June 3, 1924.

Mr. Ludwig Schulze,
51 W. 52 Street,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Schulze,

Confirming our conversation of this date, I authorize you, on behalf of Peking University, to design a small lion figure as described in our conversation, which we expect to use for the making of additional miniature figures of the same sort.

So far as I can see at the present moment, we will expect to order from you somewhere between 2500 and 3000 of these small figures, and our understanding is that if an order of this size is placed the cost for each piece will be somewhere between 75 and 80 cents. The exact amount to be determined from experiment.

However, it is understood and agreed by us both that if on the submission by you of the design the Peking University Committee desires to withhold the order temporarily or instructs me to withhold the order indefinitely, I shall be given the privilege of completing our negotiations by accepting the model and paying $60.00; or you will provide me with a bronze model and I will complete our transaction by paying you a total of $70.00. It is understood, of course, further, that if the larger order should be cancelled I would not have the right to use the model which you have designed in placing an order for this model with any other firm.

I think this covers our agreement according to our conversation.

Yours very truly,

James A. Harris

Dear Mr. Schulze:

Confirming our telephone conversation of this afternoon, you are authorized to go ahead with a present order of 2500 lions, according to the model which was inspected and approved by me a few days ago. It is understood and agreed by both of us that the terms for the manufacture of these lions shall be according to the letter which you have from me under date of June 3, 1924.

Yours very truly

COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES FOR MEN
OFFICE OF THE DEAN

9th August, 1924.

The Rev. James H. Lewis,
156, Fifth Avenue,
University of Peking,
NEW YORK CITY.

Dear Jim,

You certainly gave me a difficult task from which however I do not dare to shrink. On the one hand it was the task of the campaign publicity Committee to supply material for the American Office and on the other hand it was the duty of a Teacher of History to hunt up historical matter.

You must realise that China has so many old things that originated in obscure antiquity that people cease to have any curiosity about old things in China.

The origin of the Stone Lion is an example of this. I have enquired round among quite a number of friends but no one seems to know anything about their origin. After spending many hours in different libraries all that I can do at present is to report such insufficient data as I have found.

The Lion itself has never been a Chinese animal. The earliest mention of the Lion occurred about the year 989 B.C. It was that year that Emperor Mu Wang 穆王 of the Chou 周 Dynasty made an expedition to the West and it was said that he saw for the first time Chung Yi 狻猊 a description of which tallied with the description of the Lion with which all the writings identified it.

1244

The first mention of the Lion in China occurred in the year 76 AD. in the reign of the Emperor Chang Ti 章帝 of the second Han 後漢 Dynasty when it was recorded that a Chieftan of a certain tribe in Turkestan presented to the Emperor a Lion.

Since that time there have been quite a few incidences in Historical Records of Lions included in the tributes paid by Western Rulers to China. So much for the Lion.

As to the Stone Lion that one finds so commonly in front of imposing buildings, particularly Temples and Palaces; The first mention of them that I can find is in a long poem written by a well-known Scholar Wang Hui 王惲 (F.1300 AD.) of the Yuan 元 Dynasty. In his note to the poem he mentioned that his poem was about two stone animals in front of an official building in Honan. He called these two animals one Tai 狻 and the other Wei 狔 and said they came originally from the Palace of the Yün 殷 Dynasty (1776 to 1122 BC.) The description of these two animals in the poem is exactly that of the Stone Lions as we commonly see them. This would seem that the first historical mention of the Stone Lions occurred about 1300 AD. but their origin was at that time attributed to the Yün 殷 Dynasty. This latter could not be correct as we have seen that the first lion known to the Chinese was not earlier than 989 BC. Furthermore, the art of making Stone animals such as stone horses and gates did not begin until the Han 漢 Dynasty, so that if we make a rough figure we might say tentatively that the Stone Lions began shortly after the importation of Lions into China after 76 AD.

In the Buddhistic books in China frequent mention has been made of Lions and Stone lion pillars ~~have been made~~ ⁱⁿ India; so it is probable that the art of making Stone Lions was an importation from India together with Buddhism.

In the literary interpretation of the symbolic significance of Stone Lions placed in front of public buildings mention may be made of

- a. Dignity - The Lion as a King of Animals.
- b. Pacification - The Lion in stone which does not bite, and
- c. Simply the Door Guard.

to these I might add the observation that ~~a word~~ ^{the word} "Lion" philologically was made up of the word 'animal' and 'teacher' ^{Shi}

As a matter of fact in the earliest literature about the Lion the identical word for Teacher is also used for the word Lion.

In the case of a university adopting Stone Lions as decorative things at the Entrance ~~hall~~ I might add if the students should think that the Teachers are regular lions they might well remember that they are only Stone Lions!! So much about the story of the Stone Lions and I leave it to your ~~ingeniousness~~ ^{ingenuity} to fix up any form of publicity story.

A few weeks ago Rhoda saw two very pretty Brass Lions about 5 inches in height, 5 inches long and 4 inches wide. I suppose they must weigh about 5 or 6 lbs a piece. When I got your letter about your scheme of selling lions for the Peking University I talked the matter over with President ~~Stewart~~ ^{Stuart} and we both wondered whether it would be worth while to have a number of these brass lions made here in China (I suppose it would cost about 5 or 6 dollars a pair) and have them shipped to you. These Lions ~~might~~ might be sold I suppose for $500 a piece and $1000 a pair to the Donors of the Peking University Campaign. What do you think of the scheme? When we have a chance we might send a couple of such sample lions to you.

I am very happy to hear about the contribution of Bryson Jones and have already written to him and hope that he will do more in the future.

With kindest regards and best wishes to yourself, Mrs. Lewis and Patsy,

Very sincerely yours,

William

Dear Mr. Lewis,

Referring to our conversation some days ago, I would be very pleased if you would kindly write me a few lines confirming your kind order for:
Threethousand Lions as sample for the amount of $ 2650.--, with payments of:
$ 1000.- at the first delivery on Aug. 15th &
$ 1650.- on August 20th.

As I have postponed my departure for Europe in order to watch over the deliveries personally, you can make the second payment on Saturday the 23rd which might be more convenient for you.

Through a new improvement the mould-seams will nearly vanish so that I hope the delivery will be much better than the samples which ^{you} V.O.K.'d.

Very sincerely yours:

Dear Madame des Renaudes:

I am grateful for your letter, and I acknowledge the return of the small Lion and the dye of the seal of the University. I am also enclosing a check for $10, payment for the dye.

Before Mr Schulze left he suggested that if I were not going to be using my tickets for the polo games some day, you would be very happy to have them. Unfortunately, three or four days ago I received a telegram calling me West, so I cancelled my ticket reservation and therefore have not the tickets to pass on as I had hoped to do. I expect to leave tonight or tomorrow morning.

The stone lion is perhaps the most characteristic feature of Chinese sculpture today, though it dates back only about nineteen hundred years. In 76 A. D. a lion was presented to Emperor Chang Ti of the second Han Dynasty. How the lion gradually became transformed into stone is not known. For the last several centuries, however, it has been a characteristic ornament at the gateways of important public buildings or grounds. They guard the old Forbidden City and the various palaces therein. Two of these guard the entrance to our new campus. It is a copy of one of these which we had made.

The Chinese stone lion is a laughing lion with a curly mane. There is a tradition that a royal princess first curled her pet lion's hair and then took him to a lake that he might see his reflection in the water. Seeing such a beautiful creature made of himself, he burst into laughter.

You will enjoy the lion as a delightful reminder of the oldest civilization in the world and your own share in the great University which is developing therein the leaders of its new life.

American Office
Yenching University

We are sending you today by parcels post a little Yenching (Peking) lion. This is sent because of your active interest in Yenching as expressed in your valuable contribution to our work.

We hope you will receive your lion in good condition and that you will give it a prominent place as a paper weight on your desk. Let him stand guard over the friendly relations between you and Yenching University and be a constant reminder that we are grateful for your helpful cooperation in building up and maintaining an institution in China for the training of her leaders of tomorrow.

Very sincerely,

Information on the Yenching Lions - "paperweights"

The paper weight is a replica of one of the pair of stone lions which stand on either side of the Yenching entrance gateway. The object at the front of the collar is a bell, and to the best of our information the collar itself is connected with the legend of the royal princess and her pet lion. We believe that she placed the collar with its tinkling bell around the lion's neck both for its amusement, and so that she could more quickly locate it as it played about the palace gardens.

The object under the lion's left paw is a lion cub. The statues on each side of the Yenching gateway are identical with one exception. The lion on the right as one looks into the gateway has under his right paw a round ball. The one on the left is really the lioness and has a suckling cub under her left paw. This follows the ancient Chinese belief that the lion, which is the emblem of strength, instead of suckling its young at the breast as do other mammals, secreted milk in its paws, the part of its body most emblematic of strength.

So always the stone lions that guard the temples and palaces of China are shown in pairs. The male lion, free of care, plays with a ball in order to keep its paws strong and supple. The lioness is always represented with a suckling cub under her paw. The Chinese have never been troubled by the fact that in nature the lioness is quite a different looking animal from the lion, and feel that it is more artistic to represent the two as identical.

In choosing one of the pair as an appropriate emblem, Yenching chose the lioness as being more in accord with our conception of a university as an "Alma Mater".

Mr. Richard Schulze
1815 Broadway
San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mr. Schulze:

You will recall that in 1924 you made a quantity of cast lions for Peking University. These have been very happily received by the constituency of the University. Since you made these lions, however, the name of the University has been changed from "Peking" to "Yenching."

At the present time we have approximately 1000 lions in stock. We wish to find out whether the words "Peking University" could be routed off and the words "Yenching University" stamped on. We today phoned your brother, Mr. Ludwig Schulze, who told us that you are now situated in San Francisco and would be glad to give us the information desired.

Very truly yours,

YENCHING UNIVERSITY

Re. You, Lion
Mr. Lyman T. Thompson.

Dear Mr. Thompson.

Please pardon the long delay,
but unfortunately your letter of Nov. 14
caught me in the midst of our Xmas rush.

I have given the matter regarding the Lyons, which I made for you in 1924 careful thought and believe the only way to make the change is, to file the present lettering off, and add a new stamped shield with so called cold solder.
An attempt to match the newly added shield in colour, I believe, would be futile, & so I would suggest a finish, that will harmonize with the rest of the job, but, sort of, admit it to be an added shield.

I think it best to turn the whole
job over to a friend of mine

Fred. Laupman 1386 EAST 17th St.
Brooklyn N.Y.

whom I know to be capable of carrying out this job successfully and who will do it unselfishly, that is, at a minimum cost. I am writing him about it and I am sure, he will get in touch with you immediately.

For further information I shall be at your service promptly.

Thanking you for your remark,
that your constituency was pleased with the Lyon, which made me very happy, and sending you the seasons greetings
I remain

Very truly yours.
Richard J. Schuyler.

Gentlemen:

Attention of Mr. Lyman H. Thompson

Your letter of November 14 to Mr. Richard Schulze of 1815 Broadway, San Francisco, California, has been referred to us for attention.

We will be pleased to undertake for you the work of changing the name on the lions from Peking University to Yenching University. This we would propose to do by making the plate corresponding in size to the plan portion of the base at the front of the article bearing the words: "Yenching University" and applying same where the words: "Peking University" now appear.

Including the cost of the necessary die work; the manufacture of the plates themselves, also application to the article, also the necessary refinishing, we quote you on the quantity of approximately 1000 lions which it is stated are in stock, the price of 25¢ each.

It will of course be necessary to return the goods to us here if the work is to be done.

Upon receipt of your further advices, we will be pleased to give the matter our best and prompt attention.

Cordially yours,

Attention: Mr. A. Harris.

Dear Sir:

Please pardon our delay in replying to your letter of January 9th, giving us quotation on the work of changing the name on the metal souvenir lions which we wrote to Mr. Schulse about. Since the first of the year we have been traveling almost constantly and so have been unable to take up the matter until the present time.

We are now very sorry to advise that we find it will be impossible for us to authorize this work at least during this year, as we are having to cut down every possible expenditure for the University. We shall be glad to file your quotation and when times are better financially we shall consider the matter again.

Thanking you for your trouble in preparing this quotation, we are

Sincerely yours,
