreation and Play
 - a. Playground
 - b. Musical club
 - c. Boxing club
 - d. Playroom
 - e. Dramatic performances

The Rural Economics Division :

1. Small Loans Social work with a capital of $3,000 to be loaned to the farmers at a low rate of interest.
2. Coöperative Credit Societies with a total membership of 166.
3. Children's saving Society.
4. Pig and chicken extension work
5. Handicraft industry—embroidery work and wool weaving with a total capital of $1,000. There are now sixty persons working under these two projects.
6. Agricultural exhibit.

The Rural Research Division :

1. An intensive study of the Pei Tien Village.
2. Ching Ho market attendance study.
3. The Green Crop Association study.
4. A study of rural lawsuits.
5. Birth and death registration in Ching Ho and Pei Tien Village.

Besides these special projects, the Rural Research Division makes all the necessary analysis for the activities of the Station.

The Peiping Family Welfare Agency. In the winter of 1930, a group of citizens in the city of Peiping fully impressed by the case work method of handling the problem of poverty and other social problems, sent in repeated requests to the Department for help in organizing a family welfare agency in the city of Peiping. The Department accepted the request and asked one of its members to work together with these citizens in the creation of such an agency. After two months' work, the Peiping Family Welfare Agency, the first of its kind in China, was created in January, 1931. The objects of the Agency are :

1. To assist poor families to improve their living conditions ;
2. To promote co-ordination and coöperation among public and private charitable organizations and to arouse the interest of the community in Social Work ;
3. To demonstrate to the community the value of sound and intelligent social service measures and technique ; and
4. To furnish a training station for students in Social Work.

The Agency has its office in Hsien Liang Ssu, 1 Ping Cha Hutung. It has a Board of Directors fifteen in number with Dr. H. H. Lou, Formerly Director of the Bureau of Social Affairs of the Peiping Municipal Government, as its President, Mr. Y. S. Djang of the China International Famine Relief Commission as Vice-President, Mr. Cho Chun-wei as Secretary, Dr. Y. Y. Tsu as its first Treasurer, and Messrs Y. T. Tsur, J. B. Grant, Sohtsu King, S. J. Chuan, H. C. Chang, and Miss Ida Pruitt as members. Under the Board of Directors, there are the Executive Committee of five with Mr. Y. S. Djang as the Chairman, Miss Ida Pruitt as the head of the Case Department, and Mr. H. C. Chang as the head of the Department of Promotion and Organization, and the Financial Committee of ten with Mr. Cho Chun-yung, a Peiping banker, as the Chairman.

Because of the insufficiency of funds, the work of the Agency has been confined to the Inner First Police Ward of Peiping. By the end of the first year, it handled 174 cases and spent $4,858.43. The total number of people helped is 751.

Fully realizing the importance of creating jobs for the cases that are capable and ready to work, the Agency has started a small scale industry project, making toys and dolls, the former for ten boys and the latter for ten girls. These projects will not only save money and keep the funds intact, but it will give families some work by which they can make an independent living without the usual demoralizing effect from distribution of relief. Two thousand dollars have been received and another two thousand have been pledged for this purpose. Mr. C. C. Lin of the Jen Li Rug Factory has been asked to serve as the Chairman of the Small Scale Industrial Committee with Mr. Samuel Dean and Miss Bullington of the Social Service Department of the P. U. M. C. as members.

The Agency has already accomplished to some extent its second purpose, that is, to promote co-ordination and coöperation among the social service agencies. The Peiping Home Finding Society and the Peiping Committee on Maternal Health have their offices in the Agency. Besides working very closely together in the solution of the problems of the clients, they are sharing together all the office expenses.

In the year of 1931-1932 a number of students from the Department had their field work training in the Agency. Beyond rendering technical advice to the Agency and helping in the promotion, the Department is not responsible financially.

The Yenta Relief Federation. The Yenta Relief Federation was organised in the winter of 1929 to co-ordinate all the relief agencies in the University, and to work together for the relief of the poor families in the University neighborhood, and to prevent poverty. It is governed by a Board of Directors composed of two members from each affiliated association, and two representatives from the Sociology Department. The work is divided into three divisions: The Division of Investigation and Research; the Emergency Division; and the Division of Family Case Work. The Executive Secretary of the Federation is also a member of the Board of Directors, and the head of the Division of Family Case Work.

More than two-hundred families have been helped through the agency of the Family Case Work Division, which co-operates with the Peiping Union Medical College Social Service Department, the Peiping Home Finding Society, the Peiping Family Welfare Agency, the Ching Ho Experiment Station, and others.

The Division of Investigation and Research has made an enquiry into the budgets of workers in and around the University; a survey of the women workers in the No. 3 Appliqué Workshop; and also undertakes investigation into the status of other agencies referred to it, such as privately established poor schools, workshops, etc.

The Federation has endeavored as far as possible to attack the problems of poverty at their source, rather than to give relief only. For this reason it organised, in co-operation with the University and the local community, Public Health Work in the village of Chengfu, and two of its "cases" are employed as street cleaners under the Chengfu Health Committee. Secondly, it opened an Old Ladies' Home in Haitien to house those old ladies who because of the present disturbed conditions in China find themselves without home or relatives to look after them in their old age. At present, seven old ladies live in the home which is supervised by a local committee, having representation on the Board of Directors. Thirdly, an Industrial School has been opened in Haitien for young boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years. Most of these boys have had two years' education, but their families have not been able to afford for them to continue. Therefore, the School was opened to continue their education, and also teach them a trade. Half day is spent in learning elementary subjects of the ordinary curriculum, taught with a view to the necessities of this type of boy; and the other half day is spent in hand-work, making wooden educational toys. The Industrial School is also supervised by its own local committee.

The students of the Department are encouraged to help in the organization and running of the work of the Yenta Relief Federation and its various aspects. The students do this without credit.

Other Institutions. The other places in which Yenching students do their field work are the Social Service Department of Peking Union Medical College, the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station, the Peiping Home Finding Society, the Peiping Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., the China International Famine Relief Commission, and the Bureau of Social Welfare of the Peiping Municipality. During the present year, we have six students taking field work in the Social Service Department of Peking Union Medical College, two in the Peiping Public Health Demonstration Station, and two in the Peiping Y. M. C. A. These places are selected by the Department with great care for the students to do field work or to be engaged with field research particularly from the standpoint of supervision and training. The educational value of field work is very much emphasized. Students are required to go to the city for field work at least once a week for a whole day. Students must hand in their reports with the details of work done each time. Individual conferences are arranged with each student twice a month with the field work supervisor. The agency is asked to hand in a monthly report concerning the work of each student, and the field work supervisor goes to each agency now and then to have personal conferences with the supervisor in the agency in order to keep in close touch with the work of the students in the field.

PART FOUR: FACILITIES FOR SOCIOLOGICAL RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS

Sailer Sociology Alcove and other Library Facilities

Through the generous contribution of an endowment by Dr. T. P. H. Sailer in memory of his mother, Josephine Sailer, the Department of Sociology and Social Work has been able to establish a special research library known as the Sailer Sociology Alcove, located in McBrier Hall, second floor. This library provides students with facilities for working with source materials in the field of Sociology and related subjects and it contains a fair collection of original reports of social research and Social Work institutions, periodicals, pamphlets, statutes, maps, charts, etc. The library is open from 9-12 A.M. and 1:30-4:30 P.M. on weekdays except Saturday afternoon. It is not open on Sunday or on holidays.

The University Library contains also a large number of volumes and pamphlets on Sociology and Anthropology; and much germane material is to be found in the historical, political, economic, philosophical, psychological, geographical, and other collections in the University Library as well as in the special libraries in the College of Public Affairs, in the Department of Psychology, and in the School of Religion. The unusual resources of many other libraries located in and near Peiping, such as the National Metropolitan Library, Chinese Social and Political Science Association Library, Library of the National Tsinghua University, and the library of the College of Chinese Studies, should be very useful to advanced students of social sciences.

Chengfu Social Research Laboratory and

Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research

In coöperation with Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research, a special research laboratory is established in Chengfu at No. 4 Huai Shu Chieh. The laboratory occupies a whole Chinese building with a number of research and statistical offices.

Yenching University Committee for Social and Population Research is an independent organization and it has five specific objectives:

1. To gather social and population data in Peiping and else-where for teaching purposes;

2. To provide opportunities for field training in research for university students ;
3. To develop technique for scientific study of Chinese population or Chinese social life ;
4. To furnish data for comparative study in these fields for Chinese and foreign students ; and
5. To supply concrete facts for scientific social planning.

The Committee is at present engaged in several research projects. The project on the Ching Miao Hui is a sampling study of rural community organization in North China. A project on village litigation is a sampling study of rural conflict. Then an intensive study of the life of a village near Ching Ho is planned. In Peiping, a project on Yin Tsu Chien is a study of the credit system in actual practice and its relation to community and family life. There are three projects related to population. A system of registration is set up in a village near Ching Ho in order to secure facts on births, deaths, and marriages through the exact method ; and it is now in its second year of work. Another project of population registration and enumeration is planned in another province on a relatively larger scale. Finally, there is a more general study of the problems of population in China. There is also a study of ancestor worship in China limited to one aspect of the time-honored social institution in this country.

Staff of the Committee: Leonard S. Hsu, Director ; Cato Young, Executive Secretary ; W. T. Wu and H. C. Chang, Members ; I-chin Yuan, Honorary Member ; Wang Ho-ch'en, Research Associate ; Hsu Yung-shun, Research Assistant ; Chang Che-kuei, Research Assistant from Ching Ho Station ; Lin Yueh-hua and Chang Chih-ming, Investigators ; Kuo Ta-t'ung, Computer ; Li Ch'ang-hui, Clerk.

Other Research Connections

Members of the departmental staff carry on from time to time a number of research projects in coöperation with other institutions in Peiping or elsewhere. One of the main purposes of this kind of coöperation is to provide opportunities or facilities for research for faculty and students of the Department. During the past year, a member of the Department has been conducting a social survey of poor families in Peiping under the auspices of the Social Welfare Bureau of Peiping Municipality. Another member of the Department has served as Executive Secretary of the Social Research Committee of the Shantung Provincial Academy for Rural Reconstruction. A third member, as soon as he returns from advanced study abroad, will be associated with the research bureau of the Provincial Institute for Social and Political Reconstruction in Kuangsi.

PART FIVE : ORGANIZATIONAL ACTIVITIES AND FACULTY-STUDENT RELATIONS

I. Chinese Sociological Society

The Chinese Sociological Society is a national scholastic organization devoted to the study of Sociology. Its headquarters are in Nanking with branch organizations in other centers such as Shanghai and Peiping where sociologists are gathered. The Society has five kinds of membership, namely, regular membership, student membership, honorary membership, permanent membership, and institutional membership. The Society edits a quarterly journal in Chinese, known as She Hui Hsueh K'an (Sociological Review), and the journal is sent free to all members. A National Convention for all members of the Society is held once a year; and in 1932 the Convention met at Yenching University. Branch societies meet more often, and the Peiping branch of the Society usually meets six or seven times a year. Both national meetings and branch meetings are largely occupied with the reading of scientific papers and discussion on sociological research. A representative group of faculty and students of the Department of Sociology of Yenching University is active in the various aspects of the Society's activities.

II. Tsinghua-Yenching Friends of Social Sciences

The Tsinghua-Yenching Friends of Social Sciences is a rather informal organization among faculty members of social science departments of both institutions. The group meets at the call of its two secretaries, one representing Tsinghua and one representing Yenching; and its meeting is devoted entirely to the reading of scientific papers.

III. North China Social Science Research Society

The North China Social Science Research Society is a recent organization. Its main purpose is to encourage coordination and coöperation in research in various social sciences among university departments and research institutes in North China. It intends to publish from time to time lists of research projects being undertaken under the auspices of these various organizations.

IV. Alpha Kappa Delta Fraternity

Alpha Kappa Delta is an honorary sociological scholastic fraternity having for its purpose the encouragement of the scientific study of Sociology and Social Work, and the promotion of fellowship among men of similar interest. The fraternity was originally founded in America and has established numerous chapters in colleges and universities throughout the United States. In March, this Department was authorized to establish the Alpha Chapter of China, the first international chapter of the organization. A senior or graduate student in Sociology or Social Work, upon satisfaction of certain requirements, may be nominated for membership by the Executive Council of the Chapter and be elected to membership upon unanimous vote by those present at regular membership meetings. The standards are: an average scholastic record of G in Sociology, a good moral character, a socialized personality, manifestation of ability in research, and a permanent interest in the field of Sociology. The regular semi-annual meetings of the society are held in the months of November and April. Further information may be obtained from Secretary of the Society in care of the Office of the Department in McBrier Hall.

V. Yenching Sociology Club

The membership of Yenching Sociology Club includes both instructors and students of the Department and its purpose is to stimulate interest in sociological study. The activities of the Club are: public lectures, discussion meetings, practical social service, publishing social surveys, and fellowship meetings. The Club has two regular meetings each semester, and in addition, it has many special meetings. The Club sends three representatives to Departmental Meetings to discuss matters of common interest. It has also sponsored a publication known as "The Social Problem". Further information may be obtained from the Chairman and officers of the Club.

VI. Sociology Class Fellowships

In recent years membership of the Sociology Club has become so large that it has become more and more difficult to maintain as close and intimate a fellowship among its members as could be done six years ago. Thus since 1927-28 each class among major students has organized a "class fellowship"—graduate fellowship, senior fellowship, junior fellowship, sophomore fellowship, and freshman fellowship. So far these fellowships have even continued to exist after students have left the University, and the result is the growth of class fellowship in the various years such as the 1928 Fellowship, the 1929 Fellowship, etc. In addition, local fellowships of Yenching Sociology students have come into existence, such as the ones in Shanghai and Peiping. The activities of the fellowships include periodical discussion meetings, presentation of scientific papers embodying the results of individual study, social meetings, debates, and so forth.

SOCIOLOGICAL RESEARCH PROJECT

By H. Y. Lin

1. The Aims of this research
2. Problems and Methods
3. The scope of the present project.

EXPLANATION OF THE SCOPE OF THE PRESENT PROJECT

First of all, we shall investigate one small community in Sikang or western Kansu where the Tibetan group resides. The study of the Tibetans is a continuance of the study of the Lolo which has been taken up by our staff last year, for the Lolo and the Tibetans are said linguistically related. In collaboration with a bigger program of our University for social and industrial studies at Lanchow, perhaps Kunsu will be a better place to make a field investigation. If we have a chance to enlarge our future project, we would like very much to take up the studies of the Mongol and Mohammedan groups in northwestern Kansu and Sinkiang, an important area of culture contacts from prehistory down to the present day. The increasing importance of this area is clearly shown in this war, and its future course will depend very much upon present understanding.

The research made on the frontier societies is not to be isolated from rural and urban communities. The area around Chengtu forms a natural basin in which waterways cross each other for convenient irrigation. This produces from the fertile soil rich agricultural products. The irrigation work in Kuan Hsien, northwest of Chengtu, handed down from the Han Dynasty, still proves a very efficient aid to agriculture. A general geographical and historical background of this area should be made. Our College of Public Affairs has established a station of rural research and service at Chung-i-chiao, a village within the web of Kuan Hsien irrigation system. We shall take the chance to select this village as a sample study. Like the anthropologist, we will look at problems of agriculture in the light of such a view of the farming community. Farmers like other people, live in communities, and have traditional ways of getting along. Farmers make adjustments to their natural environment and also adjustments to one another. We will apply the same scheme and methods of analysis to the study of farming community.

Last of all, Chengtu as a city is not yet very urbanized, but its handicraft industry has been very much developed. If we take up one kind of handicraft, say, the bamboo industry, our investigation will not confine itself to the sources and techniques of the industry as well as to the distribution of the bamboo products, but we will pay special attention to how these technical processes control the relations of individuals inside and outside the community. A detailed description of the bamboo industry will not only throw light on those people who make this handicraft their livelihood, but also will trace how other occupations of people are related and regulated by such industrial activities. It will further give us a knowledge of how peasants and townfolk are related and how rural and urban communities are interdependent.

We will study the three levels of the community: frontier, rural and urban, with Chengtu as our center, where our university is now located. We begin with such definite scope and select samples for the purpose of intensive investigation from which we aim at a better understanding of human problems in order to be able to make some contributions for reform and reconstruction.
